On a motion made to diſcharge a rule for an information againſt the inhabitants of the county for not repairing a bridge, it was alledged, that the pariſhioners of Mitcham, in that county, ought to repair it, which they had done time out of mind; it is true, that pariſh had obtained a verdict againſt the county, but it was by ſurpriſe; for by certificates, and other records, of the ſeſſions, it will appear that this pariſh ought to repair this bridge, and that they had been fined for not repairing; and that they had acquieſced under that charge many years.

It was inſiſted for the pariſh, that admitting they had repaired the bridge, yet if they were not obliged ſo to do, either by preſcription or tenure, they ſhall not always be liable; they cannot be obliged by preſcription becauſe the inhabitants of this pariſh are not a body politick, and it is not pretended, that they are obliged by tenure.

To which it was anſwered, that an information againſt the county in general was the only way to try the right; for tho' this pariſh might not be obliged to repair the bridge, yet ſome other pariſh might, and ſince the county is at firſt view to repair it, it is probable that when the information is exhibited againſt them, the inhabitants of Mitcham to excuſe themſelves may ſhew who is obliged to repair it; and the court being of that opinion, the rule was made abſolute. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 120.

On an information for ſtopping a common foot-way, the proſecutor moved, that it had been a common paſſage as far back as any witneſs could remember. But the defendant producing a leaſe made for fifty ſix years of this way to the intent that it might be a paſſage during the term, and the term expiring in 1728.

Raymond, Chief Juſtice, held the defendant not guilty and as to the leaving of it open ſince, he ſaid, that would not be long enough to amount to a gift of it to the public. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 909.

On a trial of an action of treſpaſs, a caſe was made, that the place where the ſuppoſed treſpaſs was committed was formerly the property of the plaintiff, who ſome years ſince built a ſtreet on it, which has ever ſince been uſed as an highway. That the defendant had land contiguous, parted only by a ditch, that he had laid a bridge over the ditch, the end whereof reſted on the highway. And it was inſiſted for the defendant, that by the plaintiff's making a ſtreet, it was a dedication to the public; and therefore however he might be liable to an indictment for a nuiſance, yet the plaintiff could not ſue him as for a treſpaſs on his private property.

Per curiam. It is certainly a dedication to the public, as far as the public has occaſion for it, which is only for a right of paſſage. But it was never underſtood to be a transfer of the abſolute property in the ſoil. Therefore the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1004.

On an indictment againſt the inhabitants of the hamlet of Flecknow, for not repairing a highway,

The inhabitants pleaded that one "G. W. ought "to repair it by reaſon of his tenure, ſo long as the "ſame ſhould remain incloſed, &c." On iſſue being joined, a verdict by conſent was found by the jury, whereby the defendants were found guilty; but the verdict was left ſubject to the opinion of the court.

The queſtion ſubmitted to the court was, whether the inhabitants of the ſaid hamlet of Flecknow continued bound to repair the highway in the indictment mentioned, notwithſtanding the ſaid incloſure by the ſaid G. W. or whether by reaſon of ſuch incloſure they were diſcharged therefrom, during the time ſpecified in the indictment.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, the court ordered the poſtea to be delivered to the proſecutor.

Lord Mansfield. An owner of land, over which there is an open road, may incloſe it by his own authority, or alter it under a proper authority, and by a legal courſe. 1ſt, He may incloſe it by his own authority, but then it muſt be on two conditions, one "That he is obliged to repair it till he throws up the "incloſure." The other, "That he leave ſufficient "ſpace and room for the road." Therefore G. W. is not on the facts ſtated to us, obliged to repair, by reaſon of his having incloſed an open road, nor indeed can it be deemed an open road under the circumſtances of this caſe.

Per curiam. Let the poſtea be delivered to the proſecutor. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 461.

On ſhewing cauſe why a writ of mandamus ſhould not iſſue directed to the juſtices of peace for the county of Wilts, commanding them to receive, and proceed on a traverſe to a certain preſentment made by a juſtice of peace on view againſt the inhabitants of the tything of Connock in the ſame county, for not repairing a highway within the ſaid tything.

The council on ſhewing cauſe argued, that as this was a preſentment in the ſeſſions, made by a juſtice of peace on his own knowledge, "that the highway was out of repair," a general traverſe could not be admitted; for though ſuch a preſentment by a juſtice of peace on view be traverſable as to all other points, yet it is concluſive ſo far as the view and knowledge of the juſtice goes, and the fact of its being out of repair cannot be diſputed; conſequently though a ſpecial traverſe ought to be received, a general one ought not.

The power of preſentment by any one juſtice on his own proper knowlege "of any highway not being well, and ſufficiently repaired and amended," is given by ſtat. 5 Eliz. cap. 13. which refers to ſtat. 2. P. & M. cap. 8. and 3 W. & M. cap. 12. has alſo a relation to the ſame ſubject, and it has been held, "that the "party againſt whom ſuch a preſentment is made "cannot take a traverſe to the want of repair of ſuch "highway."

The council in ſupport of the rule urged, that the juſtices were obliged to receive the traverſe generally, and that the defendant had a right to traverſe the way being out of repair, notwithſtanding that the preſentment was made by the juſtice on his own view.

After hearing the arguments of the council for and againſt the rule, the court enlarged the ſame, and ſome time after the court gave their opinion as follows:

Lord Mansfield. We are all of opinion, “that a “mandamus ſhould go, commanding the juſtices to re“ceive and admit a general traverſe.”

Per curiam. Let the rule be made abſolute. Vide Bur. vol. 3. page 1530.

Hilary, 1 Ann. Cooper v. The Hundred of Baſingſtoke.

In an action againſt the hundred, on the ſtat. of Winton of hue and cry, a ſpecial verdict was found at the aſſizes to this effect, viz. That the plaintiff was travelling on the highway, within the hundred of Michael, Devon, that thereon he was aſſaulted, and ſet on by ſeveral malefactors to him unknown, who took poſſeſſion of him, and carried him into a coppice wood, hard by the ſaid highway, in the hundred of Baſingſtoke, and there did rob him.

The queſtion before the court was, whether the hundred of Baſingſtoke be chargeable with this robbery.

After ſeveral arguments, the court this term gave judgment.

Per curiam. We are unanimouſly of opinion, that the hundred of Baſingſtoke, is chargeable for this robbery; therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 157. Raymond, vol. 2. p. 826.

On a caſe made at the aſſizes on the ſtatute of hue and cry, It was ſtated, that ſoon after ſix o'clock in the morning, the plaintiff was robbed two miles and a half diſtance from Northampton, and the highwayman cut his bridle and ſtirrups, and threw them into a ditch, and then turned his horſe looſe; that the plaintiff recovered them, remounted, and rode through a village called Cotton, where he gave no notice. He met three men afterwards on the road, whom he informed of the robbery, and arrived at Northampton by ſeven o'clock, and gave notice to an inn keeper there, from whence he went to Rotherthorpe, three miles off, where the High Conſtable lived, and between eight and nine o'clock gave notice; and the point for the opinion of the court was:

> Whether this was ſufficient to maintain the action within ſtat. 8 Geo. 2. c. 16. which requires, that the party robbed ſhall, “with as much conve> “nient ſpeed as may be after the robbery, give > “notice to one of the conſtables of the hundred,
> “or to ſome conſtable of ſome town, pariſh,
> “village, hamlet, or tything, near to the place,

The court on argument held this to be good notice, for the High Conſtable is the propereſt perſon to go to, and it is not required to go to the next conſtable. It appeared the plaintiff loſt no time conſidering the circumſtances he was in, and Rotherthorpe is not at ſuch a diſtance, but that it may come within the meaning of the ſaid word near. So the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1170.

By ſtat. 9 Geo. cap. 22. the hundred is made liable for damages ſuſtained by the wilful burning of barns, &c. and it requires the party injured to give notice within two days, and within four days after to give in on an examination on oath, whether he knows the perſon or perſons that committed ſuch fact, or any of them, and if he confeſſes he knows them, then he is to be bound in a recognizance to proſecute.

In an action brought on this ſtatute, the oath proved was, that he had good reaſons to ſuſpect the fact was done by R. G. and W. L. both of ſuch a pariſh, and a doubt ariſing at the aſſizes, whether this was ſufficient or not, a caſe was made thereon, and twice argued at the bar.

Per curiam. The examination does not maintain the action, the oath required, is a condition precedent, for the ſake of the hundred, and to prevent ſcreening the offenders. There is a great difference between ſuſpecting and knowing, a man who knows the offender may purpoſely ſtop at the word ſuſpect, to avoid being bound to proſecute, and though it would be equivocating, yet it would hardly be a perjury aſſignable, it being only a ſuppreſſion of part of the truth; he ſhould have ſaid, I ſuſpect them to be the men, but do not know it. It will be dangerous to let them go out of the words of the act, and therefore the defendants muſt have the poſtea delivered to them, and the plaintiff muſt pay the coſts of a nonſuit. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 247.

On an action brought by the party aggrieved againſt the inhabitants, &c. on ſtat. 9 Geo. cap. 22. for ſatisfaction and amends for the damages ſuſtained by maliciouſly ſetting on fire a barn and out-houſe belonging to the plaintiff, in which action the plaintiff was nonſuited; and on an application to the maſter, “to “tax the coſts of the nonſuit,” he doubted, “Whe-
“ther the defendants were entitled to them;” on which the defendants council moved for the court to give directions to the maſter, as to the taxing ſuch coſts.

The court held, that wherever the plaintiff would be entitled to coſts, the defendant is ſo reciprocally. Here the plaintiff, the party aggrieved, would have been entitled, therefore as it is mutual and reciprocal, he is liable, and accordingly they gave directions to the maſter to tax the coſts. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1723.

Jeofails.

Hilary, 3 & 4 W. & M. Walwin v. Smith. Error

A queſtion was ſtated whether a diſcontinuance in an inferior court is helped after judgment by the ſtatute of jeofails; the court was of opinion, that diſcontinuance of proceſs, or in pleading, was helped by the ſtatute; but where the cauſe is diſcontinued, and out of court, as in the beginning of this reign, for not holding Hilary term, all cauſes were then diſcontinued, which could not be aided by any ſtatute of jeofails, without a particular act of parliament for reviving thoſe cauſes and proceſs.

In Becher's caſe after a verdict for the plaintiff, there being ſome doubt whether the venue was good or not, and the plaintiff intending to bring a new action, got leave to diſcontinue, in which caſe the judgment ſhould have been entered, That the plaintiff take nothing by his writ, but be in mercy for his falſe claim, and that the aforeſaid defendant may go hence without a day.

But inſtead of ſuch an entry, it was that the plaintiff by his Attorney comes here into court, and confeſſes that he will not further proſecute, &c. So judgment was given that the defendant go hence without a day, &c. which amounts to a retraxit, and is a bar to the ſame action for ever, ſo long as that judgment ſtands in force.

Whereon a writ of error was brought, and it was ſhewed, that there was a diſcontinuance, for the verdict was, 2 Jac. and the judgment was 4 Jac. and no continuance from one term to the other, which might have been aided by the ſtatute of jeofails, if the judgment had been given on the verdict; but it was on the retraxit which is not within the ſtatute; and for this reaſon that judgment was reverſed *Vide Mod. Hilary, 4 Ann. Crowther v. Oldfeild. Error.

The plaintiff declared, for that whereas he was ſeiſed of one meſſuage and ten acres of land in, &c. parcel of the manor of W. held by copy of court-roll of that manor as a cuſtomary tenant in fee-ſimple, according to the cuſtom of the ſaid manor; and for that whereas he the aforeſaid plaintiff has, and ought to have, and he and all the cuſtomary tenants of the manor aforeſaid, by the cuſtom of that manor from time whereof, &c. had, and ought to have, and uſed common of paſture in a certain place called Waimleſs Moor, parcel of the ſaid manor, for all his cattle, levant and couchant, as appertaining and belonging to his tenement aforeſaid, nevertheleſs the defendant, to deprive him of his ſaid common, had incloſed, whereby, &c. On not guilty pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict; but on motion in the Common Pleas, judgment was arreſted. On this the plaintiff brought a writ of error in this court and that judgment was reverſed: 1ſt. It was agreed in this caſe, that a man cannot be a copyholder, nor an eſtate be a copyhold eſtate though it be held by copy of court-roll, according to the cuſtom of the manor, unleſs it be alſo at the will of the lord; and the Chief Juſtice ſaid, the great difference between copyholds and cuſtomary freeholds which paſs by ſurrender is, that the copyholder is in by demiſe from the lord, but in the caſe of cuſtomary freeholds the lord is only an inſtrument: and that in pleading a title to a copyhold eſtate, it is ſufficient to ſhew a grant from the lord; but in the other caſe it is not enough to ſhew, that the lord granted it, or that A. ſurrendered to the lord, and he granted; but it muſt be ſhewn that the ſurrenderor was ſeiſed in fee and ſurrendered to the lord, and he granted, &c. 2dly. It was agreed, that if this eſtate muſt be taken to be freehold, the judgment of the Common Pleas was rightly given: for then the plaintiff being ſeiſed of a freehold eſtate, to make a title to the common, ſhould have preſcribed, that he and all thoſe whoſe eſtate he had, have time out of mind had, &c. and cannot make a title by cuſtom, according to 1 Cro. 418. And here the court admitted the caſe of Dorne v. Caſhford and ſaid that though a plaintiff in poſſeſſory actions may declare on his poſſeſſion without ſetting out a title; yet if he undertakes to ſet out a title, and ſhews a bad one, the verdict cannot cure that. 1 Cro. 418. 2 Cro. 315. 2 Saund. 136, 186. 1 Mod. 294. But the court held, that now after a verdict this eſtate of the plaintiff's muſt be taken to be a copyhold eſtate, and not a freehold eſtate, becauſe it is both laid and found, that the tenements were parcel of the manor, and that by cuſtom the plaintiff, as a cuſtomary tenant has common; all which is utterly impoſſible, unleſs the tenement was copyhold, and therefore muſt be ſuppoſed ſuch, though the words at the will of the lord were omitted, comparing it to the caſe of debt for rent by an aſſignee of a reverſion, who ſhews no attornment, and has a verdict, and to the caſe in 1 Sid. 218. On this ground the whole court held, that though a title, which could not be good, could never be aided by a verdict; yet a title in a declaration which was only imperfectly ſet forth, and where the want of ſomewhat was omitted might be ſupplied by intendment, was cured by a verdict: and hereupon, ſuppoſing this to be a copyhold eſtate, there aroſe theſe objections: 1ſt. That the cuſtom was not alledged expreſsly, as belonging and appertaining to his tenements. 2dly. That they ought not to claim common, for it is annexed to the eſtate, and not to the land; the reaſon is, becauſe the eſtate grew by cuſtom, and ſo did the common as part thereof, or rather a privilege annexed thereto. 2 Cro. 253. 2 Brownl. Entr. 96. If a copyholder purchaſe the freehold of his copyhold, his common is gone. As to the firſt objection the court held, that it was but a defective title, and there was room enough to induce a proof of the cuſtom; and it was only an informality of laying the cuſtom, which is cured by the verdict. As to the ſecond objection, the Chief Juſtice made this diſtinction, viz. where a copyholder claims common in the waſtes of a manor, it properly and ſtrictly belongs to the eſtate, and if he enfranchiſes his copyhold, in that caſe his common is loſt; but where he claims it out of the manor, it belongs to the land, and not to the eſtate; and if he enfranchiſe the eſtate, the common continues; but all the precedents of common are, as belonging to his tenements. 9 Co. 113. Co. Ent. 9. Dy. 363. b. 1 Saund. 349. 2 Saund. 231. Co. Ent. 574. Winch. Ent. 931. 1026, 1027. 1111. Hern. 81. Brownl. Red. 428, 430. And the Chief Juſtice thought, that ſince the pleadings were ſo, the common might be ſaid to belong to the copyhold tenement, ſince it belonged to the copyhold eſtate; for that which belongs to the eſtate belongs to the tenement: and the judgment was reverſed after great deliberation. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 365. Raym. vol. 2. p. 1225.

Michaelmas, 4 Ann. Courtney v. Strong.

On an aſſumpſit, the plaintiff James Courtney declared, that in conſideration that he had agreed with the defendant at his requeſt, that the defendant ſhould quietly occupy a certain meſſuage, and twenty acres of land, charged with the payment of 20 l. per annum, lately granted to one John Courtney, free from all moleſtation from the aforeſaid James Courtney, by reaſon of the rent aforeſaid, the defendant promiſed. Non aſſumpſit was pleaded, and a verdict for the plaintiff. But judgment was arreſted on motion, for that the rent-charge was granted to John Courtney, and not to the plaintiff; and there was no room to imagine an aſſignment, or that the rent did not continue in John. So then the defendant was to pay the plaintiff for not doing that which he had no right to do, which is nudum pactum, and no conſideration: it was urged for the plaintiff, that being after verdict, the court muſt intend a conſideration, and that there was an aſſignment.

Per curiam. Here was a promiſe, though not a legal promiſe, and ſuch as could bind; and if that promiſe, which is laid was fully proved, the jury might well find the verdict. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 364. Raym. vol. 2. p. 1217.

Per curiam. This being only an inſurance on the goods, nothing could be given in evidence at the trial but the loſs thereof, without which evidence the plaintiff could never have a verdict, and as to the word fuit, it is only falſe latin, and cured by the verdict; ſo the judgment was affirmed. *Vide Mod. In debt on a bond brought by the executor of the ſurviving executor of the obligee; on error brought after a verdict, it was objected, that it was not ſhewn that the firſt executor proved the will; and if not, this executor could maintain no action, but it muſt be brought by the adminiſtrator with the will annexed. But being after a verdict, the court held it well enough, and affirmed the judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 716.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. 2. Anonymous. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in C. B. where the plaintiff declared in treſpaſs quare clauſum fregit, of a treſpaſs committed in the eleventh year of the late King, with a continuance to the firſt year of his preſent Majeſty, and had judgment by default, &c. of which error being brought, and the want of an original being aſſigned for error, the defendant alledged diminution, and had a certiorari to the cuſtos brevium of the C. B. who certified an original as of the precedent term to the plea, which original was without any continuances to the term of the plea, and which being brought in the firſt year of the preſent King, concluded againſt our peace. The council for the plaintiff in error argued, that the original returned is as no original in this ſuit, there being no continuances on it to the term in which the plaintiff in the action declared, and ſo the ſuit diſcontinued; which caſe would not have been aided after a verdict by the old ſtatutes of jeofails; then the variance between this original and the declaration was an incurable fault after verdict by ſtat. 18 Eliz. and the variance is plain in this, that the original concludes againſt our peace, and the declaration does not ſet forth a treſpaſs in the late King's time, Hob. 251. Yelv. 1089. 1 Sid. 84. The late ſtatute for the amendment of the law helps only in thoſe caſes of judgments by default, which the old ſtatutes would have aided in judgment, after verdict; and therefore the late ſtatute aids not the preſent caſe.

The council on the other ſide ſaid; the caſe of Rowning v. Lord Carteret, which was adjudged Hilary 3 Geo. R. R. Rot. 193. is a direct anſwer to the firſt objection: for there the diſcontinuance was held to be aided by ſtat. 32 H. 8. after verdict, and conſequently in a judgment by default, ſince the late act: and as to the ſecond exception, the declaration lays the treſpaſs with a continuance to the preſent King's time, and ſo the variance is only in not concluding againſt the peace of his late as well as of his preſent Majeſty, and ſo rather an inſufficiency: it might be naught on demurrer, but not after verdict. 6 Mod. 80. Day v. Muſkett.

Raymond, Chief Juſtice. Holt in the above caſe ſays, that againſt the peace is a deſcription of the treſpaſs, and that therefore a treſpaſs concluded againſt the peace of the preſent King, could not be maintained by evidence of a treſpaſs committed in the King's time; and therefore how it comes to be dropped in the caſe, that this would be cured after a verdict, is hard to conceive: but in the preſent caſe, the variance is not contradictory, but omiſſive and inſufficient; ſo that the queſtion will be, whether this be ſuch a variance as will make it as no original in this ſuit: as to the other exception, how does this, not being continued over to the plea, appear to be an original in this ſuit? Are we concluded by the return of the officer? But we will not ſhake the authority of Rowning v. Carteret, which is in point. Adjourned on the other exception; but judgment was afterwards affirmed. Vide Fitz-Gibbons, p. 96.

See this caſe fully ſtated in page 440 of this work, under the head Evidence.

The defendant was convicted before the juſtices of peace in ſeſſions, on an indictment brought againſt him on ſtat. Edw. 6. and on that conviction he was committed, and afterwards brought an hab. corp. when ſeveral exceptions were taken to the indictment.

Firſt, It was agreed on all ſides, that this ſtatute was in force, by which it was enacted, that no perſon ſhall ſhoot in any place, any hail ſhot, or more pellets than one at one time, on pain to forfeit for every time that he or they ſhall ſo offend 10*l.* and three months impriſonment.

The firſt exception was, that the indictment ſets forth, that the defendant did ſhoot conies in Codden Wood, but it does not appear where he ſtood when he ſhot, which may be in ſeveral vills, and the ſhooting being the offence, it muſt be laid with certainty.

2dly, There is no judgment given on this indictment, for it is ſaid quod foris faceat, &c. when it ſhould have been faciat.

But the court would not quaſh the conviction on theſe exceptions.

At another day the matter of law was ſpoke to, viz. that the juſtices of peace have no general juriſdiction to hear and determine this offence; for though their commiſſion is to keep the peace, yet that power is reſtrained to caſes only of open violence: ſo likewiſe by virtue of their commiſſion, they may enquire of all and ſingular the crimes and offences, which words have alſo a qualification of ſuch offences only, into which they may lawfully enquire.

If therefore they have no power by the general words of their commiſſion, which are reſtrained as aforeſaid, then they muſt have an authority by the ſtatute, but that gives them none. Therefore the judgment ought to be quaſhed.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The juſtices of peace by the general words of their commiſſion have a power to puniſh offences againſt any ſtatute made concerning the peace of the nation; but by this act on which this indictment is brought, the peace is no ways concerned, becauſe the offence thereby created is for want of due qualification of the perſon to ſhoot, which is not an offence againſt the peace.

This cannot be an indictment on ſtat. H. 8. becauſe they do not ſet forth the length of the gun, which by that law ought to be a yard long; and therefore the general concluſion againſt the form of the ſtatute will not help it. And for theſe reaſons the indictment was quaſhed.

But it was agreed, that the party might be indicted for this offence before the juſtices of oyer and terminer, but not before juſtices of peace for want of juriſdiction. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 49.

The defendant was indicted on ſtat. 5 & 6. E. 6. for keeping an alehouſe without a licence, and it was objected, that it would not lie, becauſe it was not an offence at common law, but made ſo by this ſtatute, which gives power to the juſtices of peace in their ſeſſions to make inquiry into theſe offences by preſentment, information, or otherwiſe.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. An indictment being a ſummary way of proceeding, is more beneficial to the ſubject, and therefore it ſeems reaſonable that ſuch a method ſhould be purſued.

Dolben and Eyre, Juſtices, were of a different opinion: they ſaid they had never heard of an indictment before for keeping an unlicenſed alehouſe; and this ſeems to be the judgment of the parliament in 30 Car. 2. that an indictment would not lie, becauſe the conviction is to be on view by the chief officer within his limits, or by the confeſſion of the party, or by the oath of two witneſſes, and then the penalty is to be levied by diſtreſs, &c. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 144.

See this caſe fully ſtated in page 74 of this work, under the head Appeal.

On a writ of error brought to reverſe an attainder of high-treaſon committed in the weſt of England, many exceptions were taken both to the indictment and judgment.

Per curiam. The want of concluding the indictment with theſe words, againſt his allegiance, is erroneous, and ſuch an omiſſion will make it ſo, though there are words in the body of the indictment, which are tantamount, becauſe a man may levy war, and not be guilty of the offence laid here; for he may be an alien enemy; and that was the reaſon in Calvin's caſe, why that indictment was not concluded againſt his allegiance.

But there are no words in this indictment to ſupply this omiſſion.

For not minding his oath of allegiance will not do it, becauſe a man may not conſider the duty of his allegiance, and yet do nothing that is contrary to it.

Then againſt the Lord the King, his ſupreme true and natural Lord, &c. will not help it, becauſe theſe words are not always eſſential in an indictment, they ſignify no more than to ſhew that the defendant was born in England, they are words ſuperabundant, and were added to indictments in latter times, for the old way was, to ſet forth the offence to be againſt our Lord the King only; ſo that words which are not neceſſary in an indictment ſhall never be conſtrued to ſupply the omiſſion of thoſe which are abſolutely neceſſary.

The very offence of treaſon is, becauſe it is committed againſt his allegiance, the other words are but an aggravation of the offence, and the omiſſion of that clauſe can no more be ſupplied by the adverb traiterouſly than the word feloniouſly could ſupply againſt the peace.

It would be very ſtrange if the omiſſion of againſt the peace in an indictment at common law, and againſt the form of the ſtatute, for an offence committed againſt a particular ſtatute, ſhould be error, and yet an omiſſion of theſe words ſhould be none.

It is probable this might be a reaſon for making ſtat. 29 Eliz. by which it is enacted, that no record of attainder of treaſon ſhall be reverſed where the party attainted is executed for the ſame offence.

For before that ſtatute there are few precedents which have theſe words, and ſince the ſtatute there are few or none beſides this, wherein they are omitted.

It is true, there are ſeveral indictments in the reign of H. 8. againſt offences for high-treaſon, which were made ſo by ſome new ſtatutes in thoſe days; as denying his ſupremacy, &c. in which indictments theſe words were omitted, but the reaſon was, becauſe they were new treaſons, created by particular acts of parliament, and it is probable that the proceedings in thoſe caſes begat this error.

And for theſe reaſons, in Eaſter term 6 W. & M. the judgment was reverſed, which reverſal was afterwards in Hilary term, 7 W. 3. affirmed in parliament. Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 162.

Trinity, 5 W. & M. The King and Queen v. Clerk.

An indictment, that twenty perſons being aſſembled, the defendant, not being licenſed, preached to them, not concluding againſt the form of the ſtatute, was quaſhed, for they might be the defendant's own family, to which the ſtatute does not extend, and it is not an offence at common-law. But Dolben, Juſtice, differed in this. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 370.

Trinity, 5 W. & M. The King and Queen v. Ball.

On the removal of an indictment, the defendant enters into a recogizance to try it; yet this is not forfeited unleſs the proſecutor gives rules; and ſo if one gives a recognizance to proſecute a writ of error with effect, the defendant muſt gives rules, and nonſuit the plaintiff, or there is no forfeiture. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 370.

An indictment was, for words ſpoke, to the intent to prejudice the market of Barnſtaple, and hinder the town of *Toll, viz. Trinity, 5 W. & M. The King and Queen v. Whitehead.

The court was moved to quaſh two indictments, which were, that whereas an order was made, that the pariſhioners ſhould receive a baſtard-child; they in contempt refuſed to receive it. And becauſe it was not poſitively ſaid, that it was ordered they ſhould receive it, but only by recital with a that whereas, the indictments were quaſhed. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 371.

The defendant was indicted before the juſtices of peace in their ſeſſions, on ſtat. 2 & 3 P. & M. c. 11. he being a cloth-worker, and not living in a city, borough, or town corporate, and yet keeping in his houſe more than one woollen loom, by reaſon whereof he had forfeited 40 s. per week.

An exception was taken to this indictment, for that the juſtices had not power to take it before them; for they cannot by law hold cognizance of pleas on penal ſtatutes, without an expreſs power power given them by theſe acts, and here being no ſuch authority allowed by this act, the indictment was for that reaſon quaſhed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 379.

The court was moved to quaſh an indictment, which ſet forth, that J. J. having fourteen yards of ſilk, W. deceptively told him, that a young woman had occaſion for it, to make her a wedding ſuit; on which he ſold it to her under colour of that pretence.

Per curiam. No indictment lies for this matter, for there was no truſt, and if there was any, an action lies for it: then it was not averred, that the young woman did not marry, or that ſhe had not occaſion for it: let it be quaſhed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 18.

An indictment was, by the jurors it is preſented, that the defendant erected a cottage; and further they preſent that it continued againſt the form of the ſtatute; and there was judgment for the King, but reverſed on a writ of error; for there is nothing to agree with the words they preſent, and it is a new indictment diſtinct from the firſt, the matter whereof is no offence at common law, and againſt the form neceſſarily refers to the words they further preſent, and no more. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 371. *Mod. The objection was, that the indictment ſhould ſet forth, that he was choſe by one who had ſufficient authority, and that he was ſummoned before a juſtice of peace to take the oath; but it not appearing how he was choſen, and that he had notice, therefore the indictment ought to be quaſhed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 96.

The defendants being overſeers of the poor, were indicted for refuſing to accompt for the money by them received; and on a demurrer to this indictment it was objected, that it ſet forth they had collected divers ſums of money, but did not ſay how much, and this made the indictment uncertain.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, that it was neceſſary to ſet forth how much money they had received, it being impoſſible to charge them with every particular ſum, and the indictment is for refuſing to come to an accompt: but a more material objection was, that the indictment ſet forth, that they and each of them, converted the money to their own uſe; but as to that it was held, that the cheat of one is the cheat of the other; but laſtly, it was objected, that this indictment would not lie, becauſe another remedy was provided by the ſtatute, and of this the court doubted. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 187. *Mod. Hilary, 8 W. 3. The King v. Tumock.

An indictment for an offence at the general ſeſſions, without ſaying general quarterly ſeſſions, in a caſe where the ſtat. appoints it to be at the general quarterly ſeſſions, was quaſhed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 117.

The defendant was indicted on the ſtatute of ſtabbing, for that he drew his ſword and ſtabbed James Wells, he having not firſt ſtruck, but did not ſay, having not a weapon firſt drawn, and concluded againſt the form of the ſtatute. The better opinion was, that the indictment ſhould ſet forth, that the deceaſed had not a weapon firſt drawn. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 191. Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 118. Raym. vol. 1. p. 138.

The defendant was indicted at the Old Bailey for uſury, and being convicted, he brought a writ of error, and the judgment was reverſed, becauſe the Court of Seſſions had no juriſdiction in this matter. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 188.

An indictment againſt the defendant, ſet forth, that there was a war with Lewis, the French King; that during the continuance of that war, the defendant hired a boat for 20 guineas, falſely, maliciouſly, and traiterouſly, to aſſiſt the King's enemies, that the boat ſo hired, was brought to the ſhore, in order to embark him and others, where he was taken. This was all found by verdict.

It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that this was not an offence at common law; for then any act that ſhews an intention to do an unlawful thing will be a fault; as if a man hire an houſe, with an intention to ſet up an unlawful trade; if the fact itſelf does not import any malicious deſign, then the finding of the jury will not alter the nature of it.

If there is nothing in this indictment which ſavours of an offence at common law, there is nothing prohibited by any ſtatute, for an intention to do an unlawful act is no crime by either law.

In this caſe it is not ſo much as ſaid, that the defendant endeavoured to go beyond ſea, without the King's licence.

Per curiam. The very intention to commit treaſon is regarded in law, and any preparation to aſſiſt the King's enemies is a prejudice to the public, and therefore an offence at common law.

Our actions are governed by intentions, as well as qualified by them; ſo that in divers caſes the intention makes the act more or leſs criminal; whereon the judgment was affirmed, and the defendant fined 100 merks, and committed till paid. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 206.

The defendant was indicted at the ſeſſions held for the borough of Hatfield, for ſpeaking theſe words, the Mayor and Aldermen of Hatfield are a pack of as great villains as any who rob on the highway, and we will take away their charter. He was found guilty of ſpeaking theſe words.

The court was moved in arreſt of judgment, and ſeveral exceptions taken,

1ſt. This being tried at a ſeſſions of a particular borough, they ſhould have ſhewed what authority they had to hold the ſeſſions being in a private place, either by preſcription or charter, which was omitted.

2dly. The words are not indictable, being words of heat and paſſion, for which the defendant ought to be bound to his good behaviour, but not indicted.

In Eaſter term 21 Car. 2. one Burford was indicted in this court for theſe words ſpoken by him of the juſtices of the peace, viz. that none of the juſtices did underſtand the ſtatutes of exciſe, except ſuch a one, and truly he did neither well underſtand them, nor moſt of the parliament-men who made them. And this indictment was quaſhed.

3dly. It is ſaid, the jurors for our lord the King preſent, when it ſhould have been for the Lord the King and the borough aforeſaid. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 203.

Eaſter, 8 W. 3. The King v. Stonehouſe

An indictment againſt Elizabeth Stonehouſe, for that ſhe intending to deprive Henry Bradſhaw of ſeveral ſums of money, did falſely and maliciouſly accuſe him of felony, and of robbing her, was adjudged ill, becauſe it was for a fact not indictable, it not being laid by way of conſpiracy, ſo as to make it a public crime; and it being only a private wrong, the party has his remedy by an action on the caſe. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 188.

The King v. Savill.

An indictment was quaſhed, becauſe there was no caption to it. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 188.

The King v. Atkinſon.

The Mayor of Newcaſtle, being a juſtice of peace, made an order, that the company of tanners there ſhould admit one Young to be a freeman of that company: the defendant Atkinſon, who was maſter of that company, being ſerved with this order, refuſed to obey it, and for this he was indicted.

Per curiam. It is not indictable, for it is only a nonfeaſance and particular wrong done to another. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 188.

The King v. Gorge.

The defendant was indicted at the ſeſſions held in the city of Worceſter, for keeping an open ſhop in the ſaid city, not being free thereof, contrary to an immemorial cuſtom there; quaſhed, for it is not a matter indictable. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 189.

The King v. Brown.

The juſtices made an order, that the defendant ſhould pay Stephen Paine, a taylor, 7 l. for work done, which he (the defendant) refuſing to do, was indicted, but it was quaſhed, for it is a matter not indictable. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 189.

The King v. Bradford.

The defendant was indicted for not curing the proſecutor of an ulcerated throat, as he had agreed and undertaken to do; quaſhed, for it is no public offence, and no more in fact than an action on the caſe. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 189.

On an indictment for a riot an exception was taken, that the concluſion ought not to have been againſt the form of the ſtat. it being an offence at common law; yet it is good to conclude againſt the form of divers ſtatutes. Stabbing was an offence at common law; and therefore a man may be indicted generally, or the jury find it manſlaughter generally; therefore the court refuſed to quaſh the indictment; but bid the council demur, if they thought fit. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 99.

An indictment before the commiſſioners of Oyer and Terminer at the Old Bailey was removed by certiorari on ſtat. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 7. for ſelling haberdaſhery wares contrary to the ſtat. on pain of forfeiture, one moiety to the King, the other to him that will ſue for the ſame in any of the King's Courts of Record, by bill, plaint, information, or otherwiſe; the court was moved to quaſh it on the authority of Gregory's caſe. 6 Co. 19. 6. and Farrington v. Keymer, 1 Co. 112. becauſe the general words of the King's Courts of Record, extend only to thoſe of Weſtminſter.

Per curiam. It is true, the juſtices of peace cannot hereby have juriſdiction, but it has been ruled ſince Gregory's caſe, that juſtices of Oyer and Terminer may by way of indictment, but not by way of information, and therefore in that reſpect it is well enough; but here the ſtatute has preſcribed a particular way for the recovery of the forfeiture, viz. by action of debt, information, &c. without ſaying any thing of indictment; and therefore it is a queſtion, whether this be indictable or not; for which reaſon let it be quaſhed Niſi. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 104. Ibid. vol. 5. p. 149.

The defendant was indicted for having ſpoken theſe words of Mr. Martin a juſtice of peace; I did not care if all the Martins had been hanged five years ago. And the juſtice is now turned out of commiſſion. But on motion this indictment was quaſhed, for an indictment does not lie for theſe words, and Mr. Martin ſhould have had recourſe to his action. Vide Raymond, vol. 1. p. 153.

Trinity, 9 W. 3. The King v. Holroy. Error.

The defendant was indicted for concealing traitors unknown, and buying clippings. He was found guilty; brought a writ of error, and aſſigned for cauſe, that there was a miſerecordia inſtead of a capiatur entered: and for this reaſon the judgment was reverſed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 341.

They were found guilty on an indictment for the following crime, viz. Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins were convicted for high treaſon in conſpiring the death of the King; and the defendants being preſent with them at the place of execution, did all of them lay their hands on Sir John Friend, who ſhewed no repentance for the crime for which he was about to die, and Cook pronounced the abſolution, to which Snatt and Collier ſaid Amen.

That they all three likewiſe laid their hands on Sir William Perkins, who was likewiſe unpenitent of his crime, and Collier pronounced the abſolution, and Cook and Snatt ſaid Amen, and that they all aſſiſted in, and aſſented to the ſaid abſolution.

The jury made a ſpecial concluſion in their verdict, whether the laying on the hands of three, and but one at a time pronouncing the abſolution, makes them all guilty of the whole matter? Adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 363.

The defendant was indicted for cauſing an apprentice to abſent himſelf from his maſter, and keeping and detaining him in that abſence. It was moved to quaſh it; becauſe not a thing of a public nature, being no other than an action on the caſe; the court ſaid it was a great offence, and would not quaſh it; but left the party to demur. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 195.

The defendant was indicted, for that he on the 19th of June, &c. and before, being an inhabitant of a town in Derbyſhire, was ſummoned to watch with one B. a conſtable, and for that he obſtinately, contemptuouſly, and maliciouſly made default.

1ſt, It ſays that he was an inhabitant on the 19th of June, and before, and does not ſay that he continued to be ſo.

2dly, It does not ſay, that notice was given to him to watch within the pariſh.

3dly, It ſays, that he did not watch with one B. a conſtable; it ought to have been ſaid he did not watch at all; for poſſibly he might watch that night with another conſtable.

The council on the other ſide argued, that this indictment was founded on common law, and not on the ſtatute of Winton. And as to the ſecond exception, it is ſaid he was ſummoned to watch with the conſtable, but does not ſay within the pariſh. Now there may be a place extra-parochial, where the conſtable is to watch. But as to the other exceptions was ſilent.

Per curiam. You muſt demur to the indictment; we will not quaſh it. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 393.

The defendant and two others were indicted on ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 25. for licenſing hawkers and pedlars, ſelling glaſſes without licence; and the court was moved, that the indictment ſhould be quaſhed, becauſe it does not lie for this offence; for it is an offence created by the ſaid ſtatute, which ſtatute directs a forfeiture for this offence, and the remedy how it ſhall be recovered, and beſtowed; and therefore the offence is not puniſhable any other way not directed by the ſtatute. And the court ſeemed to be of that opinion.

Rokeby, Juſtice, obſerved, that this act was deſigned to raiſe money by the licences of hawkers and pedlars, &c. not to prohibit hawking as unlawful, for it is not prohibited, but only enacted that there ſhall be licences taken out. But the court refuſed to quaſh it. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 348.

On a writ of error brought to reverſe a judgment of attainder, on an indictment for a rape, ſeveral errors were aſſigned, and overuled. Among others was the following, viz. that it was not ſaid in the caption, then and there ſworn, and it may be, that they were ſworn at an alehouſe, and not for the ſaid purpoſe, &c. And for this 1 Vent. 16. 2 Keb. 610. 1. Mod. 26. 2 Keb. 583. were cited. But the court inclined to diſallow the exception, becauſe it would reverſe an infinite number of attainders, and judgments on indictments.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that in Coventry, Lincoln, &c. the grand jury were ſworn at the ſeſſions from whence they came to the aſſizes, and they inſiſted that they were not accuſtomed to be ſworn there again; but he held it to be an ill practice, and always for his part cauſed them to be ſworn again at the aſſizes. And this exception being moved, the court refuſed to allow it. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 548.

1ſt, Becauſe it was ſaid, that it was without the conſent of the ſheriff, but it might be by the conſent of the bailiff or plaintiff; but not allowed.

2dly, Exception was taken, becauſe the arreſt was not laid to be before the return of the writ; which was allowed good.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, on this occaſion ſaid, that a common fine for a reſcous was four nobles; Gould, Juſtice, ſaid, that in the common pleas they would have the original action tried on a feigned iſſue, before they would let the action for a reſcous go on. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 323.

A preſentment at a court-leet for erecting of a cottage, &c. contrary to ſtat. 31 Eliz. c. 7. being removed into this court by certiorari, the following exceptions were taken to it:

1ſt. That they did not lay four acres of land to it, according to the ſtatute for meaſuring lands, and not ſaid or ordinance, whereas it was not a ſtatute, but an ordinance only. And forth is was cited, Cro. Jac. 603. but the court over-ruled this exception, and held that it was a ſtatute.

2dly. That the caption was at a court of view of frank-pledge with a court baron, and ſo it did not appear at which of them it was made, and one of them not having authority to take ſuch preſentment, therefore it is ill. And for this it was compared to the caſe of Valconbridge, Stile 228. where the caption of an indictment was before juſtices of aſſize, goal-delivery, and Oyer and Terminer; and becauſe it was not ſhewn by virtue of which commiſſion in particular it was taken, it was quaſhed. And a caſe was cited, The King v. Ayers, 2 Hob. 139. where a preſentment in ſuch form was quaſhed.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Where there are ſeveral commiſſions, each of which has authority to proceed in a matter, and their manner of proceeding is different; the indictment ought to ſhew before which of them it was taken. But here one of the courts only has juriſdiction in the matter, and therefore though they were both held together, it muſt be taken before thoſe who had authority to proceed in it. The words here are, with a court baron, which do not imply that the preſentment was made at the court baron, but only that both courts were held together. If it had been at the court baron, the objection had been ſtronger.

Gould, Juſtice, ſaid, that the caſe of Ayers was ſo ruled for this reaſon, viz. becauſe it was not preſentable at the leet, it not being a public nuiſance, nor at the court baron, becauſe it was a private right.

3dly. That the Anno Domini was in Engliſh figures. But becauſe the year of the King was in words at length, it was held certain enough, and that the year of our Lord was only ſurpluſage. And therefore the motion was denied. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 638.

Eaſter, 12 W. 3. The King v. Newman.

The defendant was indicted by the name of Elizabeth Newman, alias Judith Hancock, for keeping a bawdy houſe. The court was moved to quaſh it; becauſe a woman cannot have two Chriſtian names; for which fault in a caſe in Noy the return of a reſcous was quaſhed; and for this reaſon the indictment here was quaſhed. Vide Raymond, vol. 1. p. 562.

That if there be twenty indictments, one-half true, the other falſe, it is within this finding: but the court held otherwiſe: the words ſeveral indictments import all the ſeveral indictments.

Second objection. That they were not indictments till they were found; till then they were only bills; and they were quaſhed for this cauſe. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 376. Raym. vol. 1. p. 592.

S.* and it was not ſhewn in the indictment that J. S. had any lands,

Per curiam. If it be underſtood that the uſing of buying and ſelling was at B. in the county of M. there is no venue where the expoſing to ſale was; and if (B. in the county of M.) be applied to the place of ſale, there is no place laid where the uſing the trade was; ſo either way it will be impoſſible to make it good. *Vide Mod. Hilary, 13 W. 3. The King v. Morgan & al.

An indictment found againſt the defendants for a riot was removed into this court, and on not guilty pleaded, was tried at the aſſizes, and a verdict given for the King. And now a motion was made in arreſt of judgment, and many exceptions were taken and over-ruled: but the one on which the defendant principally relied was, that there was an omiſſion of ſworn and charged in the caption. To which it was anſwered by the council on the other ſide, that there is a great difference between a record made up for niſi prius, which is always made briefly, and an indictment removed with an intent to be quaſhed; that the words on their oath ſupply the omiſſion of ſworn and charged. T. Jones 180. 2 Keb. 59. The King v. Ambler. On an indictment for perjury: the defendant entered into a recogniſance to try it, and was deſirous to carry it down to trial, but the proſecutor entered a non proſ.

Per curiam. It was an ancient but illegal practice, that if an indictment had lain ſtill for a long time, to enter a non proſ. on it; but that ought not to be without leave of the Attorney General, not even at the requeſt of the proſecutor; for it would be of intolerable miſchief, that it ſhould be at the diſcretion of the proſecutor to make an end of the King's ſuit, and alſo to get a bill for an infamous crime found of record againſt a perſon, and by ſuch entry of a non proſ. deprive him of the means of clearing himſelf by trial. For theſe reaſons, the court ſet it aſide; and if the indictment be vicious, an acquittal in it will be no bar to a new one. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 647.

The defendant was indicted for buying ſtolen goods, knowing them to be ſtolen; and on not guilty pleaded, he was convicted; and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that by the ſtatute the buyer is made an acceſſary to the felony, for which he ought to be indicted, and not for a miſdemeanor or treſpaſs, as he was in this caſe, and ſo it was adjudged.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. At common law this offence was more than a treſpaſs, it was evidence of his being an acceſſary after the fact was done. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 193.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. Anonymous.

The court was moved to quaſh an indictment for entering into a warren, and hunting and killing rabbits at night. The exception was, that by ſtat. 3. Jac. 1. c. 13. the offender forfeits treble damages and coſts, half a year's impriſonment, and is to find ſecurity for his good behaviour for ſeven years, ; and the indictment not concluding againſt the form of the ſtatute, the puniſhment of the ſtat. cannot be inflicted ; and if the defendant be fined on this indictment, he may be notwithſtanding again puniſhed according to the ſtat. and ſo twice for the ſame offence : but not allowed ; for if a man has two remedies, the one by act of parliament, and the other by common law, and takes one of them, he thereby determines his election. *Vide Mod. The defendant was convicted on an indictment for a miſdemeanor, in attempting forcibly to carry away one Mrs. Heſcot, a woman of great fortune.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Sure this concerns all the people in England that would diſpoſe of their children well ; and he was fined 200 merks, and the Lady's maid who was privy to the contrivance, was fined 20 merks, and to go to all the courts with a paper on her back, with her offence wrote thereon in large characters. *Vide Mod. Eaſter, 13 W. 3. The King v. ———

An indictment for a riot, concluded contrary to the form of the ſtatute ; and the exception made to it was, that a riot was a common law offence, independant, of any ſtatute, therefore the concluſion was ill.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Though it be not made an offence by any ſtatute, yet divers ſtatutes are directive of the manner of puniſhing it, and that is reaſon enough to make the concluſion good. As on the ſtatute of ſtabbing, the thing was felony before ; but clergy is ouſted by the ſtatute, and yet an indictment for that ſort of felony does conclude contrary to the form of the ſtatute, though the ſtatute does not make the offence, for it was felony before ; on the other hand, an indictment would be well without concluding on the ſtatute in that caſe ; ſo both ways are good. So in caſe of barratry, you may conclude an indictment contrary to the form of the ſtatute, or divers ſtatutes, or take no notice of any ſtatute at all ; for wherever there was any offence at common law, and a ſtatute makes a further proviſion of penalty, an indictment for that offence may conclude contrary to the form of the ſtatute, or leave it out at election. Another exception was, that it was not ſaid in the caption that the jury were ſworn and charged then and there, but no heed was taken to it. And he further obſerved, that it was not uſual to quaſh indictments for a nuiſance, riot, or any other public offence on motion; but in caſe of petit riots, on a conteſt of right of common, it had been often done. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 502.

An indictment was for a riot ; but the cauſe of the riot was the right of a private river.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a river runs contiguouſly between the land of two perſons, each of them is owner of that part of the river which is next his land, of common right ; and may let it to the other, or to a ſtranger. 2dly. If one ſees his neighbour erecting a thing which will be a nuiſance, he cannot abate it till it becomes an actual nuiſance, ſo the maxim that prevention is better than a cure, holds not in this caſe. 3dly. If one has a river, and for want of ſecuring it the neighbouring land is over-flowed, he is indictable for it. 4thly. Unlawful aſſemblies, riots, and routs, are three different offences. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 510.

The court was moved to quaſh an indictment for the unlawful taking with force and arms, ten pounds in money of J. S. 1ſt, Becauſe an action lies. 2dly, Becauſe it ought to have been ſhewn, how many ounces theſe ten pounds contained, and therefore it was uncertain ; but not allowed, becauſe the court knows well enough how much money makes a pound, and it is certain enough. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 702.

Michaelmas, 13 W. 3. Anonymous.

In an action on the caſe for money received to the plaintiff's uſe, it appeared on evidence, that the defendant had indicted the plaintiff for regrating wool ; and after compounded the matter with him for a ſum of money, for which money the action was now brought by the plaintiff.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, was ſo angry with the parties for compounding an indictment of a public nature, that he had the plaintiff non-ſuited, and fined the defendant ; but he ſaid if it was an indictment for a private wrong they might do it. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 60.

The King v. Summers. Error.

The defendant was indicted at the ſeſſions, for writing a ſcandalous letter to one Mellith concerning a young woman, whom he intended to marry : Upon not guilty pleaded, he was found guilty, and afterwards he brought a writ of error, and the error aſſigned was, that this was a private letter, for which he was not puniſhable by way of indictment ; or if an indictment would lie, yet not before the juſtices of peace in their ſeſſions.

Per curiam. This is an offence, and indictable before the juſtices in ſeſſions, becauſe it tends to the breach of the peace. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 194.

Anonymous.

Adjudged, That where a perſon came to a ſemſtreſs's ſhop, and aſked her to ſhew him ſome linen ; which ſhe did, and delivered it into his hands, and then he run away with it, that this is felony ; for though the goods were delivered by the owner, yet they were never out of her poſſeſſion, becauſe though the contract might be begun, by aſking and telling the price, yet it was not perfected, and the ſubſequent act of his running away doth plainly ſhew his intention to take the goods feloniouſly before the property was altered ; for which he was indicted, convicted, and executed.

So where a man, who had no manner of title to a houſe, brought an ejectment, and procured an affidavit to be filed of the delivery of the declaration to the tenant in poſſeſſion, and for want of appearing and pleading, got judgment at his own ſuit, and then ſued out an habere facias poſſeſſionem, and got a warrant from the High Bailiff of Weſtminſter, directed to one of his bailiffs, who, with the plaintiff himſelf turned the defendant out of poſſeſſion, and ſeiſed all the goods, and converted them to his own uſe ; this was adjudged felony, for which he was indicted, convicted and executed, for he made uſe of the proceſs of the law, with a felonious purpoſe. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 194.

Hilary, 1 Ann. The Queen v. King.

To an indictment for forgery brought from London, and demurred to here, the following exceptions were taken:

1ſt. To the caption, there being no verb to the nominative qui triat. jurat. & onerat. exiſtentes; and ſo it was ſaid to be nonſenſe.

2dly. It was excepted, that the crime charged was the forging falſely, whereas it could be no crime if it was not truly forged.

3dly. If it were a forgery it could not be a writing obligatory, for a forged deed is not obligatory; therefore it ſhould be for forging a certain writing, purporting to be a writing obligatory.

4thly. That a forgery to the prejudice of nobody cannot be a crime, and the pretended bond could not be any body's prejudice; for it was a bond to the ſheriff of London for the appearance of a perſon under an arreſt on the day of the purification in eight days, and there is no ſuch day, and therefore the bond is not according to the ſtatute, therefore void; and by conſequence the forgery no crime, becauſe no prejudice to any.

But it was reſolved by the court, 1ſt. That this indictment is to be conſidered as if it were an indictment for high-treaſon; and if it were ſuch, it would be good notwithſtanding the caption, for that was no uncertainty in the charge.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Worſe Latin than this may be ſeen in many writs, as in the writ of adjournment, which runs thus: Rex juſticiar. ſuis ad placitas coram nobis, &c.

And as to the ſecond, the words falſely made are as much as to ſay, that he being a falſe and malicious man, did forge; and not that the forgery was a true forgery, but the thing forged was not true, but falſe.

And to the third, that it could not be obligatory if it was forged it is not in truth and reality binding, but in ſhew and appearance it is; and that is enough; ſo it is an obligation, though a falſe one.

To the fourth it was held, that the eight days may be well underſtood for the eighth of the, &c. Beſides, theſe bonds are not merely void by the ſtat. but only voidable; and therefore you muſt plead the ſpecial matter, and not non eſt factum; and you may ſay, that a forged bond binds nobody, (as in truth it does not) and infer from thence it is no crime to forge. And the Queen had judgment, and the defendant ſtood in the pillory. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 150.

Hilary, 1 Ann. The Queen v. Whiſtler.

On a conviction before a juſtice of peace, on ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 10. ſetting forth, that the defendant was unlawfully and unjuſtly aſſiſtant to one Rolf, in killing five deer, by perſuading him the ſaid Rolf to hunt and kill the ſame, by lending him a dog to hunt and kill them, and a horſe to bring them away againſt the form of the ſtatute.

The queſtion for the opinion of the court was,

Whether the defendant was an aider and abettor therein, within the intent and meaning of the ſtatute, and if the words aiding and abetting were not in the ſtatute, whether the defendant would not be a principal.

The judges gave their opinions at large on this point, and after the matter had been ſolemnly argued, it was adjudged by Powell, Powys, and Gould, Juſtices, againſt the opinion of Holt, Chief Juſtice, that the defendant was guilty within the meaning of the ſtatute; and judgment was entered againſt the defendant agreeable to their opinion. *Vide Mod. An indictment for a forcible entry and detainer, concluded againſt the peace of the late King and preſent Queen, the entry being in King William's time, and the detainer in the Queen's time.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The concluſion is very improper, but there are too many that way to reverſe them all. But this was quaſhed on the objection, that it did not appear what eſtate the party had, whether freehold, for years, or at will, and ſo the court could not tell what execution to award; but if the eſtate were ſet out, perhaps the poſſeſſion ſhould be reſtored to one, and the freehold to another; and here beſides it was not ſaid, that there was a diſſeiſin of him that had the freehold, and ſo it was quaſhed. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 1 Ann. The Queen v. Swanſon, Baynton, Hartley, and Spur.

The defendants were indicted on ſtat. 3 H. 7. againſt ſtealing of women, &c. And on evidence the caſe appeared to be thus: Baynton perſonating a country lady, though in truth a woman of the town, took a lodging in the houſe where Mrs. Plaiſant Rawlins lodged, and after ſometime introduced the ſaid Swanſon into the houſe as her brother, where he frequently had the converſation of the ſaid Rawlins, in the mean time Mrs. Baynton uſed to magnify her pretended brother's merit and goodneſs, inſomuch that the ſaid Rawlins had likewiſe declared her liking of him, and wiſhed he would marry her. But to get her abroad without any of her friends, Baynton deluded her aunt and her, to go with her to church, and againſt the time got bailiffs to take out a writ againſt Rawlins and her aunt, and ſo way-layed, and arreſted them, and conveyed them from Weſtminſter, where they lived, to the Garter Tavern in Drury Lane; and there ſeparated the aunt and her, and carried her to Holborn, to the Vine Tavern, where Swanſon came as her bail, and there married her, ſhe continuing under the arreſt, Baynton telling her, that if ſhe did not marry him ſhe muſt go to Newgate; and Swanſon and Baynton were found guilty; for the court delivered it to the jury for law; that though the ſaid Rawlins had a fancy for the man, yet becauſe ſhe was not privy to the contrivance of coming out to him, and knew not before hand, or conſented ſo to come to him, and being married while ſhe continued under that reſtraint and violence, though perhaps ſhe conſented to the marriage, yet the ſaid fact was a crime within the ſtatute, for here was a forceable taking, and her ſubſequent conſent while under the reſtraint could not be looked on but an effect of the continuing force; and that though Swanſon had known nothing of the firſt force, yet he knowing her to be under it, made him approve of the firſt force, and ſo partake of it, as to be guilty. On this ſtatute aiders and aſſiſters are principals. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 101.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. The King v. Speed.

On a conviction affirmed in this court, a levari fac. was awarded to the ſheriff, to levy the penalty: the ſheriff ſeiſed the goods and ſold them. And this coming before the court, they held,

1ſt. That this court muſt award execution; for the record here cannot be removed or ſent back to the juſtices; and as the court have a power to affirm the conviction, the court in neceſſary conſequence have power to award execution.

2dly. This execution cannot be awarded to the conſtable, as it would, if the record had been before the juſtices; but it muſt be awarded to the ſheriff, for he is the officer of the court, and the court can take notice of no other.

3dly. It may be that the levari facias might impower the ſheriff to ſell the goods. The words of the act are, that the offender ſhall forfeit 40 l. to be levied by way of diſtreſs; and in ſuch caſe the diſtreſs ſhall not be deemed to be a diſtreſs taken as a pledge, but a diſtreſs to ſell; for the public being concerned, it ſhall be conſtrued the moſt effectual levy by diſtreſs. Thus on a diſtringas in a court-leet for a fine, as in caſe of a nuiſance, where the public is concerned, the officer may ſell of common right: but on a diſtringas in a court-leet for a certain leet, the officer cannot ſell the diſtreſs of common right, without a cuſtom: ſo for a diſtreſs in a court-baron, he cannot ſell without cuſtom; but in caſe of the ſewers, the officer has a power to ſell the goods. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 379. *Mod. Hilary, 2 Ann. The Queen v. Langley.

The defendant was indicted for ſaying to the Mayor of Saliſbury: You Mr. Mayor, I care not a fart for you; and on another day, for ſaying to him, You are a rogue and a raſcal; and on a demurrer to this indictment it was inſiſted for the defendant, that theſe words do not appear to be ſpoken of the Mayor in the execution of his office, and therefore this indictment would not lie; he cannot be impriſoned for ſuch words, neither can he be indicted.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Theſe words are not indictable, becauſe it does not appear that the Mayor was in the execution of his office, nor that he was a patent officer, for it would have altered the caſe, if it had appeared that he was a juſtice of peace by commiſſion from the Queen, for then he would have been indictable, becauſe the words would have been an aſperſion on the Queen, and on the government in general by whom he was employed; but here it does not appear he was a juſtice of peace, or if he was, it does not appear that he was ſo by commiſſion or appointment of the Queen, but of the corporation; it is true, if theſe words had been written, as they were ſpoken of the Mayor, an indictment would have laid, for there are many caſes which prove, that the ſame words, when written, are actionable, which are not ſo when ſpoken.

Per curiam. Words which directly tend to the breach of the peace are indictable, as where one man challenges another to fight, and the commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, for retailing of words, is to be underſtood of words againſt the government, or which amount to ſcandalum magnatum, &c. But for theſe little offences againſt good manners, the law has made a proviſion, and that is by requiring ſurety of the peace, or for good behaviour, and by committing the offender, if he refuſe to find ſuch ſureties; or if he ſpeak ſuch words in court, they may proceed in a ſummary way againſt him, by fining him for a contempt of the court, and by committing him till he has paid the fine. Hilary, 2 Ann. The Queen v. Daniel.

An Indictment ran, for that at ſuch a day and place the defendant unlawfully enticed, procured, and cauſed one Charles Scot, a ſervant, or apprentice of one Joſeph Biſhop to abſent himſelf from, and depart out of the houſe and ſhop of the aforeſaid Joſeph his maſter, and that then and on other days before, he unlawfully ſeduced the ſaid Charles to take and carry away out of the houſe and ſhop of the ſaid Joſeph 200 Carolina hats, value, &c. of the goods and chattels of the ſaid Joſeph, and then and there received the ſame, knowing the goods, &c. and the ſaid Charles to be ſervant of the ſaid Joſeph. The defendant being found guilty, it was moved on arreſt of judgment, that this was but a private injury, for which an action on the caſe lies, and not in its nature public to maintain an indictment. Treſpaſs will lie for taking away his ſervant out of his actual ſervice; but for inticing, caſe lies only, and not treſpaſs. 21 H. 6. 31. Alſo no fact is laid to be done in purſuance of this inticing; and as to the latter part about the inticing to carry away the goods, there is no venue laid where the goods were taken away; ſo judgment was arreſted. Trinity, 2 Ann. The Queen v. Goddard and Carlton.

On an indictment found for forging an aſſignment of a leaſe, the aſſignment was ſet forth in the indictment, in the words and figures thereof, and at the end was the mark of ſuch a one, but no mark appeared on the poſtea.

1ſt, That the indictment was laid with a that whereas, which was ill; but the court held that was well enough, being but inducement: and Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, this differed from a declaration in treſpaſs, becauſe in that caſe, there is nothing of recital in the declaration, as there is here; and when the indictment comes to charge the forgery, it charges it poſitively.

The ſecond exception was, that it was not ſaid there was a demiſe, and if there was no demiſe, there could be no aſſignment, but only that by a certain indenture, it is witneſſed, that J. S. demiſed. And as to this exception the court were divided.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, and Powys, Juſtice, held, that the words, and by this indenture it is agreed and demiſed, were a poſitive diſtinct averment of a leaſe, and had no relation to the words it is witneſſed.

Powell and Gould, Juſtices, on the contrary held, that thoſe words, as well as the word demiſed, muſt refer to the words it is witneſſed. And Powell, Juſtice, ſaid, they could not take this to be a diſtinct averment, becauſe they muſt take it to be the recital of the leaſe, the conſtant form of deeds being to put both in, viz. hath demiſed, and doth demiſe.

The third exception was, that there was no mark on the poſtea, and now ſince the ſtatute of frauds, a leaſe is not aſſignable, without a writing ſigned by the party. And this was agreed to be a good objection by the whole court.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If the indictment had been, that the defendant forged a deed of aſſignment, and then they had ſet it out thus, without any mark, that had been well enough, becauſe ſigning is not neceſſary to a deed, and deeds anciently were not ſigned. But now ſince the ſtatute of frauds, an aſſignment by writing, if not a deed, muſt be ſigned, and therefore this not appearing to be any more, this ought to have been ſhewn to have been ſigned, or elſe it is no aſſignment.

Powell, Juſtice. In the caſe of The King v. Newton, in King Charles the ſecond's time, becauſe an indictment of forgery ſaid only written, and did not ſay ſealed, the judgment was reverſed on a writ of error out of Cheſter.

This matter came on again in Eaſter term, and now the firſt day of this term the court was informed that the indictment on the file was right.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, he doubted there had been no trial at all, this being a material variance. But there having been a new indictment found, pending this matter, the court would not determine theſe exceptions, but made him plead to that, where theſe things were amended; but they all ſeemed to retain their former opinions. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 920.

Trinity, 2 Ann. Anonymous.

The caption of the indictment was by the oath of a jury of good and lawful men, &c. ſworn and charged, without ſaying impannelled, and for that reaſon the court was moved to quaſh it, but the motion was denied. Vide Salk. vol. 3. 191.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Anonymous.

An indictment was removed by certiorari, and upon the awarding the certiorari, a recognizance taken; and now the court was moved to quaſh the indictment; but it appearing that the recognizance was forfeited, the court would not hear the motion.

Holt, Chief Juſtice ſaid, the practice was, or ought to be now altered by the late act; before that the defendant came ſoon enough at any time to quaſh, but ſhould not be allowed to do it now after his recognizance was forfeited, by not carrying the record down to the next aſſizes to be tried; and for the ſame reaſon the court refuſed to let any exceptions be taken, either to the certiorari or return. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 380.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. The Queen v. Browne.

The defendant was indicted at Hull for forging a cocket for quinque ſarcinas lini, i. e. five packs of linen cloth; and this being removed by certiorari, after trial, a motion was made in arreſt of judgment, for that it was too uncertain. On the other ſide it was urged, that much ſtronger caſes than this had been adjudged good, as 2 Lev. 125. duas ſarcinas canapis, i. e. two bundles of hemp, 1 Lev. 203. for a parcel of thread: trover for a ſtudy of books; for it is enough to ſufficiently deſcribe the thing in which they were contained.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Detinue lies for a box of writings, and if any of them concern lands, it will be prudent to name it, for that ſhall ouſt the defendant of his wager of law; but it ſuffices that the things it contains be certain enough; and if any new action be brought, the defendant ſhall ſay, that a former action was brought for the ſame by the name of ſo many bundles, &c. therefore judgment was given for the Queen. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 87.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. The Queen v. Orbell.

The defendant was indicted for that fraudulently conſpiring to cheat J. S. of his money, he got him to lay a certain ſum of money on a foot-race, and prevailed with the party to run booty; and on motion, the court would not quaſh the indictment, for they ſaid, that being a cheat, though it was private in this particular, yet it was public in its conſequences.

Note. After this the defendant would not plead till he was ſerved with a peremptory rule; and for that by the courſe of the court, his plea ought not to be received without bail to try it the ſame term, whereas if he had pleaded freely, he need not try it till the next term.

Per curiam. He muſt give bail to try it this term, or the ſitting after. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 42.

A conviction on ſtat. 4 & 5 W. & M. was, that the party being a diſſolute perſon, did hunt and kill ſo many hares; and it not being ſaid, that he was not qualified the indictment was quaſhed; for there are many diſſolute perſons worth 2000 l. per annum, and by conſequence are qualified to hunt, &c. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 2 Ann. The Queen v. Tracy.

The defendant was indicted, for that he procured one Muriell the proſecutor to be arreſted by a warrant from a juſtice of peace, &c. and perſuaded the juſtice to refuſe bail, but the indictment did not alledge that any bail was offered; and that when Muriell was committed, he (the defendant) extorted divers ſums of money from him, but did not expreſsly alledge, that Muriell was committed, nor what was extorted from him; and for theſe reaſons this indictment was quaſhed after verdict; for it being a complicated offence, the defendant muſt be guilty of all or none, but they would not diſcharge him without he firſt entered into a recognizance to appear to a new indictment, which he did; and afterwards he was indicted anew, for that he, together with A. and B. intending to oppreſs Muriell, did in the pariſh of St. Giles's in the Fields, in the county of Middleſex, procure him to be arreſted under pretence of a warrant, and brought him before one Chamberlaine, a juſtice of peace in the pariſh of St. Margaret's in the ſaid county, and intending farther to oppreſs him, perſuaded the juſtice to refuſe bail, though good bail was offered, and to commit him; and avers, that he was committed, and that Tracy perſuaded the goaler to lay him (the proſecutor) in irons, who by that means extorted 5 l. from him, &c. On not guilty pleaded, the defendant was found guilty; and now it was objected in arreſt of judgment, that here was a miſ-trial, for the venire was only from the pariſh of St. Giles's, whereas the fact did ariſe from the pariſh of St. Margaret's, as well as from the pariſh of St. Giles's.

Per curiam. This is a plain miſ-trial, but yet the defendant has forfeited his recognizance, becauſe he was to try the cauſe with effect, that is ſo as the court may proceed to judgment; and if defendants will make ſuch faults on purpoſe, their recognizances ſhall be eſtreated, or a ſcire facias ſhall be brought thereon in this court; for this court may take either courſe, unleſs the defendant will enter into a recognizance, to try it again de novo, which was accordingly done, and the defendant was tried and found guilty again; and it was inſiſted for him in arreſt of judgment, that his perſuading Mr. Chamberlaine the Juſtice, to refuſe bail, was only matter of opinion, and that the extortion was not by the defendant, but by the goaler; ſo that there was no offence charged in this indictment againſt the defendant, for the reſt is only taking a man on a lawful warrant, which is no crime.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. He is guilty even of the oppreſſion and extortion committed by the goaler, becauſe he procured him to be wrongfully put into the goal; for if W. R. wrongfully impriſons W. W. and the goaler detains him till ſo much is paid, in ſuch caſe, he who was the priſoner ſhall have an action of falſe impriſonment againſt W. R. for impriſoning and detaining him till he paid ſo much money; and this is a taking by W. R. and it muſt be illegal to uſe any unlawful means to oppreſs another. It was held in this caſe, that wherever a juſtice of peace may by warrant arreſt a perſon, he has authority to take bail, and that before any indictment found, the juſtice may grant a warrant for apprehending a man for a miſdemeanor, and bind him to the peace, or over to the ſeſſions.

In the caſe above mentioned it was held, that where the defendant is indicted, he cannot put in a plea without giving ſecurity to try it at his own charge; but if he comes into court, he may put in his plea, and the court is bound to receive it, but then he muſt be committed, unleſs he gives ſecurity to try it; and if he chuſes to be committed, then the trial muſt go on at the charge of the proſecutor, but if he gives ſecurity, the trial muſt be at his own charge. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 192. *Mod. Hilary, 3 Ann. The Queen v. Harman.

The defendant was indicted on ſtat. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 41. for preventing the embezzlement of government ſtores.

Two exceptions were taken to this indictment in arreſt of judgment: firſt, that no indictment lay, becauſe it was a new offence, and a particular penalty inflicted, viz. forfeiture of the goods, and 200 l. as directed by the act.

But this exception was over-ruled by Holt, Chief Juſtice, who ſaid it was contrary to the words of the act, becauſe the forfeiture accrues by the conviction on an indictment for the offence.

The ſecond exception was, that the indictment did not conclude againſt the form of the ſtatute.

Powell, Juſtice. In all caſes of indictments for offences againſt a ſtatute, the indictment muſt conclude againſt the form of the ſtatute, to which all the court agreed, and ordered the poſtea to be ſtayed till it ſhould be further moved. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1104.

The defendant was indicted on ſtat. 5 Eliz. for uſing the the trade of a barber, not having ſerved an apprenticeſhip to it for ſeven years; and a motion was made to quaſh the indictment, becauſe it did not conclude againſt the peace, &c.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. There can be no reaſon for this objection, for it would be very hard to make a barber's ſhaving a man by conſent, to be againſt the peace; beſides, it is laid to be againſt the form of the ſtatute, and therefore this indictment is good.

Powell, Juſtice, and the other Judges, ſaid, every act which is contrary to the law is contrary to the peace, and a breach of the peace: therefore by the other three judges, againſt Holt, Chief Juſtice, this indictment was quaſhed. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 191. Raym. vol. 2. p. 1034. *Mod. Michaelmas, 3 Ann. The Queen v. Branworth.

An indictment was found by the grand jury of the town of Portſmouth againſt the defendant, for that he being an idle perſon, did wander in the ſaid town ſelling of ſmall wares as a petit chapman: to maintain this indictment, it was urged, that a petit chapman is a vagabond by ſtat. 39 El. c. 4. And tho' ſome petit chapmen, that is ſuch as are legally qualified by ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 25. may now lawfully uſe that occupation, yet that act excepts boroughs and corporations, ſo that as to them they remain in ſtatu quo.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Is a vagabond, as ſuch, indictable? It ſeems not; for at common law a man might go where he would; but if he be an idle looſe perſon, you may take him up as a vagabond, and bind him to his good behaviour at common law; and by the ſtatute of labourers he may be compelled to ſerve: there is indeed a way by law for puniſhing incorrigible rogues by burning them in the ſhoulder, and ſending them to the gallies; from whence it may be urged, that there muſt be a way before of convicting them of being rogues, for they cannot be puniſhed otherwiſe as incorrigible rogues; and the queſtion is, whether that firſt conviction muſt be by indictment? In my opinion no; but by being convicted by a juſtice of peace to be a vagrant, and uſed by him as ſuch; and if he offends again, he may be indicted as a common vagrant; ſo the rule for quaſhing it was enlarged. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 3 Ann. The Queen v. Buck and Hale.

The defendants were found guilty on an indictment, for a miſdemeanor; for that being collectors and aſſeſſors of a public tax in ſuch a pariſh, they aſſeſſed and rated ſome at too high a rate, and omitted to tax others in their books, and levied on them, and put the money in their own pockets.

On theſe defendant's coming to receive judgment, it was urged, that it being no offence of an infamous nature, as perjury or forgery, nor againſt the public, there ought not to be any ſuch corporal puniſhment as pillory, &c.

Per curiam. It is an offence of dangerous conſequence, and very pernicious to the government, and of very ill example, too much practiſed of late, for what greater diſcouragement can there be to the people to pay their taxes freely, than to have injuſtice and inequality of rates, for the private advantage of ſome: and therefore this offence deſerves an exemplary puniſhment, and they were adjudged to ſtand on the pillory in the county where the fact was committed, and the marſhal was ordered to carry them down, and that a writ ſhould iſſue to the ſheriff of the county to aſſiſt him in the execution. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 3 Ann. The Queen v. Sir James Banks.

A bill of indictment was found againſt the defendant at the quarter ſeſſions for Berkſhire, for an aſſault made on one Mr. C. in Windſor Caſtle, and the ſame was removed by certiorari, at the inſtance of the proſecutor, into this court. Both the plaintiff and defendant made up the record in order to try the indictment at the next aſſizes for the county. After the removal, the proſecutor not thinking proper to carry down his record, the defendant tried the indictment, and was acquitted.

On a motion made by the proſecutor's council for a new trial, grounded on this ſtep taken by the defendant in trying the cauſe on his record after the ſuit had been removed by certiorari; the court directed a new trial, and ordered that it might be a rule hereafter, that a defendant ſhould never carry down an indictment removed hither by the proſecutor to trial without leave of the court. *Vide Mod. Eaſter, 4 Ann. The Queen v. Wigg.

The defendant was indicted for keeping of hogs here in town in ſome of the back ſtreets, againſt the form of the ſtatute. And the court was moved to quaſh the indictment, becauſe by ſtat. 2 W. & M. c. 8. ſeſ. 2. ſect. 20. there was a particular penalty appointed for this offence, viz. forfeiture of the ſwine to the uſe of the poor of the pariſh where they are kept, and therefore an indictment will not lie, at leaſt not on the ſtatute as this was, by concluding againſt the form of the ſtatute. And the caſe of The King v. Watſon was cited, where it was adjudged, that an indictment would not lie for keeping an ale-houſe without a licence, becauſe there is a particular penalty appointed by act of parliament.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, and the court, agreed to the caſe of The King v. Watſon, becauſe the keeping an ale-houſe without licence, was no offence at common law; and they made this diſtinction, where a new penalty is appointed by act of parliament, for a matter that was an offence at common law, there you may either take that remedy which is given by the act of parliament, or proceed by way of indictment, as you might have done before; and therefore keeping of ſwine in the city, &c. being a nuiſance at common law, the proſecutor is at liberty either to proceed by way of indictment for the nuiſance, or to take the more expeditious remedy which is given him by the ſtatute, viz. by ſale of the ſwine: but where the ſtatute makes the offence, there you muſt purſue that. As to the words againſt the form of the ſtatute, the offence being an offence at common law, that was ſurpluſage, and would do no harm. If the defendant had any hopes in his exception, he ſhould have demurred; for it is a rule never to quaſh an indictment for nuiſances. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1163.

A writ of error was brought on a judgment given at the ſeſſions for the county of Middleſex at Hicks's Hall, by the juſtices of peace there, on an indictment, which ſet forth, that the defendant on ſuch a day and year, and at divers other days, at ſuch a place, was and ſtill is a common bawd, and for her own proper advantage and gain, then and there certain evil diſpoſed perſons, as well men as women, unlawfully procured to meet in different bawdy-houſes, and commit whoredom and fornication, in contempt, &c. To this indictment the defendant pleaded not guilty, and was convicted and fined 100 l. but the judgment was reverſed, becauſe the indictment ought to have been, for keeping a common bawdy-houſe. But what is charged in this indictment is but ſolicitation of chaſtity, which is a ſpiritual offence, and not indictable or puniſhable at common law. And the council relied on the diſtinction made in 1 Roll. 44. n. 8, 9. where it is reſolved, that for ſaying a woman is a bawd, no action will lie at common law, otherwiſe if you ſay, ſhe is a bawd, and keeps a bawdy-houſe, becauſe that is an offence inquirable and puniſhable in a leet.

It was agreed by the court and council in this caſe, that if a perſon was only a lodger in a houſe, yet if ſhe made uſe of her room for the entertaining and accommodating people in the way of a bawdy-houſe, it would be keeping of a bawdy-houſe as much as if ſhe had the whole houſe. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1197.

Per curiam. He ought to have carried her to priſon forthwith; whereon the court refuſed to quaſh it. It appeared alſo, that during the time, he took a note from her for 10 s. which the court held a great miſdemeanor. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 61.

Trinity, 4 Ann. Anonymous.

The court was moved to quaſh an indictment againſt a woman for uſing the trade of a millener, not having ſerved an apprenticeſhip, but it was refuſed.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, it ought to be tried if it was within the ſtatute or not; for it did not appear to the court but that it might be a trade at the time of making the ſtatute; and all trades are not enumerated in the ſtatute; but yet they may be within the meaning thereof. *Vide Mod. An indictment was found againſt A. and others, for that they being receivers of the Queen's tax, did under colour of office extort money from ſeveral perſons. On a motion in arreſt of judgment it was held, that two men may be indicted jointly for a battery or extortion; becauſe it is a crime at common law, of which they might be jointly or ſeverally guilty. But as to the caſe in Ro. 81. 1 Vent. 302. they admitted that, viz. That two men could not be indicted jointly for exerciſing a trade, not having been apprentices; for not being apprentices, is that which occaſions the crime and forfeiture, and that muſt of neceſſity be ſeveral. Eaſter, 6 Ann. The Queen v. Pawlett.

An indictment was brought againſt Pawlett for not executing a warrant of a juſtice of peace on a common baker, for exerciſing his trade on a Sunday, contrary to the act. The exception taken to the indictment was, that it does not appear the conviction was within ten days of the fact, which is the time limited by the act; and the indictment ſaid only lawfully convicted.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, was of opinion, that ſince it was ſaid that he was convicted, it ſhall be taken for a good conviction in all reſpects; and the defendant ſhould have taken advantage of the contrary, by ſhewing it in evidence on the trial.

Per curiam. It was agreed by the court, that for things neceſſary, as puddings and pies, for baking them an indictment will not lie on the ſtatute; but for baking bread it will. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 114.

The defendant was indicted for riotouſly entering the cloſe of J. S. and cutting down and carrying off twenty aſhen-trees, and thirty oaks there growing being of the goods and chattels of J. S. and his wife.

The council for the defendant ſaid, they could not call them goods and chattels of the huſband and wife, and being faulty in that reſpect, the whole is void, and muſt be quaſhed, being different from the caſe in Latch. 173. where the offences were diſtinct and ſeveral.

Parker, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, they are ſeveral treſpaſſes, and though void for one, yet may be good for the reſt.

Michaelmas, 6 Ann. The Queen v. Hurſt.

The defendant was indicted for keeping an ale-houſe without a licence. The council for the defendant moved to quaſh it, becauſe ſtat. Ed. 6. and 3 Car. 2. have carved out particular penalties.

Per curiam. Let it be quaſhed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 140.

Michaelmas, 6 Ann. The Queen v. Rudd.

Per curiam. A crime that ſhakes religion, as profaneneſs on the ſtage, &c. is indictable; but writing an obſcene book, (as that intitled, The fifteen Plagues of a Maidenhead) is not indictable, but puniſhable only in the ſpiritual court. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 142.

Hilary, 7 Ann. The Queen v. Griffiths.

The court was moved to quaſh an indictment againſt the defendant, for taking goods feloniouſly, which the proſecutor had as executrix to J. S.

Per curiam. It is not ſaid where he took them, nor in what manner, ſo that it does not appear he ſtole them. Wherefore the indictment was quaſhed niſi. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 207.

Eaſter, 7 Ann. The Queen v. Wrightſon.

The defendant was indicted for ſaying of Sir Rowland Wynn, who was a juſtice of peace, the words following: Sir R. W. is a fool, an aſs, and a coxcomb, for making ſuch a warrant, and underſtands no more how to make a warrant than a ſtick-head; and on the trial of this indictment, the defendant was found guilty of ſpeaking theſe words. On a motion in arreſt of judgment, Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, he knew no caſe like this, but that of The Queen v. Darby. That words ſpoken in diſparagement of a juſtice's parts, is a breach of good behaviour, but not indictable; the preſent indictment does not ſet forth, that this was a legal warrant, it ought to appear to the court what ſort of warrant it was, if it was a fooliſh warrant, or of a matter whereof he had no conuſance, it was lawful to ſay ſo. The words perhaps might be true, and juſtices of the peace are not beyond cenſure.

Eaſter, 7 Ann. The Queen v. Buſheir.

An indictment was brought on ſtat. 1 R 3. c. 3. whereby it was enacted, that, if any one out of the King's obeiſance, exerciſe any trade here, they ſhall forfeit their goods and chattles, and in the indictment the words were not born within the kingdom, which may be, and yet be within the Queen's obeiſance; and therefore it was quaſhed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 167.

Eaſter, 7 Ann. The Queen v. Dy.

No indictment will lie on the ſtatute of uſury: for the method the act preſcribes muſt be followed; therefore the indictment was quaſhed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 174.

Eaſter, 7 Ann. The Queen v. Grantham.

On a motion in arreſt of judgment, on an indictment againſt the defendant, for aſſuming the name of one Jones, and borrowing money, and promiſing that ſhe the ſaid Jones would repay it, when in fact, Jones never ſent her, of which he was found guilty; the council obſerved, that an indictment would not lie in this caſe, for ſhe brought no tokens with her.

And further cited a caſe of The Queen v. Jones, Hilary, 2 Ann, which was exactly ſimilar, and there the indictment was quaſhed, though there was a token brought.

The council for the Queen ſeeming ſatisfied, that the indictment did not lie, therefore the matter went off. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 222.

Trinity, 7 Ann. The Queen v. Jennings.

The court was moved to quaſh a conviction of deer-ſtealing on ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. taken by a juſtice who entered into a glover's houſe, and finding a deer-ſkin, aſked him how he came by it; the glover ſaid he bought it of J. S. who not giving a good account of himſelf, was convicted. And the court held, that the juſtice might enter and convict the perſon that ſold it; for the ſtatute might be eaſily evaded, if the deer-ſtealer could diſcharge himſelf by a ſale. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 383.

An indictment againſt the huſband and wife for an aſſault and battery, ſet forth, that they vi & armis, aſſaulted, beat, wounded, &c. on not guilty pleaded, the jury found both guilty; and now an exception was taken that the words aſſaulted being in the ſingular number, could refer only to one of the defendants, therefore it was uncertain, which was charged, and both could not be found guilty.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. This indictment would have been very good, though the word aſſaulted had been left out, for there cannot be a battery and wounding without an aſſault; though there may be the latter without the former. In a civil action, where one part of the declaration is ill, and the jury find entire damages, the judgment muſt be arreſted, becauſe the court cannot apportion them; but in indictments the court aſſeſs the fine, and they will ſet it only according to thoſe facts which are well laid. If an offence ſufficient to maintain the indictment be well laid, it is enough. Afterwards, in Trinity term following, judgment was given againſt the defendants. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 384.

Michaelmas, 11 Ann. The Queen v. Cranage.

On an indictment, that the defendant, with others, at the pariſh of St. Giles in the Fields, riotouſly aſſembled, and a certain bed-chamber of one S. S. in the manſion houſe of one James broke open and entered, and thirty yards of ſtuff took and carried away; on evidence, it appeared to be the manſion-houſe of one Jamſon, and not James; and the Chief Juſtice held, that this did not maintain the indictment like the caſe in 2 Ro. 677. In treſpaſs for breaking his cloſe in Calvering in a certain place called Calverfield, abutting ſouth on a mill in the tenure of J. S. the plaintiff muſt prove the whole abutement, even its being in the tenure of J. S. He cited the caſe of the Queen againſt Sudbury, where on an indictment for an aſſault and battery laid as a riot; two were acquitted, and two found guilty; and all were acquitted, for the crime was the riot, and the whole charge alledged under that ſpecification and deſcription. So of the play-houſe; an indictment for acting a play and ſpeaking obſcene words, in ſuch a pariſh, in a play-houſe in Lincolns-Inn-Fields; if there be no play-houſe in Lincolns-Inn-Fields, the defendant muſt be acquitted; for though the words are not local, yet theſe are made ſo. One may make a treſpaſs local, that is not ſo. If the ſpeaking had been alledged in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, then it had been laid as a venue; but here it is otherwiſe, for here it is alledged as a deſcription where the play-houſe ſtood. In the principal caſe, part is local, part not local; the chamber is local, the taking and carrying away is not local; but then all is put together as one entire fact under one deſcription, and you cannot divide them. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 385.

Trinity, 2 Geo. The King v. Winteringham.

The court was moved to quaſh an indictment againſt the defendant, for deceiving one Davila of ſeveral lottery orders, the words were, deceived and defrauded, being the writings, goods, and chattels, of the ſaid Davila, this is trover in effect, and too generally laid. 2 Roll. Abr. 79. Mod. Caſ. 311.

Per curiam. This is too general, and the indictment was accordingly quaſhed without putting the defendant to demur to it. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 8.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. The King v. Dawſon.

On an indictment, for that the defendant on ſuch a day, year, and place, made and counterfeited a bank note of 520 l. On not guilty pleaded, the jury found a ſpecial verdict, viz.

That Conrade de Gols being a perſon entruſted and employed by the governor and company of the bank of England, made and ſigned a bank note for 220 l. which note was delivered to the defendant unaltered, who croſſed and altered the ſaid note, by turning the word two into the word five, whereby the ſaid note, which was made only for 220 l. purported to be a note for 520 l. by colour whereof the defendant had and received of the bank 520 l.

The council for the defendant inſiſted, that the facts found in the verdict were not included in the general words of the indictment, made and counterfeited; that this was not counterfeiting or making a note, but only altering a note made; that this muſt be admitted to be a crime within the words of ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 20. concerning the bank. But as the indictment is not for altering or eraſing, judgment was prayed for the defendant.

The opinion of the judges was, that the indictment was well enough, for this was a plain forgery, if not a counterfeit, and the word made would denote as much: and accordingly the defendant was convicted. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 19.

On an indictment found againſt the defendants for extortion, ſetting forth, that the defendant Dr. Loggen, being chancellor, and the other defendant, regiſter to the biſhop of Sarum, did force one Thomas Hollier, executor of the will of Mary Alſton, to prove the ſaid will in the ſaid biſhop's court, they well knowing that the ſaid will had before been proved in the prerogative court of Canterbury, and by reaſon thereof they extorted from the ſaid Thomas Hollier 40 s. and on not guilty pleaded, there was a verdict for the King.

1ſt. That it only alledged that the defendants well knew that the will had been proved before in the prerogative court: whereas they ſhould have ſhewn, that it appeared judicially before them. For otherwiſe this is no more than indicting a judge for giving ſentence on one ſide, when a matter not appearing to him would have inclined him to the other.

To this it was anſwered, that he could not well know it, unleſs it appeared under ſeal, and this being after a verdict.

Parker, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, he would intend it ſo, and in fact the ſecond probate was affixed to the ſame copy as the firſt.

2dly. It was excepted, that this was an indictment at ſeſſions, and the juſtices have no juriſdiction as to extortion. But this was likewiſe over-ruled, for their commiſſion has in it the word extortion, 3 Inſt. 149.

3dly. It was excepted, that the indictment had not alledged what was the juſt fee; ſo it does not appear that the defendants were guilty of extortion.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. It matters not whether 40 s. was the uſual fee for the probate, ſince in this caſe the defendants had no title to any fee at all.

4thly. It was excepted, that the defendants offices are diſtinct; and what might be extortion in one, might not be in the other; and therefore the indictment ought not to be joint; as two cannot be jointly indicted for exerciſing a trade without ſerving an apprenticeſhip.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. This would be an exception, if they were indicted for taking more than they ought, but it is only againſt them for contriving to get money where none is due. And this is an entire charge. For there are no acceſſaries in extortion, but he that is aſſiſting is as guilty as the extortioner; as he that is party to a riot is anſwerable for the act of the other.

Eyre, Juſtice, doubted whether the well knew was ſufficient, and quoted a caſe where having knowledge, that he was elected conſtable, was held ill. But as to the merits and all the other objections, the court were unanimous; but adjourned as to this laſt, and to conſider what puniſhment to inflict on the defendants. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 73.

The defendants having been indicted for a riot in entering into a room: they came in and confeſſed the indictment, and moved to ſubmit to a ſmall fine. The proſecutor, to aggravate the fine, produced affidavits, that a young gentleman, who was then in the room, and ill of the ſmall pox, was ſo frightened that he died; though he was in a very good way before, and whether theſe affidavits, could be read on this indictment, was the queſtion.

Eyre, Juſtice, was againſt the reading them, becauſe it was an injury to a third perſon, and no mention of it in the indictment. If in treſpaſs, the plaintiff would give the beating his ſervants in aggravation of damages, it muſt be laid in the declaration. And he mentioned the caſe of The King v. North & al. 9 W. 3. in this court, where in an indictment againſt ſeveral journeymen weavers for a riot, the circumſtance of their meeting, in order to oblige their maſters to raiſe their wages, was not allowed to be given in evidence, not being laid in the indictment.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice, Powys and Forteſcue, Juſtices, were for reading the affidavits, becauſe this was the immediate conſequence of the riot, and could not ſubſiſt as a crime of itſelf. And if it was otherwiſe, every man might make his indictment as long as his evidence. Beſides, why are affidavits ever read, unleſs it be to inform the court of circumſtances, that cannot appear on the general allegation of the crime? They ſaid, the true diſtinction was, where the matter can or cannot ſubſiſt as a diſtinct crime by itſelf: the combination of the weavers was a conſpiracy, which is a crime indictable; and it would have been hard to fine them on that account, and yet leave them open to be indicted for a conſpiracy. In an indictment for a riot in breaking windows, Holt, Chief Juſtice, let them in to ſhew, that it was becauſe the proſecutor had put out illuminations for the peace of Ryſwick. If circumſtances are not to be conſidered, the puniſhment for a riot muſt be the ſame in all caſes, which would be highly unreaſonable. The affidavits were therefore allowed to be read. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 139.

Trinity, 7 Geo. The King v. Carter.

The defendant was indicted for a treſpaſs before juſtices of peace, and it was excepted that it did not appear they had any juriſdiction for want of the words, and alſo aſſigned to hear and determine different felonies, tranſgreſſions, and other offences perpetrated in the county aforeſaid.

For theſe words are in all the commiſſions ever ſince ſtat. 18 Ed. 3. and the opinions have been, that without this clauſe the juſtices, as juſtices, cannot hear and determine thoſe matters.

Per curiam. The indictment muſt be quaſhed. At firſt the juſtices were only Conſervators of the peace, and the ſubſequent power to hear and determine, given by ſtat 18 & 34 Ed. 3. is only, that by commiſſion they may have ſuch a power. The commiſſion of the peace appears to have been altered into the preſent form, immediately after making theſe ſtatutes, which ſhews the opinion of the King's council at that time. Lambert ſays, they ſhall have power, which muſt be underſtood by commiſſion. As therefore this is not a proceeding on their common law juriſdiction, but a juriſdiction given by ſtatute; when ever they hold ſuch pleas, they muſt ſhew an appointment to hear and determine, and we cannot intend that they have ſuch power. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 442.

Eaſter, 8 Geo. The King v. Selfe.

See this caſe fully ſtated in page 118 of this work, under the head Arreſt of Judgment.

One W. together with ſeveral other journeymen taylors, of or in the town of Cambridge, were indicted for a conſpiracy among themſelves to raiſe their wages, and being found guilty, they now by their council moved in arreſt of judgment on ſeveral errors in the record.

1ſt, It was objected, that the defendants having the addition of yeomen, are notwithſtanding charged with a conſpiracy not to work as journeymen taylors, which is a repugnancy.

2dly, The caption is not good, being to the general quarter ſeſſions of the peace, &c. omitting our Lord the King after peace, Hilary, 11 Ann, two indictments were quaſhed on this exception.

3dly, No crime appears on the face of this indictment, for it only charges them with a conſpiracy and refuſal to work at ſo much per day, whereas they are not obliged to work at all by the day, but by the year, by ſtat. 5 Eliz. c. 4.

4thly, That this fact being laid in the town of Cambridge, it did not appear by the record what county Cambridge was in, which it ought to do, becauſe there are many other towns of that name in England: in Glouceſterſhire. So a miſ-trial; for there is no more reaſon to award the venire to the ſheriff of C. than to to the ſheriff of any other county. The venire facias is awarded to the ſheriff of Cambridge, commanding him to ſummon a jury of the county. In the margin of the indictment, the vill of C. in the indictment, the venue is alledged only at the vill of C. the certiorari to remove it, is directed to the juſtices of our Lord the King of the vill of C. in our county of C.

This error is not helped by naming the county in the certiorari to remove the indictment, becauſe that writ is only an order of this court.

Neither ſhall it be intended that Cambridge is in the county of Cambridge, becauſe this is a criminal caſe, and intendments are never allowed in proſecutions of this nature.

5thly, This indictment ought to conclude againſt the form of the ſtatute, for by a late ſtatute, viz. 7 Geo. journeymen taylors are prohibited to enter into any contract or agreement for advancing their wages. And ſtat. 2 & 3 E. 6. c. 15. makes ſuch perſons criminal. Saund. 250. W. Jones 379.

Per curiam As to the firſt, there is no inconſiſtency between the addition of yeomen and taylors.

As to the ſecond, this exception has been often overruled, eſpecially of late years.

As to the third, it is true this indictment ſets forth, that the defendants denied to work under ſuch wages as they demanded; but though this might be more than directed by the ſtatute, yet it is not for the denial, &c. but for the conſpiracy that they were indicted; and a conſpiracy of any kind is illegal, though the matter about which they conſpired might have been lawful for them, or any of them to do, if they had not conſpired to do it; and this appeared in the caſe of the Tub-women v. The Brewers of London.

As to the fourth, a venire facias, directed to the ſheriff of Cambridge to return a jury, if he returns one of the county of Cambridge, this is good; for Cambridge being mentioned in ſeveral acts of parliament, the court muſt-take notice of ſuch acts, and on ſuch a return will intend, that Cambridge is the county of Cambridge. “In the caſe of Withers v. Warner, Hilary, 6 Geo. we took judicial notice, that London and the city of London were all one. The certiorari directed to the juſtices of our Lord the King of the vill of C. in our county of C. and returned by the juſtices of the vill in the county of C.” that it will be a very foreign intendment, to ſuppoſe the vill to be out of the county.

As to the fifth, this indictment need not conclude againſt the form of the ſtatute, becauſe it was for a conſpiracy, which is an offence at common law. Therefore the judgment was affirmed by the whole court, &c. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 10.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. The King v. Gray.

One of the ſervants in the houſe opened his Lady's chamber door (which was faſtened with a braſs bolt) with a deſign to commit a rape: and King Chief Juſtice, ruled it to be a burglary, and the defendant was convicted and tranſported. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 481.

Hilary, 9 Geo. The King v. Sprigg and Oakley.

The defendants were tried at the Old Bailey on an indictment for piracy in ſinking a ſhip near the Iſle of Man; the evidence was as follows:

Sprigg bought this ſhip, and made Oakley maſter thereof, and having freighted her, he inſured 500 l. on the ſhip, and 400 l. on the cargo to the Weſt Indies.

Afterwards they put to ſea, and run the goods on the coaſt of England, and then put to ſea again, and about two days afterwards the ſhip was ſunk, and then he proteſted at the next port that both the ſhip and cargo were loſt.

The proof againſt the maſter was, that the day before the ſhip was loſt he took notice that the ſhip's boat was out of repair, and deſired ſome of the men to ſtop the chinks therein, for that he did not know how ſoon they might have occaſion to make uſe thereof.

The next day he deſired one of the ſailors to ſee how deep the water in the pump was, who in a quarter of an hour before had pumped till it was no more than two inches deep; but now to his great ſurpriſe found it more than ſeven inches deep; thereon he and the reſt of the ſhip's crew began and continued to pump, but ſtill the water became higher in the ſhip, and within half an hour was fifteen inches high.

Thereon the ſailors who pumped, and ſome of the reſt of the ſhip's crew, offered to go down to the hold, but the maſter would not ſuffer any of them to go down, nor any body to be there beſide himſelf and Sprigg, who was all the time below, which was proved by the ſailors; and that the water could not flow in ſo faſt, unleſs the ſhip was bored or broken in the bottom.

The proof againſt Sprigg, the owner, was, that the day before the ſhip put to ſea he bought an auger, which was an inch and a half wide in the bore; that the ſhip had augers enough before, and there was no manner of occaſion for ſo wide an auger and that he was under deck all the time the ſailors were pumping, and, as they believed, boring the ſhip.

But the evidence being only preſumptive againſt both the defendants, they were acquitted.

Note. This differs from Maſon's caſe, Eaſter 9 Geo. for there the goods of another were delivered on a ſpecial truſt to be carried to Malaga; but here the goods were the property of Sprigg himſelf, and he could not be indicted for ſtealing his own goods, with an intent to charge another, becauſe there muſt be a felonious taking as well as a converſion; now there could be no felonious taking, becauſe he himſelf was owner, and in poſſeſſion of the goods. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 66.

Eaſter, 9 Geo. The King v. Maſon.

The defendant who was maſter of a ſhip, was indicted and tried on three ſeveral indictments at the Old Bailey, before the judge of the Admiralty Court.

The firſt indictment was for maliciouſly and piratically burning his ſhip.

The ſecond indictment was for piracy in ſtealing the goods which he received on board the ſaid ſhip at Rotterdam.

The third indictment was for a cheat in committing the acts aforeſaid.

The court and jury acquitted the defendant of the two firſt indictments, and found him guilty of the third, for which he was fined and committed till he paid the ſame. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 74.

Michaelmas, 9 Geo. The King v. Layer.

The defendant was committed to the Tower for high-treaſon, in compaſſing the death of the King, and an indictment having been found againſt him at Rumford in Eſſex, he was removed hither by certiorari, when the following exceptions were taken, viz.

Miſ-ſpelling, falſe Latin, nonſenſe, and ſurpluſage, and that there were inſignificant and inſenſible words in the very commiſſion, by virtue whereof this indictment was found, as plenius veritat. which words cannot be conſtrued to any manner of ſenſe.

As to the miſ-ſpelling, he (the priſoner) is called in the indictment Chriſtopherus, with an e, when it ſhould have been with an o, as Chriſtophorus.

To which the court anſwered, that they did not know what his name was, and probably he might be baptized by that name; but if he was not, then it might be pleaded in abatement; and though the Lexicons and Dictionaries might warrant Chriſtophorus, yet the other might likewiſe be a name of baptiſm.

Then it was objected againſt the words of the indictment, viz. that he (the priſoner) compaſſavit imaginatus fuit & intendebat ad ſacram perſonam Domini Regis capiend. ſeiſiend. & impriſonand. Now here the conjunction copulative et ſhould have joined the word intendebat to the ſame mood and tenſe, &c. therefore it is incongruous Latin, and improper in an indictment, and makes it vitious; beſides, the word ad ſeiſiend. the King is an inſignificant word, not known in law, or in any Latin author; and for theſe reaſons, this indictment ought to be quaſhed, and the rather, becauſe all forms of indictments, eſpecially in high-treaſon, ought to be very certain.

To which it was anſwered and reſolved, that as to the fault objected to the commiſſion by virtue whereof this indictment was taken, this court has no power over it ſo as to quaſh the indictment; but though the objection is, that plenius veritat. cannot be conſtrued to any manner of ſenſe, yet by tranſpoſing the words it may be made good ſenſe.

They are in the recital of the commiſſion in the caption of the indictment, and muſt refer to the former words ad inquirend. They are inſerted in the form of a commiſſion, publiſhed in a treatiſe allowed by all the judges, called, A Collection of all Statutes relating to high-treaſon, compoſed for the aſſiſtance of the judges in Scotland.

1ſt. Then, as to the miſ-ſpelling the priſoner's name, he may plead that matter in abatement, for he may be as well known by the name of Chriſtopherus as by the name of Chriſtophorus.

2dly. It is true the verbs are not all in the ſame tenſe; but though they are not, and that the præter tenſe is coupled with the præter-perfect tenſe, yet that is not material, and ſhall not make this indictment naught; either word is ſufficient to charge the defendant with the intent of compaſſing: either overt act is ſufficient.

3dly. And as to the words ad ſeiſiend, it being an overt proof of the deſign; it is well enough if any proof is made of an overt act of the things laid in the indictment; beſides, it is not a word unknown in law, for it is uſed every day in the court of Exchequer, where ſeiſire facias are words in a writ ſent to the ſheriff, and he returns ſeiſiri feci. ſeiſiend. is a proper word; but without it there is ſufficient to charge Mr. Layer.

Theſe objections being over-ruled, the priſoner pleaded a miſnomer in abatement, and his plea was received, read, and filed, and afterwards he was ſent back to the Tower. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 82.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. The King v. Crowhurſh.

The defendant was indicted at the quarter ſeſſions for the county of Kent, as Overſeer of the pariſh of Swanſcombe in that county, for diſobeying an order made by two juſtices, whereby they ordered the churchwardens and overſeers of that pariſh to pay 4 s. per week to the keeper of the houſe of correction there, for the maintenance of one B. a lunatic, committed to that houſe, as long as B. ſhould continue there in cuſtody: and the indictment ſet out, that the defendant was one of the overſeers, &c. and had notice of the order, and was requeſted to pay the 4 s. per week by the keeper of the houſe of correction, and had not paid it, &c. And on demurrer to this indictment, it being removed into this court by certiorari, an exception was taken that there was no poſitive averment in the indictment that the two juſtices had made ſuch an order; for it was only ſet forth by way of recital, that whereas the two juſtices had made an order, &c. and for this reaſon two indictments were quaſhed for not obeying an order for receiving a baſtard child, Salk. 371. The King v. Whitehead. And unleſs there was ſuch an order, which ought to be poſitively alledged, there could be no diſobedience to it.

The council for the King cited the caſe of The Queen v. Goddard and Carleton, Trinity, 2 Ann, and argued, that the order here was only ſet out by way of recital, but the non-payment of the 4 s. per week, &c. is poſitively alledged. But not allowed.

Per curiam. If there was no order there could be no breach of that order, and therefore that ought to be poſitively alledged. And as to the caſe of The Queen v. Goddard and Carleton, the forgery was the offence, and that was poſitively averred; however, though the court ſeemed then to be of that opinion in that caſe, yet it was never adjudged, for the cauſe was not determined, nor judgment ever given on that indictment. And the caſe cited from Salk. is in point. So here judgment was given for the defendant. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1363.

Trinity, 10 Geo. The King v. Reeves.

On a motion to quaſh an indictment, wherein was theſe words, it is preſented, which bill is true, inſtead of, that the bill is true, a rule was made to quaſh it niſi, &c. but no cauſe was ſhewn, ſo the indictment was quaſhed for that fault, Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 296.

Eaſter, 11 Geo. The King v. Weſton & al.

An indictment was found againſt ſix perſons jointly and ſeverally, for exerciſing a trade; it was quaſhed, becauſe the court held that there ought to be diſtinct indictments. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 622.

Eaſter, 11 Geo. The King v. Weſtbury.

The defendant was indicted, for that T. S. and other bailiffs, &c. did by virtue of a writ of our Lord the King of fieri facias, and a warrant thereon, levy the goods of M. G. and that the defendant, Weſtbury, with others did aſſemble, and riotouſly and routouſly did reſcue the the ſaid goods, and aſſault and beat the bailiffs, and ſo diſturbed them in the execution of the writ and warrant aforeſaid.

On not guilty pleaded, judgment was given againſt the defendant, and the court was now moved in arreſt of judgment, for that the fi. fac. was not well ſet forth; for it was by virtue of a writ of our Lord the King of fieri facias, without ſetting forth the writ itſelf, and without mentioning the party's name; then it ſets forth, that there was a warrant according to the exigence of the writ aforeſaid, and that the defendant diſturbed the bailiffs in the execution of the writ and warrant aforeſaid, which is ill; for if there was no writ, there could be no warrant; it is true this indictment mentions a writ, but it is not well ſet forth, and if ſo, the warrant muſt fail; for the court can never judge whether it is according to the exigence of the writ, when no good writ appears to have iſſued.

Per curiam. It is true, the bailiff may defend himſelf by the warrant, but a writ muſt be ſhewn to charge a ſtranger; and this is the conſtant diſtinction in ſuch caſes; and as this caſe is, an indictment would have lain for a ſingle battery; but the warrant itſelf, and the diſturbing another in the execution of that warrant both refer to the writ, and that not being well ſet forth, thoſe things which refer to it muſt neceſſarily fail; for which reaſon the judgment was arreſted. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 357.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. The King v. Roberts.

The defendant was indicted and acquitted in this court, and afterwards brought an action in the Marſhalſea againſt the proſecutor for a malicious proſecution; on which the defendant in the action was held to ſpecial bail; and now the court was moved to ſtop the proceedings there, becauſe this court being poſſeſſed of the principal cauſe, may better judge whether the proſecution was malicious or not.

Per curiam. It is highly inconſiſtent to have the reaſonableneſs of ſuing here determined below; where there are any particular circumſtances of aggravation, a judge may require ſpecial bail, though the writ does not require it. However, if we ſtop proceedings below, we will order the defendant to find ſpecial bail; which the defendant below agreeing to, the proceedings were ſtayed. The court agreed the caſes on this point in Salkeld and Siderſin to be law. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8 p. 308.

The defendants were indicted, for that they, by a conſpiracy between them, gave the huſband money to marry a poor helpleſs woman, who was an inhabitant in the pariſh of B. and incapable of marriage, on purpoſe to gain a ſettlement for her in the pariſh of A. where the man was ſettled; and now the court was moved to quaſh this indictment, becauſe it is no crime to marry a woman and give her a portion; and the juſtices are not judges what woman is capable of an huſband, neither have they any juriſdiction in conſpiracies.

Per curiam. The quaſhing of indictments is a diſcretionary power of the court, but in this caſe the defendant has not ſhewed any thing to induce the court to quaſh the indictment; and if the matter is doubtful, the defendant muſt plead or demur; but indictments for conſpiracies are never quaſhed.

A bare conſpiracy to do a lawful act to an unlawful end, is a crime, though no act was done in conſequence thereof; but if the fault in the indictment is plain and apparent, it is quaſhed for that reaſon, and the party ſhall not be put to the trouble to plead or demur; ſuppoſe there is a conſpiracy to let lands at 10*l.* per annum value to a poor man, in order to get him a ſettlement, or to make a certificate-man a pariſh-officer, or a conſpiracy to ſend a woman big of a baſtard-child into another pariſh to be delivered there, and ſo to charge that pariſh with the child; certainly theſe are crimes indictable, but in this indictment it is not ſet forth that the woman was likely to be chargeable to the pariſh.

As to the objection, "that the ſeſſions have no juriſdiction in conſpiracies," the contrary is true; they have no juriſdiction in perjury at common law, but by the ſtatute they have; and they have no juriſdiction to indict for forgery, but certainly they have juriſdiction of conſpiracies, and ſuch a perſon as this defendant is, was puniſhable by indictment at common law.

In Trinity term following judgment was given for the defendant, becauſe it was not averred in the indictment that the woman was laſt legally ſettled in the pariſh of B. but only that ſhe was an inhabitant there. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 321.

The defendants were ſeverally indicted for receiving goods ſtole by one Foſter, knowing them to be ſtolen, as for a miſdemeanor againſt the form of the ſtatute; on not guilty pleaded, they were found guilty at niſi prius before Pratt, Chief Juſtice.

The council for the defendants moved in arreſt of judgment, that by ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 9. ſect. 5. this offence was made felony, but by a ſubſequent, ſtatute viz. 5 Ann. c. 31. the receiver may be tried as for a miſdemeanor, if the principal felon cannot be taken and convicted; but if the principal can be took, then the council for the defendants inſiſted the receiver could not be proſecuted as for a miſdemeanor; and therefore it is neceſſary in ſuch an indictment as this to aver, that the principal felon could not be taken; but in fact they ſaid Foſter was afterwards taken, and tried for the felony, and acquitted; and there is no ſuch averment in the indictment. But the Judges held, on conderation of the ſtatutes, that the proſecutor had his election to proſecute either for felony or a miſdemeanor; and though there have been ſeveral indictments for ſuch offences, yet none have had any ſuch averment, as is inſiſted on to be neceſſary by the council for the defendant. Whereon judgment was given for the proſecutor. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1370.

Eaſter, 12 Geo. The King v. How.

An indictment was brought againſt the defendant, for that he abuſed one Sir Nicholas Carew, being a juſtice of peace, in the execution of his office, by divers ſcandalous, threatening, and contemptuous words, and with force and arms unlawfully retarded him in the execution of his aforeſaid office.

On demurrer to this indictment it was objected, that it was too general, and that the words ought to be ſet out, that the court may judge whether they are indictable or not, according to the late caſes of convictions for curſing and ſwearing where the court has required the oaths to be ſet out.

The council for the proſecutor admitted the indictment to be bad as to the words, but inſiſted that it was good as to the obſtructing the juſtice in the execution of his office: and if any part of it be well laid, there ſhall be judgment for the King. Juſtices are indictable for neglecting their duty, and it is but reaſonable to give them the ſame remedy againſt obſtructions.

Per curiam. If any part of the indictment was good, we ſhould not give judgment for the defendant. But this is bad in the whole, the word retarded will hardly warrant calling this an obſtruction; but if it would, ſurely ſome act or other ſhould be ſet out. So judgment was given for the defendant. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 699.

On demurrer to an indictment, the caption appeared to be at a ſeſſions held ad feſtum Epiphanii, inſtead of Epiphaniae; and it was inſiſted for the defendant, that this was a different time from that preſcribed in the ſtatute, for Epiphanicus is in the Roman calendar, and was a Biſhop of Solamis in the time of the Emperor Theodoſius: and the court held it ill, and gave judgment for the defendant. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 698.

The defendant was indicted for conſpiring to marry a poor perſon ſettled in A. to a perſon ſettled in B. in order to bring a charge on the pariſh of B. and on demurrer judgment was given for the defendant, becauſe it was not an offence indictable. Vide Stra. vol. 1. page 707.

The defendant was indicted, for that he keeping a common griſt mill, and being employed by William Bare to grind three buſhels of wheat, did with force and arms unlawfully take and detain forty-two pounds weight of the ſaid wheat. On demurrer judgment was given for the defendant, there being no actual force laid, and this being a matter of a private nature, no action would lie. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 793.

The defendant was indicted on ſtat. 12 Geo. c. 35. for burning place bricks and ſtock bricks together. And on demurrer, it was objected, that in this particular inſtance, though a penalty of 20 s. per thouſand is given, yet there is no appropriation of it, or any method preſcribed in which it ſhall be recovered, though there is to all the reſt. And on looking into the act, it appeared this offence was omitted out of the clauſe, which gave the bricklayers company power to ſue for the penalties; therefore the court held, that the 20 s. per thouſand, was in the nature of a debt to the crown, where the unappropriated penalty would go, and might be ſued for in a court of revenue, and not by indictment; and therefore the defendant had judgment. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 828.

The defendants were indicted, for that they unlawfully, riotouſly, and routouſly, and alſo illicitly, riotouſly, and routouſly broke, and threw down pales, and took away, &c. two water engines belonging to J. G. The defendants having been found guilty, the court was moved in arreſt of judgment, for that the indictment is not laid with force and arms, and that judgment was arreſted on the like occaſion, in 2 Keb. 133.

Raymond, Chief Juſtice. When the fact implies a force, the addition of, with force and arms is not material; here it is laid riotouſly, &c. broke, and threw down pales, &c. which neceſſarily implies a force and treſpaſs, and therefore it is not neceſſary to determine, whether the omiſſion of with force and arms is generally remedied by ſtat. 37 H. 8. the preſent caſe being clear on the other reaſon.

The defendants were indicted for a riot, whereby they riotouſly took away two water engines; after a verdict for the King, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that it was not laid with force and arms.

Per curiam. The words riotouſly took, broke, and threw down, imply a force, and the indictment is well enough. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 834.

After a verdict for the King on an indictment for uſury: the court was moved in arreſt of judgment, that they had only laid a corrupt agreement, without any loan or taking exceſſive intereſt in purſuance of it. And the judgment was arreſted. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 816.

Eaſter, 3 Geo. 2. The King v. Martham Bryan.

On an indictment ſetting forth, that the defendant came to the ſhop of one Langley, a mercer, and affirmed ſhe was a ſervant to the Counteſs of Pomfret, and was ſent by her from St. James's to fetch ſome ſilks for the Queen, and endeavouring thereby to defraud the ſaid Langley: whereas in fact ſhe was not a ſervant of the Counteſs of Pomfret's, nor was ſent on the Queen's account. After a verdict for the King, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that there being no falſe tokens or any actual fraud committed, it was not an offence indictable.

The court would have maintained it as being a fraud concerning public traffic; and though no harm was done, yet an indictment would lie as in the caſe in 1 Vent. 304. of an indictment for a conſpiracy to charge a man with a baſtard child, when there really was no child, ſo that the party could not ſuffer.

Per curiam. There the conſpiracy was the crime: and an indictment will lie for that, though it be to do a lawful act; this is no more than telling a lie, and no evidence being given to maintain it, the judgment muſt be arreſted. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 866.

In the caſe of Fiſher, judgment was arreſted after a verdict; and in the caſe of Saunders the indictment was quaſhed; being taken at an adjourned ſeſſions, and it not appearing what day the original ſeſſions began, to bring it within the time preſcribed by the ſtatute. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 865.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. 2. The King v. Taylor.

An indictment was quaſhed for being too general, it being ſtated therein, that the defendant was a ſlanderer, and a common and turbulent diſturber of the peace, having moved and incited divers ſtrifes, controverſies, &c. and for having abuſed one J. A. with ill language, &c. in the houſe of the ſaid J. A. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 849.

The defendant was indicted for an aſſault and battery committed by the defendant on J. S. and J. N. and on not guilty pleaded, a verdict was found for the King, that the defendant was guilty, &c. and a motion was made in arreſt of judgment by the council for the defendant, that theſe were two diſtinct batteries, and two diſtinct offences, for which the defendant ought to have been indicted by ſeveral indictments, and that they could not be joined in the ſame indictment; for as the offences were ſeveral, ſo the judgments ought to be ſeveral, and diſtinct fines ſet on the defendant in reſpect of them, on which a rule was made to ſtay judgment till, &c. And the council for the proſecutor moved to diſcharge the rule, for although he agreed J. S. and J. N. could not have joined in an action for theſe batteries, yet they might be well enough put in the ſame indictment, becauſe the court would conſider them as different indictments, and might very well give different judgments, and ſet different fines, but the court held, that as no caſe was cited, nor precedent to warrant ſuch an indictment, it was ill, for the reaſons given by the council for the defendant: ſo judgment was arreſted abſolutely. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1572.

The defendant was convicted on ſtat. 5 El. c. 14. for forging a leaſe and releaſe: and the indictment ſets forth, that one Garbut and Wife were ſeiſed in fee of certain meſſuages, lands, and tenements, called Jawick, in the pariſh of Clackton in Eſſex; and that the defendant intending to moleſt them and their intereſt in the premiſes, forged a leaſe and releaſe as from Garbut and Wife, whereby they are ſuppoſed for a valuable conſideration to convey to him all that part called Jawick Park in the pariſh of Clackton in Eſſex, containing eight miles in circumference, with all the deer, woods, &c. thereto belonging.

After a verdict for the King, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the premiſes ſuppoſed to be conveyed were ſo materially different from thoſe which were really the eſtate of Garbut and Wife, which was houſes, lands, and tenements, that it was impoſſible this conveyance ever could moleſt or diſturb them; or if it was a true deed, it could not paſs their lands at law for want of a proper deſcription: and though where lands are improperly deſcribed, a court of equity will oblige the vendor to convey them by proper words; yet that is only where there is a previous contract for a ſale, and they do it as carrying that contract into execution; whereas here is no contract, and the caſe is no more than if A. had been ſeiſed of Blackaw, and B. had forged a conveyance of Whitacre, which certainly would not be within the ſtatute.

Raymond, Chief Juſtice, declared that they were all of opinion that this indictment ought to be quaſhed: the words of the act are, "to the intent that "the ſtate of freehold or inheritance of any per-"ſon to any lands, &c. or the right or title of, in, "and to the ſame, ſhall or may be moleſted, trou-"bled, defeated, recovered or charged.' By this it appears, that it is not neceſſary there ſhould be a charge, or a poſſibility of a charge; it is ſufficient that it be done with that intent, and the jury found that it was done with intent to moleſt Garbut and his wife in the poſſeſſion of their lands. Accordingly judgment was given for the King, and the defendant was ſentenced to undergo the puniſhment appointed by the act for forging a deed, which ſentence was executed on him at Charing Croſs. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 901.

Michaelmas, 4 Geo. 2. Joſhua Cornwall's Caſe.

The defendant was indicted with another perſon for burglary, and on evidence it appeared that he was a ſervant in the houſe where the robbery was committed, and in the night-time opened the ſtreet door, and let in the other priſoner, and ſhewed him the ſide-board, from whence the other priſoner took the plate; then Cornwall opened the door and let him out, but did not go out with him, but went to bed.

On the trial before Raymond, Chief Juſtice, Denton, Juſtice, and Baron Comyns, it was doubted, whether this was burglary in the ſervant, he not going out with the other; and it being laid down in H. P. C. 81. Dalt. 317. that it was not burglary in the ſervant; the judges ordered it to be found ſpecially. And afterwards at a meeting of all the judges at Serjeant's Inn, they were all of opinion, that it was burglary in both, and not to be diſtinguiſhed from the caſe that had been often ruled and allowed in the ſame page in Hale, that if one watches at the ſtreet end, while the others go in, it is burglary in all: and on report of this opinion the next ſeſſions, the defendant was executed. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 881.

The defendants were indicted in one indictment for perjury, and four of them pleading, were convicted. It was then moved in arreſt of judgment, that crimes (eſpecially perjury) were in their nature ſeveral, and two cannot be indicted together. And Palm. 535. 6 Mod. 210. 2 Roll. Abr. 81. pl. 6. 7. Salk. 382. Eaſter, 7 Geo. King v. Weſton & al. Salk. 623. Trin. 4 Geo. 2. King v. Clendon. Ante 870. 1 Keb. 585, 612. 635. were cited.

It was cited Salk. 382. in extortion, Trin. 10 Ann. Queen v. Marſhal, againſt two for receiving ſtolen goods. 1 Vent. 302. 3 Keb. 700. for maintenance. 2 *Roll. Per curiam. There may be great inconveniences if this is allowed; one may be deſirous to have a certiorari, and the other not; the jury on the trial of all, may apply evidence to all, that is but evidence againſt one. The caſes cited are all of them applied to that which may be joint, as extortion, maintenance, &c. but perjury is a ſeparate act in each: and Trin. 6 Ann. The Queen v. Hodſon & al. two were indicted for being ſcolds, and compared to barretry, and held not to lie; ſo the judgment here was arreſted. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 921.

The defendants were indicted at the ſeſſions in Somerſetſhire, for that they feloniouſly made an aſſault on Samuel Cox in the King's highway, and put him in fear, &c. and 9 l. in money from the ſaid Cox did take, ſteal, and carry away. On not guilty pleaded by all the defendants, the jury found this ſpecial verdict,

That Samuel Cox travelling on horſeback on the King's highway to Somerton fair, on a place called Kingſdown Hill, in the county of Somerſet, ſaw all the priſoners in company together, one of whom was then lying on the ground: that Cox paſſed by them, and one of them (which, the jury did not know) called to Cox, and deſired him to change half a crown, that they might give ſomething to a poor Scotchman then lying on the ground, who was one of the priſoners. Cox came back, and putting his hand in his pocket to pull out his money, in order to give them change, as they deſired, he pulled out four moidores, and a Portugal piece, value 3*l.* 12*s.* and having the pieces of gold in his hand, John Francis, one of the priſoners, gently ſtruck Cox's hand, in which he held the gold, by means whereof the gold fell to the ground; that thereon Cox got off his horſe, and ſaid to the priſoners, that he would not loſe his money ſo; and the ſaid Cox then and there offering to take up the pieces of gold, which were then on the ground, and in Cox's preſence; the priſoners then ſwore, that if he touched the pieces of gold, they would knock his brains out; whereby he was then and there put in bodily fear of his life, and then and there deſiſted from taking up the pieces of gold. That the priſoners then and there immediately took up the gold, and got on their horſes and rode off with the gold; that Cox thereon purſued them, and rode after them about half a mile; and then the priſoners ſtruck him and his horſe, and ſwore that if he purſued them any further, they would kill him, by reaſon of which menace he was afraid to continue his purſuit any further; but whether on the whole matter the priſoners are guilty of the felony and robbery charged on them; the jury doubt, and pray the advice of the court. And if, &c.

On this ſpecial verdict the priſoners were removed to the K. B where it was twice argued at the bar. And on the firſt argument, the only queſtion was, whether a taking in the preſence be in point of law a taking from the perſon, and it was unanimouſly determined that it was.

But then a doubt aroſe whether it was ſufficiently found to have been a taking in the preſence of Cox, it not being ſaid ſo in expreſs words; and after it had been argued in this court on this point, it was ordered to be argued at Serjeant's Inn Hall before all the judges of England. And this term the Chief Juſtice declared, that all the Judges, except Carter, Comyns, and Thompſon, (who only doubted), were of opinion, that the fact of Cox's preſence at the taking was not ſufficiently found though there ſeems to have been evidence enough to warrant ſuch finding. The whole reſted on the word immediately, then and there, ſerving only for a venue, and immediately was a word too looſe and uncertain. In all legal proceedings, it does not exclude all meſne times and meſne acts. In Oneby's verdict it is uſed five times to different purpoſes. In Mawgridge's twice. On ſtat. 27 Eliz. c. 13. ſect. 11. the notice for hue and cry muſt be in convenient time; and yet on declaring, you aver it was immediately, which is ſupported by proof of a convenient time. The caſes cited ſhew how nice the judges have always been; and therefore as here wants one neceſſary ingredient to make it a robbery, the priſoners muſt be diſcharged from this indictment.

However, we all think this a grand larceny, and therefore cannot diſcharge their perſons, and as we cannot give judgment for a larceny, there muſt be a new indictment; for we are confined to the doubt of the jury, whether this be a taking from the perſon of Cox.

They muſt be remanded to Somerſetſhire. We diſcharged Burridge the other day, becauſe no ſpecies of felony was found. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1015.

Theſe pariſhes were indicted for not repairing an highway, and on demurrer, ſeveral exceptions were taken to the indictment.

1ſt, That there are no names of the grand jurors ſet 2 Roll. Abr. 82. and 2 Keb. 470. But the indictment being read, it appeared that their names were ſet out.

2dly, The indictment is not ſufficiently certain in ſetting out the length and breadth of the road, for it ſays only containing by eſtimation abour ſixteen acres, &c. 2 Roll. Abr. 81.

3dly, There are there three pariſhes jointly indicted, though it is a ſeparate offence. Stiles 157.

4thly. It does not appear that theſe pariſhes were bound to theſe repairs, for it does not appear that the road is in any of the pariſhes, nor is there a ſufficient preſcription laid to charge them otherwiſe, it being only ſaid that they have been uſed and accuſtomed to repair.

Lord Hardwicke. I do not ſee on this laſt exception how this indictment can be maintained, the pariſhes are an eccleſiaſtical diviſion, yet they are of common right bound to repair the roads, and therefore it is ſufficient to ſhew that a way lies within ſuch a pariſh, and is out of repair, and to pray proceſs againſt the inhabitants. Now, here it appears, that this highway is within the liberty of Derby, but it does not that three pariſhes are within the liberty of Derby, it is only ſaid, that they are within Derby; and even if theſe words did ſufficiently ſhew that, yet it would not then appear that they are all within the liberty, ſo as to make them a vill; and if that appeared too, it ſhould be ſhewn likewiſe by what means they are chargeable, but it does not appear on this indictment, that any part of this road is within the pariſh; ſo that it is bad on this exception.

Lee, Juſtice. I am of the ſame opinion, and I ſhould think too, that the indictment is bad on the ſecond exception, for if the breadth does not appear, how can the court ſet a proper fine?

The court agreed, that it was bad on the laſt exception, therefore judgment was given for the defendants. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 105.

The court was moved, that ſeveral unneceſſary counts might be ſtruck out of an indictment.

Lord Hardwicke. How can we ſtrike out any thing that the grand jury have found? We might do it in an information, the officer that attends the grand jury ſhould not let ſuch indictments come before them; it is fit a rule ſhould be made, that no indictments ſhould be preferred to the grand jury, but by the clerks of the Crown-office; and then we ſhould know who to call on in ſuch caſes; but however, as it is found, we can do nothing. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 203. Strange, vol. 2. p. 1026.

Per curiam. The indictment is the thing on which the merits of the cauſe depends, and therefore the court admitted it to be read to the priſoner, but not the venire facias. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 92.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. 2. The King v. Sutton.

The defendant was indicted at Northampton aſſizes, for unlawfully having in his cuſtody and poſſeſſion two iron ſtamps, with intent to impreſs the ſcepters on ſixpences, and to colour and paſs them for half guineas. And Lord Hardwicke, who tried him, having ſome doubt, whether the bare having them in his cuſtody, without ſhewing that he had uſed them, was indictable; directed a certiorari to be brought. And after it had been twice argued, the court was of opinion, that it was well enough; for coining was the prerogative of the crown at common law: that this could not be a caſual having them innocently, or coming to him as executor; becauſe it is laid, and found that he had them with intent to impreſs. 3 Inſt. 18. ſays, the perſon may be impriſoned, in whoſe cuſtody ſuch inſtruments are found; and ſhall be impriſoned for what is not indictable, lading wool is lawful, but if it be with an intent to tranſport that makes it an offence; here the intent is the offence; and the having in his cuſtody, an act that is the evidence of that intent. We muſt not be too nice in theſe indictments, which Lord Hale, in his Hiſt. p. 193. complains of in the courts. The defendant was fined 6 s. 8 d. to ſtand in the pillory at Charing Croſs, and to ſuffer ſix months impriſonment, and to remain till the fine was paid. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1074. Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 370.

An indictment for larceny, and a ſpecial verdict thereon, was brought into this court on a certiorari. The indictment ſet forth, that the priſoner feloniouſly ſtole a parchment-writing, purporting to be a commiſſion out of the Court of Chancery, to ſettle the boundaries between two manors, and aſcertain the height which the defendant in the cauſe had a right to keep water up to, in a pond in his ground; And alſo another parchment-writing, purporting to be a return of the commiſſioners thereto: which commiſſion and return were reſpectively ſaid to be of the value of 2 s. and were of the goods and chattels of the King. On not guilty pleaded, the jury found that two parchment-writings, anſwering the deſcription in the indictment in the year 1712, were brought into the Six Clerk's Office in Middleſex, belonging to the Court of Chancery, the proper office wherein to record and keep them, as records of that court, where they were accordingly kept till the 20th day of October 1738, when the priſoner privately carried the ſame out of the office, with an intent to ſteal the ſame: that they were the King's goods, and each of the value of one penny; and that in 1717, the cauſe was at an end.

This cauſe was argued at the bar, that on the whole record, the priſoner was guilty of petit larceny; in order to prove this, two things were inſiſted on, 1ſt. That this was petit larceny, according to the general nature of it. 2dly. That no objection lies from the nature of the parchment-writing, or its being a record, to bring this taking away to be under the degree of felony.

On the other hand it was argued for the priſoner, that this is one of the exempted caſes. It was admitted, that this was neither chattel real nor a cloſe in action. But it was contended to be a thing that concerned the reality, as it related to the boundaries of manors, and the right of water, which are points in which the very inheritance is affected. That theſe were of that nature which are called the goods of no one, things whereto every man has a right to reſort, and to uſe them. And admitting they are in the cuſtody of the crown, (for they can be but in one cuſtody) it will not follow that they are the property of the crown.

The court did not meddle with the queſtion, whether this was properly ſaid to be the goods of the King, nor with the queſtion on ſtat. 8 Hen. 6. c. 12. or as to ſtealing records at common law; but ſaid, the point of theſe writings concerning the reality, was ſufficient to found their judgment on. They ſaid there was a ſtrong inclination in the judges to make lodgers guilty of felony; but it was not done by the act of parliament. And if there is any inconvenience in the preſent judgment, it may be rectified that way.

They all therefore declared their opinions, that the priſoner was not guilty.

Lee, Chief Juſtice, then ſtated a queſtion, whether as this was undoubtedly a great miſdemeanor, they could not give judgment as for a treſpaſs.

The defendant was indicted for not taking on him the office of overſeer of the poor, on a regular appointment; and on demurrer it was objected, that he was to take no oath, ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. had inflicted pecuniary penalties for neglect of duty to be recovered in a ſummary way, therefore he could not be indicted.

Per curiam Thoſe penalties are for neglect of duty when he is the officer, whereas this indictment ſays, he has obſtinately refuſed to take the office on him; the diſobeying an act of parliament is indictable on the principles of the common law. Judgment was given for the King. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1146.

On an indictment brought againſt the defendant, for that he intending to defraud the King, and unjuſtly to procure a payment to be made to the widow of an officer, did accordingly publiſh a certain falſe and counterfeit affidavit, purporting to have been ſworn by one Elizabeth Roe, before a Juſtice of the peace, by which means he received 5 l. 6 s. 8 d. of the paymaſter of the King's bounty, and this was laid as an offence at common law.

After a verdict for the King, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that this not being laid to be forged by the defendant, was not an offence at common law, but he ought to have been indicted on ſtat. 23 H. 8. cap. 1. for a falſe token.

Per curiam. Since Ward's caſe, this can never be doubted. And it has always been held, that the ſtatute did not create a new offence, but only added a further puniſhment when the indictment is againſt the form of the ſtatute, ſtat. 5. Eliz. c. 14. reciting the forgeries at common law, has the word writings in contradiſtinction to deeds; and it is in the election of the party, in the caſe of forging deeds, to lay the indictment either at common law, or on the ſtatute. So judgment was given for the King. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1144.

Trinity, 17 Geo. The King v. Bailey.

The court refuſed to quaſh an indictment for not attending the Mayor of Sarum to execute his warrant; and ſaid, the defendant might demur to it. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1211.

Eaſter, 18 Geo. 2. The King v. Freeman.

The defendant was convicted, for that the keeper of the houſe of correction having A. in his cuſtody, who was committed by virtue of a juſtice of peace's warrant, he the defendant unlawfully reſcued him: and the court arreſted the judgment, it not being ſhewn for what he was committed, ſo as to make the houſe of correction a proper priſon, (which it is not for all offences) and alſo becauſe the court cannot judge of a proper puniſhment on ſo general a charge. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1226.

The defendant was convicted on an indictment for being a common and turbulent brawler, and ſower of diſcord amongſt her quiet and honeſt neighbours. ſo that ſhe had ſtirred, moved, and incited, divers ſtrifes, controverſies, quarrels, and diſputes, amongſt his majeſty's liege people, againſt the peace, &c.

It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the charge was too general, and did not amount to either a barrator or common ſcold, which are the only inſtances in which a general charge will be ſufficient.

It was likewiſe objected, that if the words did amount to a deſcription of a ſcold, yet it ſhould be to the common damage of her neighbours, for every degree of ſcolding is indictable.

The court was of opinion, that the judgment ought to be arreſted on both exceptions, for none of the words here uſed are the technical words, and it muſt be laid to the common nuiſance, &c. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1246.

Eaſter, 20 Geo. 2. The King v. George Trivilian, Eſq.

The defendant was indicted for not receiving an apprentice, it was quaſhed becauſe it did not appear to be binding within ſtat. 4. Eliz. c. 2. and the court ſaid that was barely matter of evidence, but the circumſtances muſt be averred. They would not meddle with the general queſtion, whether an indictment would lie or not. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1268.

Eaſter, 20 Geo. 2. The King v. King, et al.

The court would not quaſh an indictment againſt overſeers for not paying over money to their ſucceſſors, as quaſhing was not a matter of right. and this is a growing evil. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1268.

Hilary, 30 Geo. 2 The King v. Strong.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt quaſhing an indictment on ſtat. 5. Eliz. cap. 4. found at the ſeſſions for the city of Carliſle, for exerciſing a trade not having ſerved an apprenticeſhip thereto.

The objection taken to the indictment was, that Burrough ſeſſions had no juriſdiction to take ſuch indictments

After hearing the arguments of council on both ſides the court diſcharged the rule.

Lord Mansfield, at the time of the original motion, looked into ſtat. 5. Eliz. c. 4. and ſaid that the ſtat. expreſly gives the power to mayors, or other head officers of cities or towns corporate at their ſeſſions.

Per curiam. Unanimouſly let the rule be diſcharged Vide Bur. p. 252.

On a motion for a new trial on a conviction of the defendants for a nuiſance, in erecting and uſing a building at Twickenham, in the county of Middleſex, for making acid ſpirit of ſulphur, &c. The court granted a rule to ſhew cauſe, with this addition:

"That the defendants ſhould have three days "time to move in arreſt of judgment after the "court ſhould have given their opinion on the "preſent motion for a new trial as on a verdict "againſt evidence."

Deniſon, Juſtice, who tried the cauſe, reported the evidence given at the trial, and declared himſelf ſatisfied with the verdict of conviction, on which the rule was diſcharged as to ſetting aſide the verdict.

On a motion made by the defendants council in arreſt of judgment, they took the following exceptions to the indictment, viz.

1ſt, That it is laid generally at the pariſh of Twickenham, and only ſaid "near the common highway," but not ſaid to be in the town or village, it may therefore be on a heath or common, for ought that appears to the contrary.

2dly, That in the indictment no offence is preciſely laid, it charges, "that by reaſon of the noiſome of- "fenſive and ſtinking ſmoke, the air was impregnated "with noiſome offenſive ſtinks and ſmells," which are vague uncertain terms.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on this motion, the ſame was denied.

Lord Mansfield, ſaid, there was nothing in the objections, and reduced them to three heads, viz.

1ſt That there is no ſufficient charge of hurtfulneſs.

2dly, That it is not preciſely charged "to whom," the hurt is done.

3dly, That it is only laid generally, "in the pariſh of Twickenham."

1ſt, The jury have found, "that it is to the com- "mon nuiſance of the King's ſubjects dwelling, &c. "and travelling, &c."

2dly, The perſons incommoded are ſufficiently deſcribed, and the offence is charged to be to the common nuiſance of perſons inhabiting and travelling, &c. and unleſs they had been ſo near as to be hurt by it, the indictment could not have been proved.

3dly, It is ſufficiently laid, and in the uſual and cuſtomary manner, the very exiſtence of the nuiſance depends on the number of houſes and concourſe of people, and this is a matter of fact to be judged of by the jury. Therefore there is no foundation for the objections.

The court unanimouſly denied the motion, and on a motion for judgment, the defendants were fined 6 s. 8 d. each, and entered into a rule never to make any more acid ſpirit of ſulphur, &c. at their works at Twickenham. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 334.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt quaſhing a certiorari to remove from the quarter ſeſſions of the city of London an information on ſtat. 1 Jac. 1. cap. 22. intitled, "the "duty of tanners, curriers, ſhoemakers, and of others "cutting of leather."

The council for the motion ſaid, three objections had been taken on the original motion to the certiorari, viz.

1ſt. That the certiorari does not lie at all.

3dly. That it does not lie before conviction.

Which objections he anſwered, and after hearing the council on the other ſide, the court were of opinion, that the proper method of bringing this queſtion before them would be, to move to quaſh the information.

Lord Mansfield. The certiorari has manifeſtly iſſued as ſuppoſing it to be a proceeding before the Juſtices at the ſeſſions, and they have returned it as ſuch.

The court, thought the previous queſtion to that of the regularity or direction of the certiorari depended on the propriety and validity of the information, viz.

"Whether the Mayor alone had the juriſdiction "under this act, or the Mayor in ſeſſions."

The council for the rule (and to quaſh the certiorari) argued, that the juriſdiction is in the Mayor alone, for that his power extended even for the ſpace of three miles out of the city, where the ſeſſions has no juriſdiction at all.

On theſe doubts in the court and council, as to the mode of ſettling this motion, the preſent rule was enlarged, and a rule was made "to ſhew cauſe why the "information ſhould not be quaſhed."

On ſhewing cauſe, the defendant's council took the following objections to the information, viz.

2dly. That the remedy is not by way of information, but ought to be by indictment.

3dly. That it is uncertain before whom the information was taken.

Theſe objections were anſwered by the council for the proſecution, and they further urged, that the court could not quaſh ſuch an information on motion, eſpecially where a private perſon is intitled to the penalty, and no part belongs to the King.

Lord Mansfield. As to the court's not quaſhing on motion, but putting the party to demur; that reaſoning will not hold where the objection is to the juriſdiction of the court that has undertaken to proceed. The queſtion is here on the juriſdiction of the court, and it is agreed by the council for the proſecutor to be a proceeding before the Lord Mayor perſonally, though in ſeſſions.

The fiftieth ſection of the ſtatute (which gives him the juriſdiction) does not give it to him perſonally, but in the terms of the common commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, and the ſame power is given to him as to other Mayors, bailiff's, head officers of boroughs, ſtewards of leets, &c. now this muſt be exerciſed according to the courſe of the common law, i. e. by indictment.

As to the objection, "that the ſeſſions cannot have "juriſdiction beyond the limits of the city;" whereas this is given to the Mayors in any place within three miles of it.

The anſwer is, that this juriſdiction of the ſeſſions is therefore by this act extended to three miles beyond the city.

There appears no colour for the notion of a ſummary juriſdiction in the Mayor under the authority of this ſtatute; therefore the information ought to be quaſhed for want of juriſdiction in the Mayor to receive and proceed on it.

Per curiam, unanimouſly, let the rule for quaſhing the information be made abſolute, and the former rule be diſcharged. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 385.

On motion the court quaſhed this indictment, which was found for delivering out in the public ſtreets printed bills of the defendant's occupation, being of opinion that the matter was not indictable. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 516.

Eaſter, 31 Geo. 2. The King v. Wright, Clerk.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt quaſhing an indictment found againſt the defendant, being a ſpiritual perſon, for taking to farm ſeveral lands, &c. againſt ſtat. 21 H. 8. c. 13. for that no indictment will lie where a ſtatute creates a new offence, and gives a particular remedy.

The defendant's council propoſed three objections to the indictment, viz.

1ſt. An indictment will not lie; it ought to be a proceeding by action or information, which are the two particular methods of proceeding, preſcribed by this ſtatute.

2dly. No offence is here charged, for occupation is the offence for which the act gives the forfeiture, and here no occupation is charged; it is only "that he did "take to farm."

After hearing the arguments of council on both ſides, the rule to quaſh the indictment was made abſolute.

Lord Manſfield. I always took it, that where new created offences are only prohibited by the general prohibitory clauſe of a ſtatute, an indictment will lie, but where there is a prohibitory particular clauſe, ſpecifying only particular remedies, there ſuch particular remedy muſt be purſued, otherwiſe the defendant would be liable to a double proſecution, viz. one on the general prohibition, and the other on the particular ſpecified remedy.

Per curiam. Let the rule be made abſolute to quaſh the indictment. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 543.

On a motion in arreſt of judgment, on an indictment found againſt the defendant for refuſing to obey an order of the general quarter ſeſſions for the county of Stafford, made on him for his keeping and maintaining James and Peter Robinſon, his two infant grand-children; in which indictment the breach was laid to be according to ſtat. 43 Eliz. cap. 2.

The defendant's council in arreſt of judgment urged, that this was a new offence, with a particular penalty; and ſect. 11. of that ſtatute preſcribes a ſummary method of recovering the penalty. That ſect. 7. gives a particular penalty, viz. "on pain that every one of them "ſhall forfeit 20 s. for every month which they ſhall "fail therein;" and ſect. 11. directs how that forfeiture ſhall be levied and employed.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, on ſhewing cauſe why the indictment ſhould not be arreſted, the rule to arreſt the judgment was diſcharged.

Lord Manſfield now delivered the opinion of the court. The objection to this indictment is, "that the "offence is not indictable, becauſe the ſtatute points "out a particular puniſhment, and a ſpecific method of re-"covering the penalty which it inflicts."

The true rule of diſtinction ſeems to be, that where the offence intended to be guarded againſt by the ſtatute was puniſhable before the making of ſuch ſtatute, preſcribing a particular method of puniſhing it, there ſuch particular remedy is cumulative, and does not take away the former remedy: but where the ſtatute only enacts, "that the doing any act not puniſhable before ſhall "for the future be puniſhable in ſuch a particular man-"ner; there it is neceſſary that ſuch particular method "by ſuch act preſcribed muſt be ſpecifically purſued, and "not the common law method of an indictment."

Per curiam. We are all of opinion, that the judgment on the indictment ought not to be arreſted, and that therefore the rule to ſhew cauſe muſt be diſcharged. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 800.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt quaſhing this indictment, the defendant's council took three exceptions thereto, the laſt whereof was—

That a particular remedy is appointed by ſtat. 22 Car. 2. cap. 12. namely, in ſect. 9 & 12. and therefore this being a new offence created by this ſtatute, and the ſtatute preſcribing a particular remedy, that particular remedy muſt be purſued, and an indictment will not lie.

Lord Manſfield. As to this objection, it was an offence indictable before the appointment of the ſummary remedy preſcribed by ſtat. 22 Car. 2. therefore the ſummary juriſdiction is cumulative (although there is another remedy given) and does not exclude the common law remedy.

Hilary, 33 Geo. 2. The King v. Spragg, and another.

On a motion in arreſt of judgment, where the defendants had been convicted of a conſpiracy, in charging a perſon with a capital felony, and the record of ſuch conviction was removed hither, but not the perſons of the defendants:

The council for the crown objected to this motion, for that the defendants ought to be perſonally preſent, and cited the caſe of The King v. Elizabeth Nichols, 2 Stra. 1227. which was in point.

The court held this to be a fixed and invariable rule of practice in this court, "that the defendants muſt "after conviction of ſuch an offence as this, be preſent "in court, if they would move in arreſt of judgment."

On this the council for the defendants prayed a habeas corpus to bring up their bodies, which was granted.

In Eaſter term following, the defendant's council renewed his motion in arreſt of judgment, on the following objections to the indictment:

1ſt. It is not alledged in the charge itſelf, "that the "defendants conſpired falſely to indict Gilmore."

2dly. Nor does it appear in the ſaid charge of what particular crime or offence they conſpired to indict him. It is only charged in general, "that they did wickedly "and maliciouſly (without adding falſely) conſpire to "indict and proſecute him for a crime or offence li-"able to be capitally puniſhed by the laws of this "kingdom."

Both thoſe matters are eſſentially neceſſary, and cannot be ſupplied by any thing that goes before, or comes after.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, the court gave their opinion, that there was no colour for the objections in the preſent caſe, and that the rule ought to be diſcharged.

Per curiam. Let the rule to ſhew cauſe why the judgment ſhould not be arreſted be diſcharged.

In Trinity term following the defendants were brought up to receive judgment.

John Spragg the father was ſentenced to be remanded to the K. B. for one month, to be ſet twice in the pillory, to be impriſoned two years from the end of the ſaid month; to pay a fine of 50 l. to the King, and find ſecurity for his good behaviour for three years.

Mary Spragg, the daughter, in conſideration of her youth, and being under the influence of her father, was only committed for ſix months. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 930, 993, and 1027.

On a motion in arreſt of judgment, on an indictment found againſt the defendant for knowingly ſelling amber beer ſhort of due and juſt meaſure, of which he was convicted.

Lord Manſfield. The queſtion is, whether the fact here alledged be an indictable crime or not. Here the fact is allowed; but the conſequence is denied: the objection is, that the fact is not an offence indictable, though acknowledged to be true as charged. And that the fact here charged ſhould not be conſidered as an indictable offence, but left to a civil remedy by action, is reaſonable and right in the nature of the thing, becauſe it is only an inconvenience, and injury to a private perſon, ariſing from negligence in not meaſuring the liquor on receiving it, to ſee whether it hold out the juſt quantity or not; the offence that is indictable muſt be ſuch a one as affects the public: therefore the preſent judgment muſt be arreſted.

Per curiam, unanimouſly, let the judgment be arreſted. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1125.

Per curiam. Let the indictment be quaſhed, and the rule to ſhew cauſe be made abſolute. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1130.

On a motion in arreſt of judgment, on an indictment found againſt the defendant, the objection to the indictment was, that it was too general.

The indictment ran in theſe words, " Middleſex, " viz. the jurors for our Lord the King on their oath " preſent, that the defendant with his addition on the " 6th day of November, &c. and on divers other days " and times, between that day and the day of taking " this inquiſition, with force and arms, &c. did keep and maintain, and yet does keep, &c. a certain common ill governed and diſorderly houſe, and therein, for his own lucre and profit, certain evil and ill diſpoſed perſons of ill name, &c. to frequent and come together, then, &c. there unlawfully, &c. and the ſaid perſons in the ſaid houſe, then, &c. there to be and remain, fighting of cocks, boxing, playing at cudgels, and miſbehaving themſelves unlawfully, &c. to the great damage, &c. and againſt the peace, &c.

On ſhewing cauſe, the court ſaid it appeared to them to be a good indictment; and therefore diſcharged the rule. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1232.

On a motion in arreſt of judgment on an indictment found at the Weſtminſter ſeſſions of the peace, againſt the defendant and two others, for a conſpiracy, where the certiorari was brought by Riſpal only.

The defendant's council took the following exceptions, viz.

1ſt, An indictment for ſuch a conſpiracy as this, does not lie before the general ſeſſions of the peace.

2dly, The fact which the defendant conſpired to charge the proſecutor with, is no offence; it is only an indictment for " wickedly and unlawfully conſpiring, &c. " falſely to accuſe John Chilton of taking hair out of a bag," without alledging it to be an unlawful or felonious taking, whereas the offence whereof the party was accuſed ought to be particularly charged, no implication will make it good.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on the rule to ſhew cauſe:

The court were of opinion, that the juſtices of peace had juriſdiction in the preſent caſe; a conſpiracy being a treſpaſs, and tending to a breach of the peace, and they held that the indictment was well laid, and that the giſt of the offence is the unlawful conſpiracy to injure the man by this falſe charge.

Per curiam. Let the rule be diſcharged. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1320.

On a motion made by the proſecutor's council to quaſh their own indictment found againſt the defendant at Hicks's Hall for perjury, and removed hither by certiorari, as being inſufficient and defective.

This motion was oppoſed by the defendant's council, but it at laſt ended in a rule by conſent, that the new indictment ſhould in all reſpects ſtand in the place of the old one, and all things whatſoever remain in ſtatu quo, as if it had been the caſe of an amendment.

The court declared their opinion, that a motion on behalf of a proſecutor, " for leave to quaſh his own indictment," was by no means a motion of courſe; the proſecutor afterwards moved to quaſh the indictment, which the court refuſed, unleſs he would ſubmit to pay coſts. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1468.

On a motion to to quaſh an indictment found againſt defendant for converting his houſe into an hoſpital for taking in and delivering lewd, idle, and diſorderly unmarried women, who after their delivery ran away and deſerted their children, whereby they became chargeable to the pariſh.

On ſhewing cauſe, the proſecutor's council obſerved, that all that was deſired in this proſecution was, that the pariſh might be indemnified.

Per curiam. To be ſure, this is not indictable, therefore let the rule be made abſolute to quaſh the indictment. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1645.

This indictment being on the ſame ground as the fourth indictment in The King v. Storr, the ſame rule was made in this caſe, as in that, viz. that the rule for ſhewing cauſe be diſcharged. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1707.

Lord Manſfield, obſerved, that a man may be indicted for ſelling by falſe meaſure, but this indictment is not ſo charged.

Wilmot and Yates, Juſtices, gave their opinions at large on this point, and concurred with the Chief Juſtice.

Per curiam. Unanimouſly, let the indictment be quaſhed, and the rule to arreſt the judgment be made abſolute. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1697.

Hilary, 6 Geo. 3. The King v. Crookes.

This indictment was found at the quarter ſeſſions for ſelling by falſe weights, and which on motion to quaſh the ſame was denied.

The court ſaid they were not obliged to quaſh an indictment on motion, and in this caſe, if the defendant had a mind he might demur to it. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1841.

On an indictment againſt the defendant for wilful and corrupt perjury, in ſwearing in his anſwers to a bill filed by Sir Thomas Frederick, relative to money charged to be unfairly won by the defendant at play, he was convicted.

The defendant's council moved to ſtay the entry of the judgment, in order to give him an opportunity of moving in arreſt of judgment, a fatal miſtake having been diſcovered in the indictment, viz. that the fact was charged to have been committed in the time of the late King, whereas the indictment concludes, " againſt the " peace of the preſent King."

The court denied this motion; they thought that in ſuch a caſe, and on ſuch an objection, they were not bound or warranted to let in a motion in arreſt of judgment, after ſentence pronounced.

On this his council moved for adjourning his ſtanding in the pillory, on an affidavit of his phyſician of his ill ſtate of health; on which the court enlarged the rule for the execution of that part of the ſentence.

In Michaelmas term 1765, the defendant's council moved the court that they might re-conſider their judgment, but the court denied the motion, on which the defendant brought a writ of error in parliament, and aſſigned the foregoing miſtake, among others, for error. On arguing this writ of error before the Lords, all the errors except this were conſidered as frivolous; and on the 5th day of May 1766, the following queſtion was put by the Lords to the judges:

> " Whether the perjury being alledged in the in- > " dictment to have been committed in the time of > " the late King, and charged to be againſt the peace
> " of the now King, is fatal, and renders the indict-
> " ment inſufficient."

The Lord Chief Baron delivered the unanimous opinion of the judges in the affirmative, and the judgment of this court was reverſed.

On the 7th day of May 1766, the defendant's council moved this court that he might be diſcharged, and the order of reverſal being produced and read,

Per curiam. Let the defendant be diſcharged. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1901.

Infants.

Hilary, 1 W. & M. The King v. Dilliſton. Error.

In ejectment it was found by a ſpecial verdict, that the cuſtom of a manor was, that if on a ſurrender preſented, and three proclamations made, the ſurrenderee comes not to be admitted, the lord ſhall ſeize the premiſes as forfeited: the ſurrenderee died; three proclamations were made; his heir, an infant, did not come in; and the lord ſeized.

Holt, Chief Juſtice held, the infant was bound; becauſe otherwiſe the lord would loſe his fine; and it is not the forfeiture of the infant, but of the ſurrenderor in whom the eſtate continues till admittance; and that, if it be a forfeiture, 'tis only until, &c.

Dolben, Eyre, and Gregory, Juſtices, obſerved, that a cuſtom ſhall not be intended to reach infants; and Eyre, that if it had been found expreſly, that all perſons, infants as well as others, &c. he had been bound; for as cuſtom makes his inheritance, it may abridge it. And the lord cannot be ſaid to loſe a fine, for he has a tenement and no fine due, nor occaſion of admittance: And here is no room to ſuppoſe a temporary forfeiture; for the jury have found the cuſtom to be of an abſolute forfeiture: nor is the infant within the cuſtom; for as it is found, that if the perſon to whom the ſurrender is made comes not, the bailiff of the manor may, by command of the lord, ſeize ſuch tenements as forfeited. Vide 1 Leon 100. 3 Leon 221. 8 Co. 99. 2 Cro. 226. 8 Co. 44. is of ſuch a cuſtom, but the forfeiture is until only, as appears by the pleadings. Hilary, 10 Ann. Earle v. Peale. Error.

In an action of debt on a promiſory note, the defendant pleaded that he was under age; and the plaintiff replied, that it was for neceſſaries, viz. 10 l. for cloaths, and 15 l. money lent for and towards his neceſſary ſupport at the Univerſity. The defendant rejoined, that the money was lent him to ſpend at pleaſure, abſque hoc, that it was lent him for neceſſaries; and on iſſue it was found for the plaintiff, who had judgment in the C. B. and on a writ of error being brought, Parker, Chief Juſtice, delivered the opinion of the court as follows:

Parker, Chief Juſtice. That which is put in iſſue is only, whether this money was lent the infant for neceſſaries, not whether it was laid out in neceſſaries: it may be borrowed for neceſſaries, but laid out and ſpent at a tavern: a feme covert may buy neceſſaries, and her act ſhall make the huſband chargeable; but ſhe cannot borrow money to lay out for neceſſaries. So it is of an infant; he may buy neceſſaries, but cannot borrow money to buy; for he may miſapply the money, and therefore the law will not hurt him, but it is at the peril of the lender, who muſt lay it out for him, or ſee it laid out, and then it is his providing, and his laying out ſo much money for neceſſaries for him. Therefore the judgment was reverſed niſi, &c. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 387. Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 66.

Hilary, 11 Ann. Mitchell v. Reynolds.

This caſe (which ſee fully ſtated in page 90 of this work) having been compared to that of an infant, whom a contract for neceſſaries will bind, but not a bond.

It was adjudged, that this compariſon will not hold: for it ſtands clearly on the incapacity of the infant to make any contract at all, but ſuch as ſhall be for his advantage; and it can never be for his advantage to enter into a penalty. That this is ſo, is plain from hence, that if an infant and a ſurety enter into a bond for neceſſaries for the infant, the bond is good as to the ſurety, but not as to the infant: ſo that it is not the nature of the bond, but the incapacity of the infant that makes the bond void. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 139.

Eaſter, 5 Geo. Turner v. Triſby.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice. Neceſſaries for an infant's wife are neceſſaries for him: but if provided in order for the marriage, he is not chargeable, though ſhe uſes them. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 168.

Eaſter, 6 Geo. Archer v. Frowde. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in C. B. in treſpaſs and aſſault by one infant againſt another; and a verdict for the plaintiff: the defendant aſſigned for error, that whereas the plaintiff had appeared to proſecute the ſuit by one Iſaac Knight her next friend, as one ſpecially aſſigned by the court, yet the ſaid Iſaac Knight was never ſo aſſigned, nor does any ſuch admiſſion appear on record.

Per curiam. The practice of this court warrants a general admiſſion, and there is no inconvenience in it: it amounts to the ſame thing, whether the admiſſion be general or particular, and no reaſon can be given why it ſhould not be one way as well as the other. Therefore the judgment of the C. B. was affirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 307.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in aſſumſipt in the C. B. againſt three executors, who appeared and pleaded by attorney; the error aſſigned was, that one of them being an infant, they all appeared and pleaded by attorney, and it was argued for the plaintiff, that the diſability of an infant is adherent to his perſon, and therefore his being ſued in auter droit can make no difference, and conſequently even in that capacity he ſhould not have appeared by attorney, 2 Cro. 441. Stile, 388. 1 Lev. 299. Now in the preſent caſe, though ſome of the executors were of full age, that makes no alteration, and his appearing along with them by their attorney cannot mend the matter; for it is like the caſe of Baron and Feme, ſhe being under age and ſued along with her huſband; he cannot make an attorney for her, but ſhe ought to appear by guardian.

Per curiam. The diſability of an infant is adherent to his perſon; and the reaſon why the law will not allow of his proſecuting or defending his right by attorney, is, that tho' the attorney ſhould act contrary to his warrant, he is not anſwerable to him for it; whereas in ſuch caſe he has his remedy againſt his guardian; and likewiſe, becauſe he has not power by law to make an attorney: the law regards the acts of an infant as an executor, becauſe he is liable to a devaſtavit; and they held that an infant can neither ſue, nor be ſued, as executor, by attorney; that the caſe of Foxwith v. Tremayne, 1 Lev. 229. 2 Saund. 212. was not law; and that Holt's opinion was always known to be the reverſe of what is reported by Shower in the caſe of Cone v. Bowles. So the judgment was reverſed. Vide Fitz-Gibbons, p. 1. Stra. vol. 2. p. 783.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in the B. R. in Ireland, on a writ of error brought there to reverſe a common recovery, wherein the judgment was, that the parol ſhall demur. It was adjudged, that the nonage cannot be pleaded again.

The plea of nonage in England having been ſo excluded, it came now to be debated on the validity of the judgment of the B. R. in Ireland, by which the parol was to demur till the infant came of age. And the court being of opinion, that it was proper to conſider that, as a previous queſtion to the errors in the common recovery, if there were any, it was argued; that the plea was ill, both as to the matter, and as to the manner of it. As to the matter of it; he is not intitled to his age, becauſe by his own ſhewing he is in by deſcent, and therefore ſome books ſay, he ſhall not have his age. 47 Aſſ. pl. 4. 1 Roll. Abr. 139. pl. 33.

Beſides, he is not intitled to have his age in this caſe, becauſe the error aſſigned is error in law, and not in fact; and that is the diſtinction taken by Juſtice Doddridge in 3 Bulſt. 139.

But ſuppoſing this was a caſe wherein the defendant is intitled to his age, yet the manner of the plea is ill.

Per curiam. His being in by deſcent, is the ſtrongeſt reaſon for having his age, and though the book cited is to the contrary, yet in the ſame page is a caſe directly againſt it, and the authorities in general are ſo. And as to Juſtice Doddridge's diſtinction, there is nothing in it, for a releaſe of errors if he knew how to plead it, would defend him againſt errors in law as well as in fact. As to the form of the plea, we think it well enough, and therefore the judgment for the parol to demur muſt be affirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 861. Raym. vol. 2. p. 1433. Fitz-Gibbons, p. 114.

On a motion for a mandamus to the defendant, in order to compel him to grant adminiſtration to the grandfather, during the minority of ſeveral infants, his grandchildren, whoſe father died inteſtate; it was adjudged, that the courſe of the Spiritual Court is, if the infant be under ſeven years of age, they chuſe a curator, if he be ſeven, he chuſes one himſelf. Vide Fitz-Gibbons, p. 163.

Trinity, 5 Geo. 2. Holt v. Ward.

In an action of aſſumpſit brought for a promiſe of marriage, the plaintiff joined iſſue on the non aſſumpſit, and a verdict was found for her, with 200 l. damages. And as to the plea of infancy, it was demurred to.

After this cauſe had been ſeveral times argued at the bar, this term the Chief Juſtice delivered the reſolution of the court as follows:

The objection in this caſe is, that the plaintiff not being equally bound with the defendant, this is a void agreement, and the defendant cannot be charged in this action. Formerly it was made a doubt by L. Vaughan, whether any action could be maintained on mutual promiſes to marry; but that is now a point not to be diſputed. And as to the preſent caſe, we ſhould have had no difficulty in giving judgment for the plaintiff, if we could have been ſatisfied by the arguments of the Civilians, that as the plaintiff was of the age of conſent, any remedy, though not by way of action for damages, could be had againſt her: but ſince they ſeem to have no precedent in the caſe, we muſt conſider it on the foot of the common law, and on that the ſingle queſtion is, whether this contract, as againſt the plaintiff, is abſolutely void? And we are of opinion, that this contract is not void, but only voidable at the election of the infant; and as to the perſon of full age, it abſolutely binds.

The contract of an infant is conſidered at law as different from the contracts of other perſons. In ſome caſes his contract ſhall bind him: ſuch is the contract of an infant for neceſſaries, and the law allows him to make this contract as neceſſary for his preſervation; and therefore in ſuch caſes a ſingle bill ſhall bind him, though a bond with a penalty ſhall not.

Where the contract may be for the benefit of the infant, or to his prejudice, the law ſo far protects him as to give him an opportunity to re-conſider it when he comes of age: and it is good or voidable at his election. But though the infant has this priviledge, yet the party with whom he contracts has not: he is bound in all events. And as marriage is now looked on to be an advantageous contract, no diſtinction holds whether the party ſuing be man or woman, the true diſtinction is, whether it may be for the benefit of the infant; we think, that though no expreſs caſe on a marriage contract can be cited, yet it falls within the general reaſon of the law with regard to infants contracts. And no dangerous conſequence can follow from this determination, becauſe our opinion protects the infant, even more than if we rule the contract to be abſolutely void. And as to perſons of full age, it leaves them where the law leaves them, which grants them no ſuch protection againſt being drawn into the inconvenient contracts.

For theſe reaſons, we are all of opinion, that the plaintiff ought to have her judgment on the demurrer. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 937. Fitz-Gibbons, p. 175. 275.

And on demurrer, the court held, that the replication was ill; for it ſhould only have been a general replication, that it was neceſſaries for the infant, and left it to evidence, where the circumſtances of his health and fortune would be conſidered: and though the work might be neceſſary for the horſes, yet it does not appear that the horſes were neceſſary for the infant: therefore judgment was given for the defendant. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1101.

Trinity, 4 W. & M. Culliford v. Blandford.

On an action of debt on ſtat. 23 H. 6. brought againſt the Mayor of Doncaſter for a falſe return of a burgeſs to parliament; by which ſtatute a penalty of 40 l. is given to the King, and 40 l. to the burgeſs choſen, and not returned, ſo as he ſue for the ſame within three months after the beginning of the ſaid parliament, or to any perſon who, in default of him ſo choſen, ſhall ſue for the ſame.

The plaintiff was a ſtranger, who after three months, and before the end of one whole year, ſued out a latitat againſt the defendant; but this was within a year after the offence committed.

1ſt. The queſtion was, whether the plaintiff was a common informer, and ſo ought by ſtat. 31 Eliz. to bring his action within a year after the offence: in the preamble of that ſtatute, it is ſaid, that no perſon, other than the party aggrieved, ſhall be received to inform on a penal ſtat. and then it is enacted, that where a forfeiture is given to the King only, the action ſhall be brought within two years after the offence; but if it be to the King and proſecutor, then it muſt be within a year.

2dly. If the plaintiff ſhall be taken to be a common informer, then whether the ſuing out this latitat is a commencement of the action.

Eyre and Gregory, Juſtices, held the affirmative in both points; but they inſiſted chiefly on the firſt point, that the plaintiff is no common informer, becauſe the penalty was given to the proſecutor, and no time limited by this ſtatute when he ſhould commence his action. He ſtands now in the place of the party aggrieved, who did not ſue within the three months limited by the act, and nobody will ſay that he is a common informer.

Dolben, Juſtice, was of opinion, that the ſuing out of the latitat within the year, was a good commencement of the ſuit, and ſufficient to avoid the ſtatute.

But the Chief Juſtice held, that a penalty being given to the King as well as to the proſecutor, if he had brought his action for the whole 80 l. as well for our Lord the King as for himſelf, he had been within ſtat. 31 Eliz. and a common informer; but here the action was brought only for 40 l. which makes ſome alteration.

And as to the ſecond point, a latitat was never yet conſtrued to extend to a ſtatute, where a penalty is given to the proſecutor, and therefore it cannot be a commencement for a ſuit on a penal law.

It is otherwiſe where the party is limited, and barred from his right by any ſtatute, for not proſecuting in time; therefore if the firſt point is not for him, the laſt is againſt him: yet the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 129.

An information was brought againſt Thorp and others for conſpiring to take one Edward Mitchel, being under the age of eighteen years, and the only ſon and heir of Robert Mitchel, Eſq; and carrying him out of the cuſtody, &c. of his ſaid father, without notice, and againſt his will, and compelling him to get drunk, and then marrying him to one C. H. a perſon of ill fame, and of no fortune.

On not guilty pleaded, this information was tried at the aſſizes at Wincheſter, and all the defendants were found not guilty, except Thorp: and he was acquitted of compelling the ſaid Mitchel to be drunk, and found guilty of all the reſt in the information.

On a motion in arreſt of judgment; the exceptions taken were:

2dly, It is laid by way of conſpiracy, and the defendant Thorp, only being found guilty, there can be no judgment againſt him, becauſe one cannot conſpire.

3dly, Here is a miſ-trial: for the conſpiracy being laid in Hampſhire, and the marriage being in Oxfordſhire, it ought not to be tried by a jury of Hampſhire alone, but by a jury of both counties.

Per curiam. It is a misfortune that the marriage is good; it is true, it is lawful to marry, but if it is obtained by unlawful means, it is an offence.

The queſtion is, whether a father has not the guardianſhip of his ſon and heir apparent till the age of twenty-one years, as he had when there was tenures in Knight's ſervice: for the father had ſuch an original right inveſted in him by nature, that he might have an action of treſpaſs againſt the Lord, wherefore he took away his ſon and heir: the matter was adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 221.

Trinity, 9 W. 3. The King v. Greep.

The defendant was convicted of perjury: and the court was moved in arreſt of judgment.

1ſt, Becauſe it is not ſet forth, that the oath was material to the matter in iſſue.

2dly, The fact is laid, that on a former trial, Mr. Strode gave evidence, that the indentures of leaſe and releaſe were executed by the Duke of Albermarle, at Albermarle houſe, about the time of the date thereof, which was the ſixteenth day of July, in the year 1681, and that he was then and there preſent with the Duke, and was a witneſs that the Duke did ſeal and deliver the ſame; and the perjury now aſſigned is, that the defendant then depoſed, That about the ſame time, Mr. Strode, was at Newnham, (a certain houſe called Newnham, in the pariſh of St. Mary, Plimpton, in the county of Devon:) now the words about which time, are very uncertain; for if he had depoſed, Mr. Strode was then at Newnham, without ſaying any more, it muſt be agreed that had been uncertain; for it does not appear where Newnham was, or that it was Mr. Strode's houſe, or in what county, or in what place.

Per curiam. An information for perjury at common law as this is, does not require ſo much certainty as an indictment on the ſtatute; for if perjury be aſſigned in ſwearing to ſeveral interrogatories in Chancery, without ſhewing in which; this is good at common law, but not on the ſtatute.

Neither will an indictment lie for a perjury on the ſtatute, which may be maintained at common law, as for making a falſe affidavit in Chancery, or in this court.

The ſtatute has made the offender ſubject to a certain penalty, and to a corporal puniſhment, and therefore the perjury muſt be by ſwearing falſely in a court of record, and in a thing material to the iſſue, or a man may be perjured in an anſwer in Chancery to a thing not charged in the bill. So the matter was adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 343.

A motion was made laſt term for filing an information againſt Lambert for ſubornation of perjury, on an affidavit of his ſuborning two perſons; but the rule was drawn up generally, and an information was filed for ſuborning thoſe two, and ten others; and it was moved that this information was not duly filed, becauſe the addition of ten more, were ten more informations; and the court declared, that no information ſhould have been filed, but as to thoſe perſons mentioned in the affidavits; every ſubornation is a diſtinct offence; and the act for an information does not direct an affidavit, yet the court being truſted with it, and the parliament repoſing in them, they ought to do it on good grounds. It was then moved that the information was ill to thoſe perſons, becauſe the ſtatute requires a recognizance to be entered into to the party, which they had not done; to which alſo the court agreed. But a doubt aroſe what ſhould be done with this information, which is now filed.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, it could not be quaſhed or taken off of the file; for when once a thing is on the file, it cannot be taken off without an act of parliament, no, not by conſent of the parties; as in the caſe of Dr. Widdrington on a mandamus; the college made a very ſcandalous return, to which he and the college agreed; and then they moved to take the return off the file; but the court refuſed it, ſaying, it could not be done without an act of parliament, only they ordered a vacatur to be entered thereon. In this caſe the method may be, to enter the irregularity on the roll, with let the proceſs ceaſe thereon..

The matter was adjourned for further conſideration. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 153.

An information on ſtat. 5 & 6. E. 6. c. 14. for buying and ſelling live cattle, not having kept them the time the ſtatute appoints, was exhibited in this court. The buying and ſelling was alleged to be in Norfolk; and it was inſiſted, that the information ought to have been brought in Norfolk, where the fact was done, and not in Middleſex; and that ſtat. 21 Jac. 1. was made for the eaſe of the ſubject. On the other ſide it was objected, that this court is not reſtrained, and that the Attorney General may exhibit informations in this court for the King, notwithſtanding the ſtatute; and Latch. 192. 1 Sid. 360. 2 Keb. 340. 1 Vent. 8. Jones 193. 3 Keb. 247. 2 Cro. 178. 3 Inſt. 176, 191. 1 Cro. 112. were cited.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, obſerved, that ten of the Judges had come to the following reſolutions:

1ſt. That ſtat. 21 Jac. c. 4. does not extend to any offence created ſince that ſtatute; ſo that proſecutions on ſubſequent penal ſtatutes are not reſtrained thereby; but that the ſtatute as to them, is as it were repealed pro tanto i. e. for ſo much.

2dly. That all informations and popular actions on penal ſtatutes made before that act, muſt by force of ſtat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 4. be laid, brought, and proſecuted in the proper county where the fact was done. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 372. Raym. vol. 1. p. 370. Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 223.

Hilary, 10 W. 3. Hicks's Caſe.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, reported the opinion of all the Judges in this caſe. An action of debt was brought in this court on ſtat. 5. Eliz. c. 4. by a common informer, for exerciſing a trade, not having ſerved as an apprentice; and the queſtion was, if the juriſdiction of this court was taken away by ſtat. 21 Jac. 1.? for it was thought fit to ſettle it, becauſe of the caſe of Barnes v. Hughes, 1 Vent. 8.

And it was reſolved by the opinion of eleven of the judges, 1ſt. That ſtat. 21 Jac. 1. reſtrains the juriſdiction of this court in actions of debt brought by common informers, and that they cannot bring debt on the ſtatute in this court, unleſs the cauſe of action ariſe in the county where the King's Bench ſits, but muſt in other caſes proſecute by information, &c. before juſtices of aſſize, &c. as the ſtatute directs.

2dly. It was reſolved, that where a remedy is given by action of debt, &c. in any court of record, &c. by any later ſtatute ſubſequent to 21 Jac. 1. ſuch action is not reſtrained; for the ſaid ſtatute 21 Jac. 1. does not extend to ſuch actions, but ſtands repealed as to them.

But Holt, C. J. declared, that his own private opinion was, that where any ſubſequent act gives any popular action, it muſt be laid in the proper county, and within the equity of ſtat. 21 Jac. 1.

Hale, Chief Juſtice, was always againſt the opinion of Barnes v. Hughes; and the principal objection in that caſe was, that the party offending might get out of the county, and ſo eſcape the puniſhment of the law, as being out of their juriſdiction.

Now, this objection does not hold, for there may be proceſs of outlawry ſued out againſt him; ſtat. 21 Jac. 1. giving the ſame proceſs that lay in actions of treſpaſs vi et armis at common law; and therefore neither debt nor information, though exhibited by the Attorney General, lies here, but in Yorkſhire, which is the proper county in this caſe. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 373.

In an information it was ſtated, that on the 5th day of June 9 W. 3. three or more commiſſioners of the Exchequer cauſed Exchequer bills to be iſſued on the receipt of the Exchequer, according to the form of the ſtatute in ſuch caſe made and provided, the aforeſaid Knight then being Receiver General, &c. to the intent to get great gains to himſelf, did fraudulently and falſely indorſe twenty bills at the cuſtom-houſe, as if on account of the cuſtoms, and on the ſame day, &c. paid them into the Exchequer, as if being truly indorſed, to defraud our Lord the King. On not guilty pleaded, the defendant was convicted; and now a motion was made in arreſt of judgment: this caſe depended on ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 19. and was twice ſpoke to and determined on good conſideration. At laſt judgment was arreſted, and the Chief Juſtice delivered the opinion of the court on theſe points:

1ſt. That the words nuper receptor, i. e. late receiver, do not import that he was the King's officer at the time of indorſing and paying theſe bills, but rather the contrary; and he muſt be taken to be a private perſon, and as ſuch to make this indorſement; which in a private perſon could be no crime, becauſe the falſity might hurt himſelf, but could not prejudice the King. And it is like the caſe in Noy 99. where the obligee leſſened the ſum in the obligation; it would have been forgery in a ſtranger or in the obligee to make it more; but in regard the obligee had hurt no body but himſelf, it was no forgery: ſo it is of this falſe indorſement, it is not criminal, becauſe it hurts nobody but himſelf. But it is objected, it may be a damage to contractors: I anſwer, we are to take notice there might be contractors, but not that there are any, becauſe it is not ſet out.

2dly. The word indorſe is not ſufficient; the words of the act are, that the perſon who pays the ſame into, &c. ſhall put his name to the ſaid bill, and write the day of the month, &c. And the information ſhould have been, that the defendant ſet ſuch a perſon's name on the back of the bill, when indeed, there was no ſuch perſon, or when indeed, no ſuch perſon ordered him to put his name to the bill; for the words it was indorſed import a writing on the back of a thing, but not putting his name on it. But it was urged by the King's counſel, that this might be plainly underſtood by the words as if received on a note for cuſtoms: I anſwer, this is by argument only; and argumentative informations are naught for that very cauſe; for all charges ought certainly to be ſet out in pleading. But further it was urged, that it is ſaid to be a falſe indorſement in defrauding of our Lord the King, and ſo found by the jury; and though a fact that appears innocent cannot be made a crime by adverbs of aggravation, as falſely, fraudulently, &c. yet where a fact ſtands indifferent, as writing, which may be true or falſe, and charged to be falſe, and the jury find it ſo, all are then eſtopped to ſay the contrary. That on the other ſide it was ſaid, the words in defraud are only matter of concluſion. But here is no charge; it is not enough to ſay the King is cheated; he muſt appear to be ſo, as well as ſtated to be ſo.

3dly. The ſaying it was indorſed as if received on account of cuſtoms, &c. is not well. In an indictment of forgery it is not well to ſay, the defendant forged a falſe deed, purporting as if a conveyance, &c. but it muſt be containing, &c. So here it ſhould have been, that the defendant made a falſe indorſement, containing, &c. Here is a falſity, but nothing is charged that is criminal; for that falſity could not hurt, nor tend to hurt any body but himſelf: and therefore the judgment was arreſted.

N. B. The iſſue was tried at bar, and the evidence proved that the bills were ſigned at the Treaſury by three acting commiſſioners of the Treaſury; the defendant called on them to produce their commiſſion, but Holt, C. J. held it not neceſſary, comparing it to the caſe on the ſtatute of hue and cry, where ſhewing an affidavit is enough, without going into the proof of the juſtices power to adminiſter an oath. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 375.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, the court muſt proceed by way of information; for it being a matter concerning public government, no particular perſon is ſo concerned in intereſt as to maintain an action; and the information muſt be granted againſt particular perſons, tho' the return be under their common ſeal, for there is no other way to try the right; and if it be found for the King, there muſt be a peremptory mandamus; perhaps we ſhall ſet but a ſmall fine. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 374.

Eaſter, 12 W. 3. Anonymous.

A clerk in Chancery, was committed by the Lord Keeper, for ſending writs into the country with ſoft yellow wax on them, without being ſealed by the great ſeal, as if they had been actually ſealed; and this was ſaid to be a very high miſdemeanor, and next to counterfeiting the ſeal; and he was bound himſelf in 1000 l. and two more in 500 l. each, for his appearance, in order to an information. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 355.

Eaſter, 12 W. 3. The King v. The Mayor and Aldermen of Hertford.

In the information againſt the Mayor and Aldermen of Hertford, a motion was made to ſet aſide the proceſs, becauſe no recognizance was given according to the late act; and this being to try a right, the queſtion was, whether it was within the ſtatute, viz. treſpaſſes, batteries, and other miſdemeanors, which are frivolous wrangling matters of an infinite nature? But the court ſaid, that this uſurpation here pretended was a miſdemeanor, and the information might be as vexatious in this caſe, as in treſpaſs or battery: that this laſt is a remedial law to prevent vexation, and muſt be conſtrued accordingly; therefore the proceſs was ordered to be ſet aſide, but the information ſtood. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 376. *Mod. Michaelmas, 1 Ann. The Queen v. Smith.

The council took exceptions to a conviction for deer-ſtealing, where the fact was laid to be done in a foreſt uſed for keeping deer, and that the defendant killed a deer without conſent of the keeper; and inſiſted, that uſed might be meant of a long time before, and there might be the conſent of the ranger; but not allowed; for the leave of the ranger is the leave of the keeper, and the word uſed, ſpeaks the preſent time as well as the paſt. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 378.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. The Queen v. Chandler.

A conviction of deer-ſtealing on ſtat. 3 & 4 W. M. cap. 10. was returned on a certiorari, and exceptions taken to it. It was ſaid by Holt, Chief Juſtice, that in theſe ſummary proceedings, the right of an Engliſhman of being tried by his peers, was taken away; therefore the court was to conſtrue them ſtrictly, ſo far as to ſee that the fact was an offence within the act, and that the juſtices proceeded accordingly: and theſe points were agreed; 1ſt. That the fact in the conviction need not be laid againſt the peace, for mere form or formality is not required in theſe nor any other ſummary proceedings.

Mr. Attorney General ſaid. This is not the King's proſecution; he can have no fine; but the proſecution of the party, and this is the memorandum of what the juſtice had done in that matter.

2dly. That between ſuch a day and ſuch a day he killed three deer, is good; for if a day certain were alledged, the informer is not tied up to that: now in theſe caſes he is confined to give evidence of a killing within theſe days, ſo that it is more certain and better for the defendant; and Raſt. 410. Hern. 549. Winch 54, 547. Tho. 91, 92. Vide 186. Co. Ent. 158, &c. were cited. It is otherwiſe in informations at common law, becauſe every diſtinct offence creates a new penalty, but in treſpaſs a fact may be laid to be done at different times between ſuch a day and ſuch a day; becauſe it is not a new action, but an increaſe of damages.

3dly. That an unlawful killing is ſufficient, and it need not ſet forth a hunting, nor how the deer was killed.

4thly. That ideo conſideratum eſt, &c. without foris faciat, is ſufficient; for the ſtatute gives that in conſequence,

5thly. That if the owner of the park die before execution, and the convictien is affirmed here; his executors ſhall have a levari facias (but it ſeems, it muſt be on affidavit, and then the matter ſuggeſted on the roll.) So may the churchwardens without ſuggeſtion or ſcire facias, and ſo may the King. Vide Salk. vol. 1. 378.

The Queen v. Norton.

This was an information qui tam, brought by an informer on the ſtatute of uſury, and the court was moved to amend it, by altering the pledge the money was lent on; for it was laid in the declaration, that a quantity of grogram yarn was delivered to the defendant, as a pledge on which to lend 200 l. and that the defendant was to receive one guinea per month for intereſt; and by this amendment they would have ſtruck out all that related to the pledge of grogram yarn; but the court refuſed it; becauſe it makes another information, and another perſon might be intitled to it, being a popular action; they agreed that it was a general rule to amend informations at any time, even juſt before trial; but then it muſt not make the information different; but ſent it to the maſter, to examine if the informer ſet up was not a pauper, that he might anſwer coſts to the defendant. Vide Forteſcue, p. 232.

On an information againſt the defendant for ſubordination of perjury, ſetting forth, that whereas in the court of our Lord the King, before the King himſelf, at Weſtminſter, in the county of Middleſex, one Rhodes, late of D. in the county of Surry, oat-meal maker, had impleaded the defendant, Holford, for that whereas he was indebted to the plaintiff in the pariſh of St. Clement Danes, in the county aforeſaid, and promiſed to pay, &c. And that whereas on an account ſtated between them, the defendant was found in arrear, &c. and promiſed to pay, &c. and the defendant pleaded not guilty; and at the trial procured one W. R. to ſwear that he was preſent at the ſtating of the ſaid account, &c. whereas in truth he was not preſent, &c. to this information the defendant pleaded not guilty, and the cauſe being tried at niſi prius in Middleſex he was found guilty; and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the fine would be intire, and therefore if either of the aſſignments was naught, no judgment could be given; but this objection was diſallowed, and thereon another objection was made, viz. that the cauſe of action being laid in Surry, it could not be tried in Middleſex; it is true, it is ſaid that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in the pariſh of St. Clement Danes, in the county aforeſaid, which muſt be in the county of Surry, becauſe that county was laſt named, and therefore it muſt relate to that county, for the antecedent has relation to the neareſt word; but that rule has an exception, viz. unleſs the ſenſe prevents it, as it plainly does in this caſe. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 199. Raym. vol. 2. p. 886.

Eaſter, 2 Ann. The Queen v. Taylor.

On an information againſt the defendant, ſetting forth, that he on the 30th of January, traiterouſly ſpoke theſe words, viz. "King Charles the firſt was rightly "ſerved in having his head cut off, and it was a pity "that his two ſons, Charles and James were not ſer-"ved ſo too; in contempt of William the third, the "late King, and of his laws, and to the bad example "of all others in the like caſe offending, and againſt "the peace of the ſaid late King, &c." On not guilty pleaded, the defendant was found guilty; and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that theſe words were ſpoken of the dead, and they are not averred to be ſpoken with an intention to prejudice the government, and they are not aggravated by the word traiterouſly, becauſe that is applicable only to treaſon, which this is not.

Per curiam. Theſe words affect the living, though they were ſpoken of the dead, and they advance a common-wealth principle contrary to law, and therefore there needs no averment, that they were ſpoken with an intention to injure the government, for the words import a crime of themſelves, and endanger the Queen and monarchy; and though the crime is only a miſdemeanor, yet the word traiterouſly is proper in this information, becauſe this miſdemeanor has a tendency to treaſon, and ſhews a treaſonable intent in the ſpeaker. He was fined forty merks, being but a poor tanner, and ſentenced to ſtand twice in the pillory. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 198.

Trinity, 6 Ann. The Queen v. Soley & al.

The defendants were convicted on two informations for riots; the firſt was for hindering the bailiffs and burgeſſes of Bewdly in their choice of a bailiff for that corporation; and the information ſets forth; that the bailiffs and burgeſſes being aſſembled to chuſe a bailiff for the borough of Bewdly, the defendants rioutouſly, routouſly, with great clamour and vociferation, &c. hindered them in the ſaid election.

The ſecond information was for breaking open the door of the Guildhall of the borough of Bewdly; which ſets forth, that the defendants on the 23d of October, did aſſemble themſelves to diſturb the peace, and ſo aſſembled, did break open the door of a certain houſe, called the Guildhall of the borough of Bewdly aforeſaid.

The court being moved in arreſt of judgment on theſe two informations.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held the firſt not good, becauſe it did not appear what authority they had to chuſe a bailiff.

And he held the ſecond ill, becauſe it did not ſhew whoſe houſe it was. And thereon judgment was arreſted on both informations. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 115.

A motion was made for an information in nature of a quo warranto, againſt a common-council man of Briſtol, for refuſing to take on himſelf the office, after he was choſen; but the court denied the motion, and ſaid their remedy was to proceed by their bye-laws, in order to compel him; he not being ſuch a public officer as a ſheriff, &c. But if they had applied to the court for a mandamus, they ſhould have had it. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 142.

An information in nature of a quo warranto, judgment by default, and a capiatur pro fine, the queſtion was, whether this was pardoned by the late act?

Holt, Chief Juſtice, delivered his opinion, that an interlocutory judgment is not within the exception of the act; for by a judgment is meant a final judgment, it being coupled with ſentence and decree; and a capiatur pro fine is only to bring them in to receive the judgment of the court. But this being a matter of right, viz. in a quo waranto, though the fine be pardoned, yet the continuance of the crime is not.

Powell, Powys and Gould, Juſtices, were of the ſame opinion; wherefore judgment was given, that the defendant ſhould be ouſted of his office, for committing the offence, but that the fine is pardoned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 235.

Hilary, 12 Ann. The Queen v. Blagdon.

On an information in nature of a quo warranto againſt the defendant to know by what authority he exerciſed the office of portreeve in the borough of Honiton.

The defendant in his bar ſet forth his right to that office, and concluded with a traverſe, abſque hoc, that the defendant uſurped the office. The crown in its replication taking no notice of the ſpecial title ſet forth by the defendant, joined iſſue on the traverſe that he uſurped, &c. and thereon demurrer was joined.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. The queſtion turns on this point, whether the traverſe be only matter of form? If ſo, the crown cannot take iſſue on it; but if it be a material part of the plea, moſt certainly the crown may do it.

The defendant's council argued, that if the crown had a right to join iſſue on the traverſe, yet the iſſue was here ill joined; becauſe not joined in the words of the traverſe, but more narrow and reſtrictive.

The information charges the defendant with uſing the office, liberties and privileges, franchiſes, &c. of portreeve of the town of Honiton, and the traverſe is taken in words as general and comprehenſive as the charge; but the iſſue taken on the traverſe is abſque hoc, that he uſurped the office generally. Now a man may uſurp the office, and not uſurp all the privileges, &c. belonging to that office.

As to the main queſtion, which was, whether the crown was at liberty to take iſſue on the traverſe, or not; the only precedent alledged in behalf of the power of the crown, was that of The Queen v. Walcourt, Hil. 23 Eliz. and there the queſtion never received any judicial determination, becauſe the defendant died.

To the objection, that in an information of intruſion, the King may take iſſue on the uſurpation, though a title be ſet forth; he anſwered, that an information of intruſion was of a different nature from this, becauſe it does not follow from his having a title, that he is no intruder; but it does that he is no uſurper.

The courſe of precedents is ſo in an intruſion; but otherwiſe in this kind of information; which is a preſumptive agreement that there is a difference.

Then he argued, that the allowing the crown to join iſſue on this traverſe, in their replication, would be inconvenient to the crown, inconvenient to the party, and inconvenient to the court.

As to the objection made by the Attorney General, that no prerogative of the crown is here inſiſted on, but only a right common to every ſubject, it is enough to anſwer, that the Attorney General would not be content in this caſe, to be bound down by the ſame rules of pleading that the ſubject is; the ſubject could not have avoided taking the iſſue, but no one will ſay the crown was bound to do this.

In the laſt place he inſiſted, that the defendant by ſetting forth his title, had anſwered the whole charge of the information, which was for him to ſhew quo warranto, &c.

Per curiam. We are unanimouſly of opinion, that the defendant muſt have judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 211, 296.

Michaelmas, 4 Geo. The King v. Lewis.

An information was moved for againſt a clergyman, for perjury at his admiſſion to a living, on an affidavit that the preſentation was ſimoniacal; but the court refuſed to grant it, till he had been convicted of the Simony. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 70.

An information, for not repairing three public bridges lying within the county of the city of Norwich, leading from the Market Croſs to Ipſwich, ſet out that they are out of repair, and that it cannot be found that any perſon or body politic is bound by tenure or otherwiſe to repair them, and therefore the inhabitants of the county of the city are bound by the ſtatute; notwithſtanding which they have not repaired them, but ſuffer them to continue in decay.

Not guilty was pleaded by two of the inhabitants of the city and county of the city, in the name of all the reſt; and the record then takes notice by way of ſuggeſtion, that the queſtion, &c. is between the citizens of Norwich and the inhabitants of the county of Norfolk, and they being intereſted, there can be no indifferent trial had there, and Suffolk being the next county, the venire is awarded thither: and on the trial, the jury gave a ſpecial verdict, viz.

That the city of Norwich is an ancient city, and has been time out of mind a county of itſelf, diſtinct from the county of Norfolk: that the three bridges were at the time of making ſtat. 22 H. 8. c. 5 within the county of Norfolk, and not within the county of the city of Norwich: that Philip & Mary, April 1, 1555, reciting the many inconveniences which had happened by not knowing the true bounds and limits of the county of the city, ſevered ſuch an extent of ground from the county of Norfolk, and annexed it to the city. That the three bridges are within the annexed boundaries, which are made to extend as far as Harford Bridge, which is the fartheſt of the three: that they are public bridges, and no particular perſon is bound to repair them: that they are out of repair; but whether the inhabitants of the county in the city are bound to repair them, is the doubt of the jury, on which they pray the advice of the court, &c.

Pratt, C. J. They who are not chargeable of common right, may diſcharge themſelves on not guilty; and if ſo, the trial was well in Suffolk. If they could only give repairs in evidence, then it ought to have been in Norfolk. There is no doubt but the information lies in this caſe; and as to the appearance, we may take them to be the ſame perſons. It ſeems to be true, that the fartheſt bridge is included, for it extends to the exterior part of the river. There is nothing in that notion about diſtinguiſhing between juriſdiction and charge, for certainly both muſt go together.

Eyre, Juſtice, inclined that the trial was right in Suffolk on the diſtinction taken by the council; but the matter was adjourned for further argument.

At another day, the following exceptions to the information and trial were ſpoke to, and fully argued: 1ſt. That no information lies in B. R. becauſe ſtat. 22 H. 8. gives the juriſdiction to four juſtices.

2dly. This cannot be taken to be an information at common law, becauſe it ſays, that the defendants ought to repair by virtue, &c. and concludes againſt the form of the ſtatute.

3dly. The information is againſt the inhabitants of the county of the city only, and the appearance for thoſe of the city only. With reſpect to the ſpecial verdict, two doubts were raiſed.

1ſt. Whether theſe bridges are within the annexed, boundaries, for the defendants ſay, that as far as being the bound to which, and the word from being the bound from which, all the bridges are excluded.

2dly. Here is a miſ-trial, for on not guilty pleaded, the defendants could give nothing in evidence but that the bridges are in repair, and therefore the trial ſhould have been in Norfolk.

The whole court were unanimous for the King on all the points, but the miſ-trial. To which Powys and Eyre, Juſtices, were of opinion it was well in Suffolk, for the queſtion naturally ariſes, whether the bridges are in Norfolk or Norwich; and the reſult of that is, that either the one or the other is bound to repair; and on not guilty, puts all in iſſue: there was no other way to make this appear on record but by ſuggeſtion, which not being denied, it is as well as if it had appeared by ſpecial pleading. And it ſhall not be in the power of the defendants to diſappoint the King of a proper trial by their refuſing to plead ſpecially.

Forteſcue, Juſtice, thought the right ought not to be tried on this iſſue. But the matter was adjourned.

Since it is admitted, the ſituation may come in queſtion; that will by way of conſequence determine the other point, who ought to repair? And therefore the trial could not be in Norfolk. The matter of law in the ſuggeſtion ariſes neceſſarily out of the matter of fact, and without it, would not be compleat. To which Powys, Juſtice, agreed.

Eyre, Juſtice. On not guilty pleaded, the defendant may controvert every thing the proſecutor is bound to prove. He is bound to prove where the bridges lie, and therefore Norfolk was an improper county. If a man would diſcharge himſelf on a particular account, he muſt plead it ſpecially; but not where the common right is his defence. If a man is charged to repair by reaſon of the tenure, he may throw it on the pariſh by the general iſſue. The ſame ſuggeſtion was made in Sir Richard Onſlow's caſe, and no exception taken. There is judgment entered in that caſe of Hornſey, Eaſter 2 W. & M. Rol. 31. and in the debate, as I find in my notes,

Forteſcue, Juſtice, thought, parcel or not parcel could not be given in evidence on not guilty. Mod. 1. 112.

Hale, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, not guilty goes only to the repair or not; ſo that as to all other queſtions, the defendant muſt plead ſpecially.

And Parker, Chief Juſtice held ſo, Michaelmas 10 Ann. There being three judges to one, Judgment was given for the King. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 177.

On a motion for an information for a libel in advertiſing that one Madox, an apothecary, had perſonated one Dr. Crow, a phyſician, and wrote and took his fee, (which the apothecary did not pretend to deny,) the Chief Juſtice declared, that though truth be no juſtification for a libel, as it is for defamatory words, yet it will be ſufficient cauſe to prevent the interpoſition of the court in this extraordinary manner, and induce them to leave it to the ordinary courſe of juſtice before a grand jury. Whereon the rule for an information was diſcharged. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 498.

Eaſter, 8 Geo. The King v. Okey.

On a motion to file an information againſt the defendant (who was a juſtice of peace) for ſending the proſecutor to the houſe of correction without ſufficient cauſe; the rule was, that he ſhould ſhew cauſe on ſuch a day, why the information ſhould not be filed; and now he ſhewed for cauſe, that the proſecutor was ſervant to L. R. who complained to the defendant, that his ſaid ſervant was ſaucy, and gave his (the maſter's) horſes too much corn.

The court held this not ſufficient cauſe to ſend a man to the houſe of correction; ſo leave was given by the court to file an information againſt the juſtice of peace. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 46.

On a motion for leave to file an information againſt the defendants, on an affidavit of the town clerk of Malmſbury, for that one Gawen Hart of the ſaid borough of Malmſbury, was admitted to be a capital burgeſs thereof in 1714, and had not taken the oaths of abjuration and ſupremacy, when he was admitted: a rule was made for the defendants to ſhew cauſe why an information in return of a quo warranto ſhould not be filed, and the defendants produced ſeveral affidavits, by which it appeared, that the ſaid Hart did take all the oaths that were tendered to him at that time, when he was admitted to be a capital burgeſs; and alſo, that he had taken the oaths of abjuration and ſupremacy in ſome ſhort time afterwards, at a quarter ſeſſions held in Wiltſhire, and he himſelf made affidavit, that he believed he had taken all the oaths requiſite for him to take at the time of the election.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice. If he did not take the oaths at the time of his admiſſion to be a capital burgeſs, he is not qualified to be a burgeſs, and the length of time, wherein he continued to be ſo, will not obſtruct the filing an information againſt him, but then after ſo long a time, there ought to be a clear proof of his wilful refuſal, or voluntary neglect to take the oaths; but certainly an information ought not to be granted on the oath of the town clerk himſelf, becauſe it was his fault that Hart did not take the oaths; and it was likewiſe his duty to diſcover the not taking them, which he had not done for ſo many years together, therefore that length of time ſhall gain a preſumption in his favour, eſpecially when by other affidavits it is proved, that he took all the oaths, which he believed to be requiſite for him to take at the time of his election.

If the Crown pleaſes, an information may be filed in the name of the Attorney General, but we cannot file any, but on probable cauſe; and none appearing here, the rule muſt be diſcharged.

Forteſcue, Juſtice. The probability of the evidence is ſo much of the defendant's ſide, that if I was to be a juror in this cauſe, I ſhould acquit him.

In the caſe of the The Queen v. Jefferies concerning the borough of Bridgwater, he took the oath of allegiance three days after his admiſſion, for which an information was prayed, but denied; and he was reelected. After eight years we ought not to put the defendant to a trial to prove that he took the oath of allegiance at a proper time. It has been held, that no tender of oath is neceſſary, contrary to 2 Leo. 242, 243. So the information was not granted, but the rule was diſcharged. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 55.

Informations were granted for perjury on the trial of an information for a conſpiracy; and all the parties proſecuted agreeing, the court on conſent arreſted the judgment on the conſpiracy, and quaſhed the two other informations. Which note, for it has not been uſual ſo to do, whereby ſuch proſecutions are ſtifled, and the Attorney General never grants a nolle proſequi in ſuch caſes, though by conſent. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1072.

Eaſter, 11 Geo. The King v. Butler.

The caſe was, one Hunt was bailiff of the corporation of Whitchurch in Hampſhire in the year 1722, at which time Batchelor was choſen Mayor by the jurors ſummoned by the ſaid Hunt; and then the Mayor continued Hunt bailiff for the next year, viz. for the year 1723, being the year of his Mayoralty.

Thereon an information in nature of a quo warranto was granted againſt the Mayor and Hunt, ſuggeſting that no man could be Mayor or bailiff there who was non-reſident, and choſen by non reſidents, and therefore had uſurped a franchiſe.

And at the trial a verdict was found for the Mayor, that he was an inhabitant reſident; and againſt Hunt, that he was non-reſident; thereon the Mayor named one Page to be bailiff.

And now the queſtion was, whether the Mayor could name a new bailiff, or whether one Neeve, who was bailiff before this Mayor was elected, ſhould continue bailiff, becauſe by the conſtitution of this corporation, a bailiff duly choſen is to continue in his office for one year, and till another is duly choſen; and Hunt was never duly choſen, becauſe he was non reſident? And this being a controverted point, another information, &c. was granted to try it.

Per curiam. Informations in nature of a quo warranto may be brought (with leave of the court) at the relation of any perſon deſiring to proſecute; and this is by virtue of ſtat. 9 Ann, the intent of which ſtatute was, to prevent frivolous and vexatious controverſies, and therefore informations were not to be filed without leave of the court; but the queſtion in this caſe ſeemed doubtful, and ſince it is controverted it ought to be tried. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 351.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. The King v. Nicholls.

A motion was made for leave to file an information againſt the defendant, who was Mayor of Stafford, and a juſtice of peace, for his neglect of public juſtice, in denying a warrant to the proſecutor, who was beaten by one T. S. A rule was made to ſhew cauſe, &c.

It was now moved to diſcharge that rule, becauſe the Mayor had ſeveral people then before him to be examined concerning a riot which happened on that day; and it being late at night, he deſired them to come the next day, which is the denial of which the proſecutor now complained. So the rule was thereon diſcharged, becauſe the Mayor had done what juſtice he could; and the intent of the procuring this rule was to bring him into diſgrace, and to influence the corporation againſt him; wherefore the proſecutor was ordered to pay the coſts of the motion. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 337.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. The King v. Edwards.

On a motion for an information againſt the Overſeers of the poor of the pariſh of Wadhurſt, for removing a poor woman who had the ſmall-pox into another pariſh, and againſt her will, from the pariſh of Wadhurſt, where ſhe was an inhabitant; the ſeſſions refuſing to give any relief.

Per curiam. Where a perſon is viſited with ſickneſs, by the act of God, he ought not to be removed from the place where he is ſick, farther to endanger his health, without an order of two juſtices; and if ſuch order is made by the juſtices, knowing him to be ſick, an information ſhall go againſt them; thereon a rule was made againſt the Overſeers to ſhew cauſe, &c.

And on another day they came to ſhew cauſe, &c. and denied the fact alledged againſt them; and moved that the rule might be diſcharged, for otherwiſe this woman, who was really ſettled in that pariſh to which ſhe was removed, would on the trial of this information be evidence againſt the pariſh of Wadhurſt, and gain a ſettlement there.

But the court were of opinion that the fact being controverted, and carrying ſuch a barbarity with it, it is requiſite that it ſhould be tried on an information; and then the judges would be judges of the truth. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 326.

A motion was made for leave to file an information againſt the defendant for beating the informer, who gave no other provocation than ſaying to him, who kept an ale houſe, Mr. Mayor, draw me a pot of drink; but it being the laſt day of the term but one, the court would make no rule to hang over a magiſtrate's head a whole vacation, ſo ordered it to be moved the next term, if they thought fit. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 337.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. The King v. Brereton.

On a motion in arreſt of judgment on an information brought for a libel laid in the city of Cheſter, which being a local offence, and iſſue joined in this court, could not be tried there, but in the county of the city.

1ſt. That it appears by the record that the day is appointed by the Mayor; which is therefore void, becauſe it was done without authority; for the writ from the Chamberlain to the Mayor (after iſſue tried) commands the Mayor to ſend the record back to the Chamberlain for him to appoint a day for the appearance of the parties, in order for their receiving judgment.

2dly. That it does not appear that the Chamberlain of the County Palatine of Cheſter is Chamberlain of the city of Cheſter.

Then as to the information, the fact is laid very uncertain, for it is, that the defendant wrote, made, and publiſhed, or cauſed to be wrote and publiſhed, which is very uncertain, and no proper defence can be made, becauſe it is in the disjunctive; ſo where a judgment was for making, or cauſing to be made, a bill of lading, this was held ill, becauſe in the disjunctive.

Then it ſets forth, that the defendant wrote a certain libel, in which theſe ſcandalous words were contained, ſetting forth ſome words, but not the whole pamphlet, which he ſhould have done, or averred, that there were no words in it to qualify thoſe which were uncertain.

Per curiam. As to the firſt and ſecond exceptions, if the precedents are ſo, we cannot vary now: the city is part of the County Palatine.

As to the third exception; writing, and cauſing to be wrote, are two different acts: and no information is like this. On ſtat. H. 6. an indictment for erecting a cottage or tenement, is ill; as to the indictment on ſtat. 5. Eliz. cap. 4. it is good, becauſe that is not the charge. If the crimes were the ſame, yet the indictment ought to be certain.

4thly. The information is good, notwithſtanding this exception. However, the matter was adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 328.

On which the defendant's council took the following exception, viz. that this is not a public office for which a quo warranto lies.

The juſtices of Berks had a petty ſeſſions to ſearch after vagrants, and a poor man reſiding in the pariſh of Bingfield being examined, confeſſed himſelf to be ſettled in the pariſh of Sunning, whereon the juſtices ordered him to be removed to Sunning; but the pauper threatened to return, and he returned the ſame day to Bingfield, pretending to be an hired ſervant to a pariſhioner of Bingfield, (but the court were ſtrongly inclined now, on the circumſtances of the hiring being diſcloſed on the affidavits, to think it a colourable hiring) whereon the defendant, who was a juſtice of peace for Berks, and was preſent at the petty ſeſſions, without any ſummons, or oath made of his return, committed the pauper to the houſe of correction, where he was kept three days; and on this the court was moved to grant an information againſt the defendant. The court allowed the proceedings of the petty ſeſſions in this caſe to be irregular, becauſe there was no complaint made of his being chargeable, or likely to become chargeable to the pariſh of Bingfield; but yet as that was only a miſtake of judgment, the court would not have thought it worthy of puniſhment, but the ſending him to the houſe of correction was puniſhing him, after having convicted him unheard, and that is contrary to natural juſtice, and therefore, on the authority of the caſe of the juſtices of Hertford, they were for granting the information, but as no malice appeared in the juſtice, the court allowed the proſecutor to accept of ſome propoſals made by the juſtice, to make him amends, and ſo it went off. *Vide Caſes Temp. Michaelmas, 8 Geo. 2. The King v. Robe.

An information was filed againſt the defendant for ſeveral illegal exactions in his office of clerk of the market, and there were ſeveral counts ſpecifying ſums taken of particular perſons; on all which diſtinct charges the defendant was acquitted: but at the cloſe of the information, there was a general charge, of which he was found guilty, viz. that under colour of his ſaid office, he did illegally cauſe his agents to demand and receive of ſeveral other perſons, ſeveral other ſums of money, on pretence of weighing and examining their ſeveral weights and meaſures. Exception was taken, that this was ſo general a charge, that it is impoſſible that any man can prepare to defend himſelf on this proſecution, or have the benefit of pleading it in bar to any other: and for this fault judgment was arreſted. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 999.

An information was filed againſt the defendant by the Attorney General for a riot, which contained two hundred ſheets of paper.

The defendant's council moved, that the unneceſſary counts might be ſtruck out, or that it might be referred to the maſter, for it being an information filed by the Attorney General, by the rules of the court it cannot be quaſhed, but the party is put to demur.

Lord Hardwicke. Your way ſhould be, to apply to the Attorney General, and he will do it to be ſure.

To which the defendant's council anſwered, we have applied, and he refuſes, and ſays he has a right to put in what counts he pleaſes.

Lord Hardwicke. Well, we will read it over, ſo mention it again in a day or two.

And afterwards, at another day, he ſaid, we find no inſtance of ſuch a motion, but we think there ſhould be an application to the Attorney General for a ſummons to the proſecutor's attorney, to ſhew cauſe why they ſhould not be ſtruck out, and then I dare ſay Mr. Attorney will do what is proper. *Vide Caſes Temp. Eaſter, 9 Geo. 2. The King v. Morgan.

On an information in nature of a quo warranto, for uſurping the office of a burgeſs of Cardiffe, a recognizance was taken as on ſtat. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18. and not being tried within the year, the court was moved for coſts againſt the proſecutor; which was oppoſed, on pretence that theſe informations were not within the act, which ſpeaks only of treſpaſſes, batteries, and other miſdemeanors.

Per curiam. An uſurpation is a miſdemeanor, and the practice of taking recognizances is the beſt expoſitor. Beſides, this has been determined in Salk. 376. But as here has been no verdict or judgment, it muſt not be coſts generally as on ſtat. 9 Ann c. 20. but reſtrained to 20*l.* as on ſtat. 4 & 5 W. & M. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1042.

Lord Hardwicke. We do indeed grant theſe informations for public uſurpations on the crown, but never for public uſurpations of franchiſes; but the way is, to apply to the Attorney General in ſuch caſes. I remember in Lord Barrington's caſe, when I was Attorney General, who had ſet up a fair, the court refuſed it, and directed an application to the Attorney General, which they did accordingly, and I granted it: but I would not by this be underſtood to give an opinion that a quo warranto lies for this, as if it was a free warren. *Vide Caſes Temp. The court was moved on ſeveral affidavits for an information againſt the defendant for ſubordination of perjury, in a cauſe in the Eccleſiaſtical Court; but on ſhewing cauſe, the council for the proſecutor did not inſiſt on charging that offence, becauſe it did not appear that any perjury had been committed; but urged, that there was a ſufficient ground for an information for an attempt to ſuborn the witneſſes, or for an attempt to extort money from the proſecutor.

Lord Hardwicke. As to the ſubornation of perjury, it has been rightly given up, no perjury appearing; as to the attempt to ſuborn, to be ſure there may be an information for that; and here, though there are contradictory affidavits; but in this caſe I am of opinion not to do it, becauſe of the civil ſuit which is now depending. But yet I do not lay it down as a rule, that the court will not grant an information for perjury pending a civil ſuit, for if the perjury appears very plain to the court, they may, but only where there is ſuch a contradiction of the charge as to make it doubtful, as in this caſe. As to the conſpiracy, that may be an offence, though the cauſe before the delegates ſhould be a juſt cauſe, it being made uſe of in order to extort money; but in this caſe the conſpiracy, if not plainly denied, is at laſt doubtful, and was not the point of the application, but only reſorted to now, but even this part of the caſe is very uncertain; though I think this rule ought to be diſcharged, yet I do it on this ſingle reaſon, becauſe there is a civil ſuit now depending, and not becauſe I think the parties innocent, and do therefore think that the proſecutor, on a final end of the ſuit before the delegates, or a deſertion of the cauſe, may be at liberty to make another application.

The whole court concurred with the Chief Juſtice, and on that ſingle ground the rule was diſcharged. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. p. 241.

A mandamus was iſſued to the defendants to make a rate for the poor, who returned, that there were two townſhips, Further Spotland and Nearer Spotland; and that overſeers are appointed for the townſhip of Further Spotland; and that the inhabitants have made a rate, and provided for their poor; and on this return, on behalf of the townſhip of Nearer Spotland, an information was moved for againſt the defendants as for a falſe return; for the queſtion is, between the two places, whether they ſhall join in the maintenance of the poor as one pariſh or townſhip, or not; there being many in Nearer Spotland, and very few in the other; and therefore Nearer Spotland alledged that they were not diſtinct, but one and the ſame townſhip, which now on ſhewing cauſe was denied by Further Spotland; and they offered to try it in a feigned iſſue.

Lord Hardwicke. If this had been a mandamus on ſtat. 9 Ann, c. 20. the return might have been traverſed; or had it been a mandamus concerning ſome private right, the party might have had an action for a falſe return; and ſo a peremptory mandamus, if the return had been wrong: but here there cannot be an action for a falſe return, becauſe no one is particularly intereſted, ſo there is no remedy but an information, and there being a direct contrariety in the affidavits, it is the courſe of the court to grant an information to try the fact.

On a motion for an information, it appeared that the defendants contrived to get a young lady out of the cuſtody of her guardian, aſſigned in Chancery, and marry her, and that a coach, &c. was prepared, into which ſhe voluntarily went, and was carried into Suſſex, and there married.

And the court granted an information; though in 4 Mod. 144. it is ſaid not to be an offence at common law, for they ſaid it was certainly a conſpiracy; and 1 Sid. 387. 1 Lev. 257. and 2 Mod. 130. are in point. Beſides, they inclined, that though ſhe went voluntarily, yet it was a taking and conveying of her within the meaning of ſect. 3. ſtat. 4 P. & M. c. 8. which in caſe of her conſenting, lays a penalty on her.

In this caſe it appeared, the court of Chancery had committed the defendants for a contempt; but the court granted the information notwithſtanding, and the Attorney General refuſed a nolle proſequi. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1107.

An information was brought at the aſſizes on ſtat. 21 H. 8. c. 13. againſt the defendant for non-reſidence: and the action is thereby given to him that will ſue in any of the King's courts by bill, plaint, or information, in which no eſſoign is to be allowed. And on demurrer, the court held, that it would not lie at the aſſizes, but muſt be brought in this court, according to Cro. Car. 112. 146. Het. 101. Sir W. Jones 198. Hutt. 98. For ſtat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 17. never intended to give a new juriſdiction to the aſſizes in caſes where they had it not before. Salk. 373. And it was ſaid that the cauſe of Farthing, qui tam, v. Markham, Michaelmas, 13 Geo. was never argued, but the rule was only to ſhew cauſe, and the matter never ſtirred again.

N. B. Before any demurrer, there was a rule to ſhew cauſe why the information ſhould not be quaſhed, but the court refuſed to enter into the conſideration of it on ſuch a motion.

The court was moved for an information againſt a churchwarden, for refuſing to collect money on a brief for fire, according to ſtat. 4 Ann. c. 14. and the caſe of an information granted for not burying in woollen was cited.

Per curiam. That is of a public nature, and wherein the revenue is concerned; and beſides in this caſe, there is a penalty given, and a method for obtaining it. So no rule was made. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1130.

An information was moved for againſt the defendant, being coroner of the county, for not condemning an horſe taken out of a team, on ſtat. 5 Geo. c. 12. which requires proof to be made before a juſtice, of the cauſe of forfeiture; and the party who ſeized tendering his own oath, the defendant ſcrupled to take it, or determine the affair, in the abſence of the owner or driver.

Per curiam. They are both reaſonable objections, why is not the perſon who ſeized, and is to have the benefit of the forfeiture, within the reaſon of excluding informers where there is a penalty? Making proof muſt mean legal proof. The other alſo is but natural juſtice. There are exceptions in the act as to one ſtone, or one piece of timber, though drawn by ever ſo many horſes; and ought not the owner to have an opportunity of ſhewing it? The rule was therefore diſcharged with coſts. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1181.

The defendant who was a diſſenter, was choſen ſheriff of London and Middleſex, but refuſed to take that office on him; on which an information was moved for againſt him, for which it was urged, that it was an office in which the public are intereſted, and therefore not to be compenſated by a pecuniary ſatisfaction to the city. But on ſhewing cauſe the court diſcharged the rule, it appearing, that there were acts of common council that had provided penalties on refuſers, which is the proper remedy; eſpecially where it is in doubt, whether the refuſal is a crime or not, which has never yet been ſettled. In this caſe the facts are agreed, and the only doubt is in point of law; and therefore more proper for a civil ſuit, and ſo was the opinion of the court in the caſe of Shakleton of York, in Lord Hardwicke's time. However, they declared, that if after the point was determined againſt the diſſenters, others ſhould refuſe, it might be a foundation to aſk for an information. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1193.

By ſtat. 12 Ann. c. 16. the treble value is recoverable on an uſurious contract, viz. one moiety to the crown, and the other to him that will ſue for the ſame. By ſtat. 31 Eliz. c. 5. ſect. 5. the common informer is limited to a year after the offence is committed, and if no ſuch ſuit is brought within the year, then the crown may ſue at any time within two years, after the end of the firſt year.

In this caſe the year was expired; but within the other two years, the court was moved on proper affidavits for an information, and a rule was obtained to ſhew cauſe; but the court afterwards diſcharged it, being of opinion, that it was a matter left to the diſcretion of the crown, which the court had not power to exerciſe: and there never was an inſtance where, for a penalty veſted in the crown only, this court ever granted an information; but they are always filed by the Attorney General, who is the proper officer in thoſe caſes. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1234.

On a motion to ſhew cauſe why an information ſhould not go againſt the defendant, at the inſtance of one Ralph Carr, an attorney, for ſending him a challenge;

After hearing the affidavits made by the parties, and the letters that paſſed between them,

The court held, that though the defendant had behaved very improperly, and though it would have been right for the court to have granted even croſs informations in caſe each party had applied for an information againſt the other; yet they thought that when the aggreſſor who gave the firſt challenge, came and applied for an information againſt the other, who only accepted it, (however improperly and unlawfully) it was a very different caſe; and that the court had no reaſon to give him this extraordinary remedy by way of information, but ought rather to leave him to his ordinary remedy by action or by indictment.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt an information which had been moved for by perſons who appeared to be gamblers, againſt others of the ſame profeſſion, for a conſpiracy to cheat them out of 900 l. at a foot race.

The court unanimouſly refuſed to grant the information, but referred the complainants to the ordinary remedy of an action or indictment, as the facts alledged ſeemed to be within the act of parliament made to prevent exceſſive gaming, and the rule to ſhew cauſe, was accordingly ordered to be diſcharged. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 548.

On a motion for an information againſt two juſtices of the peace for refuſing to grant a licence to one Henry Day to keep an inn at Everſley, it was ſworn, that he was a fit perſon, and that it was proper, and even neceſſary there ſhould be an additional inn-holder (there being one there already) and for which occupation of keeping an inn this man was (as the juſtices had allowed on a former occaſion) a proper perſon, they having before licenced him ſo to do at another place.

On this motion the court granted a rule on the defendants to ſhew cauſe “ why they did not grant this “ licence to the ſaid Henry Day.”

On Monday the 27th of June, 1757, the council for the defendants ſhewed cauſe, and the defendants by their affidavits made no perſonal objections to the ſaid Day, but thought the certificate inſufficient, becauſe not ſigned by the parſon, vicar, or curate.

The court was of opinion, “ that the certificate be- “ ing ſigned by three or four reputable houſe-keepers, “ &c. was ſufficient,” but though the juſtices had miſtaken the act, the court cleared them from any wrong motive.

It being ſuggeſted to the court, “ that the preſent “ parſon and church-wardens were ready to ſign a “ certificate in his favour,” the court enlarged the rule to ſhew cauſe in theſe terms, viz. “ That the “ firſt day of the next term be farther given them to “ ſhew cauſe why they have not granted, &c.”

On Friday the 18th of November, 1757, the proſecutor's council again moved (as a new motion) for an information againſt the defendants for not granting the ſaid Henry Day a licence, notwithſtanding what had paſſed in court, and at the general meeting, which he ſupported on affidavits of the fact; and alſo, on the merits; but the court gave no opinion, and only kept their former rule on foot, in order to obtain the material end of it, and made the like rule on theſe affidavits as they had made on the former rule, and ordered both rules to come on together.

On Thurſday the 13th of April 1758, this affair coming on again for the laſt time, after hearing the arguments of the council for and againſt the rule, the court diſcharged both rules with coſts.

Lord Mansfield. The preſent queſtion only is, "Whether the juſtices have been guilty of any par- "tiality or malice in the refuſal of this licence."

On the firſt and original motion, the juſtices appeared to have been miſtaken in the grounds of their refuſal; in that they fixed it on the want of the miniſter's and church-wardens ſigning; which they judged to be requiſite by ſtat. 26 Geo. 2. cap. 31. (when it was not.) In this they were not criminal, though they were miſtaken. At that time they had no perſonal objection to the ſaid Day. It was therefore (from all that then appeared) reaſonable to expect that, on enlarging the rule, they would at their next meeting grant the licence.

Since this, and antecedent to ſuch next meeting, there are come out ſeveral ſtrong perſonal objections to the ſaid Day, (which the juſtices were the proper judges of,) viz. his keeping, and having for a long time kept a houſe for publickly retailing ale, wine, and ſpirituous liquors without licence; his ſuffering a day-labourer to drink a whole day in his houſe, in harveſt time, and afterwards vindicating ſuch conduct; his having been charged with a fraud on oath; beſides an allegation in one of the affidavits, "That two notorious highway- "men and robbers appeared at leaſt to have uſed his "houſe, as a public houſe, if they enjoyed no other "and more particular kind of harbour and protection "in it."

In reſpect to the houſe, the juſtices now ſwear that they are clearly of opinion, "That one houſe is ſuf- "ficient," and they likewiſe clear themſelves, by the moſt ſolemn aſſertions in their affidavits, of all criminal imputation. He therefore declared his opinion, that there was no ſufficient ground for a criminal charge againſt the defendants.

Per curiam. Let both the rules be diſcharged with coſts. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 557.

In this action the court refuſed to ſet aſide a non proſ. regularly obtained by the defendant againſt the plaintiff, who was only a common informer (who ſued for a penalty of 10000 l. on the ſtat. of uſury) though the plaintiff offered to pay the coſts of ſetting it aſide.

The court were clear and unanimous, that where a mere common informer, who ſued for puniſhment only, had been guilty of a ſlip or miſtake, which put him out of court, and entitled the defendant to enter a non proſ. againſt him, they would not exerciſe their diſcretionary power in ſetting aſide this non proſ. thus regularly obtained, and reſtoring this mere common informer to an opportunity of proceeding for the ſake of puniſhment only. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 402.

On a motion for an information in nature of a quo warranto againſt teh defendant, to ſhew by what authority he acted as one of the Aldermen of the corporation of St. Ives in Cornwall.

The ground of this motion was a defect of the defendant's title to the office of Alderman, being elected thereto, without being then a burgeſs or aſſiſtant of the corporation.

The court were clear and unanimous in refuſing to grant this information; by reaſon of the ſtaleneſs of the defect of a title, aſſigned as the foundation of it; which was of no leſs than twenty-nine years ſtanding. They obſerved, that though there was indeed no ſtatute, nor even fixed rule of limitation, as to the length of the time which ſhould ſuffice to quiet the poſſeſſors of theſe offices, yet the court, in their diſcretion, ought to refuſe granting theſe motions, after a great length of time. So the motion was denied. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 433.

On a writ of error directed to the juſtices of the great ſeſſions in the county of Denbigh, on a judgment given there for the King againſt the defendant, after a verdict on an information brought againſt him in that court by the Prothonotary and Clerk of the Crown there, at the relation of John Moſtyn, Eſq. according to the form of the ſtatute, in that caſe made and provided.

1ſt, General, viz. That judgment is given for the King againſt the defendant, whereas by the law of this kingdom, it ought to have been given for the defendant.

2dly, Special, viz. And alſo in this; that it appears by the ſaid record, that judgment in the plea aforeſaid was given, "that the ſaid John Moſtyn in the ſaid "plea named, or the relator therein, recover againſt the "ſaid Thomas Williams 121 l. 12 s. 11 d. for his coſts "laid out in that ſuit;" whereas, by the law of this realm, no judgment ought to have been given in the plea aforeſaid for thoſe, or for any other coſts in that ſuit.

After hearing the council on both ſides on arguing theſe errors, the court affirmed the common law judgment, and reverſed the judgment for coſts.

Lord Mansfield. 1ſt, As a ſtatute judgment within ſtat. 9 Ann. c. 20. it is wrong.

2dly, As to the common law part of the judgment, the objection taken by the plaintiff in error's council, that this was not a caſe within ſtat. 9 Ann. c. 20. and therefore there ought not to be any judgment for coſts, will not hold; for he may certainly be puniſhed for one ſingle offence, though he goes no further. So that this part of the judgment is right.

Per curiam. Unanimouſly, the common law judgment, viz. as to the ouſter muſt be affirmed, but the judgment for coſts (which was founded on the ſtatute) muſt be reverſed. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 403.

Michaelmas, 31 Geo. 2. The King v. Robert Chappel.

On a motion for an information for ſending a challenge by letter, to one Mr. H. of Wells,

The councilf or the motion only produced copies, and not the original letters, wherein the challenge was contained.

The court made a rule to ſhew cauſe on reading the copies of ſuch letters only, (the ſame being ſufficiently verified). Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 402.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt an information moved for by one Mr. Barnard againſt the defendant for a miſdemeanor committed by him in his office of a juſtice of peace, in committing and detaining W. B. the ſon of the ſaid Mr. B. in priſon, &c. on a verbal charge made by the Duke of Marlborough, "that this young man "had ſent him threatening letters, &c."

The defendant's council objected to the proſecutor's proceeding any further in this criminal application till he had previouſly made his election, "whe- "ther to proceed in this criminal method, or in a "civil action which he had actually commenced."

The council for the proſecution oppoſed making their election, but the court thought they ought to make it directly, and before they entered into the criminal complaint, for that this was the conſtant rule; and the particular circumſtance of the civil action being confined to be brought within ſix months, made no ſort of difference.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, the matter was adjourned till the firſt day of the next term, when it came on again, and the court took time to deliver their opinion.

The court now delivered their opinion, and were unanimous, that the main and principal charge which was the ground and foundation of the reſt, and indeed the key to the whole nature and complexion of the defendants behaviour, appeared to be falſe in fact, and quite miſrepreſented to the court by Mr. B. the father, and Mr. B. the ſon, and that the juſtice of peace appeared to have acted in this affair without any bad, oppreſſive, or injurious intention, though (in ſome reſpects) irregularly; therefore, though the preſent complaint appeared to be ſo ill grounded, that the complainants ought to be puniſhed in coſts; yet as the juſtice had made the commitment without previouſly taking the Duke of Marlborough's oath, and had alſo neglected to take his Grace's recognizance to proſecute, (both which parts of his conduct were irregular) he had no right to receive his coſts: they therefore ordered that the rule be diſcharged; but in regard to the warrants of commitment and detainer of the ſaid W. B. the ſon, made by the ſaid defendant, they did not think fit to diſcharge the ſaid rule, with coſts to be paid to the ſaid defendant. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 720.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt an information, in nature of a quo warranto to ſhew by what authority the defendant acted in the characters above mentioned; it appeared to the court, that the charge was groundleſs and frivolous, and could not but be known to the proſecutor to be ſo.

Per curiam. Let the rule be diſcharged with coſts. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 780.

On ſhewing cauſe why a rule ſhould not be made abſolute for an information againſt a juſtice of peace for a miſdemeanor, in refuſing to grant a licence to one Francis Simes (who had been licenced for ſeveral years before) to ſell ale as uſual, and afterwards convicting him without any previous ſummons, for having ſold it without a licence.

The ground on which this rule had been obtained, was as follows:

1ſt, That the only reaſon why the licence was refuſed him, was his declining to pay a ſum of money, viz. 5 l. which was claimed of him on a diſtinct and collateral account, and which he denied to be due from him. The payment of which ſum of money was (as he alledged) inſiſted on by the juſtice as a condition precedent to his granting the man a licence.

2dly, “ That the juſtice had convicted him of the “ offence without any previous ſummons.”

As to the firſt, the court were unanimous, that the allegation appeared to be falſe in fact, but at the ſame declared explicitly, “ That juſtices of peace have no “ ſort of authority to annex any ſuch conditions to the “ grant of theſe licences.”

As to the ſecond, they conſidered it to be fallacious, as the fact came out on ſhewing cauſe, for the man was actually preſent before the juſtice (who had ſent for him) and was ſo far from offering any defence, that he rather ſeemed to apply for mercy, declaring, however, “ that if the juſtice did convict him, he “ ſhould not pay the penalty.”

Thirdly, The court took notice, that the man had not any where alledged, “ That he was innocent of “ the offence,” which they thought it incumbent on him to have done, to entitle himſelf to make this application againſt the juſtice; and ſo diſcharged the rule. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 653.

On a motion in arreſt of judgment, on an information filed againſt the defendants, together with three others for a miſdemeanor.

The information conſiſted of four counts, viz. one for a riot, another for publiſhing a libel; a third for a riot and libel; and the fourth and laſt for a libel in making, ſinging, and publiſhing certain ſlanderous ſongs of one John Cooke and Jane his wife.

The three other defendants were acquitted of the whole information. The defendants Benfield and Saunders were acquitted of all the reſt of the information, except the fourth count.

1ſt, That an information or indictment will not lie for publiſhing two diſtinct libels on two diſtinct perſons, any more than an indictment will lie for an aſſault on two.

2dly, That ſeveral diſtinct defendants charged with ſeveral and diſtinct offences cannot be joined together in the ſame indictment or information, becauſe the offence of one is not the offence of the other; and the preſent charge is made up of ſeparate and diſtinct offences, for which the ſeveral defendants can no more be joined, than ſeveral defendants can be charged with perjury, &c.

3dly, That this is an entire general verdict on the whole fourth count, and yet the latter ſong contained in it (namely the ſong made on John Cooke) contains no libellous matter at all; conſequently, no judgment can be entered up for the King.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, the court anſwered the three objections ſeparately.

As to the firſt objection, the court looked on this to be one offence, the giſt of the charge is ſinging thoſe ſongs in the manner, and with the intent charged in the information, and ſinging them at the ſaid John Cooke's door, with intent to diſcredit him and his children, and to diſturb his domeſtic peace and comfort, and therefore over-ruled this objection.

As to the ſecond objection, they held this to be an entire offence, one joint act done by both; they both joined in the act of ſinging this libellous and ſcandalous matter in the public ſtreet, at the ſaid John Cooke's door, with intent to diſcredit him and his children; and whether it be two ſongs or one, or a firſt and ſecond part of the ſame ſong, or ſeparate ſtanzas; one on John, another on Jane, yet it is one entire offence: and the more there are that join in it, the greater is the offence.

As to the third objection, they over-ruled it, holding the latter ſong to be libellous and defamatory; and likewiſe, that if this part of the charge had not been ſo, it would in an information or indictment only go towards leſſening the puniſhment, but would not be a ſufficient reaſon for arreſting the judgment.

Per curiam, unanimouſly, let the rule to ſhew cauſe why the judgment ſhould not be arreſted, be diſcharged. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 980.

On a motion for an information in nature of a quo warranto againſt the whole corporation, (as a body) to ſhew by what authority they claimed to act as a Corporation.

The council for the motion intimated a doubt, “ whether ſuch a ſpecies of information, (viz. filed by “ the clerk of the crown, under leave of the court at “ the relation of a private proſecutor) could be within “ ſtat. 9 Ann. c. 20.”

The court gave no direct opinion: however, Lord Mansfield and Mr. Juſtice Deniſon ſeemed pretty clear, that this act was calculated only againſt individuals uſurping offices or franchiſes in corporations; and not againſt any corporation itſelf as a body; and the words of the ſtatute manifeſtly carry this meaning.

The council then moved againſt the ſeveral individuals, “ to ſhew by what authority they reſpectively

" claimed to exerciſe their particular franchiſes," and obtained the ordinary rules againſt them, in the uſual form. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 869.

On ſhewing cauſe on behalf of the proſecutor, why the proceedings on this joint information ſhould not be ſtayed, with coſts to be paid by the proſecutor; for that five ſeparate rules, " for one or more informations " againſt each defendant," are conſolidated into this one joint information, without any rule for ſuch a joint information againſt all of them.

The council againſt the rule inſiſted, that by the practice, this cannot be done, nor does the preſent rule juſtify it.

Lord Mansfield, obſerved, that he was clear, that this joint information againſt all, was wrong, on theſe ſeparate and diſtinct rules, for one or more againſt each; and that the preſent rule muſt be made abſolute.

Per curiam. Let the rule be made abſolute for ſtaying the proceedings on this joint information. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1270.

An information was granted againſt the defendants as juſtices of the peace for the borough of Penryn in Cornwall, for refuſing to grant licences to thoſe publicans who voted againſt their recommendation of candidates for members for the ſaid borough.

It appeared on affidavits, that they had acted very groſsly in this matter; having previouſly threatened to ruin theſe people by not granting them licences, in caſe they ſhould vote againſt thoſe candidates whoſe intereſt theſe juſtices themſelves eſpouſed, and afterwards actually refuſing them licences on this account only.

Lord Mansfield, declared, that the court granted this information againſt the juſtices, not for the mere refuſing to grant the licences (which they had a diſcretionary power to grant or refuſe as they ſhould ſee to be right and proper) but for the corrupt nature of ſuch refuſal; for their oppreſſive and unjuſt refuſing to grant them, becauſe the perſons applying for them, would not give their votes for members of parliament, as the juſtices would have had them. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 13 7.

The ſame principle was laid down in this caſe as in The King v. Williams, &c. though the preſent rule " for ſhewing cauſe why there ſhould not be an in- " formation," was diſcharged on the merits; the juſtices not appearing to the court to have acted from corrupt motives which the proſecutor of the rule had charged them with. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1318.

On ſhewing cauſe why informations in nature of a quo warranto ſhould not be granted againſt theſe ſix whoſe right depended on that of thirteen other perſons, (who had voted in the election of them into their offices) to ſhew by what right they claimed the franchiſes of in-burgeſſes of this corporation, it appeared to be incumbent on the proſecutors to invalidate the right of three out of the thirteen, in order to turn the ſcale of the election. They had voted as being reſident in-burgeſſes, but two out of the thirteen were objected to by the proſecutor's affidavits, as being aldermen, and thereby diſqualified to vote as in-burgeſſes, three as having been legally disfranchiſed, and never legally reſtored, and ſix as not being actually and bona fide reſident in Wigan at the time of the election: ſo that it was pretended that even all the thirteen were illegal votes: however, it was agreed, " that the election would not " hold good, if only three of theſe thirteen votes could " be proved bad ones." It was therefore inſiſted on the part of the proſecution, that the election was bad.

Beſides this, another general objection was taken to the validity of the election; namely, that the court, at which the election was made, was improperly holden, and therefore all that was done at it was totally void, and an abſolute nullity; for it was ſworn that it was eſſentially neceſſary to the competency of the corporate court, that at leaſt one of the bailiffs ſhould be preſent at it; whereas there was no bailiffs at the original court, which was adjourned to the ſubſequent day; on which ſubſequent day of adjournment the defendants were elected at the adjourned court, conſequently the adjourned court was an incompetent one, and juſt the ſame as no court at all; and every thing tranſacted at it muſt be nugatory, ineffectual, and void.

It was alſo inſiſted, that it was neceſſary for the in-burgeſſes who voted to be reſidents in Wigan at the time of their voting; and the only diſpute was, " whether ſix of thoſe who voted for theſe ſix defen- " dants were actually and fairly ſo in fact, or only " colourably and fallaciouſly ſo."

After this matter had been much litigated, the court took time to conſider this matter.

Lord Mansfield now declared the opinion of the court on this ſubject, in which he recapitulated the ſeveral objections taken, and ſaid, We are all of opinion, " that thoſe rules muſt be made abſolute on the firſt " point," which is a general, and if true, a fatal objection to the validity of that election; the information will be " for uſurping the office on the Crown;" and the Crown may take what iſſue they think proper to ſhew ſuch uſurpation. There is no inſtance of precluding the Crown from inſiſting on any objections that they ſhall be adviſed to take iſſue on, in order to ſhew the defendant to have uſurped the franchiſe.

Therefore we neither need to give, nor ſhould give any opinion on the other points: nor does the line ſeem to be fully and clearly drawn and fixed, " whe- " ther the rights of the electors can be gone into at all, " or how far they can be gone into on the trial of the " right of the elected:" therefore the rules were made abſolute for informations. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1585.

The court was moved by the Attorney General for leave (in the ordinary form of theſe motions) to exhibit an information againſt ſeveral perſons for a moſt groſs miſdemeanor in attempting to influence the jury returned to try Mr. W.'s cauſe, by ſending them ſeveral pamphlets and inflammatory papers, and actually preventing two of thoſe ſpecial jurors, who had been before ſummoned from appearing, by ſending an expreſs to them in the middle of the night preceding the day of the trial, with a fictitious letter, (ſigned " ſummon- " ing bailiff") acquainting them, " that the trial was " put off," (when in truth it was not put off, but did then come on.)

Lord Mansfield declared, that the court would never grant an information on the application of the Attorney General in caſes where the Crown proſecuted, becauſe he has a right himſelf officially to execute one: and he may, if he thinks proper, ſummon the parties, to ſhew cauſe "why it ſhould not be exhibited" before he ſigns it. He ſaid this was not a caſe within ſtat. 4 & 5 W. & M. cap. 18. "to prevent malicious informations "in this court;" and therefore told the Attorney General, "that he muſt uſe his own diſcretion."

On this, the Attorney General changed his motion, and prayed a rule for an attachment, which was granted, but the defendants exculpating themſelves, the rule was diſcharged. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1564.

On a motion for an information in nature of a quo warranto againſt the defendant, for acting as a capital burgeſs, having been ſteward, (a high office, as was alledged) when elected capital burgeſs, which higher office of ſteward was ſaid to be incompatible with, and therefore rendered him incapable of being elected into the lower office of capital burgeſs.

On ſhewing cauſe it was alledged, that theſe offices were not incompatible, but if they were, it would be the former office that was vacated by the acceptance of the latter, and not the office which was laſt accepted.

Lord Mansfield. Here is no fact doubted; no oppoſition; no objection ever made All the evidence that can be traced ſhews a conſiſtent uſage for one hundred years back, "that the ſteward, if a capital burgeſs be-"fore, has remained a capital burgeſs."

In point of law there is no incompatibility in the ſteward being a capital burgeſs. If he ſhould be choſen Mayor, it may then be a queſtion, "whether his ac-"ceptance of that office does not vacate his office of "ſteward." It ſeems to me very ſtrong, that if theſe two offices of ſteward and capital burgeſs were incompatible, the acceptance of the latter would imply a ſurrender of the former.

Per curiam, unanimouſly, let the rule be diſcharged. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1615.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt an information for a miſdemeanor, in obſtructing divine ſervice in the church, and groſsly inſulting the rector, who had admitted a methodiſt into his pulpit.

After hearing the affidavits, and arguments of the council on both ſides,

Lord Mansfield declared, that he always underſtood "that a preacher muſt have a licence from the biſhop "of the dioceſe wherein he ſo preached," and "that "a licence from the biſhop of a particular dioceſe "would not give the perſon authority to preach in "every dioceſe, nor in any other dioceſe." He ſaid, this was ſeldom diſputed; if it was, he took it to be in ſtrictneſs ſo, by the canons.

In the preſent caſe, he thought the court ſhould not interpoſe on the application of the rector, becauſe he had ſuppreſſed the truth, and thereby miſrepreſented the matter; and alſo, becauſe he was going out of the way of the general and uſual courſe of celebrating divine ſervice in the eſtabliſhed church; and further, he behaved himſelf improperly, by particularly marking Mr. Wroughton, and preaching perſonally againſt him in his ſermon; and it ſeemed to him that the blow complained of was not a blow ſtruck the rector by Mr. W. (as is charged on him) but an accidental bruſhing him with his finger: therefore there is no reaſon for the court to interpoſe in an extraordinary way in this caſe, as it is circumſtanced.

In general, methodiſts have a right to the protection of the court, if interrupted in their decent and quiet devotion, and ſo have diſſenters from the eſtabliſhed church, if diſturbed.

The defendants, on ſhewing cauſe againſt an information which had been prayed againſt them for a miſdemeanor in the execution of their office as juſtices for the ſaid borough, in refuſing to grant a licence to ſell ale to one Ingram an inn-keeper in the ſaid borough, merely from a motive of reſentment, in having joined in an affidavit made in ſuppport of the intereſt which was adverſe and oppoſite to that which the juſtices and their friends eſpouſed.

The defence was, that they did not act from any reſentment, or other corrupt motive, but ſolely becauſe Ingram was an improper perſon, and had kept a diſorderly houſe, and continued to keep it after due notice to the contrary, and particularly that he had encouraged gaming, and cock-fighting at his houſe.

Lord Mansfield. The court ſhould never interpoſe againſt magiſtrates, unleſs they have acted from bad motives, and with an evil mind, eſpecially in ſuch a caſe as this, where they are intruſted with an abſolute diſcretion; but for that very reaſon the preſent is the ſtrongeſt caſe for the interpoſition of the court, if it appears that they acted on corrupt motives.

If it appeared clearly that this man did keep a diſorderly houſe, it would be a reaſon againſt the court's interpoſing againſt the juſtices, but this does not appear on the contrary, the juſtices have not fully proved the charge.

The court therefore thought it a proper caſe for an information, and made the rule to ſhew cauſe abſolute. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1716.

On a motion for an information in nature of a quo warranto, againſt the defendants, for holding a public fair or market at Wakefield Common, Yorkſhire, on every other Wedneſday.

The court doubted whether an information in the nature of a quo warranto in the name of the Clerk of the Crown, at the application of a private perſon, would lie

"To ſhew cauſe why an information in the nature "of a quo warranto ſhould not be exhibited againſt "thoſe perſons, to ſhew by what authority they "hold or promote and encourage the holding of a "public ſhew, fair, market, or ſale, at a place called "Wakefield Inge, within the town of Wakefield in "the county of York, on every other Wedneſday "throughout the year, or on any particular Wedneſday, for the expoſing to ſale, and buying and "ſelling of cattle, goods, wares, and merchan-"dizes."

On ſhewing cauſe, the defendant's council made the following objections:

1ſt. That the uſurpation of a fair or market is not in general a ground for the interpoſition of this court, by way of information in the nature of a quo warranto.

2dly. That the preſent caſe, in particular, does not afford a foundation for ſuch an information.

After hearing the arguments of the council for and againſt the rule, the court diſcharged the ſame.

Lord Mansfield. If it were neceſſary to determine "whether the court could grant an information for "holding a fair or market," I ſhould deſire time to conſider: for it does not ſufficiently appear, whether before ſtat. 4 & 5 W. 3. c. 18. the King's coroner and attorney could file ſuch an information. If he could, the power is not taken away from him to do it now by leave of the court: if he could not, it is not given to him.

On the circumſtances of this caſe, I am clear that there ought not to be an information in the nature of a quo warranto.

This rule is drawn up, "that the defendants ſhall "ſhew cauſe why they hold, or encourage and pro-"mote the holding a fair or market."

Though it were admitted, that an information in the nature of a quo warranto might go, to put the defendants to ſhew by what title they hold it, and that therefore the former part of the rule might be right; yet a quo waranto will not lie for encouraging and promoting the holding one. Therefore the rule ought not to have been drawn up in this form. Here, all the defendants are only encouragers or promoters; no one is charged with actually holding a market or fair, or with claiming ſo to do. There are no marks of a fair or market; no toll claimed or taken by the lord of the ſoil: there is no uſurpation of a franchiſe, therefore this rule ought to be diſcharged.

Per curiam. Let the rule be diſcharged. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1812.

Inn-keepers.

The King v. Edwards.

The queſtion in this caſe was, whether an indictment would lie for ſelling ale without licence; and two judges were of opinion it would not lie.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. An indictment is a more beneficial way for the ſubject, becauſe it is a ſummary way of proceeding, and therefore it ſeems reaſonable that it ſhould lie in this caſe, notwithſtanding it is an offence created by the ſtatute, and a particular puniſhment thereby directed; and ſo it has been adjudged in a parallel caſe. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 27.

Anonymous.

The defendant was indicted for keeping a tippling houſe without licence againſt the form of the ſtatute. On not guilty pleaded, he was found guilty; and it was inſiſted on in arreſt of judgment, that at common law any perſon might keep an ale-houſe in a fit and convenient place for that purpoſe, that this was a ſtatutable offence, and the penalty by the ſtatute is, that the offender ſhall be committed by two juſtices, and a recognizance taken of him with two ſureties not to ſell ale, &c. and that this being the puniſhment by the ſtatute, for that reaſon an indictment will not lie; and the court being of this opinion, judgment was ſtaid. though an expreſs caſe was cited to the contrary. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 25.

The King v. Randall.

Two orders made at the ſeſſions in Middleſex were removed by certiorari into this court; the firſt of which recited, that whereas R. Randall had lately taken an houſe at Hoxton, deſigning to ſell ale and beer there; and whereas the houſe had never been inhabited by other perſons than merchants, &c. and there were ale-houſes enough in Hoxton already, therefore it is ordered, that no licence be granted to any houſe there wherein ale was not formerly ſold; and that no licence ſhould be given to Randall; the other recites, that whereas a licence was ſurreptitiouſly obtained by Randall from two juſtices to ſell ale there, &c. that yet he ſhould be ſuppreſſed, &c. from drawing ale there, &c. And now the court was moved to quaſh theſe orders, becauſe by ſtat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. the quarter ſeſſions cannot controul the authority of two juſtices in this manner.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. This diſtinction has been made, viz. where an authority has been given to two juſtices to do a thing, and from which there lies no appeal, there it may be commenced and done in the ſeſſions; but if an appeal is given, then the ſeſſions has not an original juriſdiction, it muſt not be begun there; as for inſtance, by the ſtatutes 18 Eliz. & 42 Eliz. and till ſtat. 3. Car. 1. But here the queſtion is, whether the ſeſſions can ſuppreſs an ale-houſe licenced by two juſtices of the peace? It was adjudged they could not, except for diſorders committed, and thereon theſe orders were quaſhed. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 470. Ibid. vol. 3. p. 27.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Parker v. Flint.

By ſtat. 4 & 5 W. & M. intitled, An Act for carrying on a war with France, it was enacted, that conſtables ſhould quarter ſoldiers on inn-keepers, and ſuch as kept ale-houſes and victualling-houſes, livery ſtables, or ſold brandy, metheglin, or cyder, by retail; and in an action brought by the plaintiff againſt a conſtable for quartering an horſe and dragoon on him, he pleaded not guilty, being an officer, and gave the ſtatute in evidence: and the jury found that there are wholeſome wells at Epſom, and that the plaintiff during the ſeaſon for drinking the waters indefinitely let lodgings, to ſuch as went thither to drink the waters, for the air, or for their pleaſure, and dreſſed victuals for them, and ſold them ale and beer, and entertained their horſes at 8 d. per diem, but ſold no victuals, drink, &c. to any but to his lodgers; and thus the plaintiff had no licence from any juſtices of peace to ſell ale, and that the defendant billetted a ſoldier and an horſe on the plaintiff, who compelled him to find victuals for himſelf, and proviſion for his horſe, for the ſpace of two months, and if, &c.

Per curiam. The plaintiff's houſe is not within the deſcription of that ſtatute; 1ſt. It is no inn, for the verdict finds he let lodgings only, which ſhews him not compellable to entertain any body, and none could come there without a previous contract; that he was not bound to ſell at reaſonable rates, or protect his gueſts; but it is the contrary in all the ſaid points in the caſe of an inn-keeper, and an action will lie againſt him for default, not by the name of an inn-keeper, but of a common Inn-keeper, Reg. 105. Mod. 877. Hetly, 49. Fitz. tit. Hoſtler, Bro. action on the caſe, 76. 5 Ed. 4. fol. 2.

2dly. It is not an ale-houſe or a victualling-houſe, for thoſe extend only to ſuch ale-houſes or victualling-houſes as are known and deſcribed by ſeveral acts of parliament, which it is a crime to keep without licence; and it muſt be a common tavern, wherein drink, &c. is commonly ſold to all the King's ſubjects Weſt's Precedents, 71 Lamb. 341. 1 Jac. c. 9. and the verdict finds they only ſold to their lodgers.

3dly. It was reſolved to be a ſtatute againſt the liberty of the ſubject; for before it no man was obliged to entertain ſoldiers againſt his will, which appears by the petition of right, 2 Car. 2. and by ſtat. 21 Car. 2. and therefore not to be conſtrued favourably without great neceſſity.

4thly. That in this caſe the conſtable having wrongfully quartered the dragoon on him was anſwerable for all the dragoon had committed.

Note. In this caſe Holt Chief Juſtice held, that if a perſon comes to an Inn, and makes a previous contract for lodging for a ſet time, and does not eat and drink there, he is no gueſt, but a lodger; and as ſuch is not under the Inn-keeper's protection; but if he eats and drinks there, it is otherwiſe; or if he pays for his diet there, though he does not eat it there. And a ſign is not eſſential to an inn, but is an evidence of it: therefore the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 254.

Michaelmas, 13 W. 3. Stephen Watſon's Caſe.

Stephen Watſon was indicted at the quarter ſeſſions, for that he on the firſt day of October 10 W. 3. and at divers other days and times, at B. &c. without any licence from two juſtices of the peace, did keep an ale-houſe, and ſold ale and beer there againſt the peace, and againſt the form of the ſtatute. On demurrer to this indictment, it was inſiſted,

1ſt. That an indictment would not lie in this caſe.

3dly. But admitting that it would lie, and at the ſeſſions, yet this indictment is ill in form.

1ſt. This indictment muſt either be on ſtat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. or on ſtat. 3 Car. 1. and both theſe ſtatutes preſcribe another method of puniſhing this offence, which was made ſo by one or other of them, and that method and no other muſt be followed, and if ſo, then an indictment will not lie.

2dly. But admitting it will lie, yet not at the ſeſſions, for this is not an indictment on ſtat. 4 Jac. 1. c. 1. for ſelling ale by the barrel without licence; for in that caſe, by the very words of the ſtatute, an indictment will lie at the ſeſſions; but this is an indictment on one of the ſtatutes before mentioned, and neither of them give the ſeſſions any power in this caſe, and they have no power but what is expreſsly given them by ſtatute.

3dly. This indictment is naught in form, for the caption is, that it was preſented by the oath of twelve men, ſworn and charged, without ſaying then and there ſworn and charged, and thereon it was adjourned.

But afterwards in Michaelmas, 3 W. it was adjudged that this indictment would not lie, becauſe it was an offence created by the ſtatute, and a particular method of puniſhing the offender was appointed by the ſtatute, which ſhould be followed, and no other. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 26.

In Replevin for a horſe; the defendant avowed the taking and detaining, for that he kept an inn, and the plaintiff being a traveller, came and left his horſe there, where he had been kept ſo long; that the keeping came to ſuch a ſum, till payment whereof he detained him: on demurrer, the whole court held, that inn-keepers were bound to receive and entertain gueſts, and therefore might detain the goods of the gueſts till payment; but the Chief Juſtice doubted whether the plaintiff was a gueſt in this caſe, becauſe he never went into the inn himſelf, but only left his horſe there, which the inn-keeper was not obliged to receive, and without an owner did not receive as an inn keeper.

Powell, Powys, and Gould, contra, that the plaintiff is a gueſt by leaving his horſe, as much as if he had ſtaid himſelf, becauſe the horſe muſt be fed, by which the inn-keeper has gain; otherwiſe, if he had left a trunk, or a dead thing. Cro Jac. 188, 189. Noy 79. Latch 126. Pop. 178. Mo. 471. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 388. Raym. vol. 2. p. 866.

Michaelmas, 8 Ann. The Queen v. Harris.

At the quarter ſeſſions on the 12th day of July, 8 Ann, the juſtices granted a licence to the defendant for keeping a common ale-houſe, and at the next ſeſſions, viz. on the 4th day of October following they made this order: "Whereas it appears to this court, that George Harris of Walton upon Thames, &c. doth keep a lewd "and diſorderly houſe, it is therefore ordered by this "court, that the ſaid George Harris be, and is hereby "ſuppreſſed from keeping an ale-houſe, &c. after ſix "weeks time, from the firſt day of the preſent ſeſſions, "&c." And this order being removed into this court by certiorari, the defendant's council moved to quaſh it, becauſe by ſtat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c. 25. there muſt be a previous conviction, and that by the oath of two men, before the juſtices can hinder his ſelling ale, &c. For, by that ſtatute, every man who has a licence to ſell ale is to be bound in a recognizance, with ſecurity, to keep good order, &c. and this is to be certified at the next quarter ſeſſions, and they are to inquire whether any ſuch perſon bound in ſuch recognizances, have done any act whereby they have forfeited the ſame; and if they have, to award proceſs, to ſhew cauſe why they ſhould not forfeit.

But this order was confirmed by the court; Holt, Chief Juſtice, being abſent.

Powell, Juſtice. The Juſtices in ſeſſions have a power by this act to ſuppreſs ale-houſes, and need not proceed by information or conviction; but they have thereby a diſcretionary power given them to ſuppreſs them, without ſhewing any cauſe or miſdemeanor: and where the ſtatute ſpeaks of a conviction, that is only where the juſtices proceed for the penalty which ought to be by ſcire facias. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1303.

Trinity, 9 Geo. Jones v. Pearle.

On an action of trover for three horſes, the defendant pleaded, that he kept a public inn at Glaſtonbury, and that the defendant was a carrier, and uſed to ſet up his horſes there, and 36 l. being due to him for keeping the horſes, which was more than they were worth, he detained and ſold them, as he lawfully might, and on demurrer judgment was given for the plaintiff, an inn-keeper, having no power to ſell horſes, except within the city of London. 2 Roll. Abr. 85. 1 Vent. 71. Mo. 876. Yelv. 67. And beſides, when horſes had been once out, the power of detaining them for what was due before, did not ſubſiſt at their coming again. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 556.

Trinity, 9 Geo. Jones v. Thurloe.

On an action of trover brought by a common carrier againſt an inn-keeper for keeping the plaintiff's horſe, and converting him to his own uſe,

The defendant pleaded, that he was an inn-keeper, and that the plaintiff owed him ſo much money for horſe-meat at ſeveral times, (all which he ſet forth in his plea) and that by cuſtom of the realm, an inn-keeper may detain horſes for their keeping, and that he, this defendant, on ſuch a night, detained the plaintiff's horſe for what was due to him, &c. which is the ſame trover and converſion of which the plaintiff complained, &c.

And on demurrer to this plea, the court were of opinion, that by the cuſtom of the realm, if a man lies at an inn one night, the inn-keeper may detain his horſe till he is paid for the expences; but if he gives him credit for that time, and lets him depart without payment, then he has waived the benefit of that cuſtom by his own conſent to the departure, and ſhall never afterwards detain the horſe for that expence.

For this cuſtom is founded on the hardſhip of the inn-keeper's caſe to ſue for every little debt, or on a greater hardſhip, that he may not know where to find him who was his gueſt, after he was gone; therefore when he has waived that privilege which the law gives him, he muſt rely on his other agreement.

Now, in the principal caſe, the inn-keeper having ſeiſed this horſe for the expences of ſeveral nights, and not for one night, and no more, (which he might lawfully do) ſuch ſeizure is not lawful, and by conſequence it is good evidence of the converſion.

In the argument of this caſe, the Chief Juſtice held, that though the inn-keeper might detain an horſe for his meat for one night, yet he could not ſell the horſe and pay himſelf; if he did, it was a converſion, for he is not to be his own carver. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 172.

Trinity, 11 Geo. The King v. Venables.

An objection being made in this caſe, that on an order for ſuppreſſing an ale-houſe, there ought to be a ſummons: the court held, on ſolemn argument, that there was no need to ſet out the ſummons in the order, (though a ſummons is neceſſary by natural juſtice) notwithſtanding the caſes of The King v. Dyer, and The King v. Green. Vide Forteſcue, p. 325. Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 377. Raym. vol. 2. p. 1405. Stra. vol. 1. p. 360.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. The King v. Auſtin.

An order of ſeſſions was made to hinder the defendant from ſelling ale; and the following exceptions were taken to this order:

1ſt. It did not appear by this order, that it was a common ale-houſe: every ale-houſe may not be a common ale-houſe.

2dly. It does not appear that the defendant was ſummoned, or preſent when this order was made.

3dly. The county is only in the margin, and not in the body of the order; ſo that it does not appear in what county the ale-houſe is; which is neceſſary to the juriſdiction of the juſtices.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice. There is no difference between an ale-houſe and a common ale-houſe. 2dly. If an ale-houſe is ſuppreſſed for any diſorder or offence committed by the party, he ought to be ſummoned: otherwiſe, when it is ſuppreſſed by the diſcretionary power of the juſtices. An ale-houſe may be ſuppreſſed, as Lord Hale ſays, Pl. Cr. if kept in an inconvenient place, the order does expreſs it to be a diſorderly houſe, and a common bawdy-houſe.

Forteſcue, Juſtice. It was a queſtion in Lord Holt's time, whether juſtices are bound to give a reaſon why they ſuppreſſed an ale houſe? He was of opinion they ought, becauſe the party had a right or intereſt veſted in him by the licence. Here the reaſon given is, it being a diſorderly houſe. 2dly. I do not remember it has ever been held neceſſary to ſhew a ſummons on theſe convictions: the diſtinction has been between mandamuſſes and convictions, by reaſon of the greatneſs of the puniſhment.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice. Be the puniſhment greater or leſs, it makes no difference; the party in each caſe ought to be ſummoned, and the ſummons ought to be ſet out.

Raymond, Juſtice. I remember, on a motion of my own, an objection to an order for ſuppreſſing an ale-houſe was taken for want of a ſummons, but the order was confirmed. The diſtinction taken by Forteſcue, J. ſeems very reaſonable.

The court demanding of the Secondary how the precedents were in ſuch caſes, he anſwered that the court was divided as to this point in the caſe of The King v. Clegg, which was a caſe of baſtardy; and that the name of the county in the margin has been held good in ſome orders of removal.

Per curiam. The third objection is fatal. In all criminal proſecutions it will not be ſufficient to put the county in the margin; for that can only prove the order made by the juſtices of that county, but it is no argument that the fact was committed in that county. There is no difference between indictments and orders. The King v. Marſhall, Trin. 10 Geo. This is a criminal proſecution, for it is adjudged a bawdy houſe, and ſuppreſſed as ſuch. Adjourned.

But on further conſultation, and ſearching of precedents, the order was afterwards quaſhed for the third exception. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 309. Forteſcue, p. 325.

Ingram and an hundred others, being found guilty of a riot on two inquiſitions taken before the juſtices of peace, according to ſtat. 13 Hen. 4. cap. 7. now moved in arreſt of judgment, on which the following points were reſolved by the court:

1ſt. When a riot is ſuppreſſed by the juſtices, together with the ſheriff, having the poſſe comitatus with them for that purpoſe, and they convict the rioters by a record of the force on their proper view, the ſheriff ought to be a party to ſuch inquiſition, and ſo he might by ſtat. 19 Hen. 7. cap. 13. But if the rioters diſperſe of themſelves, and after they are parted, an inquiſition is made of it by two juſtices of the peace; there is no need that it appear by the inquiſition, that the ſheriff was party to the inquiry; becauſe the juſtices may make the inquiſition without him.

2dly. When the conviction of a riot is by inquiſition taken before two juſtices of the peace, the inquiſition has no need to be, as taken for our Lord the King, and the body of the county, but for our Lord the King, is ſufficient, or rather better; for their inquiry is not for the county, but for the King, and ſo is the conſtant form of ſuch inqueſts. But when an inquiſition is made by the grand jury, then it ought to be for our Lord the King and the body of the county. It was objected, that the body of the county was ill, becauſe their authority was not divided, or derived partly from the King, and partly from the county, but from the King only, and executed for him; and therefore (in his opinion) it ought not to be for the body of the county. But this nicety was not regarded, and the court ſeemed to be of opinion that they were the ſame.

3dly. That though the words of the ſtatute are, that the juſtices, &c. ſhall make inquiry within one month after the riot, &c. yet an inquiry by them after the month is good. For the ſtatute intended only to forward their proceedings, by ſubjecting them to a penalty in caſe they did not make inquiry within the month, and not to reſtrain their authority to the month, ſo as it could not be executed afterwards: for the lapſe of the month makes them incur the penalty, but does not determine their power. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 215.

On an action on the caſe, the plaintiff declared on an indebitatus aſſumpſit, and alſo on a bill of Exchange; the defendant, as to the bill of Exchange, demurred, and ſaid nothing as to the indebitatus aſſumpſit, thinking thereby to make a diſcontinuance, if the plaintiff did not take judgment by default, which he omitted, and only joined in demurrer; afterwards, when the paper-book was made up in the office, the clerk of the papers left out theſe words, as to the bill of Exchange, and the cauſe being put in the paper, judgment was given for the plaintiff, and a writ of inquiry was executed; and on a motion to ſet aſide this judgment for irregularity, by omitting theſe words, as to the bill of Exchange,

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, they came too late, for they ſhould have taken notice of it when it came into the paper office, and not ſtay till a writ of inquiry was executed; it is a trick, for the defendant concluded, that the plaintiff would not take notice of it on a demurrer, being a thing of courſe; therefore the judgment was confirmed. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 400.

In Replevin, the defendant avowed for rent in arrear; the plaintiff replied non conceſſit, on which they were at iſſue, and the jury found the value of the cattle taken, but did not find what rent was in arrear, ſo as the cattle might be ſold to ſatisfy the rent, according to ſtat. 17 Car. 2. it being moved, that this might be ſupplied by the writ of inquiry, as it was in Specott's caſe.

A motion was made to ſet aſide a writ of inquiry, for want of theſe words, and have there this writ, &c.

Per curiam. It is well enough; it is a known difference between original and judicial writs, that defect in form will abate the former, but defect in ſubſtance only can alter the latter; and it was ſo reſolved in Blackmore's caſe.

The ſubſtance of the writ, is only to command the ſheriff to take an inquiſition; and the words which are omitted are purely directory to the ſheriff; becauſe without returning the writ, it cannot appear to the court, that he had an authority to take the inquiſition; and if the writ be returned, as here it is, the end of the words now omitted, is effectually anſwered.

Beſides, a command to return the inquiſition, is virtually and conſequentially a command to return the writ; becauſe the inquiſition cannot be returned to any purpoſe, unleſs the writ be ſo too; for it cannot otherwiſe appear, that it is a return to the writ, or that the ſheriff had any authority for taking the inquiſition. The words, if to him it ſeems expedient, were left out in a ſcire facias, yet it was held good for the very ſame reaſon, viz. its being a judicial writ, which ſhall not be abated for want of form. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 10 Geo. Parr v. Purbeck.

In an action of covenant, brought for non-payment of rent reſerved on a leaſe for years, there was judgment againſt the defendant by default; and a writ of inquiry executed; the jury gave the plaintiff but one ſhilling damages, and no more, though he proved that the defendant owed him 150 l. for rent.

The reaſon why the jury gave a ſhilling and no more was, that the defendant took this leaſe of the plaintiff of a certain piece of ground, in which he the (leſſee) covenanted to pay ſo much rent; and the leſſor covenanted, that he ſhould have ſuch a ſewer or dam to keep water, he (the leſſee) intending to ſet up a paper-mill, but the commiſſioners of ſewers had made the water-courſe ſo narrow, that he could not have water ſufficient for his purpoſe; and being unwilling to ſue the leſſor on this covenant, he left the land to the leſſor; and thereon another perſon entered, and was poſſeſſed thereof, and ſet up a corn-mill, and the miller paid the rent; and all this being known to the jury, who were of the neighbourhood, they gave the plaintiff a ſhilling, and no more.

And now it was moved to ſet aſide this writ of inquiry for the ſmallneſs of the damages; for ſince an action of covenant was brought, and the breach aſſigned was for non-payment of ſo much rent in certain, the jury was obliged to find the whole; it is true, if it had been in an action for damages, they might have found part only; and it is uſual to ſet aſide a writ of inquiry for ſmallneſs of damages, where no manner of evidence is given why they ſhould be mitigated; which is the preſent caſe.

The court were of opinion to ſet aſide this writ of inquiry, for though the ſuppoſed breach of covenant (on the plaintiff's ſide) was true, viz. that the defendant had not ſufficient water to ſet up his paper-mill, and if that had been given in evidence to the jury on the writ of inquiry; yet they could not have mitigated the damages on that account, much leſs when it was not given in evidence. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 196.

In an action of treſpaſs, the declaration was againſt three defendants, and the writ of inquiry recited it to be againſt two only; and the court being moved to ſet it aſide for irregularity, it was ſhewn for cauſe, that if the writ was wrong in this caſe, it was matter of error, and no advantage can be taken of it by motion.

Per curiam. As to its being error, poſſibly it is ſo; but to be ſure it is a matter of irregularity, for it is now a writ of inquiry taken out in a cauſe which is not depending; but however, if the plaintiff aſks, to be ſure it is amendable by the record.

Then the court was moved, that it might be amended, but the council objected to paying coſts on the amendment.

Per curiam. This is a matter of irregularity, and therefore carries coſts; indeed, where amendments are made on a writ of error after verdict, &c. by virtue of the ſtatutes of jeofails, no coſts are given, for the conſtruction of thoſe ſtatutes is to give judgment for the party on the writ of error, as if the amendment had been made; but this is not on a writ of error, but within the common rule; therefore let the plaintiff amend on payment of coſts. *Vide Caſes Temp. Trinity, 9 Geo. 2. Kinaſton v. The Mayor, Aldermen, and Aſſiſtants of the Town of Shrewſbury.

A mandamus iſſued to reſtore C. Kinaſton to the office of an alderman of this corporation; to which the defendants made a ſpecial return, ſetting forth, that he had been removed from his office, and alſo ſetting forth the cauſe of his amotion; whereon Kinaſton came according to ſtat. 9 Ann. c. 20. and took five traverſes to the return: and iſſue being joined on each of the traverſes, the jury found a general verdict for Kinaſton on two of the iſſues, and on the three others a ſpecial verdict; but they found no damages or coſts; and on the ſpecial verdict the court were of opinion for Kinaſton, and therefore a motion was made in behalf of the plaintiff for a writ of inquiry to be awarded, to inquire of the damages ſuſtained by reaſon of the falſe return, becauſe the jury have in their verdict omitted to inquire thereof. And becauſe this caſe was ſaid to be within the reaſon of the caſe of Herbert v. Waters, 1 Salk. 205. where in avowry by overſeers of the poor on ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. ſuch an omiſſion was ſupplied by writ of inquiry.

Per curiam. We are all of opinion that this is exactly like the caſes on ſtat. C. 2. and that ſtat. 9 Ann is the rule we muſt go by, and by that ſtatute we have not authority to award a writ of inquiry. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. p. 295.

The defendant having traverſed an inquiſition whereby he was found to be a lunatic: the Attorney General filed the common replication; and it was ſent from the petty-bag office to this court. The proſecutor of this commiſſion made up the record, and carried it down to trial: Mr. Roberts being ill, he did not appear; no defence was made, and the jury gave it in favour of the inqueſt.

On this a new trial was moved for on two points; 1ſt. That the ſuppoſed lunatic was in the nature of a plaintiff, and therefore had a right to carry down the record; and his traverſe is in the nature of a monſtrans de droit.

To this it was anſwered, and reſolved by the court, that he was properly to be conſidered as a defendant, oppoſing the title found for the Crown, without ſetting up any title in himſelf, as he muſt do in a petition of right. Vaugh. 62. and Lord Somers's argument in the Banker's caſe, ſtat. 4 Hen. 6. c. 13. a. were cited, and the form of the entries in Tremain 628. 652. Coke's Ent. 404. &c. ſhew it to be ſo. And indeed it would be abſurd to conſtrue the liberty of traverſing to give a power of delaying the Crown; which muſt be, if the party is conſidered as having the common right of a plaintiff. It was therefore held, that the record was well made up, and carried down by the proſecutor of the commiſſion.

The ſecond point was on the illneſs of Roberts, who could not attend, and which was made out by affidavits. The court thought it reaſonable to grant a new trial for this, on the footing of accident, and becauſe the Lord Chancellor and the former jury had both an inſpection, which might be of great uſe to a ſecond jury, who otherwiſe would be left to judge on leſs evidence than the others had.

A new trial was therefore granted, on payment of coſts. And the court ordered it, on the application of Mr. Roberts, to be tried at bar by a jury of Devon, where the former inquiſition was taken. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1208.

Trinity, 19 Geo. 2 Markham v. Middleton.

The defendant owed the plaintiff 323 l. for an apothecary's bill, and ſuffered judgment to go by default, and the plaintiff's attorney, on executing the writ of inquiry, produced the foreman, who told him he would prove the bill; but when the jury was ſworn, he declined giving any evidence. On which the ſheriff was deſired to adjourn, which he thought he could not do, and the jury thereon found one penny damages.

This was moved to be ſet aſide, on the head of ſurpriſe, and miſtake of the ſheriff, and on the authority of Woodford v. Eades, Parr v. Niblett, Eaſter 19 Geo. and Coleman v. Mawby.

The court thought it hard that the plaintiff ſhould be paid ſo large a debt with one penny, as he would be, if this verdict ſtood; or that his caſe ſhould be the worſe, for the defendant's letting judgment go by default; for had he pleaded, the plaintiff would have ſuffered a nonſuit: and therefore they ſet this aſide, and ordered a new writ of inquiry, on payment of coſts. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1259.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, at niſi prius. If a ſhip be inſured under Captain J. S. the part-owners may change the captain, without notice to the inſurers. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 325.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Green v. Young.

By evidence on the trial in an action on a policy of inſurance, the caſe appeared to be, that the inſurers agreed to inſure the ſhip from her arrival at ——— in Jamaica during her voyage to London; and an embargo was laid on the ſhip by the government; and afterwards they ſeiſed the ſhip, and converted her into a fire-ſhip, and offered to ſatisfy the owners. Now the queſtion was, if this would excuſe the inſurers.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, that it would not, and that this was within the words, detention of Princes, &c. but he gave no abſolute opinion, becauſe the cauſe was referred to the three foremen of the jury. In the ſame caſe he ſaid, that if a policy of inſurance be made to begin from the departure of the ſhip from England till &c. and after the departure damage happens, &c. and then the ſhip deviates; though the ſhip is diſcharged from the time of the deviation, yet, for the damages ſuſtained before the deviation, the inſurers ſhall make ſatisfaction to the inſured. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 840.

Hilary, 10 Ann. Aſſievedo v. Cambridge.

On a ſpecial verdict, the caſe in ſubſtance appeared to be this: Aſſievedo had inſured a certain ſum of money on a ſhip called the Ruth, for ſuch a voyage, in which ſhip Aſſievedo is found by the verdict not to be at all concerned, in point of intereſt. It happened that this ſhip was taken by the enemy, and kept in their poſſeſſion for nine days, and then, before it was carried into a place of ſafety, it was re-taken by an Engliſh man of war: and whether or not this was ſuch a taking as ſhould enable the plaintiff to recover the ſum inſured againſt Cambridge, was the queſtion.

After argument by the Civilians, the court ſeemed to be of opinion for the defendant. They thought that the plaintiff's being found by the verdict to have no intereſt in the ſhip which he inſured ſhould make no difference.

1ſt. Becauſe they never would be more favourable to an inſurer non bona fide, or wagerer, than to one that inſured bona fide.

2dly. Becauſe to make a different interpretation of this deed from what is commonly put on policies of inſurance, would be to run counter to the deſigns of the parties, who have made uſe of the very ſame words that are uſed in ſuch policies; nay, who have expreſsly provided for this very caſe, by theſe words, intereſt or no intereſt; which words ſignify nothing at all, unleſs the ſame loſs intitles to a recovery where the inſurer has no intereſt, and where he has; and that the property is not altered by the taking, they held to be very plain. But referred the matter for further conſideration. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 77.

Michaelmas, 10 Geo. 2. Boyfield v. Brown.

On the execution of a writ of inquiry before the Chief Juſtice, it appeared, that the defendant was an inſurer to 200 l. on corn, the value of which was 217 l. that the corn was ſo damaged in the voyage, that it ſold only for 67 l. and the freight came to 80 l. And on this the queſtion was, whether, as the freight, which the plaintiff was obliged to pay, exceeded the ſalvage, this was not to be conſidered as a total loſs?

For the plaintiff it was inſiſted, that he ought not to be in a worſe condition than if his corn had gone to the bottom of the ſea: for then he would have had no freight to pay, and now that the voyage has been performed, whereby the freight has become due, he has a right to apply the ſalvage to diſcharge that. It was proved to be the uſage, where the ſalvage exceeds the freight, to deduct the freight out of the ſalvage, and make up the loſs on the difference.

For the defendant it was inſiſted, that as his inſurance was on the corn, and the whole did not periſh; he ought in making up the loſs to deduct the ſalvage: but no inſtance could be ſhewn on either ſide, of an adjuſtment, where the freight exceeded the ſalvage.

Lord Hardwicke was of opinion, that within the reaſon of deducting the freight when the ſalvage exceeds it, the plaintiff was in this caſe, wherein it fell ſhort, intitled to have it conſidered a total loſs. And the jury found for the plaintiff accordingly. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1065.

Hilary, 16 Geo. 2. Seaman v. Fonnereau.

On the 25th of Auguſt 1740, the defendant underwrote a policy from Carolina to Holland. It appeared the agent for the plaintiff had on the 23d of Auguſt received a letter from Cowes, dated the 21ſt of Auguſt, wherein it is ſaid, "The 12th of this month, I was "in company with the ſhip Davey, (the ſhip in queſ-"tion) at twelve in the night loſt ſight of her all at "once; the captain ſpoke to me the day before, that "he was leaky, and the next day we had a hard gale." The ſhip, however, continued her voyage till the 19th of Auguſt, when ſhe was taken by the Spaniards: and there was no pretence of any knowledge of the actual loſs at the time of the inſurance, but it was made in conſequence of a letter, received that day from the plaintiff abroad, dated the 27th June before.

Several brokers were examined, and proved that the agent ought to have diſcloſed the letter; for either the defendant would not have underwrote, or have inſiſted on an higher premium.

Lee, Chief Juſtice, was of that opinion, and declared, that as theſe are contracts on chance, each party ought to know all the circumſtances. And he thought it not material, that the loſs was not ſuch an one as the letter imported; for thoſe things are to be conſidered in the ſituation of them at the time of the contract, and not to be judged of by ſubſequent events; he therefore thought it a ſtrong caſe for the defendant, and the jury found accordingly. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1183.

Michaelmas, 16 Geo. 2. Stamma v. Brown.

The ſhip The Gothick Lyon being advertiſed to be going to Marſeilles, goods were ſhipped on board of her on behalf of the plaintiff, and a bill of lading ſigned by the maſter, whereby he undertook to go by a ſtrait rout to Marſeilles, and the defendant underwrote a policy from Falmouth (where the goods were taken in) to Marſeilles; before the ſhip departed from the port of London, another advertiſement was publiſhed for goods to Genoa, Leghorn, and Naples; and the plaintiff's agent was told, it was intended to go to thoſe ports firſt, and then come back to Marſeilles; but he inſiſted that his bargain was to go firſt or directly to Marſeilles, and he would not conſent to let her paſs by Marſeilles, or alter his inſurance.

The ſhip, however, did paſs by Marſeilles, and after delivering her cargo at the other ports, ſet out on her return for Marſeilles with the plaintiff's goods; but in her voyage thither was blown up in an engagement with a Spaniſh ſhip. And in an action on the policy, the breach was aſſigned of a loſs by the barratry of the maſter. And the plaintiff inſiſted that any fraud or moleſtation of the maſter was within the meaning of the word barratry. Du Freſne terms it a deceit in the contract, and ſo do all the dictionaries, as Florio's Italian Dictionary, Minſhew, Furetier, &c. And that in the caſes of Knight v. Cambridge, and Knight v. Dodd, Eaſt. 10 Geo. where the loſs was laid to be by the fraud of the maſter, the court held it to be a good aſſignment of a breach, there being the word barratry in the policy.

The defendant's council inſiſted, that this was no more than a deviation, in which caſe the inſurer is diſcharged, and the plaintiff's remedy is againſt the owner or maſter. That this cannot be called a crime in the maſter, when he is acting all the while for the benefit of his owners.

Lee, C. Juſtice, in his direction to the jury, told them, that this being againſt the expreſs agreement to go firſt to Marſeilles, ſeemed to be more than a common deviation; being a formed deſign to deceive the contractor. And compared it to the caſe of ſailing out of port without paying duties, whereby the ſhip was ſubjected to forfeiture, which has been held to be barratry.

The jury ſtaid out ſome time, and on their return aſked the Chief Juſtice, whether, if the maſter was to have no benefit to himſelf by paſſing by Marſeilles, and went only to the other places firſt, for the benefit of his owners, that would be barratry? And the Chief Juſtice anſwering, No; they found for the defendant.

And now a new trial being moved for, the caſe was argued; and the whole court were of opinion, that the verdict was right. For the maſter has acted conſiſtent with his duty to his owners, and the plaintiff's agent knew of the intended alteration before the goods were put on board, and might have refuſed to ſhip them, or have altered the inſurance; that to make it barratry, there muſt be ſomething of a criminal nature, as well as a breach of contract; and therefore the breach being aſſigned only on the barratry, was not ſupported by the evidence: ſo the defendant had judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1173.

Trinity, 18 Geo. 2. Sparrow v. Caruthers.

The defendant inſured goods to London, and till the ſame ſhould be ſafely landed there. The ſhip arrived in the port of London, and the owner of the goods ſent his lighter, and received the goods out of the ſhip; before they reached land, an accident happened, whereby the goods were damaged, for which this action was brought againſt the inſurer.

For the defendant, it was inſiſted, that the accident happened after the owner had taken the goods into his poſſeſſion, and therefore was a loſs after the inſurance was ended.

Lee, C. J. held, that the inſurer was diſcharged, he ſaid it would have been otherwiſe, had the goods been ſent by the ſhip's boat, which is conſidered as part of the ſhip and voyage. And the jury (which conſiſted of merchants) being of the ſame opinion, brought in a verdict as to this point for the defendant. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1236.

Hilary, 19 Geo. 2. Dean v. Dicker.

This was an inſurance on goods by the Durſley Galley, intereſt or no intereſt, at and from Jamaica to Briſtol. In her paſſage ſhe was taken by a Spaniſh privateer, and carried into Mores, a port in Spain, kept eight days, and then cut out by an Engliſh ſhip. And the plaintiff inſiſting, that this, though on goods, was to be conſidered as a wager on the bottom of the ſhip, brought his action as on a total loſs. The defendant inſiſted, that by ſtat. 13 Geo. 2. c. 4. and 17 Geo. 2. c. 34. this ſhip is to be reſtored to the owners on paying ſalvage, and conſequently this is only an average loſs; and the plaintiff can only recover on a total one.

Lee, Chief Juſtice, held, that in this caſe the plaintiff ought to recover, for his is a wager on the total loſs in the voyage, and here has happened one; for the being carried into port and detained eight days makes one. And where the policy is intereſt or no intereſt, the proviſions of the acts in the caſe of valued policies cannot take place. The act does not declare the property is not gone by ſuch a capture, but only provides for reſtoring the ſhip to whom it did, and ſhall be proved to have belonged to; he ſaid that it might be otherwiſe, where the re-capture was before the ſhip was carried into a place of ſafety, or in the caſe of goods actually on board, and on a valued policy. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1250.

Hilary, 19 Geo. 2. Tonge v. Watts.

The plaintiff inſured on ſhip and freight at and from Jamaica to Briſtol, a cargo was ready to put on board; but the ſhip being careening, in order for the voyage, a ſudden tempeſt aroſe, and ſhe and many others were loſt. The rigging and parts of her were recovered and ſold; and the defendant paid into court as much as on an average he was liable to for the loſs of the ſhip; but the plaintiff inſiſted to be allowed 600 l. for the freight the ſhip would have earned in the voyage, if the accident had not happened. But as the goods were not actually on board, ſo as to make the plaintiff's freight to commence,

Lee, Chief Juſtice, held, he could not be allowed it, and he was called. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1251.

Hilary, 19 Geo. 2. Victorin v. Cleeve.

The plaintiff inſured on goods in the John and Jane from Gottenburgh to London; with a warranty to depart with convoy from Fleckery. In July, 1744, the ſhip ſailed from Gottenburgh to Fleckery, and there ſhe waited for convoy two months: on the 21ſt of September, at nine in the morning, three men of war, who had one hundred merchant ſhips in convoy, ſtood off Fleckery, and made a ſignal for the ſhips there to come out, and likewiſe ſent in a yaul to order them out. There were fourteen ſhips waiting, and the John and Jane got out by 12 o'clock, and one of the firſt; the convoy having ſailed gently on, and being two leagues a-head. It was a hard gale, and by 6 o'clock in the afternoon, the ſhip came up with the fleet, but could not get to either of the men of war for ſailing orders, on account of the gale of wind. It was ſtormy all night, and at day break the ſhip in queſtion was in the middle of the fleet, but the weather was ſo bad, that no boat could be ſent for ſailing orders: a French privateer had ſailed among them all night, and on the 22d it being foggy, attacked the John and Jane about two, who kept a running fight till dark, which was renewed the next morning, when ſhe was taken.

It was inſiſted for the defendant, that this ſhip was never under convoy, nor are ſhips ever conſidered ſo till they have received ſailing orders; and if the weather would not permit the captain to get them, he ſhould have gone back.

Lee, Chief Juſtice, and the jury were of opinion, that as the captain had done every thing in his power, it was a departing with convoy; and theſe agreements are never confined to the preciſe words; as in the caſe of departing with convoy from London, when the place of rendezvous is Spithead; a loſs in going thither is within the policy; ſo the plaintiff recovered. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1251.

Hilary, 19 Geo. 2. Foſter v. Wilmer.

The inſurance was from Carolina to Liſbon, and at and from thence to Briſtol; it appeared that the captain had taken in ſalt, which he was to deliver at Falmouth, before he went to Briſtol; but the ſhip was taken in the direct road to both, and before ſhe came to the point where ſhe would turn off to Falmouth. And it was held, the inſurer was liable; for it was but an intention to deviate, and that was held not ſufficient to diſcharge the underwriter. In the caſe of Carter v. The Royal Exchange Aſſurance Company, where the inſurance was from Honduras to London, and a conſignment to Amſterdam; a loſs happened before ſhe came to the dividing point between the two voyages, which the inſurer was held to pay for. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1249.

Hilary, 19 Geo. 2. Dick v. Barrell.

The plaintiff inſured intereſt or no intereſt on any ſhip he ſhould come in from Virginia to London, beginning the adventure on his embarking on board ſuch ſhip; the money to be paid though his perſon ſhould eſcape, or the ſhip be retaken.

He embarked on board the Speedwell, but ſhe ſpringing a leak at ſea, he went on board the Friendſhip, and arrived ſafe at London; but the Speedwell was taken after he left her. And now in an action againſt the underwriter, he was held liable, for the inſurance is on the ſhip the plaintiff ſet out in; and had that got ſafe home, and the other been loſt, the plaintiff could not have recovered on the foot of having removed his perſon into that ſhip in the middle of the voyage. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1248.

Hilary, 19 Geo. 2. Pariſh v. Crawford.

The defendant was ſole owner of a ſhip, which he let to one Fletcher for a voyage, at a certain ſum, and Fletcher was to have the benefit of carrying goods. The plaintiff ſent a quantity of moidores, and had bills of lading ſigned by the captain: and many of the moidores not being delivered according to the conſignment, an action was brought againſt the defendant, the owner of the ſhip, to make him liable as far as the ſhip and freight was worth, according to ſtat. 7 Geo. 2. c. 15. It was inſiſted for the defendant, that tho' the ſhip was his property, yet he was not owner as to be liable to the plaintiff; and that Fletcher is for this purpoſe the owner: but it appearing the defendant had covenanted for the condition of the ſhip, and the behaviour of the maſter,

Lee, Chief Juſtice, held, he was liable to the plaintiff, and the freight he had in general from Fletcher, was ſufficient, though the identical freight for the gold belonged to the other, and Fletcher had only the uſe of the ſhip, but no ownerſhip. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1251.

Michaelmas, 19 Geo. 2. Waples v. Eames.

The ſhip Succeſs was inſured at and from Leghorn to the port of London, and till there moored twenty-four hours in good ſafety. She arrived on the 8th day of July at Freſh-Wharf, and moored, but was ſerved the ſame day with an order to go back to the Hope to perform a fourteen day's quarantine. The men on this deſerted her, and on the 12th the captain applied to be excuſed going back, which petition was adjourned to the 28th, when the regency ordered her to go back; and on the 30th ſhe went back, performed the quarantine, and then ſent up for orders to air the goods. But before they came the ſhip was burnt on the 23d day of Auguſt; and now the queſtion was, whether the inſurer was liable?

For the defendant it was inſiſted, that the ſhip arriving, and being moored on the 8th day of July, and remaining ſo till the 30th, was a performance of what he had undertaken, and his riſque ought not to be extended to ſo long a time as between the 8th of July, and the burning on the 23d of Auguſt.

But it was ruled, that though the ſhip was ſo long at her moorings, yet ſhe could not be ſaid to be there in good ſafety, which muſt mean the opportunity of unloading and diſcharging, whereas here ſhe was arreſted within the twenty-four hours, and the hands having deſerted, and the regency taken time to conſider the petition, there was no default in the maſter or owners. And it was proved, that till the fourteen days were expired, there could be no application to air the goods. Wherefore the jury found for the plaintiff. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1243.

On an inſurance from London to Gibraltar, warranted to depart with convoy, it appeared there was a convoy appointed for that trade at Spithead, and the ſhip Ranger having tried for convoy in the Downs, proceeded for Spithead, and was taken in her way thither.

The inſurers inſiſted, that this being the time of a French war, the ſhip ſhould not have ventured through the Channel, but have waited in the Downs for an occaſional convoy. And many merchants and office-keepers were examined to that purpoſe.

Lee, Chief Juſtice, held, that the ſhip was to be conſidered as under the defendant's inſurance to a place of general rendezvous, according to the interpretation of the words, warranted to depart with convoy, Salk. 443, 445. And if the parties meant to vary the inſurance from what is commonly underſtood, they ſhould have particularized her departure with convoy from the Downs.

The juries, which were compoſed of merchants in both caſes, found for the plaintiffs on the ſtrength of this direction. Vide Stra. vol. 2. page 1265.

Hilary, 20 Geo. 2. Elton v. Brogden.

The ſhip Mediterranean went out in the merchants ſervice, with a letter of marque, and bound from Briſtol to Newfoundland, inſured by the defendant. In her voyage ſhe took a prize, and returned with it to Briſtol, and received back a proportionable part of the premium. Then another policy was made, and the ſhip ſet out, with expreſs orders from the owners, that if they took another prize, they ſhould put ſome hands on board ſuch prize, and ſend her to Briſtol, but the ſhip in queſtion ſhould proceed with the merchants goods. Another prize was taken in the due courſe of the voyage, and the captain gave orders to ſome of the crew to carry the prize to Briſtol, and deſigned to go on to Newfoundland, but the crew oppoſed him, and inſiſted he ſhould go back, though he acquainted them with the orders: on which he was forced to ſubmit, and in his return his own ſhip was taken, but his prize got in ſafe.

It was inſiſted in an action againſt the inſurers, that this was ſuch a deviation as diſcharged them. But the court and jury held, that this was excuſed by the force on the maſter, which he could not reſiſt; and therefore fell within the excuſe of neceſſity, which had always been allowed. The plaintiff's council would have made barratry of it.

Lee, Chief Juſtice, held, that it did not amount to that, as the ſhip was not run away with in order to defraud the owners: ſo the plaintiff had a verdict for the ſum inſured. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1264.

Eaſter, 30 Geo. 2. Pelly the younger v. The Governor and Company of the Royal Exchange Aſſurance.

On an action of covenant brought on a policy of inſurance, a verdict was given for the plaintiff, ſubject to the opinion of the court on the following queſtion.

> Whether the inſurers are liable to anſwer for the loſs of the goods of the ſhip Onſlow, which were burnt in a Bank-ſaul, and not in the ſhip in the river Canton in China, and whether ſuch accident was within the intent and meaning of the policy?

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on this matter, the court took time to conſider thereof.

Lord Mansfield now delivered the opinion of the court, in which he minutely ſtated the caſe, and then the queſtion, "Whether this was a loſs for which the "inſurers are reſponſible within the intent and meaning "of the above mentioned policy of inſurance."

By the expreſs words of the policy, the defendants have inſured the tackle, apparel, and other furniture of the ſhip Onſlow from fire during the whole time of her voyage, till her return in ſafety to London, without any reſtriction, and the ſame were inevitably burnt in China during her voyage before her return to London.

The event which has happened is a loſs within the general words of the policy, and it is incumbent on the defendants to ſhew from the manner in which this misfortune happened, or from other circumſtances, "That it ought to be conſtrued a peril which they did "not undertake to bear;" therefore we are clearly of opinion, that in every light and view of this caſe, in reaſon and juſtice, and within the words, intent, and meaning of the policy, and within the view and contemplation of the parties to the contract, the inſurers are liable to anſwer for this loſs.

On a point reſerved in this cauſe at niſi prius, before Lord Mansfield, a verdict was found for the whole loſs, ſubject to the opinion of the court: and if the court ſhould think on his Lordſhip's report, "that the "plaintiff by law ought to recover for half his loſs only, "then the verdict was to be entered up as for half."

The queſtion for the opinion of the court was,

"Whether the plaintiff is intitled on the circum-"ſtances of this caſe, and on the facts as ſtated, to re-"cover the whole loſs from the preſent defendant, or on-"ly the half of his loſs from them, and the remainder "from the under-writers of Mr. Amyand's policy."

Lord Mansfield To conſider this matter as between the inſurer and inſured. As between them, and on the foot of commutative juſtice merely, there is no colour why the inſurers ſhould not pay the inſured the whole; for they have received a premium for the whole riſque.

If the inſured is to receive but one ſatisfaction, natural juſtice ſays, that the ſeveral inſurers ſhall all of them contribute in proportion to ſatisfy that loſs againſt which they have all inſured.

Where a man makes a double inſurance of the ſame thing in ſuch a manner, that he can clearly recover againſt ſeveral inſurers in diſtinct policies a double ſatisfaction, the law certainly ſays, "that he ought not "to recover doubly for the ſame loſs, but be content "with one ſingle ſatisfaction for it."

Stat. 19 Geo. 2. c. 37. (for regulating inſurances, &c.) expreſsly prohibits the re-aſſuring, (after having already inſured the ſame thing) unleſs the former aſſurer ſhall be inſolvent, or become a bankrupt, or die; and even in that caſe it provides, that it ſhall be expreſſed in the policy "to be a re-aſſurance."

If the under-writers are liable to contribute at all, the contribution ought to be amongſt the ſeveral inſurers themſelves, but Tameſz, the inſured, has a right to recover his whole loſs from the defendants on the policy now in queſtion, by which they are bound to pay the whole; for though here be two inſurances, yet it is not a double inſurance. If Tameſz could recover againſt both ſets of inſurers, yet he certainly could not recover againſt the under-writers of Amyand's policy, without ſome expence, nor without alſo firſt paying and reimburſing to Mr. Amyand the premium he paid, and alſo his charges.

Therefore, in every point of view this caſe can be put, we are all of us clearly of opinion, "that the verdict is right as it now ſtands, for the whole ſum inſured." Therefore let the poſtea be delivered to the plaintiff. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 490.

Michaelmas, 32 Geo. 2. Goſs and another v. Withers.
Idem v. Eundem.

On a ſpecial caſe from the ſittings in London, on two actions brought on two diſtinct policies of inſurance, one on the ſhip, and the other on the loading, ſeveral queſtions ariſing on the trial of the firſt of the ſaid cauſes, it was agreed, that the jury ſhould bring in their verdict in both cauſes for the plaintiff as for a total loſs, ſubject to the opinion of the court on the following queſtions, viz.

1ſt, Whether this capture of the ſhip by the enemy, was, or was not, ſuch a loſs as that the inſurers became liable thereby.

2dly, Whether under the ſeveral circumſtances of this caſe, the aſſured had, or had not, a right to abandon the ſhip to the inſurers, after ſhe was carried into Milford-Haven.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, the court took time to conſider the matter.

On the 23d of November, 1758, Lord Mansfield, delivered the opinion of the court as follows:

It is not neceſſary to confine what ſhall be ſaid, to the two diſtinct queſtions as ſtated. The general queſtion is, whether the plaintiffs were on the 18th of January, 1757, entitled to recover againſt the inſurers, as on a total loſs; under an offer "to abandon the ſhip and cargo "to the inſurers, for them to make what advantage of ſalvage they could," (for an offer "to abandon," was then made, and nothing has happened ſince that time, to alter the caſe.)

There is one point which, we are all of opinion is immaterial, as between the inſurers and the inſured, viz. "Whether by this capture the property was, or "was not, transferred to the enemy by the law of "nations." That queſtion can happen but in two caſes, namely, 1ſt, between the owner and a neutral perſon, who has bought the capture from the enemy. 2dly, Between the owner and re-captor.

If the ſhip taken by an enemy, eſcapes from the enemy, or is re-taken, or if the owner redeems or ranſoms the capture; his property is thereby reveſted: which property in the ſhip taken, was by the law of nations obtained by the captor.

Whatever rule ought to be followed in favour of the owner againſt a re-captor or vendee, it can no way affect the caſe of an inſurance between the inſurer and inſured. The inſurer runs the riſk of the inſured, and undertakes to indemnify; he muſt therefore bear the loſs actually ſuſtained, and can be liable to no more; ſo that if after condemnation, the owner recovers the ſhip in her complete condition; but has paid ſalvage, or been at expence in getting her back; the inſurer muſt bear the loſs ſo actually ſuſtained.

This is a policy on a real intereſt, and the ſingle queſtion is, whether the inſured had under all the circumſtances, on the 18th of "January, 1757, an election to abandon."

The loſs and diſability was in its nature total at the time it happened. During eight days the plaintiff was certainly entitled to be paid by the inſurer, as for a total loſs, and in caſe of a re-capture, the inſurer would have ſtood in his place. The ſubſequent re-capture is at beſt a ſaving only of a ſmall part: half the value muſt be paid for ſalvage. The diſability to purſue the voyage ſtill continued, the maſter and mariners were priſoners. The charter-party was diſſolved. The freight (except in proportion to the goods ſaved) was loſt. The ſhip was neceſſarily brought into an Engliſh port; what could be ſaved, might not be worth the expence attending it; which is proved by the plaintiff's offer to abandon.

Every argument that has been offered, holds ſtronger in the caſe of the other policy with regard to the goods. The cargo was in its nature periſhable; deſtined from Newfoundland to Spain or Portugal; and the voyage as abſolutely defeated as if the ſhip had been wrecked, and a third or fourth of the goods ſaved.

We are therefore of opinion, that the loſs was total, by the capture; and the right which the owner had, after the voyage was defeated, "to obtain reſtitution "of the ſhip and cargo, paying great ſalvage to the "re-captor," might be abandoned to the inſurers, after ſhe was brought into Milford-Haven.

Per curiam. Let the poſtea be delivered to the plaintiff in both caſes. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 683.

On a rule to ſhew cauſe why a verdict given for the defendant ſhould not be ſet aſide, and a new trial had, the caſe ſtated to the court was as follows:

An action was brought on a policy of inſurance, by the plaintiffs for one Mr. J. B. on the goods aboard a ſhip called the Vrow Martha, at and from St. Thomas Iſland to Hamburgh, from the loading at St. Thomas Iſland till the ſhip ſhould arrive and land the goods at Hamburgh.

The goods were, ſugars, coffee, and indigo; the ſugars were valued at 30 l. per hogſhead; the clayed and Muſcovado ſugars at 20 l. per hogſhead; and the coffee and indigo were likewiſe reſpectively valued. The ſugars were warranted free from average, under 5 l. per cent. and all the other goods free from average under 3 l. per cent. unleſs general, or the ſhip be ſtranded.

In the courſe of the voyage, the ſea-water got in; and when the ſhip arrived at Hamburgh, it appeared that every hogſhead of ſugar was damaged. The damage the ſugars had ſuſtained made it neceſſary to ſell them immediately; and they were accordingly ſold: and the difference between the price which they brought, by reaſon of the damage, and that which they might then have been ſold for at Hamburgh, if they had been ſound, was as 20 l. 0 s. 8 d. per hogſhead is to 23 l. 7 s. 8 d. per hogſhead, for as damaged, they were worth only 20 l. 0 s. 8 d. per hogſhead.

After hearing the matter fully argued by the council on both ſides, the court took time to give their opinion.

The only queſtion is, "whether (all the facts being "agreed) the jurv have eſtimated the damages by a "proper meaſure?"

The moment the jury brought in their verdict I was ſatisfied that they did right, in totally diſregarding the particular circumſtances of this caſe: as I expected the other cauſe would be tried, I thought a good deal of the point, and endeavoured to get what aſſiſtance I could, by converſing with ſome gentlemen of experience in adjuſtments. The point has now been very fully argued at the bar; and the more I have thought, and the more I have heard on the ſubject, the more I am convinced that the jury did right to pay no regard to the circumſtances.

The nature of the contract is, "that the goods ſhall "come ſafe to the port of delivery; or if they do not, "to indemnify the plaintiff to the amount of the "prime coſt, or value in the policy." If they arrive, but leſſened in value, through damages received at ſea, the nature of an indemnity ſpeaks demonſtrably, that it muſt be by putting the merchant in the ſame condition, (relation being had to the prime coſt or value in the policy) which he would have been in, if the goods had arrived free from damage; that is, by paying ſuch proportion, or aliquot part of the prime coſt or value in the policy, as agrees with the proportion or aliquot part of the diminution in value occaſioned by the damage.

The duty accrues on the ſhip's arrival, and landing her cargo at the port of delivery: the inſured has then a right to demand ſatisfaction. The adjuſtment never can depend on future events or ſpeculations.

We are therefore of opinion, that the plaintiffs are not entitled to have the price for which the damaged ſugars were ſold, made up 30 l. per hogſhead, and alſo, that the rule, by which the jury have gone is the right meaſure, and the rule to ſhew cauſe muſt therefore be diſcharged. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1167.

Trinity, 1 Geo. 3. Hamilton v. Mendes.

On a ſpecial caſe reſerved at Guildhall at the ſittings before Lord Mansfield after Michaelmas term 1760, in an action brought againſt the defendant as one of the inſurers on a policy of inſurance from Virginia or Maryland to London, of a ſhip called the Selby, and of goods and merchandize therein, till ſhe ſhall have moored at anchor twenty-four hours in good ſafety, the following queſtion was ſubmitted for the opinion of the court, viz.

"Whether the plaintiff on the 26th day of June " 1760, had a right to abandon, and has a right to reco- " ver as for a total loſs. If he is entitled to recover " for a total loſs?" then the jury find a verdict for the plaintiff, damages 98 l. coſts 40 s. But if the court ſhall be of opinion, that he had no right to abandon on the ſaid twenty-ſixth day of June, or he ought only to recover an average loſs; then the jury find a verdict for the plaintiff, damages 10 l. coſts 40 s.

After this caſe had been ſeveral times argued by the council for the defendant, the court took time to adviſe thereon.

The plaintiff has averred in his declaration, as the baſis of his demand for a total loſs, " that by the cap- " ture the ſhip became wholly loſt to him."

Without dwelling on principles or authorities, the conſequences of the preſent queſtion are deciſive. It is impoſſible that any man ſhould deſire to abandon in a caſe circumſtanced like the preſent, but for one of two reaſons, viz. either becauſe he has over-valued; or becauſe the market has fallen below the original price. The only reaſons which can make it the intereſt of the party to deſire, are concluſive againſt allowing it.

It is unjuſt to turn the fall of the market on the inſurer, who has no concern in it, and who could never gain by the riſe. And an over-valuation is contrary to the general policy of the marine law; contrary to the ſpirit of ſtat. 19 Geo. 2. a temptation to fraud; and a ſource of great abuſe: therefore no man ſhould be allowed to avail himſelf of having over valued.

If the valuation be true, the plaintiff is indemnified by being paid the charge he has been put to by the capture. If he has over-valued, he will be a gainer, if he is permitted to abandon; and he can only deſire it, becauſe he has over-valued. This was avowed on the firſt argument, and that very reaſon is concluſive againſt its being allowed.

The inſurer, by the marine law, ought never to pay leſs on a contract of indemnity, than the value of the loſs: and the inſured ought never to gain more. Therefore if it was neceſſary to reſort to that argument, the conſequence of the determination would alone be ſufficient on the preſent occaſion.

But on principles, this action could not be maintained as for a total loſs, if the queſtion was to be judged by the ſtricteſt rules of common law; much leſs can it be ſupported for a total loſs, as the queſtion ought to be decided by the large principles of the marine law, according to the ſubſtantial intent of the contract, and the real truth of the caſe.

Here, the event had fixed the loſs to be an average only, before the action brought; before the offer to abandon; and before the plaintiff had notice of any accident; conſequently before he could make an election. Therefore, under theſe circumſtances, " we " are of opinion that he cannot recover for a total, but " for an average loſs only," the quantity of which is eſtimated by the jury.

On a caſe reſerved at niſi prius before Lord Mansfield in London, on an action for money had and received to the plaintiff's uſe, brought by the plaintiff, the inſured, againſt the defendant, the inſurer, for a reſtitution of part of the premium,

The caſe ſtated to the court was; that this was a policy of inſurance on a ſhip, at five guineas per cent. loſt or not loſt, at and from London to Hallifax in Nova Scotia, warranted to depart with convoy from Portſmouth, for the voyage; that is to ſay, with the Hallifax or Louiſburgh convoy.

Before the ſhip arrived at Portſmouth, the convoy was gone. Notice of this was immediately given by the inſured to the underwriter; and at the ſame time, he was alſo deſired either to make the long inſurance, or to return part of the premium.

The jury find, that the uſual ſettled premium from London to Portſmouth, is one, and one and an half per cent.

They find alſo, that it is uſual for the underwriter in ſuch caſes to return part of the premium; but the quantum is uncertain; (and the quantum muſt, in its nature, be uncertain; becauſe it depends on uncertain circumſtances.)

It is ſtated, that the plaintiff made the defendant an offer of allowing him to retain one, or one and an half per cent. for the riſque he had run on ſuch part of the voyage as was performed under the policy, viz. from London to Portſmouth.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, the court ordered the poſtea to be delivered to the plaintiff.

Lord Mansfield. Theſe contracts are to be taken with great latitude. The ſtrict letter of the contract is not to be ſo much regarded as the object and intention of it.

Equity implies a condition, " that the inſurer ſhall " not receive the price of running a riſque, if he runs " none."

This is a contract without any conſideration, as to the voyage from Portſmouth to Hallifax; for he intended to inſure that part of the voyage as well as the former part of it; and has not. Conſequently, the inſured received no conſideration for this proportion of his premium. And then the preſent caſe is within the general principle of actions for monies had and received to the plaintiff's uſe.

I ſhall not enter on the uſage; for it is found only, " that in ſimilar caſes it is uſual to return a part of the " premium, without aſcertaining what part."

If the riſque is not run, though it is by the neglect or even fault of the party inſuring, yet the inſurer ſhall not retain the premium.

It has been objected, " that the voyage being begun, " and part of the riſque being already run, the premium " cannot be apportioned." But I can ſee no force in this objection. This is not a contract ſo entire, that there can be no apportionment. For there are two parts in this contract, and the premium may be divided into two diſtinct parts, relative, as it were, to two voyages.

The practice ſhews, " that it has been uſual, in " ſuch like caſes, to return a part of the premium," though the quantum be not aſcertained: and indeed the quantum muſt vary, as circumſtances vary: ſo that it never can have been fixed with any preciſe exactneſs; but tho' the quantum has not been aſcertained, yet the principle is agreeable to the general ſenſe of mankind.

The court unanimouſly, ordered the poſtea to be delivered to the plaintiff. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1237.

Trinity, 3 Geo. 3. Glover v. Black.

On a caſe reſerved at the fittings at Guildhall after Michaelmas term 1762, in an action on the caſe on a policy of inſurance of goods and merchandizes, laden or to be loaden on board the Denham Captain Tryon, " at and

The plaintiff declared for a total loſs. The defendant pleaded the general iſſue. The cauſe came on to be tried on the 1ſt day of December 1762, and it appeared on evidence,

That on the 31ſt day of March 1760, the ſaid ſhip, with her lading on board her, was burnt at Fort Marlborough, and thereby all the goods and merchandizes belonging to W. T. were totally conſumed and loſt. This proof being given of the plaintiff's intereſt, the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, ſubject to the opinion of the court, “ whether on this evidence the plaintiff was entitled to recover on this policy.”

The ground of ſupporting this inſurance, if it could have been ſupported, was a clauſe of ſtat. 19 Geo. 2. c. 37. viz. the 5th ſection, which runs in theſe words, “ that all and every ſum and ſums of money to be lent on bottomree, or at reſpondentia, on any ſhip or ſhips belonging to any of his Majeſty's ſubjects, bound to or from the Eaſt Indies, ſhall be lent only on the ſhip, or on the merchandize or effects laden or to be laden on board of ſuch ſhip; and ſhall be ſo expreſſed in the condition of the bond; and the benefit of ſalvage ſhall be allowed to the lender, his agents or aſſigns, who alone ſhall have a right to make aſſurance on the money ſo lent. And no borrower of money on bottomree, or at reſpondentia as aforeſaid, ſhall recover more on any aſſurance than the value of his intereſt on the ſhip or in the merchandizes or effects laden on board of ſuch ſhip, excluſive of the money ſo borrowed: and in caſe it ſhall appear that the value of his ſhare in the ſhip, or in the merchandize or effects laden on board doth not amount to the full ſum or ſums he has borrowed as aforeſaid, ſuch borrower ſhall be reſponſible to the lender for ſo much of the money borrowed, as he has not laid out on the ſhip or merchandizes laden thereon, with lawful intereſt for the ſame, together with the aſſurances, and all other charges thereon, in the proportion the money not laid out ſhall bear to the whole money lent, notwithſtanding the ſhip and merchandizes be totally loſt.”

This ſtatute to the purpoſe of inſurance conſiders the borrower as having a right to inſure only for the ſurplus value, over and above the money he has borrowed on bottomree, or at reſpondentia. And the lenders at reſpondentia or on bottomree, may, to many purpoſes, be ſaid to have a lien.

We are all very well ſatisfied, “ that this ſtatute never meant or intended to make any alteration in the manner of inſurances.”

It is eſtabliſhed now, as the law and practice of merchants, “ that reſpondentia and bottomree muſt be mentioned and ſpecified in the policy of inſurance” But he declared at the ſame time, that the court did not mean to determine generally, “ that no ſpecial intereſt in goods may be given in evidence in other caſes than thoſe of reſpondentia and bottomree, if the circumſtances of the caſe ſhall admit of it.” Therefore the plaintiff was nonſuited. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1394.

On a ſpecial caſe reſerved at niſi prius before Lord Mansfield for the opinion of the court, on an action on a policy of inſurance, brought for a total loſs of goods, and merchandizes on board the ſhip Bona Fortuna, at, and from North Bergen to any port or place whatſoever, till her ſafe arrival at the port of London.

The defendant having pleaded the general iſſue, and paid into court the premium received by him for the ſaid inſurance, iſſue was joined, and the cauſe was tried, when it was admitted, that the plaintiffs had intereſt on the ſhip to a large value, viz. to the amount of the ſum inſured.

The ſhip, with the goods and merchandizes ſo laden, and being on board her, after her departure from North Bergen, and before her arrival at London, proceeding on her voyage, was by the force of the winds and ſtormy weather wrecked; and the ſaid goods and merchandizes wholly loſt.

It was expreſsly ſtated, “ that the ſhip and merchandize, at or before the time ſhe was loſt, were not neutral property, as warranted by the ſaid policy.”

The queſtion therefore was, “ Whether the plaintiffs can, under the circumſtances of this caſe recover, in this action.”

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. 3. Wilſon v. Ducket.

On an action on a policy of inſurance of a ſhip, the plaintiff in his declaration had a count for a general indebitatus aſſumpſit for money had and received to the plaintiff's uſe; and laid his damages at 98 l.

The trial of this cauſe was had under a decree of the Court of Chancery, where the now defendant, the inſurer, being there complainant, had offered to pay back the premium, which was 10 l.

In this cauſe no money was brought into court, tho' the uſual courſe in theſe caſes is for the defendant, the inſurer, to bring the premium into court.

The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff for the 10 l. premium, on the count for money had and received to his uſe; although they were of opinion againſt the policy, on the foot of fraud; and found againſt it, as being fraudulent: in fact, the firſt underwriter was only a decoy duck, to induce other perſons to underwrite the policy; and it had been previouſly agreed between the inſured and him, “ that he ſhould not be bound by his ſigning the policy,” which this court conſidered as a fraud; and therefore, that the jury had given a right verdict in finding the policy fraudulent.

By the conſent of the court, and the council for the plaintiff and defendant, the following queſtion was ſtated for their opinion:

“ Whether on a policy of inſurance being found fraudulent, the premium ſhould be returned to the plaintiff the inſured, or retained by the defendant, the inſurer.”

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on this matter, which came on, on a rule to ſhew cauſe, the rule was made abſolute, that the verdict found for the plaintiff be vacated, and that a verdict be entered for the defendant.

Lord Mansfield ſaid, he looked on the offer made by the complainant's bill in equity to be the ſame thing as if the money had been actually brought into court in this cauſe, and therefore the rule was made abſolute. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1361.

Eaſter, 4 Geo. 3. Hodſon v. Richardſon.

There being ſeveral inſurance-cauſes in the paper on the ſame ground, the council for the plaintiffs and defendants agreed, “ that all ſhould be bound by the verdict given in one,” and accordingly a verdict was given in one of the actions for the plaintiff. The council for the defendant gave notice of motion for a new trial, and at the ſame time the plaintiff's council moved, that the reſpective defendants ſhould pay their money to the plaintiff, purſuant to their agreement, he having obtained a verdict in the cauſe already tried.

The court were clearly of opinion, that a conſent “ to be bound by a verdict in one of many cauſes on the ſame queſtion,” means ſuch a verdict as the court thinks ought to ſtand as a final determination of the matter.

In the preſent caſe a material circumſtance was concealed from the inſurer, by the inſured; and therefore the whole contract was void: and there ought to be a new trial, and the court made a rule for that purpoſe; but ordered, that nothing ſhould be taken by the motion. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1477.

On an action on the caſe brought on a policy of inſurance, for the recovery of 56 l. 19 s. 8 d. per cent. being the damage received by a cargo of wheat on board the Boſcawen, inſured at and from Lancaſter to Rotterdam: which wheat was valued by agreement at 30 s. per quarter. The policy was in the ordinary form. The premium was five guineas per cent. and in caſe of loſs, the aſſured to abate 20 per cent. and the aſſurers to be free from average under 3 l. per cent. unleſs general, or the ſhip ſhall be ſtranded.

The policy was thus underwritten:

> “N. B. Corn and fiſh are warranted free from average, unleſs general, or the ſhip be ſtranded. Sugar, tobacco, hemp, flax, hides and ſkins are warranted free from average, under 5 l. per cent. and all other goods, free from average under 3 l. per cent. unleſs general, or the ſhip be ſtranded.”

Warranted well in port the 16th of February, 1760.

The ſhip after her departure from Lancaſter, and before her arrival at Rotterdam, viz. on the 22d of February, 1760, met with a violent ſtorm, and was obliged to cut away and leave her cable and anchor, for the ſafety of the ſaid ſhip and cargo, and run into Liverpool to refit; and the expence thereof amounted to 38 l. 15 s. per cent.

The defendant pleaded the general iſſue to this action, and the cauſe was tried at Guildhall, on the 15th of February, 1764, before Lord Mansfield, when the plaintiff's caſe was reduced to this ſingle queſtion.

> Whether on the true conſtruction and meaning of the words, “free from average, unleſs general, or the ſhip be ſtranded. The plaintiffs can, under the circumſtances of this caſe, recover in this action for the damage of 56 l. 19 s. 8 d. per cent. (the expence of re-fitting amounting to 38 l. 15 s. per cent. not being diſputed.)

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, on this matter, and taking time to conſider the ſame:

Lord Mansfield, now delivered the judgment of the court to the effect following:

Policies of inſurance, according to their preſent form, are very irregular and confuſed; an ambiguity ariſes in them from their uſing words in different ſenſes; particularly in the uſe of this word average.

It is uſed to ſignify a contribution to a general loſs: and it is alſo uſed to ſignify a particular loſs.

Whether it be conſidered in one, or other of theſe ſenſes, it will not ſerve the plaintiffs in the preſent caſe: for, if it here ſignifies contribution, the inſurer is to be free from contributing, unleſs where the contribution is general. If it ſignifies loſs, then plainly it is warranted free from all particular loſſes. The inſurer is liable to all loſſes ariſing from the ſhip being ſtranded, and in all caſes where there is a general average; but all other partial loſſes are excluded by the expreſs terms of the policy.

It is clear, that the plaintiff's ought not to recover; and that the judgment ought to be for the defendant, which the court ordered accordingly. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1550.

Trinity, 4 Geo. 3. Reed v. Cole.

In an action on the caſe brought on articles of agreement, conſtituting a ſociety for the mutual aſſurance of each other's ſhips: whereby they engaged, that when and ſo often as any of the ſhips wherein any of the members property ſhould be loſt, the reſt ſhould contribute to ſuch loſs; but every member was obliged to prove a property of 500 l. in a ſhip: and if he would ceaſe to be a member he was obliged to give ſix months notice. The plaintiff ſhewed that he had the requiſite property in the ſhip, and became a member; and that the ſhip was loſt. The defendant pleaded, that the plaintiff had parted with his intereſt in the ſhip before the loſs happened. To this plea the plaintiff replied, that by articles of agreement entered into with the purchaſer of the ſhip, the plaintiff had agreed to pay 500 l. if a loſs happened within three months; and therefore he was intereſted during the voyage. To this replication the defendant demurred, and the plaintiff joined in demurrer.

After heating the arguments of the council on both ſides, the court gave judgment for the plaintiff.

The court were of opinion that as he remained contributory to the loſs of the others at the very time when this loſs happened, it was but juſt and equitable, and within the words and meaning of the agreement, that they ſhould contribute to his. He ſtill had an intereſt in the ſafety of the ſhip; he had not parted with all his intereſt in it, but continued intereſted as to this loſs.

Trinity, 5 Geo. 3. Salvador v. Hopkins. Heaton v. Rucker.

The queſtion before the court was, “whether there ſhould be new trials in theſe two particular actions on a policy of inſurance,” which had been tried before Lord Mansfield at Guildhall; and a verdict found for the plaintiff, in Mr. Salvador's caſe; and for the defendant, in Mr. Rucker's caſe.

The council for the under-writers inſiſted, that the policies were void, becauſe at the time of under-writing, “they were not expreſsly told of the new agreement to detain the ſhip in India for a year longer than the enlarged time provided for by the charter-party, which expired on the 11th day of February 1764.”

The reaſons which governed the court on granting or refuſing new trials, were: that the under-writers are bound and preſumed to know the courſe of the Eaſt India trade, the terms of the charter-party, and the deſtination of the India ſhips, (which are under the direction of the Company, and not of their owners.) That the charter-party is a printed form, of a very long ſtanding. That, beſides the liberty thereby given, “to prolong the ſhips ſtay for one year,” it is very common, by a new agreement to detain her a year longer; (for no ſhip comes home in ballaſt;) and the longer a ſhip is kept, the more beneficial it is to the owners. That the words of the policy are adapted to this uſage; being without limitation of time or place; and without any reference to the firſt voyage particularly mentioned in the charter-party. The terms of the policy preciſely deſcribe the riſque in its utmoſt latitude; and neceſſarily extend to every prolongation of ſtay, and every country voyage. And any of the defendants might have learned at the India Houſe all that was to be known.

At the time of under-writing, there was no mention made, or queſtion aſked, “when the ſhip was chartered, when ſhe ſailed from England, when ſhe arrived in India, whether ſhe was continued a year, according to the proviſo in the printed charter-party;” and yet her continuance in the Eaſt Indies depended on all theſe facts.

If theſe matters ought neceſſarily to be diſcloſed, the policy was void, to the knowledge of the under-writers, at the time they took the premium.

The chance of her ſtay is one of the riſques inſured.

The evidence given was very ſtrong, “that her ſtaying a year longer, if known, would not have varied the premium.”

None of the defendants deſired to be off, after they knew that an account of the new agreement “to prolong her ſtay for a year longer,” had been received in England on the 3d day of April 1764, which was notorious to themſelves before the intelligence of the loſs, which came the October following.

So that if there had been any force in the objection, it would have been waived by the acquieſcence of the under-writers, after they were fully apprized of the whole.

After the foregoing arguments had been offered by the council on both ſides for and againſt granting new trials in theſe cauſes, the court took time to conſider the matter,

“ That there ought to be a new trial in the caſe of “ Heaton v. Rucker, but not in that of Salvador v. Hop“ kins.”

The court thought the uſage of the Eaſt India Company's trade, and the courſe of their voyages, to be in fact ſo notorious, and ſo well known both to the inſurers and the inſured, that they muſt be ſuppoſed fully apprized and ſufficiently conuſant of it; and that the obligation of this policy is to be taken from the words of the charter-party, (which refer to the uſage) and the uſage of theſe voyages, in the ſame manner as if it was expreſsly inſerted in the policy.

They eſteemed this manner of determining the queſtion moſt convenient for all parties; becauſe whoever ſhall hereafter inſure on an Eaſt India ſhip will know that he inſures the contingencies, and may take proper precaution againſt them, if he thinks proper; and therefore, they made a rule for no new trial in Salvador v. Hopkins, and a rule for a new trial in Heaton v. Rucker. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1706.

On an action brought on a policy of inſurance for one year, viz. from the 16th of October, 1759, to the 16th of October, 1760, underwritten by Mr. Charles Boehm, of intereſt, or no intereſt, without benefit of ſalvage: for the benefit of Governor George Carter, againſt the loſs of Fort Marlborough, in the Iſland of Sumatra, in the Eaſt Indies, by its being taken by a foreign enemy. The event happened, the fort was taken by Count D'Eſtaigne within the year.

This cauſe was tried before Lord Mansfield at Guildhall; and a verdict was found for the plaintiff by a ſpecial jury of merchants.

On the 19th of April laſt, the defendant's council moved for a new trial on this objection:

On this motion the defendant obtained a rule to ſhew cauſe, and copies of the letters and depoſitions were ordered to be left with Lord Mansfield.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, and the evidence given at the trial being ſtated to the court, they diſcharged the rule.

This is a motion for a new trial. The defendant contends, “ That ſome circumſtances in the know“ ledge of Governor Carter, not having been mention“ ed at the time the policy was underwrote, amounts “ to a concealment, which ought, in law, to avoid the “ policy.”

The plaintiff inſiſts, “ That the not mentioning “ theſe particulars, does not amount to a concealment, “ which ought in law to avoid the policy; either as “ a fraud; or, as varying the contract.”

The under-writer knew the inſurance was for the Governor; he knew the Governor muſt be acquainted with the ſtate of the place; he knew the Governor could not diſcloſe it, conſiſtent with his duty; he knew the Governor, by inſuring, apprehended at leaſt the poſſibility of an attack; with this knowlege, without aſking a queſtion, he under-wrote.

By ſo doing, he took the knowledge of the ſtate of the place on himſelf; it was a matter as to which he might be informed, various ways; it was not a matter within the private knowlege of the Governor only.

But not to rely on that, the utmoſt which can be contended is, that the under-writer truſted to the fort being in the condition in which it ought to be; in like manner, as it is taken for granted, that a ſhip inſured is ſeu-worthy

There is no imputation on the Governor, as to any intention of fraud. By the ſame conveyance, which brought his orders to inſure, he wrote to the company every thing which he knew or ſuſpected; he deſired nothing to be kept a ſecret, which he wrote either to them or to his brother. His ſubſequent conduct, down to the 8th of February, 1760, ſhewed that he thought the danger very improbable.

If the defendant's objections were to prevail in the preſent caſe, the rule would be turned into an inſtrument of fraud.

The under-writer, here, knowing the Governor to be acquainted with the ſtate of the place; knowing that he apprehended danger, and muſt have ſome ground for his apprehenſion; being told nothing of either; ſigned this policy, without aſking a queſtion.

If the objection, “ That he was not told,” is ſufficient to vacate it, he took the premium, knowing the policy to be void; in order to gain, if the alternative turned out one way; and to make no ſatisfaction, if it turned out the other: he drew the Governor into a falſe confidence, that if the worſt ſhould happen, he had provided againſt total ruin;” knowing, at the ſame time, “ that the indemnity to which the Governor “ truſted was void.” If he thought that omiſſion an objection, at the time, he ought not to have ſigned the policy, with a ſecret reſerve in his own mind to make it void; if he diſpenſed with the information, and did not think this ſilence an objection then, he cannot take it up now, after the event.

On the whole ſtate of the caſe, and on the fulleſt deliberation, we are all clear, that the verdict is well founded; and there ought not to be a new trial; conſequently, that the rule for that purpoſe ought to be diſcharged; which was diſcharged accordingly. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1905.

Intendment,

Eaſter, 6 W. & M. Reeve v. Long. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in the C. B. in ejectment for lands in Milkſham in the county of Wilts, in which there was a ſpecial verdict found to this effect, viz. that John Long, Eſq; was ſeiſed of the lands, &c. in fee, who by his laſt will, dated the 20th day of July 1676, did deviſe the ſame to his nephew Henry Long (the eldeſt ſon of his brother Richard Long) for life, and after his deceaſe to the firſt ſon of the body of ſuch firſt ſon lawfully iſſuing, and for default of ſuch iſſue, to the ſecond, third, fourth, and fifth, &c. and every other ſon of the body of the ſaid Henry Long, lawfully to be begotten, ſucceſſively one after another, and to the heirs male of their reſpective bodies; and for default of ſuch iſſue, to Richard Long for life, and after his deceaſe to his firſt, ſecond, and third, &c. and every other ſon, as above; with divers remainders over.

John Long died, and Henry entered, who had iſſue one daughter, and about Lady-Day 1687, died, leaving his wife enceinte with a ſon, who was born about ſix months after the death of his father. But on the death of Henry without iſſue male, Richard Long being the next in remainder, entered, &c. and afterwards the poſthumous ſon by his guardian entered on him, and thereon Richard brought this ejectment, and had judgment in the C. B. on which judgment error was brought here. It was inſiſted that Henry, the after-born ſon, is heir at law, and if this will had not been made, he would have inherited; and therefore the intention of the teſtator muſt be very clear in the will itſelf to diſinherit this heir, otherwiſe he muſt not be defeated of the eſtate.

But his intention appears to be of another nature; for throughout every paragraph of the will it is plainly to be collected, that he intended his land ſhould go and be continued in the heirs male of his family ſucceſſively.

This muſt therefore be an executory deviſe, and not a contingent remainder; and the rather, becauſe it is in the caſe of a will, by which eſtates paſs otherwiſe than by conveyances at the common law; and the law will not ſuffer this to be conſtrued a contingent remainder; becauſe that would be to diſinherit an heir on a nicety, againſt the plain intention of the teſtator.

That intentions govern in wills many authorities, may be cited, viz. If the father having three ſons, deviſes his land to his eldeſt ſon in tail, remainder to his ſecond ſon in like manner, remainder to his third ſon in fee, and the eldeſt ſon happens to die in the lifetime of his father, leaving iſſue, it has been held, that ſuch iſſue ſhall inherit without a new publication of the will, becauſe it was not the intention of the father to diſinherit him.

If therefore this is a ſpringing remainder, then the freehold ſhall veſt in Richard till the ſon of Henry was born, then it ſhall veſt in him; and to prove it to be a ſpringing remainder, or executory deviſe, the caſe of Pell v. Brown was cited.

On the other ſide it was argued, that this is a contingent remainder, for if it ſhould be an executory deviſe, then a perpetuity would be introduced, becauſe if it is executory in one, it may be ſo in all the deviſes; and therefore it would be againſt the known principles of law to make it an executory deviſe, eſpecially in this caſe, where the teſtator was not ſure that Henry Long would have a ſon; ſo that it is a plain contingency, which not happening in time, nothing remains in him to make it executory.

There are two things to make a deviſe executory, viz. it muſt be limited on an eſtate in fee-ſimple, and it ought to be limited on a condition, both which are wanting in this caſe; neither can any remainder be executory where there is a particular eſtate to ſupport it.

Accordingly the judgment in the C. B. was affirmed, but in Michaelmas term following it was reverſed in the Houſe of Peers. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 282.

Hilary, 4 Ann. Vaughan v. Lucking.

In an action on the caſe; the plaintiff declared, that the defendant was paymaſter of ——— and in conſideration of, &c. promiſed the plaintiff, that he ſhould be his clerk, ſo long as the defendant ſhould be paymaſter; and avers, that he the plaintiff continued to ſerve him in his ſervice aforeſaid, till ſuch a time; and then the defendant diſmiſſed him from his ſervice. After a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the plaintiff had not averred that the defendant continued paymaſter at the time he turned the plaintiff out of his ſervice, and conſequently the plaintiff had not ſet out a good cauſe of action; for the defendant was to continue the plaintiff his clerk only ſo long as he the defendant continued paymaſter.

But it was anſwered, and reſolved by the court, that it was averred in the declaration, that the defendant was once paymaſter; and he ſhould be intended to continue ſo, unleſs the contrary did appear; and that it was ſaid, that the defendant diſmiſſed the plaintiff from his ſervice, which could not be, if the defendant was not paymaſter. But to that anſwer it was objected for the defendant, that it was from his ſervice generally, and not from his aforeſaid ſervice, and ſo might be ſome other ſervice.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, obſerved, that there was no other ſervice mentioned, and it would be a foreign intendment to intend any other. Accordingly judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1222.

In an action of treſpaſs and falſe impriſonment againſt two, who both plead jointly, there was a judgment againſt the plaintiff at the ſuit of Biron, which was afterwards ſet aſide by the court, but before it was ſet aſide, a capias ad ſatisfaciendum was proſecuted by the then plaintiff, under which he, and the other defendant, who was the officer, juſtify the impriſonment. And on demurrer it was objected, that tho' an erroneous judgment is a juſtification, yet an irregular one is not, for that is a matter in the privity of the plaintiff, or his attorney. Raym 73. The officer indeed, if he had juſtified ſeparately, might have made a better caſe than the plaintiff; but having joined with him, he muſt take the ſame fate.

Per curiam. It is a reaſonable difference in the firſt point, and like the caſe of avoiding acts done by an adminiſtrator, where the adminiſtration is revoked and not reverſed; in the caſe of error it is no fault of the party, but of the court, and therefore binds till reverſed. But as to the other point, Eyre, Juſtice, differed, for he thought the court might on theſe pleadings ſeparate the officer, ſince it appears he is juſtified in what he has done. Adjourned.

This term, it coming into the paper again, the court were of opinion, (Eyre, Juſtice, doubting) that the officer had forfeited his defence, by joining in the ſame plea with the defendant, who was plaintiff in the firſt cauſe; and cited 1 Saund. 28. 2 Cro. 27. and gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 509.

The defendant and another were partners in the trade of a brewer, and the plaintiff ſupplied them with malt, for which they neglecting to pay, the plaintiff ſued out a bill of Middleſex, and arreſted Carter, who at the return of the writ put in bail before a judge; but the other partners could never be arreſted, whereon the plaintiff, without taking any notice of the proceedings on the bill of Middleſex, takes out an original againſt both partners, and outlaws them. And now the court was moved, that the outlawry, as to Carter, might be reverſed at the plaintiff's expence, becauſe he had proceeded to an outlawry againſt one that was preſent in court.

On the motion, the court made a rule to ſhew cauſe, and ſaid it was ſuch a contempt, that they ordered an attachment niſi. And the plaintiff's council, on ſhewing cauſe, inſiſted, that the other defendant not appearing on the bill of Middleſex, it was impoſſible for the plaintiff to proceed on it with any effect: and as to taking out the original againſt both, that was neceſſary, becauſe it was a joint contract.

Per curiam. Though you could not proceed on the bill of Middleſex, and though it was neceſſary to join the other, who could not be arreſted with the defendant in the ſame original, yet you could not go on to an outlawry againſt him: you ſhould have outlawed one only, and then you might have come and declared on the original, that Carter, together with A. B. his late partner, aſſumed on himſelf; but the proceeding here is altogether irregular, becauſe the party was in court, and had done every thing in his power to put the plaintiff in a fair way of recovering his debt: he could not appear, or file bail for the other partner, becauſe an action would lie againſt him for doing it without authority. The court ordered the outlawry to be reverſed, and the plaintiff to pay coſts, on the defendant Carter's appearing to the original, and diſcharged the attachment. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 473.

The plaintiff's brought an action of treſpaſs againſt the defendants, and declared, for that whereas the defendants on the 24th day of May, 8 Geo. at Igſham in Kent, the cloſe, houſe, and barn, of him the ſaid W. M. broke and entered, and divers goods and chattels, the property of him the ſaid W. M. and R. G. viz. one cow, and ſeveral other goods, particularly mentioned in the declaration, then and there took and carried away, &c. On not guilty pleaded, the jury found a verdict for the plaintiffs againſt all the defendants, and gave them 20 l. 9*s.* damages, beſides coſts. A motion was made in arreſt of judgment, that the two plaintiff's had joined in an action of treſpaſs, for breaking and entering the cloſe, houſe, and barn, to which one of them, viz. R. G had no title; and by conſequence, if judgment ſhould be given for the plaintiffs, G. would recover damages for breaking the houſe, &c. to which he has no right, and had ſuſtained no damage by the breaking and entering thereof. Of which opinion, Pratt, Chief Juſtice, and the other judges, ſeemed to be, and therefore a rule was made to ſtay judgment, till it was moved by the plaintiffs. And it being moved again, the court were of their former opinion, therefore the judgment was arreſted abſolutely. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1381.

If the verdict had been found for the defendant, and judgment given accordingly, all had been right; for payment on the 20th, is payment on the 21ſt, and ſo on; but now the verdict is found for plaintiff, the iſſue is immaterial; for non-payment on the 20th, can be no evidence of non-payment on the 25th, for it might be paid in the mean time. 2 Cro. 434. *Cro. Michaelmas, 10 Geo. 2. Hill v. Fleming and others.

An action of aſſault was brought againſt three defendants, two of them came in and confeſſed the action, and the other pleaded in this manner: and the ſaid defendant J. F. comes and defends the force, &c. and ſays, that the ſaid J. F. and H. (one of the other two defendants) is not guilty of the aſſault, on which iſſue was joined; and the jury found, that the ſaid J. F. was guilty of the aſſault in manner and form, as the plaintiff had declared; and aſſeſſed damages.

It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that this was an immaterial iſſue, and on ſuch an iſſue the jury cannot aſſeſs damages. 1 Salk. 173.

Lord Hardwicke. This is not an immaterial, but an informal iſſue, and as this verdict has been found, it is well enough; it is good either by rejecting the words which ſhould not have been in the plea, or by not rejecting them; for according to the rules for rejecting words, theſe may be rejected, as being repugnant to the other part of the record which went before, and to the verdict which follows them; and therefore as not applicable to the perſon that pleads, nor to the verb which is in the ſingular number; but without rejecting them, the verdict here being found for the plaintiff, it will be well, if this be only bad Engliſh, it will be helped as bad Latin would have been. Where ſeveral defendants plead not guilty, they ſay in general, they are not guilty, and they do not ſay, that they nor each of them are not, nor is guilty; and yet that general expreſſion refers to each of them ſeverally, and is therefore of the ſame import as ſuch a particular plea would be; and if this plea had been ſo ſeveral and particular, that would be a good plea for the defendant; becauſe it is a denial for himſelf, tho' the reſt of the plea as to the other had been ſurpluſage: this iſſue muſt therefore be taken in the ſame manner. But however, the verdict being found for the plaintiff, makes it a good iſſue, though it might have been an immaterial iſſue if found for the defendant; as where a defendant pleads payment before the day, if the verdict is for the defendant, the iſſue will be good; but if the verdict is for the plaintiff, the iſſue is then immaterial; becauſe there then appears no breach, whereas, if found for the defendant, it is a diſcharge, and therefore good; and ſo was Nicholl's caſe. 5 Co. 43. and here if the verdict had been, that all the defendants were not guilty, then the iſſue would have been immaterial; but as it is, it is well enough.

Lee, Juſtice. An immaterial iſſue is, when an iſſue is joined on a fact which does not tend to the determination of the diſpute between the parties; but though there might be a plea which would be bad on demurrer for that reaſon, yet if iſſue is taken on it, the verdict may fix the fact for one of the parties, ſo as to ſettle the diſpute. The moſt that can be ſaid in this caſe is, that the plaintiff has joined iſſue informerly. Therefore the rule for ſtaying the proceedings was diſcharged. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 341.

Michaelmas, 6 Geo. 3. Harvey v. Peake.

" And the aforeſaid A. P. likewiſe," which was a repetition of the ſame name, viz. that of the defendant, inſtead of ſaying, " And the aforeſaid (the " plaintiff) likewiſe;" ſo that in effect, the party has joined iſſue with himſelf.

Lord Mansfield recommended it to the defendant's council to drop this objection to the want of joining iſſue, and to rely on his other objections in arreſt of judgment, but at another day the defendant cauſed this matter to be moved again, obſerving, that this was the plaintiff's miſtake, and not the defendants, and cited Comyns 376, Walker v. Leſter, and 2 Stra. 1117, Heath v. Walker to prove it fatal.

Lord Mansfield being abſent, three judges overruled this motion, and ordered the rule to ſhew cauſe (why the judgment ſhould not be arreſted) to be diſcharged. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1793.

Eaſter, 1 W. & M. Oviat v. Vyner.

Adjudged, that on a fieri facias where all the money is not levied, that the writ muſt be returned before a ſecond execution can be taken out, for that muſt be grounded on the firſt writ, and recite that all the money was not levied on the firſt; but if on the firſt all the money had been levied, the writ need not have been returned, for no farther proceſs was neceſſary. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 316.

On a judgment obtained by the plaintiff againſt the defendant, on a bond, and that by virtue thereof he had levied part of his debt on ſome of his cattle, and ſold them.

This judgment was afterwards ſet aſide, and it was moved that ſince reſtitution was awarded to the defendant, that the money for which they were actually ſold, might be brought into court for the benefit of the defendant, who was then a priſoner in the K. B. This being diſallowed, the plaintiff offered to pay the defendant as much money as the cattle was ſold for; but that was denied, becauſe they might be ſold for leſs than they were really worth; and if the defendant brings his action of treſpaſs, he will recover the full value, and therefore the plaintiff muſt agree with him to prevent ſuch an action. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 161. Salk. vol. 3. p. 214.

Trinity, 5 W. & M. Clerk v. Rowland.

On a writ of inquiry, either on demurrer or judgment by default, executed the laſt day of term, the plaintiff may enter judgment the fifth day after, and not before; ſo where there is a verdict there muſt be four days between the verdict and the judgment; not that in all caſes there can be a motion in arreſt, as in the principal caſe, where the verdict or inqueſt is the laſt day of the term; but ſtill there may be a writ of error, and the time is allowed for this purpoſe; and therefore after verdict or a writ of inquiry, the courſe is, for the plaintiff to give a rule to enable him to enter his judgment unleſs cauſe ſhewn, and in the principal caſe, execution was ſet aſide, becauſe it was ſued out on the fourth day after the term, the writ of inquiry being executed and returned the laſt day. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 399.

Hilary, 6 W. & M. Banbury's Caſe.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Every judgment muſt not only be complete, but alſo formal, therefore if a quo warranto is brought againſt the defendant for uſurping royal franchiſes, and the court ſhould give judgment that he has no title, yet unleſs they go on and ſay, who from hence be excluded, it is ill; ſo in debt on a bond, if the defendant pleads auterfoits acquit in an action on the ſame bond, and the judgment was, that he (the defendant) ſhould recover damages, and that he go hence without a day, that is naught without ſaying further, that the plaintiff take nothing by his bill, becauſe diſmiſſion is no judgment in a court of law: and if an action of treſpaſs is brought for a treſpaſs done in lands belonging to ſuch a houſe, yet the court cannot give judgment to turn him out, becauſe it was not judicially before them. Vide Salk. vol. 3. page 213.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, that if the defendant is arreſted, and in execution, and one becomes bound for him to the plaintiff, and the defendant gives him judgment for his counter ſecurity, it is good, though his attorney is not preſent, and it is not within the common rule of the court, becauſe it was not given to the perſon himſelf, (in which caſe there muſt be an attorney preſent) but to a third perſon. *Vide Mod. Eaſter, 8 W. 3. Mackareth v. Pollard.

In an action of treſpaſs for taking an horſe, the defendant juſtified under a judgment recovered againſt the plaintiff in the hundred court, by a taliter proceſſum, and did not ſet out the proceedings at large; and it was adjudged good, notwithſtanding the old books are to the contrary, on the authority of the caſe of Doe v. Pormiter, Hilary 24 & 25 Car. 2. adjudged in point in this court in the time of Lord Hale, on great debate. Eaſter, 8 W. 3. Standford or Standfaſt, v. Chamberlaine.

In ejectment tried at the aſſizes, and a verdict for the plaintiff, it was urged, that the judgment ought not to be ſigned till the rules were out, which will be in four days after the poſtea is returned, which in this caſe was on the 6th of May. The plaintiff got his judgment ſigned on the very day, but it was not executed till after the ſixth day; ſo that the defendant had time enough to bring a writ of error, or move any thing in arreſt of judgment. But the court held, that the ſigning the judgment was irregular, it being before the day allowed by the rules of the court; and tho' it was taken out afterwards, that was not material; therefore the judgment was ſet aſide, and the party had reſtitution. *Vide Mod. Trinity, 8 W. 3. Jones v. Bodeener.

In an action of treſpaſs for breaking the plaintiff's cloſe, and taking his cattle in Blackacre; the defendant pleaded, that the plaintiff was outlawed in an action of debt at the ſuit of J. S. on which a capias utlegatum iſſued againſt the plaintiff, and a levari facias, teſted Hilary 6 W. & M. iſſued out of the Exchequer, directed to the ſheriff of N. commanding him to levy the iſſues and profits of the plaintiff's lands to the uſe of the King, that this writ was delivered to the ſheriff at A. on which the ſheriff made his warrant, directed to the defendant, his bailiff, by virtue whereof the defendant entered into B. being the plaintiff's land, and took there the cattle. On which the plaintiff replied, that the defendant took the plaintiff's cattle at O. abſque hoc, that he took them at B. and iſſue being joined on this, a verdict was found for the plaintiff. On which the court was moved that no judgment could be given on this verdict, for if there is no matter of bar in a plea, and iſſue is joined thereon, it is void, and not aided by the ſtatutes of jeofails. But if a plea contains matter of bar, and iſſue is joined on a thing not material, this is aided by ſtat. 32 Hen. 8. c. 30. 3 Cro. 227. Lovelace v. Grimſtone, 259. Gurney v. Sir Edw. Clare. Now here the matter of the plea is merely frivolous, becauſe the Queen died before Hilary the 6th came.

Per curiam. Judgment muſt be given for the plaintiff on the confeſſion, and not on the verdict; and a new writ of inquiry muſt be awarded for the damages; for the iſſue being perfectly immaterial (for it cannot be a taking at O. by virtue of an impoſſible writ) the jury could not give damages. Therefore the verdict was ſet aſide, and judgment was entered for the plaintiff on the confeſſion of the defendant, who had admitted the treſpaſs. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 90.

A. and B. had each a ſeveral judgment againſt C. A. ſues out a fi. fa. and delivers it to the ſheriff about nine in the morning to be executed. Afterwards, about ten o'clock, B. ſues out a fi. fa. and brings it to the ſheriff forthwith, and deſires it may be executed; accordingly the ſheriff executes the laſt fi. fa. and after that executes the firſt fi. fa. and takes the ſame goods again that were taken on B's execution. And on this the firſt vendee brought trover againſt the ſecond vendee, and the ſheriff: and it was held by the court, that as the goods were bound from the day of the teſte of the writ at common law, ſo now by ſtat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. they are bound from the day of the delivery: but at common law, if two writs had been of the ſame teſte, the ſheriff was bound to execute that firſt, which was firſt delivered. By the ſame reaſon, if two writs of fieri facias come to the ſheriff in one day, he ought to execute that writ firſt which came to hand firſt, for he has no election: and in this caſe there is a prius and poſterius in the ſame day. In conſequence the ſheriff makes himſelf liable for executing the writ firſt, that came laſt, and muſt anſwer for it to the party that brought the firſt writ, who may bring an action againſt him; but the execution ſhall ſtand good: judgment for the plaintiff. It would have been otherwiſe, had he delivered his writ, but bade the ſheriff ſtay execution till another day.

N. B. The caſe was here, that he who brought the firſt fi. fa. told the ſheriff he was not in haſte, ſo took out no warrant, nor left any fee; and this inclined the opinion of the court more ſtrongly againſt him. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 320. *Mod. Trinity, 10 W. 3. Pullen v. Purbeck or Birbeck.

The plaintiff having recovered judgment againſt the defendant for ——— he ſued out an elegit, commanding the ſheriff to deliver all the goods and chattels of the defendant, and the moiety of his lands to the plaintiff. To which writ the ſheriff returned, that he had delivered goods to the value of 160 l. to the plaintiff; and that the inquiſition found, that the defendant was ſeiſed of two farms, the one of 60 l. per ann. and the other of 40 l. and that he had extended the one farm of 60 l. per ann. being an entire moiety. And now it was moved at bar, that the court would quaſh this elegit, and grant a new writ; becauſe it appeared, that the ſheriff had extended more than a moiety. And it was argued, that if the plaintiff comes in at the return of the elegit, and ſhews to the court, that there was partiality in the execution of the writ, the court will award a new writ, and entry ſhall be made that the ſheriff has not returned the writ. Townſh. Judgment, 259. 3 Keb. 313.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a writ of elegit is awarded, and it appears to the court, that the ſheriff has not executed it; the court will award a new writ, and ſet aſide the old writ. But an elegit differs from a fieri facias as to goods, though it has been ſaid, that an elegit as to goods, is but a fi. fa. For on an elegit, the ſheriff may deliver the goods to the party, but not on a fieri facias. If this motion had been made in the ſame term in which the return was filed, the court might have quaſhed it; but as ſeven years have elapſed ſince, the court will not intermeddle. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 346.

A motion was made to ſet aſide an execution on a judgment, on ſuggeſtion of an agreement between the parties, made after the judgment given, viz. that the judgment ſhould be on ſuch and ſuch terms.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Where a judgment is confeſſed on terms, it being in effect but a conditional judgment, the court will interfere, and ſee the terms performed: but where a judgment is acknowledged abſolutely, and a ſubſequent agreement made, this does no way affect the judgment, and the court will take no notice of it, but put the party to his action on the agreement; and in this caſe the agreement being only under their hands, it is no ground for an audita querela; and the court cannot hold plea of agreement on a motion. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 401. Ibid. vol. 3. p 214.

In this caſe it was held, that a judgment by nihil dicit is, where one is in court, and required to make anſwer to what is objected againſt him, but is ſilent and ſays nothing in his defence.

There is likewiſe a judgment for departing in deſpite of the court, and that is where the party appears, and being to attend that day, goes out of the court without leave of the court, as in common recoveries where the common vouchee comes in and pleads nul tort, nul diſſeiſin, and then the demandant imparls generally, and not to a day certain; and for that reaſon the vouchee is ſtill obliged to attend the court, but does not; then the entry is, poſtea eodem die revenit i. e. afterwards on the ſame day came the demandant, and becauſe the vouchee is not there but is departed; therefore the demandant has judgment.

And laſtly, there is a judgment by default, and that is where the party has a day certain, and is demandable, and being demanded does not appear, whereon judgment is given him by default; and theſe are diſtinct judgments, which cannot be uſed the one for the other. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 213.

When once a thing is made a concilium, one cannot enter judgment, or make any other alteration, without leave of the court: and the caſe of Croſgate v. Green was quoted; where two breaches were aſſigned in covenant, and an anſwer only to one of them, and for that a demurrer; but before it was put in the paper, judgment was by nihil dicit entered on that which was not anſwered, and held well; and all the difference between that and this caſe is, that here it is made a concilium, and yet judgment by nil dicit entered without leave of the court. It being again moved by the Attorney General, who ſeemed to ſatisfy the court, that the judgment might be well entered for that part of the declaration which was not anſwered in the ſame term, though it was pretended to be a diſcontinuance, yet becauſe they had entered it up without coming to the ſecondary, which is irregular it being a judgment for want of a plea, the judgment was ſet aſide. *Vide Mod. A capias was returnable the 1ſt day of Hilary term, and in the afternoon of that day a writ of error was brought returnable in the Exchequer Chamber the next day.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. It has been a difficult queſtion, whether the ſuing out the writ, or the notice thereof to the plaintiff or his attorney, were what ſuperſeded the execution; if the writ is teſted after the return of the capias, it does not ſuperſede it; if a capias is out, and execution thereon, and then the writ of error, it ſhall not diſcharge the execution. The ancient opinion was, that a writ of error is a ſuperſedeas from the actual purchaſing of the writ, but that the party ſhall not be puniſhed for executing his judgment till notice, but that ſtill it avoided the execution. And if a capias be taken out and executed within four days after the return of the poſtea, it is well; otherwiſe, if taken out within the four days, and executed after; the roll muſt be made up in vacation before the execution is executed. Eaſter, 13 W. 3. Walker v. Humphry.

A fieri facias was taken out in Hilary term, returnable in three weeks of Michaelmas. The court being acquainted with it; ordered they ſhould ſhew cauſe why it ſhould not be ſuperſeded; for this would take away all renewal of proceſs.

Per curiam. A capias or other proceſs muſt have continuances, and for that reaſon muſt be from term to term; but writs of execution need none, and for that reaſon may have a longer return. Vide Mod. vol. 12. p. 506.

Trinity, 13 W. 3. Redmond v. Joſeph.

On debt brought on a judgment, the defendant pleads in bar, that a capias ad ſatisfaciend. was taken out againſt him at ſuch a time, by virtue whereof he was taken in execution; and that the ſaid capias was returned on record, but did not aver that the execution continued, or that the debt was paid; and on demurrer, Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, if he was once in execution, it muſt be intended he continues ſo, if he has not paid the money; for if he has eſcaped, the plaintiff ſhould reply that of his ſide, for this is a plea in bar, and good to common intent; and he quoted two caſes, where he had known eſcape replied to ſuch a plea; and a taking in execution is a bar to all other remedies while it laſts, and we cannot intend an eſcape. And here if he had averred the continuance in execution, if they cannot traverſe it on the plaintiff's ſide, what does his averment of it avail them? And if he is not in execution, but eſcaped, they may reply it. And the writ iſſued out is not of record till it is returned, though the execution is good before any return. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 541.

Michaelmas, 13 W. 3. Parſons v. Gill.

The court was moved to refer the regularity of an execution to be examined by the maſter, &c. alledging it to be irregular for this reaſon, viz. that the writ of execution bore teſte the firſt day of Hilary term, returnable the Eaſter term following, and the judgment was of Hilary term, ſo that the writ of execution might have been ſued out before the judgment was given. Beſides, it was urged, that the judgment was ſigned after the death of the defendant, for the defendant died on the firſt of April, and the judgment was ſigned on the ſecond of April, which being before the eſſoign day of Eaſter term related to Hilary term, therefore altogether irregular.

Per curiam. The practice is always ſo, and therefore it is well enough; ſo the motion was denied.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. A render of the principal in diſcharge of his bail, is not an execution till a committitur be entered; for till then, the plaintiff has his election, whether he will have him in execution or not; but if the reddidit ſe, i. e. he has rendered himſelf, be in preſence of the plaintiff, and then he is committed, it ſhall be adjudged an execution. And a delivery to the tipſtaff is a commitment to the Marſhal, for the Marſhal is ſuppoſed to be preſent in court; and note, in an action on a judgment there muſt be a copy of the judgment, and of the commitment given in evidence. *Vide Mod. Eaſter, 1 Ann. The Queen v. Ford, et al'.

Ford and the other defendants were convicted of deer-ſtealing, according to the ſtatute, and the convictions being removed into this court by certiorari, were there confirmed. And after the confirmation, and before execution was awarded, the perſon, who was as well the informer as the owner of the deer, died; and his wife, being his adminiſtratrix, ſuggeſted his death on the roll, and that ſhe was adminiſtratrix, and on that ſued a levari facias on the ſaid convictions as aforeſaid, to levy the penalties; which were levied accordingly by the ſheriff, and diſtributed as the ſtatute directs. And now the court was moved that this execution ſhould be ſet aſide as irregularly obtained. 1. Becauſe a levari facias does not lie. 2dly. Becauſe the execution ought not to have been ſued out by the adminiſtratrix without a ſci. fac. &c.

As to the firſt objection, the whole court held, that a levari facias will lie: but they held, that this execution was irregular, becauſe in no caſe where the parties to the judgment are changed, ought execution to be ſued out without a ſci. fac. Whereon reſtitution was granted of the money levied. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 768.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. That ſhall not hinder the judgment being entered, provided it be within two terms after; and the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries only requires the time of ſigning ſhould be entered on the roll; and that is only for the benefit of purchaſers; for if judgment be ſigned in the vacation, yet it is entered as of the term before; and none but a purchaſor ſhall be admitted to ſay it was ſigned as of any other term; and it is the courſe of the court to let all things be done in the vacation, as of the term before. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 401. *Mod. Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Finn v. Hutchinſon.

On a reference to the maſter to examine the regularity of obtaining a judgment againſt the defendant, the maſter reported, that the defendant was in priſon in the goal of the town of Newcaſtle at the ſuit of J. N. and during his confinement there, he at the requeſt of the plaintiff, but voluntarily, gave a warrant of attorney to the plaintiff to enter up judgment againſt him in this court, for a debt owing by him to the plaintiff; but at the time of the delivery of the warrant of attorney, the defendant's attorney was not preſent. And whether this was cauſe to ſet aſide the judgment entered on the ſaid warrant, after execution entered on it a year before, was the queſtion.

Per curiam. The defendant not being then in priſon at the plaintiff's ſuit, might very well give ſuch warrant in the abſence of his own attorney. For the reaſon of the rule, that the attorney of the defendant being under confinement, ſhall be preſent, when he gives a warrant to confeſs judgment, is to avoid all practices on the part of the plaintiff, and to ſee that it is done without dureſs of impriſonment. But the ſaid cauſe fails here, where the defendant is not impriſoned at the plaintiff's ſuit, nor abuſed by any artifice uſed by him: and therefore the whole court held the judgment well given, and diſcharged the rule of reference. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 797.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. The Queen v. Lee.

The court was moved, that the defendant being in the Marſhal's cuſtody, might be charged with an excommunicato capiendo: here was an excom. cap. taken out of Chancery, and a non eſt inventus returned; it was argued, that it was to no purpoſe to take out another, when the defendant is actually in cuſtody of the officer of the court; and it was compared to the caſe of one in cuſtody on meſne proceſs, at the ſuit of A. he ſhall be charged in execution at the ſuit of B. but it was anſwered on the other ſide, that there was a great difference; for the capias on a judgment is, ſo that you have here his body at the return of the writ, and there, in a manner, the court is poſſeſſed of him, becauſe there the proceſs is to bring him hither: but on an excom. cap. to the ſheriff, the ſheriff is not to bring him here, but to keep him in goal, and he is not to bring him here but on a habeas corpus, and how can the court lay hold on one that has no day in court, and is not before it? And the court aſked if ſtat. 5 Eliz. had not been, what remedy they had: it was agreed there was none in that caſe; but the ſtatute has made this difference, for it makes the proceſs iſſuable in this court, and returnable here, but does not order the ſheriff to bring the party in, but to take him and keep him.

Holt, C. J. held, that if he was taken by an excom. cap. firſt, and brought up here by an habeas corpus to anſwer an action in this court, then he ſhould be turned over to the Marſhal, charged with the writ excom. cap. But here there is a proceſs out of this court, which gives him a day here, which the excom. cap. does not;

and the reaſon of that is, becauſe he cannot be in two ſeveral priſons at once: but here the court took till the next term to conſider the matter. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. page 114.

The plaintiff gave a bond and judgment to the defendant, with a defeaſance on payment of the money on ſuch a day certain; and it was agreed by the ſame deed between the parties, that the defendant ſhould not ſue any execution againſt the plaintiff before the 16th day of July; on the 15th of June, the defendant ſues out a fi. fac. and delivers it to the ſheriff, before the 16th of July, and gets it executed on the 16th day of July, on demand and non-payment. And the court was moved to ſet it aſide, for that the defendant, by breaking his agreement, had incapacitated the plaintiff to perform; for by the delivery of the writ to the ſheriff, the property of the plaintiff was bound; ſo that he could not ſell any of them to raiſe the money.

Per curiam. Since it is for a juſt debt, and the judgment is executed, we will not undo any thing; for perhaps that would be a means to fruſtrate the judgment; and, beſides, there is no oath that any purchaſer was deterred, by reaſon of taking out, and delivering the writ; and here the plaintiff had a good remedy, by an action of covenant

Holt, Chief Juſtice, obſerved, that a writ of audita querela would not lie in this caſe, but that would avoid the whole judgment.

A rule was made for judgment in Hilary term was twelvemonth; but coſts not being taxed, Mr. Clarke, out of kindneſs to the defendant, gave time for ſettling the coſts till Eaſter term; and before the coſts were ſettled, and the judgment entered, the plaintiff died; and in the laſt Hilary term, the attorney entered up his judgment as of Hilary term before, viz. the time that the rule was pronounced. And on motion it was ſet aſide for irregularity, and the court directed them, if they pleaſed, to enter it as of Hilary term laſt, being the term that they really had entered it, and enter their continuances till then, for the court could not take notice of the plaintiff's death.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, if one will enter a judgment as of a term, he muſt actually enter it before the Eſſoign-day of the ſucceeding term, otherwiſe it ſhall only relate to the term of which he enters it; and if judgment is ſigned in Hilary term, and in the ſubſequent vacation the defendant ſells lands, and before the Eſſoign day of Eaſter term the plaintiff enters his judgment, it ſhall affect the lands in the hands of a purchaſer; and if one enters judgment in vacation, when indeed the party was dead, if he was living in the precedent term, the judgment is good by relation. *Vide Mod. There were three executors, one of whom gave a warrant of attorney to confeſs judgment againſt himſelf and his co-executors, purſuant to which a judgment was entered againſt all the executors of the goods of the teſtator for the debt, and againſt the executor who gave the warrant of his own proper goods for the coſts.

A fieri facias was taken out within the year, and no goods returned; this was continued down for ſeveral years, and then a capias ad ſatisfaciendum iſſued. And whether this was regular or not, was the queſtion. The court took time to conſider of it, and the laſt day of the term, Pratt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, if this was a new caſe, they ſhould think it hard to take away all ſci. fa.'s. But now the practice had gone ſo far, that there was no over-turning it. 1 Inſt. 290. 4 Inſt. 271. Mod. Caſes 288. 1 Sid. 59. 1 Keb. 159. Cliſh. 840. Offic. Brevium 96. Raſtal 164. Wherefore the execution was held regular. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 100.

The plaintiff obtained judgment as of Michaelmas term generally, but was ſtopped from taking out execution by an injunction out of Chancery; which being afterwards diſſolved, he took out an execution, teſted the laſt day of the ſubſequent Michaelmas term; and whether he could do it in this caſe without a ſci. fa. was the queſtion?

And the whole court held, that the execution was irregular, as taken out after the year, for the judgment being general, has relation to the firſt day of the term, and ſo there is all Michaelmas term over and above a year. And they ſaid ſtat. Weſtm. 2. which ſays within a year muſt be computed by calendar months, and not by terms; for it was inſiſted, that taking out one term incluſive, and the other excluſive, there were but four terms.

It being thus determined, that the plaintiff was beyond the year, the next queſtion was whether the injunction operated? Which was compared to a writ of error, and it was urged, that there it had been often reſolved, that though the party had been hung up never ſo many years by a writ of error, yet there may be execution ſued out immediately without a ſci. fa.

But the court ſaid, there was a great difference between the caſe of a writ of error and an injunction; the former being a judicial proceeding, appearing to them on record, whereas an injunction is not a matter of record; ſo the court can take no notice of it. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 301.

Michaelmas, 6 Geo. Beacon v. Peck.

The plaintiff took out an elegit, and by virtue thereof levied part of the debt on the goods, and after a nihil returned, as to the lands, ſued out a capias ad ſatisfaciendum, and arreſted the body of the defendant.

The court was moved to quaſh the ca. ſa. becauſe the plaintiff, by taking out an elegit, had waived any other execution. And for this all the old caſes were cited.

But the court held the ca. ſa. was regular, for there being a nihil returned as to the lands, the elegit was but in the nature of a common fi. fa. on which if part be levied, the plaintiff may afterwards have a ca. ſa. for the remainder. The election is not compleat, unleſs the plaintiff has ſome benefit from the land; for the taking out the writ is not an actual election, but only in order to an election; and if there are no lands, there is nothing to chuſe, and conſequently no election. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 226.

Per curiam. We are all of opinion, that if the prayer of an extent into the ſecond county was entered at the time the firſt extent was taken out, the ſecond extent will be regular, otherwiſe not.

N. B. On application to the Lord Chancellor, he gave them leave to enter the prayer nunc pro tunc i. e. now for then, ſo this court made no rule, but it went off on propoſals of going to a new trial. The attorney being dead, whereby the plaintiff had loſt his remedy againſt him, and there being a decree in Chancery for the payment of the debts in a courſe of adminiſtration; the plaintiff to have the preference before the other creditors, moved the court for leave to enter up the judgment nunc pro-tunc, i. e. now for then.

The court was moved that the defendant might be diſcharged out of cuſtody, for ſince the plaintiff has choſe an elegit, be can have no other execution, becauſe he has made his election to take the elegit according to ſtat. Weſtm. 2. c. 18. Lord Hardwicke. In all caſes of warrants of attorney, as they are not adverſe cauſes, the court have ſupported theſe judgments by ſuch relation, but this is an adverſe cauſe, and ſuppoſe there had been no further time given to plead, but after the rules for pleading were out, the defendant had died, and judgment had been ſigned after his death, ſure that would not be a good judgment; for the defendant, after the rules for pleading are out, may plead at any time before judgment is ſigned, and the order for further time to plead was never intended to bind the party as if judgment had been ſigned on the day on which the rules for pleading were out; ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. will not vary the caſe at all.

Per curiam. The judgment and ſcire facias muſt be ſet aſide. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. p. 183.

The court was moved to ſet aſide a judgment, for that before the action brought the defendant had paid the debt to one A. who gave him a releaſe, and afterwards aſſigned the debt to the preſent plaintiff; but could aſſign no irregularity or ſurpriſe in the ſigning this judgment, for the defendant, inſtead of appearing and pleading the releaſe, let judgment go againſt him by default.

Lord Hardwicke. We do, ſometimes, on payment of coſts, ſet aſide judgments that are ſtrictly regular, if the judgment had been obtained by ſurpriſe, and let the parties in to try the merits, but never as this caſe is, where the judgment is regular, and no ſurpriſe, therefore the motion was denied. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. p. 157.

A ſcire facias was brought againſt the defendant as adminiſtratrix of her huſband, on a judgment for 1,500 l. and after two nihils returned, a ſcire fieri inquiry was taken out, and the defendant attended the execution of it, in order to lay the ſtate of aſſets before the jury: but the plaintiff inſiſting that the award of execution on the former writs was in point of law an evidence of aſſets, a devaſtavit was found to 1,117 l. 18 s. 1 d. In Hilary 8 Geo. 2. ſhe appeared to the ſcire fieri inquiry, and pleaded that ſhe had fully adminiſtered, and traverſed the devaſtavit. And notice of trial being given, and countermanded, and nothing further done on it; ſhe in Michaelmas 10 Geo. 2. moved to have the award of execution ſet aſide, and to be admitted to plead; it being to no purpoſe to expect relief on the trial of the traverſe; and cited Salk. 93. 264. to ſhew that where there has been no ſcire feci, and only two nihils, the court will relieve on motion, and not put the party to an audita querela; and the ſtate of the real aſſets was proved to be 130 l. which ſhe offered to deliver up, and to be examined on interrogatories, if the plaintiff was diſſatisfied with the account.

The court was inclined to relieve her: but on conſideration of her long acquieſcence, and the ſeveral ſteps taken ſubſequent to the award of execution; they thought ſhe came too late, and for that reaſon only, refuſed to interpoſe. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1075.

The great queſtion in this caſe (which came from Ireland) was, whether debt would lie there on a judgment in this court, and after two ſolemn arguments, in which the court ſtrongly inclined that it would not, a third argument was appointed; but the plaintiff in error, who was plaintiff, and had judgment againſt him below, declining any further argument, on which the judgment in Ireland was affirmed, without any opinion delivered by the court further than what was ſaid on the former arguments. Vide Strange, 2. p. 1090.

Eaſter, 11 Geo. 2. The King v. Harwood.

The defendant being a juſtice of the peace, was convicted on an information, for a conviction by him made of an ale-houſe-keeper, who was never ſummoned or heard. The court was moved, as a matter of courſe, to diſpenſe with his perſonal appearance on praying judgment. This was oppoſed, unleſs there was ſome reaſon given, or affidavit made: and on debate the court held it was not a matter of courſe, and the defendant afterwards appeared in perſon. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1088.

On the eleventh of November, about twelve o'clock at noon, a motion was made to enter up judgment on an old warrant of attorney, and an affidavit was produced, ſworn the day before, of the party's being alive, and the debt unpaid, on which the court made the common rule.

The court was moved at another day to diſcharge it on an affidavit, that the defendant died the day the firſt motion was made at ſeven o'clock in the morning: and it was inſiſted, that this was a great ſurprize on the court.

And on great debate the court declared, that if it had then appeared, that the man was dead, they would not have made the rule; but they compared it to the caſes, Salk. 82. and Fuller v. Jocelyn, vol. 2. p. 882. And thus ſuffered the deceit which had been put on them to prevail. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1081.

The defendant was indebted by bond to the plaintiff's teſtator, who died on the thirteenth of March, 1738. On making up all accounts, the defendant on the third of April, 1739, executed a warrant of attorney to confeſs judgment at the ſuit of the executor, as of laſt Hilary term, or any other ſubſequent term, and on the ſeventh of April the judgment was entered up, and the defendant's goods taken in execution. After this a commiſſion of bankruptcy iſſued againſt him. And now the aſſignees moved to ſet aſide the judgment, as being being entered of Hilary term, when the teſtator was living.

The court held it to be irregular, for the attorney could have no authority to appear in Hilary term, at the ſuit of the executor: and the judgment muſt be conſidered as of that term, though to other purpoſes the day of ſigning is material. So the judgment and execution were ſet aſide. Vide Strange, vol. 2. page 1121.

Hilary, 19 Geo. 2. Watkins v. Hanbury.

The defendant being taken on a capias ad ſatisfaciendum, paid part of the debt, and gave a warrant of attorney to confeſs a new judgment for the reſt, on time being given him to pay it. The court was moved to ſet this aſide, becauſe no attorney was preſent on the part of the defendant when the warrant was executed, according to two ſtanding rules of the court, the firſt of which indeed ſpeaking of perſons in cuſtody on arreſts, may extend only to meſne proceſs: but the ſecond is general, and relates to any ſort of cuſtody.

The court held the warrant of attorney to be well given, for the defendant had a benefit by it in gaining time, and the ſecond rule muſt be conſtrued, being in cuſtody as aforeſaid, the only intent of that being, to make it neceſſary to have an attorney on the part of the defendant, whereas under the former rule, an attorney for the plaintiff, (who was not likely to adviſe the defendant for the beſt) was ſufficient. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1245.

Hilary, 19 Geo. 2. Fitzgerald v. Plunket.

The court ſet aſide a judgment entered on a warrant of attorney given in Ireland by the defendant, while in cuſtody on a meſne proceſs at the ſuit of the plaintiff, becauſe no attorney was preſent at the giving of it, according to rule 4 Geo. 2. and ſaid that was an univerſal rule, and the plaintiff if he would make uſe of this court, muſt conform to its rules; they compared it to the caſe of ſtamping foreign deeds before they can be read here. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1247.

On an action of aſſumpſit, the defendant pleaded the general iſſue, and the ſtatute of limitations, the iſſue was found againſt him at the aſſizes; but as to the ſpecial plea, there was a replication, rejoinder, and ſur-rejoinder, to which the defendant demurred, and the plaintiff joined in demurrer. This term the plaintiff made it a concilium, and put it in the paper, and nobody appearing to ſupport the demurrer, obtained judgment.

The court was now moved to ſet this aſide as irregular, the rule for the concilium having never been ſerved, or any notice given of putting it in the paper.

But the court held it not to be irregular, and that it was the duty of the defendant to ſearch, ſince he muſt expect the plaintiff would proceed.

Then the court was moved to ſet it aſide on payment of coſts, on the ground of ſetting aſide irregular judgments.

But the court ſaid, that was never to be done, but where the defendant was to plead to the merits; not to give him the advantage of a nicety in pleading. And if there was any ground for the demurrer, (as the fact there was) he might bring a writ of error, but they would not relieve him, though he offered to waive his writ of error. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1242.

Eaſter, 31 Geo. 2. The King v. Peters and others, or Cavil v. Burnaford and others.

On a motion for a mandamus to be directed to the defendant, John Peters, the county clerk, (who was the ſteward of the court) and alſo to the free ſuitors of the county court of the county of Cornwall, commanding them to proceed to final judgment in a certain cauſe by plaint in replevin, commenced in the ſaid county court, between John Cavil, plaintiff, and John Burnaford, Anthony Pomery and Nicholas Pelyne, defendants; in which cauſe the ſaid John Cavil obtained an interlocutory judgment in the ſaid county court. A rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

1ſt, Whether the judge or ſteward of an inferior court has a right to ſet aſide interlocutory judgments regularly obtained.

2dly, Whether in this particular caſe, the ſteward of this inferior court had a right to do as he had done, and as is the practice of that inferior court.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, on ſhewing cauſe for and againſt this rule, the court diſcharged the rule.

Per curiam. We are all clearly of opinion, "That "they may ſet aſide regular interlocutory judgments, in "order to let in the merits;" both on the reaſon of the thing, and for the convenience attending it; and therefore we are unanimouſly of opinion, that a rule muſt be made, "That John Peters, the county clerk, and "the free ſuitors of the county court, ſhould ſhew "cauſe why a mandamus ſhould not iſſue, directed to "to them, commanding them to proceed to final "judgment in a certain plaint in replevin, com"menced in the ſaid county court, between John Cavil, "plaintiff, and John Burnaford, Anthony Pomery, and "Nicholas Pelyne, defendants, in which ſaid cauſe the "ſaid John Cavil obtained an interlocutory judgment in "the ſaid county court, and the preſent rule be diſ"charged." Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 568.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt ſetting aſide an execution for irregularity (which irregularity was, the ſuing out the execution above a year after the judgment obtained, without any writ of ſcire facias to revive it,) it appeared, that the whole delay had ariſen on the part of the defendants, by bills in Chancery for injunctions, and by obtaining time for payment, &c.

The court were unanimous, that the preſent rule "for reviving a judgment of above a year old, by writ "of ſcire facias, before ſuing out execution on it," which was intended to prevent ſurprize on the defendant, ought not to be taken advantage of by the defendant, who was ſo far from being ſurpriſed by the plaintiff's delay, that he himſelf had been trying all manner of methods, whereby he might delay the plaintiff; and therefore they not only diſcharged the rule, but diſcharged it with coſts. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 660.

1ſt, That to this court belongs authority not only to correct errors in judicial proceedings, but other errors and miſdemeanors tending to the oppreſſion of the ſubject.

2dly, That a college is a temporal or lay corporation of the ſame nature as an hoſpital, and the court in this caſe allowed the diſtinction in Bagge's caſe 99. b. that if a layman be patron of an hoſpital, he may viſit it, and diſpoſe or deprive, on good cauſe, the maſter; but if he deprives him without juſt cauſe, and by colour thereof the maſter be ouſted, he ſhall have an aſſize, becauſe the common-law will not permit any perſon to be aggrieved without a remedy. And for theſe reaſons they were of opinion, that they had here a juriſdiction to examine and correct the erroneous proceedings of the viſitor. The court was moved to quaſh a writ de excommunicato capiendo.

The firſt exception taken was, that the writ ſays only for defamation, but does not ſay what defamation; now there are ſome defamations that are not of ſpiritual conuſance: this objection was over-ruled by the court, who ſaid they would not preſume that any court would exceed its own juriſdiction, unleſs it appeared plainly it had done ſo.

The ſecond exception was, that the ſtanding forty days excommunicated did not appear in the writ; but not allowed.

Per curiam. The forty days are never inſerted in the writ, but in the ſignificavit only: beſides, this objection is not proper here, but in Chancery; the forty days excommunication being the very foundation on which the court grants the writ. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 71.

Trinity, 9 Geo. Cooke v. Wingfield.

There was a libel againſt the defendant for defamatory words ſpoken by him in London, and after ſentence, he moved for a prohibition, and obtained a rule that the plaintiff ſhould ſhew cauſe, &c. why a prohibition ſhould not go.

And now the cauſe ſhewn why it ſhould not go was, that it ought to appear on the face of the libel that the matter is not of ſpiritual conuſance: otherwiſe that court ſhall not be prohibited, eſpecially after ſentence; but no ſuch thing appears on this libel, for the defendant only ſuggeſts a cuſtom in London, that defamatory words ſpoken there are actionable, which ought not to be ſuggeſted, nor any thing offered in proof, which is out of the libel, eſpecially ſince the defendant has ſubmitted ſo far to the juriſdiction of the Spiritual Court, till ſentence was given againſt him.

If there had been any ſuch cuſtom, he ought to have pleaded it in bar to the juriſdiction of that court, for the courts at Weſtminſter are not officially to take judicial notice, that there is any ſuch cuſtom in London.

Per curiam. There is a difference between a motion of this kind before, and after ſentence in the Spiritual Court; for in the one caſe this cuſtom need not be proved by affidavit, becauſe it is ſufficiently known, but a judicial notice ſhall never be taken of it after ſentence; ſo the rule was diſcharged. *Vide Mod. Trinity, 11 Geo. Vaughan v. Evans.

The defendant in this cauſe brought a bill of foreclosure in the court of Grand Seſſions for the county of Montgomery againſt the plaintiff, and others, to foreclose Vaughan of his equity of redemption, on a mortgage of lands ſituate in that county. And laſt term a motion was made for a prohibition, on ſuggeſtion that the plaintiff did not dwell in that county, but lived in England, and that the defendant had ſued out proceſs, in order to get a ſequeſtration of the plaintiff's lands that lay in Montgomeryſhire. And after having heard council againſt the prohibition, the court made a rule for the prohibition abſolute, becauſe the ſuit is in nature of a ſuit in Chancery, and the proceſs is perſonal to ſummon the party; which cannot be ſerved in this caſe, the plaintiff living in England, out of the juriſdiction of the court of Grand Seſſions; and if he could not be ſerved with the proceſs, he could not be guilty of a contempt in not appearing on it; and then, by conſequence, no ſequeſtration ought to go againſt his lands, though they lie in that county. And this is the ſame caſe in effect as that in Comberbach 468. Tranter v. Duggen. And though it was objected, that the court of Chancery of England had their proceſs ſerved beyond ſea, and brought parties into contempt, and this of the Grand Seſſions was an original juriſdiction; the court ſaid, this was not to be compared to the Chancery, (if they did proceed ſo) becauſe this juriſdiction, though it was an original one, yet it was a limited one, and confined to that county. Michaelmas, 12 Geo. Snell v. Timbrell.

On a motion for a new trial, it was held, that deſiring a juror to appear in this cauſe, which was between a miller and a baker, was no ground to ſet aſide the verdict. And the court remembered the caſe of the Duke of Leeds, who wrote a letter to a juror, "deſiring "him to attend, and you will oblige your humble "ſervant, Leeds;" which was held no reaſon to ſet aſide the verdict. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 643.

A juror on the principal pannel was challenged, and afterwards ſworn on the tales by a wrong name, and though no fault was found with the verdict, yet the court granted a new trial. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 640.

In ejectment on the demiſe of Lord Gower, it was held no cauſe of challenge, that a knight was not returned on the jury, according to the caſe of Holbourn v. Kingſton in the Houſe of Lords. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1023.

Saturday 30*th*, April, 1757, being appointed by the court for a trial at bar in this cauſe, only nine of the jury appeared.

The plaintiff's council prayed a decem tales.

By the courſe of the court, this trial could not have come on again till Michaelmas term; but the court conſidering the expence and delay, ordered the decem tales to be returned the Monday following (contrary to all former practice.)

On the trial of the cauſe the plaintiff was nonſuited. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 273.

Trinity, 31 Geo. 2. Wilford v. Berkeley.

An action was brought againſt the defendant for criminal converſation with the plaintiff's wife: and the jury (a ſpecial one) had given 500 l. damages. The defendant was a clerk in the Exchequer, during pleaſure, at a ſalary of 50 l. a year, only; which was his whole ſubſiſtence.

On a motion by the defendant's council for a new trial in this cauſe for exceſſive damages, the court were unanimouſly of opinion, that although there was no doubt of the power of the court to exerciſe a proper diſcretion in ſetting aſide verdicts for exceſſive damages, in caſes where the quantum of the damage really ſuffered by the plaintiff, could be apparent, or were of ſuch a nature, that the court could properly judge of the degree of the injury, and could ſee manifeſtly, that the jury had been outrageous in giving ſuch damages as greatly exceeded the injury; yet the caſe was very different, where it depended on circumſtances which were properly and ſolely under the cognizance of the jury, and were fit to be ſubmitted to their deciſion and eſtimate. And they held the caſe of criminal converſation with another man's wife, to be of this latter kind. For the injury ſuffered by the huſband, and the eſtimate of the damages to be aſſeſſed muſt, in their nature, depend entirely on circumſtances, which it was ſtrictly and properly the province of the jury to judge of: and in the preſent caſe, the court could not ſay, that 500 l. was too much; or that 50 l. would have been too litle; therefore the motion was denied. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 609.

Michaelmas, 6 W. & M. Crump v. Halford.

On an action of treſpaſs for taking and detaining a ſilver tankard, the ſpecial verdict referred to the court was, that the plaintiff was a retailer of wines, and that according to ſtat. 2 W. & M. the warrant of the juſtices of peace was directed to the defendant, who by virtue thereof, levied the ſilver tankard, for which the action was now brought.

It was held, that a juſtice of peace is a treſpaſſer, if he proceeds irregularly in his office, &c. as by iſſuing a warrant to take a felon without oath made of the felony committed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 349.

Two juſtices of peace, made an order for the removal of a poor woman, from one pariſh to another. The order recited, that on complaint made to them, but did not ſay, by the churchwardens or overſeers of the poor, &c.

This exception being taken to the order, it was inſiſted at the bar, that if it is a fault, yet it was helped by the return of the order; for there the juſtices certify, that it was on complaint made to them by the churchwardens, &c. ſo that if it is defective for this omiſſion, it is helped by the return.

And as to the order itſelf, it is not neceſſary to ſet forth that the complaint was made by the churchwardens, &c. but where it is expreſsly alledged in the order, that the perſon to be removed did endeavour to ſettle himſelf in a tenement under the yearly rent of 10 l. which was not mentioned in this order, but only that he was likely to be chargeable, &c. and if ſo, then any of the pariſhioners may complain.

To which it was anſwered and reſolved by the court, that the complaint muſt be made by the public officers of the pariſh, to whom the care of the poor is intruſted by law, and without ſuch complaint the juſtices of peace have no power to remove the perſon for the reſt of the pariſh may be willing to keep him or may take ſecurity of another pariſh to indemnify them in particular from any charge which may ariſe from his poverty, and ſo they will have no reaſon to complain.

Then as to the return, it is not material to ſupport this defect; for the order itſelf is the record, and not the return of the certiorari, which cannot make a void order good, becauſe the juſtices of peace have executed their authority by ſigning the order, and therefore ſhall not ſupport this defect by any ſubſequent matter.

Another exception taken to this order was, viz. that it was not alledged the perſon came to ſettle in a tenement, under the yearly value of 10 l.

But the court held the order to be good, notwithſtanding the exception, for of late years it is ſeldom expreſſed in orders; and becauſe the practice had been ſo, they thought fit to continue it, ſo it was quaſhed on the firſt exception. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 149.

An indictment at the ſeſſions on ſtat. 1 & 2 Ph. & M. ſet forth, that the defendants had ſold earthen ware in London againſt the form of the ſtatute, but it was quaſhed on motion, becauſe the ſtatute does not give juſtices of peace any juriſdiction to proceed in this matter at their ſeſſions, for they are not ſo much as named in the ſtat. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 149.

An order was made by two juſtices of peace to remove a poor man from Redbourne to the pariſh of St. Michael in St. Alban's; and on an appeal to the quarter ſeſſions, the order of the two juſtices was quaſhed.

Afterwards, on a certiorari brought, the ſeſſions order was quaſhed, and the firſt order was confirmed, ſo that the poor man was now ſettled at St. Alban's; but of his own accord he returned to Redbourne, and the juſtices conceived that they had not any power to ſend him to the houſe of correction for returning as aforeſaid, becauſe they were of opinion that the firſt order was not before them, being removed by certiorari.

Therefore a motion was made that the court would grant a rule to enforce the execution of the former rule made in this caſe, by which the ſeſſions order was quaſhed, and the order of the two juſtices confirmed.

But the court directed that the juſtices ſhould have the former rule of court ſhewn to them, and the order of the two juſtices, and if they refuſed to puniſh the perſon afterwards, then to move the court on an affidavit of the matter. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 163.

The following exceptions were taken to an order made by two juſtices of the peaſe concerning the removal of a poor woman from Troubridge to Weſton.

1ſt. That the order did not affirm that the place to which ſhe was removed was the place of her laſt legal ſettlement; it is only ſaid by the juſtices, Whereas we are credibly informed, &c. it ſhould have been on oath, and being a judgment, ought to be poſitive and certain.

But this order being confirmed on an appeal, the court held that to be a void exception, otherwiſe it had been good.

2dly. It does not appear that the firſt order was made by two juſtices of the peace of the diviſion, where the perſon was likely to be chargeable to the pariſh; and this was held by the court to be a good exception. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 325.

By ſtat. 14 Car. 2. cap. 12. it is enacted, "That " on the complaint of the churchwardens and overſeers
" of the poor to any juſtices of the peace within forty
" days after any perſon comes to ſettle himſelf in a tene-
" ment under the yearly value of 10 l. that two juſtices
" of peace (one to be of the quorum) of that diviſion,
" where ſuch perſon is likely to become chargeable to
" the pariſh, by warrant may remove him to the pariſh
" where he was laſt legally ſettled; provided he thinks
" himſelf aggrieved by the judgment of the two juſtices,
" then he may appeal to the next quarter ſeſſions, who
" are required to do juſtice according to the merits of
" the caſe."

Two juſtices, by a warrant under their hands and ſeals, removed a poor man from the pariſh of Woaking to Haſwell; whereon an appeal is brought, and the ſeſſions order was, that the warrant of the two juſtices ſhould be ſuperſeded, and that the party ſhould be carried back to Woaking.

Which order being removed by certiorari, exceptions were taken to it, that the juſtices in their ſeſſions had no power to ſuperſede the warrant made by the two juſtices, becauſe they had only power to quaſh or affirm it; and the word ſuperſedeas is properly applicable to proceſs before judgment, and not to the judgment itſelf: as if a man is in cuſtody on a writ, and then comes a ſuperſedeas to the writ, the priſoner is thereby diſcharged.

The court were of opinion, that the word ſuperſeded was not a proper word in this caſe, yet would not quaſh the order, but referred the matter to the judges of aſſize. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 208.

An order was made by two juſtices of the peace to remove a poor man from the pariſh of Chidingfold to Penſhurſt, which order was confirmed on an appeal.

A motion was made to quaſh the firſt order; 1ſt. Becauſe it did not ſhew that the man occupied a tenement under the yearly rent of 10 l.

2dly. The ſtatute enables two juſtices of the peace to remove the party, one of whom is to be of the quorum, which word was omitted in that order.

The court diſallowed the firſt exception, which was the ſame as was formerly over-ruled in the caſe between the inhabitants of Marlborough and Wooton Rivers.

But the order was quaſhed for the other exception, the court being of opinion that two juſtices cannot remove a poor man, out of ſeſſions, unleſs one of them is of the quorum, becauſe they have a ſpecial juriſdiction given by the ſtatute, which muſt be followed. *Vide Mod. An order was made to remove a poor man from the pariſh of Walton to Cheſterfield in the county of Derby, which was likewiſe confirmed on an appeal, but the firſt order was quaſhed, becauſe it did not appear to be made by two juſtices of the peace; it was only, whereas complaint has been made to us, and ſo they did not recite their authority in the order. It is true, they were mentioned to be juſtices on the appeal, but that will not help it, for they might be ſo then, and not at the time of making the firſt order, and for this reaſon it was quaſhed. *Vide Mod. Becauſe two juſtices are directed by the ſtatute to confirm it, and not the ſeſſions.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Where authority is given to two juſtices of peace to do any act, the ſeſſions may do it in all caſes, except where an appeal is directed to the ſeſſions.

Second exception. Becauſe the conſtable had power only to charge his own pariſh, as conſtable of which he was put to this expence. And for this exception it was quaſhed.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, made a diſtinction; where ſeveral pariſhes are in one and the ſame town, ſuch an order may be good, (ſee the ſtatute which ſays pariſhes) but that not being alledged here, it cannot be intended. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 26.

The caſe on a writ of vi laica removenda was, that a perſon had forcibly ſeiſed the church, and on inquiſition the force was found: but the juſtice of peace did not preſently reſtore the poſſeſſion as he ought to have done, but had a record of it made up, and deferred the delivery of the poſſeſſion for two or three years.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, was of opinion, that on the authority in Dr. Bonham's caſe, which ſays, that the reſtitution muſt be immediately: ſo on ſtat. Hen. 6. of forcible entry, when the force is found by the inquiſition, reſtitution muſt be immediately.

Rokeby. Where an inquiſition is taken, it is ſuppoſed there is a quicker remedy, and therefore we think it is not in the power of the juſtices of the peace to defer reſtitution ſo long, the act requires it to be done forthwith, and ſo is the authority expreſsly in the latter end of Dr. Bonham's caſe; it muſt be reſtored on view.

Adjudged, That though a juſtice of peace may be a judge of who is a lewd and diſorderly perſon, and therefore if in this caſe the commitment had ſaid, that it had appeared to him, that this perſon was ſuch, his word would have been taken for it, yet when he aſſigns the reaſon of his judgment, and we find that reaſon will not maintain it, we are not to regard his judgment: and as perſons of ill behaviour are to be puniſhed, ſo great care is to be taken of the innocent.

On an appeal to the ſeſſions, they made an order, that the firſt order ſhould be quaſhed; and the party ſent to the pariſh from whence he was thereby removed. It was agreed, that the juſtices of the ſeſſions had only power to affirm or quaſh the order, but not to make a new one, but becauſe an order may be good in part, and void for another part; that part which ordered the poor man to be ſent back was quaſhed, and the reſt confirmed.

It is a rule of the court, that no order of juſtices, whereon an appeal lies, is brought here by certiorari till after the appeal; and if any is brought, that it is ſent back by procedendo; for the original order does not come up, but the tenor of it, as appears by the very words of the return. *Vide Mod. The defendants were indicted for not producing the pariſh books of rates before certain juſtices of peace appointed by the reſt to examine and make orders thereon; and for diſobeying ſuch orders; it was excepted, that this was a delegation of their authority, which they could not do; for though it was agreed, that they might appoint ſome of themſelves to examine and ſtate the matter to them, and then to make an order thereon, yet ſure they cannot delegate the power of making the order.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Juſtices of peace, in the caſe of forcible entries and detainers, ought to adjourn their courts, and give the party an opportunity to traverſe the force; or elſe the party has no remedy, but by certiorari, certiorari, and every inquiſition is traverſable by the ſtatute of Weſtminſter. But generally the juſtices inquire into the poſſeſſion only, and award reſtitution, without trying the forcible detainer or entry, on a traverſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 43.

Michaelmas, 6 Ann. The Queen v. Bonnet.

The court was moved to quaſh an order made by two juſtices of peace, becauſe the order was ſaid to be made before keepers of the peace, and juſtices, &c. and all juſtices of peace are keepers of the peace, but all keepers of the peace are not juſtices: and it was further argued, that they have been called conſervators of the peace only ſince ſtat. 34 Ed. 3. c. 1.

But the court over-ruled the objections, and adjudged the order to be good. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 141.

The inhabitants of the pariſh of St. Giles appealed to the ſeſſions on an order made for levying a poors rate, in which ſome were unequally taxed; on which the ſeſſions diſmiſſed the appeal, and ſhewed for cauſe in the order of diſmiſſion, that the court being of opinion that the appeal ſhould have been to the next quarter ſeſſions after the making the rate, and not after the taking the diſtreſs; therefore the court does diſmiſs the appeal.

And this order being removed into this court by certiorari, the council againſt the order of diſmiſſion argued that it is not neceſſary the appeal ſhould be to the next quarter ſeſſions, for there is no time limited by the act; beſides, this appeal was at the next quarter ſeſſions after the grievance.

Per curiam. This appeal need not be to the next quarter ſeſſions, but the error of the juſtices is, that they did not proceed on it when it was before them, and give judgment whether the rate was good or not: though one of the parties may have a particular appeal, yet this being a rate which they think not according to the act, they may appeal together. But it being aſſigned for a reaſon, that the appeal was not to the next quarter ſeſſions, the order of diſmiſſion was quaſhed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 259.

Michaelmas, 9 Ann. The Queen v. Yarrington.

An indictment was found at the ſeſſions of the peace for forging a letter in the name of J. S. &c. and was brought into this court by certiorari, and on motion in arreſt of judgment the court held, that no indictment lay before juſtices of peace for forgery; for their power is created by act of parliament within time of memory, and they have no other authority than what is thereby given them; and the general words of their commiſſion of all other tranſgreſſions and crimes whatſoever, muſt be underſtood of ſuch crimes as they have power over by the ſeveral ſtatutes which created or enlarged their power: ſo it is for perjury at common law; but perjury on ſtat. 5 Eliz. is indictable before the juſtices of ſeſſions, becauſe it is ſo appointed by the particular proviſion of this ſtatute. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 406.

Michaelmas, 10 Ann. The Queen v. Wooton.

Juſtices of peace have no juriſdiction to judge of wages except in caſe of huſbandmen; but yet the court, in favour of ſervants, will always, unleſs the contrary appears on the face of the order, preſume ſervants to be ſervants in huſbandry, and will admit of no collateral proof to the contrary. *Vide Mod. Trinity, 2 Geo. The Pariſh of Pancras v. The Pariſh of Rumbald in Suſſex.

An order of two juſtices iſſued for the removal of a poor perſon from the pariſh of Pancras to Rumbald. Within three days, the juſtices, reciting that they were ſurpriſed, ſuperſeded it, and commanded the church-wardens to return the former order, to be cancelled.

It was inſiſted that the juſtices could not iſſue ſuch a ſuperſedeas; and Salk. 472. was cited.

Per curiam. The ſuperſedeas is well iſſued by the juſtices, to prevent the charge of an appeal; ſo the laſt order was confirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 6.

Hilary, 3 Geo. The King v. Fox.

The defendant being Mayor of Totneſs the laſt year, was by the charter made a juſtice of peace for the following year, without whom the ſeſſions could not be held, and the court granted an information againſt him for a voluntary abſence. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 21.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. The King v. Helling.

On an indictment for not paying ſervants wages, recited an order of two juſtices, whereby it appeared that 9*l.* was due, which the defendant refuſed to pay, having had notice of the order.

It was urged for the defendant, that the order was void. It does not ſet out the labour of the ſervant, and is only generally for ſalary; the juſtices have only juriſdiction in caſe of huſbandry; and the order ought to ſhew, this was a matter within the juriſdiction.

Eyre, Juſtice. The practice is, if an order be for paying wages, it is ſuppoſed to be ſuch as the juſtices have power over.

Parker, Chief Juſtice, and Pratt, Juſtice, were of another opinion. And in Hilary term following the indictment was quaſhed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 8.

Hilary, 12 Geo. The King v. Allington, Recorder of Hertford.

There being affidavits made, that no ſummons was had in the caſe of The King v. Venables, the court granted an information againſt the juſtice who made the conviction. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 678.

The defendant Bateman being a juſtice of peace, had convicted the plaintiff for deſtroying the game, and tho' (as it was proved) the plaintiff had effects of his own, which might have been diſtrained, which were ſufficient to anſwer the penalty he had incurred, yet the defendant ſent him immediately to Bridewell, without endeavouring to levy the penalty on his goods, and an action of treſpaſs and falſe impriſonment being brought againſt Bateman for this commitment, Raymond, Chief Juſtice, was of opinion that the action was well laid.

The other defendant was the conſtable, who had executed this warrant of commitment; and as to him, it was agreed that the warrant was a ſufficient juſtification, it being a matter within the juriſdiction of the juſtice of peace: but if a juſtice of peace makes a warrant in a matter which is plainly out of his juriſdiction, ſuch warrant is no juſtification to a conſtable.

And it was agreed, that where actions of this kind are brought againſt juſtices of peace, they are obliged to ſhew the regularity of the conviction; and the informations, &c. laid before them, on which their convictions are grounded, muſt be produced and proved in court. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 710.

On a motion for an information againſt the defendant, who was a juſtice of peace, it was held, that a perſon in execution in the King's Bench may there be charged criminally by a juſtice of peace's warrant. But that no ſuch juſtice can take a priſoner of this court out of the cuſtody of the court, and ſend him to the county goal. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 828.

Trinity, 2 & 3 Geo. 2. Anonymous.

On a complaint to the juſtices of the ſeſſions againſt the clerks of the market of the county of Middleſex, the clerks produced their patent; on view of which the juſtices made an order, in which they declared, that the patent did not give the clerks any power beyond the limits of the little verge of the King's houſhold, and declared any act exerciſed without that diſtrict to be illegal; on which they made another order, that they would ſtand by the conſtable, who had refuſed to execute a warrant from the ſaid clerks, which related to their ſaid office, and the conſtable being now indicted for the ſame, the juſtices make a further order, that the treaſurer of the county ſhould ſupply the conſtable with money to defray the expence of the proſecution by the patentees: as theſe ſeveral matters were brought before the court by certiorari, the court was now moved to quaſh them.

Per curiam. Theſe matters not coming properly and judicially before the juſtices, their orders are but mere declarations of their opinion on the patent, and conſequently nullities, which by no means can affect the patentees; but if they had been indicted for extortion, or preſented, then perhaps the juſtices might have had juriſdiction, and have properly judged of the validity and extent of this patent.

It was further alledged by the council who moved to quaſh theſe orders, that the laſt order was ſuch a one as did not belong to the juſtices to make, and therefore muſt be quaſhed.

Page and Probyn, Juſtices, inclined, that though the order ſhould be found wrong, yet it ſhould be complained of by the parties aggrieved by it, and here the county alone ſeems concerned.

Raymond, Chief Juſtice. It is no matter whether the application is or is not made by the party aggrieved; we are to keep inferior juriſdictions within their bounds; and I think we ought to take notice of their acts of juriſdiction, on the information of a ſtranger, as a friend to the court; here is a record before us, and by whoſe means the ſame came here before us, we are not to examine; I do not take the patentees to be mere ſtrangers in the preſent caſe. Therefore a rule was made to ſhew cauſe why the laſt order ſhould not be quaſhed. Vide Fitz-Gibbons, p. 83.

An order of two juſtices to remove the father and three children from one pariſh to the other, in which the reſpective ages of the children was ſet forth, viz. one of ſix, another of eight, and the third of nine years of age: on appeal to the ſeſſions, the order of the two juſtices was reverſed as to the children, who were ſent back to the pariſh from whence they were ſo removed; but the order was confirmed as to the father: and the ſaid orders being now before the court by certiorari, it was moved to quaſh the order of ſeſſions, becauſe the children being of tender years ſhould have gone with the father to the place of his ſettlement.

But it was anſwered, and held by the court, that the order of ſeſſions does not ſet forth the ages of the children; and then as the juſtices have juriſdiction, it muſt be intended, that they determined right, viz. that the children were not of the ages ſet forth in the original order, though that reaſon is not given, but it would be otherwiſe if the reverſal was founded on a reaſon, not warranting the ſame: and they took a diſtinction between an order of reverſal and an order of confirmation, for this muſt be taken to purſue the original order, and to be founded on the ſame reaſons, and therefore muſt fall to the ground, if the original order be erroneous. So the order of ſeſſions was confirmed. Vide Fitz-Gibbons, p. 254.

A juſtice of peace granted his warrant directed to the defendant in theſe words, "Whereas complaint is "made to me, on the oath of John White, that William Shergold, refuſes to pay him wages; theſe are "to require you to cauſe the ſaid Shergold to appear "before me, or ſome other juſtice, to anſwer the complaint aforeſaid; and give notice to the ſaid "White, before what juſtice you appear."

On this warrant the defendant took up the plaintiff, and carried him before the juſtice, who bound him over to the ſeſſions; on whichthe plaintiff brought his action, and a caſe being made at the aſſizes, the ſame was argued in this court, and the following points reſolved.

1ſt, That though ſtat. 5 Eliz. c. 5. does not expreſsly impower juſtices to order the payment of wages; yet they have been ſo long indulged with it by the courts, under the general power of ſetting the rate, that it is not now to be diſputed.

2dly, That the juſtice has no power to grant a warrant to apprehend the party, he might have iſſued a ſummons. And that a warrant expreſsly to arreſt the party, will not juſtify the officer, there being no pretence for ſuch a juriſdiction.

3dly, That this warrant, though oddly worded, was not a warrant to arreſt the plaintiff, for the defendant might cauſe him to appear by diſtreſs, and it was not equivalent to the words bring before me. So the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1002.

Trinity, 14 Geo. 2. Talbot v. Huddle.

The queſtion in this caſe was, whether, as the city of New Sarum, had an excluſive commiſſion of the peace, the juſtices of the county of Wilts could by virtue of ſtat. 12 Car. 2. c. 23. and 15 Car. 2. c. 2. act in exciſe matters within the city.

This caſe was argued three times at bar, and this term, Lee, Chief Juſtice, delivered the reſolution of the court.

1ſt, That the Crown might grant to any city, to have juſtices of their own within themſelves, and exclude the county juſtices from intermedling in the ordinary buſineſs of a juſtice of peace. Bro. Letters Patent 111. Dalton 24. 2 Inſt. 71.

2dly, That in ſuch caſe the act of the county juſtices would be void, and not to be conſidered only as a breach of the franchiſe. 2 Inſt. 557.

3dly, That though ſtat. 12 Car. 2. gives the juriſdiction of exciſe matters to the juſtices of peace reſiding near the place where the forfeiture ſhall be made; or offence committed; yet it was never the deſign of the legiſlature to make any alteration in the reſpective juriſdiction of the juſtices, but only to veſt the exciſe juriſdiction in juſtices of counties, cities, and places, with reſpect to their ſeveral local juriſdictions within ſuch places. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1154.

Two juſtices of peace made an order of removal, which was quaſhed at the ſeſſions, becauſe one of the juſtices was an inhabitant of the pariſh from whence the pauper was removed. On debate in this court it was inſiſted, that ſtat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. gives the power to any two juſtices of peace: and ſo has been the practice. And the inſtance of corporations where there are but two juſtices of peace, or one pariſh, was inſiſted on; and beſides there lay an appeal.

But the court held, that this was a judicial act, and the party intereſted is tacitly excepted. Lord Raymond, who lived in the pariſh of Abbot's Langley, went off the bench, when one of their orders came before the court. They ſaid the practice could not overturn ſo fundamental a rule of juſtice, as that a party intereſted could not be a judge. And as to the caſe of corporations, they ſaid, that if it appeared, that there were no other juſtices, it might be allowed; to prevent a failure of juſtice; and therefore they confirmed the order of ſeſſions. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1173.

The accounts of the overſeers of Watford in Herts, having been allowed by two juſtices of peace, an appeal was lodged at the county ſeſſions, which the juſtices of peace there refuſed to proceed on, being of opinion, that as Watford was within the liberty of St. Alban's, the appeal ought to have been at the liberty ſeſſions. On this a mandamus was moved for, requiring the county juſtices to proceed. And it was inſiſted on, that by ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. all appeals muſt be at the county ſeſſions: and if the liberty could have juriſdiction, it would at moſt be only a concurrent one, and the appeal might be at the election of the party.

But on ſhewing cauſe the rule was diſcharged, on an affidavit, that in fact the juſtices of peace of the liberty do, as ſuch, conſtantly appoint the overſeers, and determine about them at their ſeſſions, without one inſtance to the contrary; which the court ſaid, was to be conſidered as explanatory of the general words in ſtat. 43 Eliz. which is now confirmed by ſtat. 17 Geo. 2. c. 28. which mentions diviſions and franchiſes who have four juſtices, and here are many more. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1222.

The defendants were indicted at Cumberland ſeſſions, for faſtening nets acroſs the river Eden, contrary to ſtat. 2 Hen. 6. c. 15. there were many exceptions taken to it, but the objection for which it was quaſhed, was, that the ſtatute gives a penalty of 100 s. but gives no juriſdiction to the ſeſſions, and they cannot have it without expreſs words, in the caſe of a new created offence. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1256.

An appeal was made to the quarter ſeſſions in Suffolk, held the 7th of April, 1746, againſt an order of removal. The ſeſſions was adjourned to the 9th of April at Woodbridge, where for want of a ſufficient number of juſtices, nothing could be done. The 11th of April, a ſeſſions was held at Ipſwich, and adjourned to the 14th at Bury, where the appeal was allowed.

The court was moved to quaſh the order of ſeſſions, as made without juriſdiction, the ſeſſions ending at Woodbridge for want of an adjournment.

And of that opinion were the court, for the words in ſtat 2 H. 5. c. 4. and more often if need be, were never conſidered as giving more than one original ſeſſions in a quarter, but only impowering adjournments. The county muſt take notice of adjournments, but are not ſuppoſed to expect a new ſeſſions till the uſual time; therefore the order of ſeſſions was quaſhed. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1263.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt quaſhing an order of ſeſſions, which (on appeal to them by the defendant) diſcharged an order of two juſtices, appointing the defendant and one B. C. to be overſeers of the pariſh of Rockbear Com. Devon:

The defendant only appealed from this order of appointment; and the ſeſſions diſcharged the ſame as to him: the words of the order were, "It appearing to "this court, &c. and alſo, &c. and that, &c. this "court does therefore vacate and make void the "ſaid warrant, as to the ſaid J. Gayer.".

On this appeal it appeared to the ſeſſions, that the defendant had ſome years been, and was at the time of the nomination, and alſo at the time of making the ſeſſions order, an acting juſtice of peace for the ſaid county, reſiding within the ſaid pariſh of Rockbear, and a ſubſtantial houſe-keeper there; and alſo a lieutenant of marines in his Majeſty's ſervice, on half pay; and that there were other ſufficient ſubſtantial houſeholders within the ſaid pariſh, for the doing ſuch office. The court, "therefore vacated and made void "the ſaid warrant, as to the ſaid J. Gayer."

After hearing the arguments of the council for and againſt quaſhing the order of ſeſſions, the court confirmed the order of ſeſſions, and quaſhed the order of the two juſtices.

Lord Mansfield. The preſent queſtion ſeems to lie in a very narrow compaſs. The ſeſſions on an appeal, have a right to exerciſe the ſame latitude of diſcretion in judging, "who are fit to be nominated overſeers," as the two juſtices had. They have given their opinion, "that Mr. Gayer was not a proper perſon to be "appointed overſeer," they are not obliged to give any reaſon for their opinion; becauſe the legiſlature has entruſted them, on an appeal, with the power or authority of appointing overſeers. If they had given no reaſon, their order had undoubtedly been good; we muſt have preſumed that they acted on proper grounds.

There was no neceſſity for appointing Mr. Gayer: the ſeſſions ſtate, "that there were other ſufficient "ſubſtantial houſeholders within the ſaid pariſh." They might think Mr. Gayer under all the circumſtances improper to be appointed; his being an acting juſtice of peace reſiding in the pariſh, and a lieutenant of marines, might be circumſtances which weighed with them among others; but it does not follow, nor is it ſaid, that for theſe reaſons they thought him exempt from ſerving the office of overſeer; and that they vacated the warrant on that account. They ſay there were other perſons qualified, ſuppoſing Mr. G. liable to ſerve the office, they might think him not ſo proper as many others. And therefore we are not obliged to ſay, "that the whole reaſon they went on is bad."

The court granted a rule for the defendant, a juſtice of peace for the county of Middleſex, to ſhew cauſe why an information ſhould not be granted againſt him, for refuſing to receive an information regularly and duly laid before him, againſt a baker for exerciſing his trade on a Sunday, contrary to ſtat. 29 Car. 2. c. 7. "for the better obſervation of the Lord's day. Mr. C——— giving it as a reaſon for his refuſal, "That the juſtices of Middleſex, and of Weſtminſter had come to ſuch an agreement amongſt themſelves, not to receive ſuch informations.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, on ſhewing cauſe for and againſt this rule, the court diſcharged the ſame with coſts.

Lord Mansfield. The complaint now appears to have been founded on a miſrepreſentation of the fact: for the affidavit charges this juſtice of the peace to have refuſed receiving the information; and that he told them the juſtices had come to an agreement "not to grant warrants againſt perſons for baking on a Sunday," whereas it now appears that he did hear the charge; and that it was not baking in general on a Sunday; but baking pies, puddings, and meat for dinner; not ſaying a word about bread, which is the buſineſs of a baker's ordinary calling. And he told them, "That this ſort of baking or dreſſing meat on a Sunday was not, in his opinion, and in the opinion of the reſt of the juſtices, an offence within the ſtatute." I am not ſatisfied that their opinion was wrong. And if he really judged it not to be within the proviſion of any law, and had conſulted his brethren, who thought ſo too, the court would never grant an information againſt him, even tho' ſuch an opinion had been erroneous.

On ſhewing cauſe why an order of ſeſſions ſhould not be quaſhed: this order was originally made at the quarter ſeſſions for the borough of Portſmouth; and purported to be an order made on the appeal of the preſent overſeers of the poor of the pariſh of Portſmouth, directing their predeceſſors, the late overſeers, to pay over to the appellants, the preſent overſeers, the balance of their accounts; which accounts were ſettled and balanced by the ſaid order of ſeſſions.

There were four exceptions taken to the order, but the court quaſhed the ſame on the firſt exception, which was as follows:

1ſt Exception. That the ſeſſions had not power to make an order on late overſeers to pay over monies to their ſucceſſors, by way of original order, in the firſt inſtance, without any previous application having been made to two juſtices, as directed by ſtat. 43 Eliz. cap. 2.

In ejectment a ſpecial verdict was found, that G. P. was ſeiſed of the manor of M. and on the marriage of his ſon, ſettled the ſaid manor to the uſe of himſelf for life, remainder to his wife for life, remainder to his ſon in tail, with a proviſo, that he ſhould have power during his life, and ſo the wife after him, to demiſe the premiſes in poſſeſſion, for one, two, or three lives, or in reverſion for one, two, or three lives, or thirty years, or for any number of years determinable on one, two, or three lives, ſo as ſuch demiſe be not of the demeſne lands. G. P. reciting that J. S. and his wife held a copyhold tenement for life, demiſed the ſaid copyhold tenement to the leſſee for thirty years, to begin after the death, ſurrender, or forfeiture of J. S. and his wife; and the queſtion being, whether this leaſe of a copyhold was purſuant to, and warranted by the power?

Holt, J. C. held, 1ſt. That a leaſe, to commence in future, is in ſome ſenſe a leaſe in reverſion, as oppoſed to a leaſe in poſſeſſion; but a leaſe within ſuch a power muſt be conſtrued of a leaſe to commence in poſſeſſion after another leaſe or intereſt already created before the reſervation of the power, and not after; and that a leaſe to commence after any other leaſe, is properly a leaſe in reverſion; but that a leaſe for life, to commence after another leaſe in being, is a concurrent leaſe; becauſe a freehold cannot expect, but muſt commence in poſſeſſion preſently; however, this may be ſaid to be a leaſe in reverſion within ſuch powers.

2dly. That G. P. might make a leaſe in reverſion abſolutely for thirty years, by virtue of this power, becauſe the limitations and reſtrictions are disjoined, and the latter part is carried on by way of enlargement of the power; to which Turton and Eyre, Juſtices, agreed, but Rokeby, Juſtice, diſſented.

3dly. That this leaſe was void, becauſe it was of copyhold lands; for by a grant of the demeſnes the copyholds will paſs; and by the ſame reaſon, by excepting the demeſnes the copyholds are excepted; and the rather, becauſe the power is derived out of the inheritance, and the tenant at will by his leaſes might deſtroy the copyhold, which is unreaſonable; and if there were nothing elſe for the power to work on in this caſe, he may by virtue thereof demiſe the rents and ſervices. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 537. *Mod. It was ruled by Holt, Chief Juſtice, at Warwick, on a trial at niſi prius, that if A. not having any property in certain land, demiſes it by indenture to B. and afterwards A. purchaſes the land, this will be a good leaſe by eſtoppel. But if it appears by recitals in the leaſe, that A. had nothing at the time of the demiſe, and afterwards he purchaſes the lands as aforeſaid, that will not enure y eſtoppel. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 729.

A motion was made for the warden of the Fleet to attend, for not returning an habeas corpus:

So the leſſee may determine it when he pleaſes, but then he muſt pay the quarter's rent. Vide Salk. vol. 1. page 222. Ibid. vol. 2. p. 414. Raym. vol. 1. p. 707.

Hilary, 13 W. 3. Anonymous.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a perſon makes a leaſe at will from year to year, either party may determine it at pleaſure, at the loſs of the accruing rent to him that determines his will; but if a perſon makes a leaſe for a year, and ſo from year to year as long as both parties ſhall pleaſe, this is a leaſe for one year abſolutely; and if the leſſee continues on the firſt day of the ſecond year, he is bound for another year; ſo is the leſſor, if he has not warned him away before the beginning of the ſecond year. And a leaſe for three years to commence in future by parol, is not warranted by the ſtatutes of frauds and perjuries. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 6.0.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Shortridge v. Lamplugh. Error.

On a writ of error, brought on a judgment given in the C. B. in an action of covenant brought by the aſſignee of the reverſion againſt the aſſignee of the term for non-payment of rent, it was objected, that the uſe muſt be intended to be to the re-leſſor and his heirs, becauſe no conſideration of the re-leaſe nor expreſs uſe appeared by the pleading; ſo that without conſidering the operation of the conveyance, the queſtion was on the pleadings, whether the uſe ſhall be intended to the re-leſſor, unleſs it be averred to the re-leſſee?

Holt, Chief Juſtice. This way of pleading was certainly good before ſtat. 27 H. 8. ſo is Plowd. 478. and many precedents in Co. Ent. of feoffments averred in the ſame manner; for the uſe was a matter that was extrinſical to the deed, and depended on collateral agreements at common law, and then the uſe might, as ſince the ſtatute of fraud by writing, be averred by parol, and therefore in pleading, the conveyance was taken to the uſe of him to whom the conveyance was made, till the contrary appeared; if it were otherwiſe, it ought to come on the other ſide; and ſtat. 27 H. 7. has not altered the courſe of pleading, which is rather confirmed by the ſtatute; becauſe, if now the uſe be conſtrued to be to the re-leſſor or feoffor, the conveyance will be to no manner of purpoſe, it being ſtill the old eſtate to which the old warranty and other qualities remain annexed; whereas before the ſtatute there might be ſome end in making the feoffment, viz. to put the freehold out of him and prevent wardſhip; and Co. Lit. goes no further, than where there is a feoffment to particular uſes and eſtates, the reſidue of the uſe ſhall be to the feoffor, which is reaſonable; for the raiſing thoſe particular eſtates appears a ſufficient reaſon for the conveyance.

Powell, Juſtice, doubted, whether there could be a reſulting uſe on a leaſe and releaſe, unleſs where particular uſes are limited; for this way of conveyance is grounded on the ancient way of releaſing at common law, wherein there was a merger of eſtate, which is a good conſideration; as where the leſſor confirms to the leſſee and his heirs: but the other two juſtices concurring with the Chief Juſtice, the judgment of the C. B. was affirmed. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 678. Raym. vol. 2. p. 798. Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 71.

Sutton not having attended for two terms, and a new Marſhal being preſented to the court to be ſworn in, he produced a leaſe from the patentees of the office, for a certain number of years, determinable on his death.

Per curiam. Though a leaſe for years abſolutely of this office is void, yet a leaſe of it for years determinable on the life of the leſſee is good; for the danger of the office's going to executors and adminiſtrators is thereby avoided, and that is the ſole reaſon why the office is not grantable for years. And the new Marſhal was accordingly ſworn in. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 57.

Hilary, 7 Ann. Legg v. Strudwick.

In replevin the defendant avowed, for that he being ſeiſed in fee of the place in which, &c. demiſed the ſame to A. to hold from year to year, and ſo on as long as both parties parties ſhall agree, to commence from Lady-day 1703, rendering an annual rent, payable quarterly. The leſſee entered, and died the 17th day of December 1706. And the rent for a year and a half ending at Chriſtmas before was in arrear, for which the leſſor entered and diſtrained. To this the plaintiff demurred.

Per curiam. 1ſt. After the two years, the leſſor or leſſee might determine the term; but if the leſſee held on, he was not then tenant at will, but for a year certain; for his holding on muſt be taken to be an agreement to the original contract, and in execution of it; and the firſt contract was from year to year.

2dly. The third year is not in the nature of a diſtinct intereſt, becauſe it ariſes from the ſame executory contract, and therefore the leſſor may diſtrain the third year for the rent of the ſecond; and ſuch an executory contract as this, is not void by the ſtatute of frauds, tho' it be for more than three years, becauſe there is hereby no term for above two years ever ſubſiſting at the ſame time; and there can be no fraud to a purchaſer, for the utmoſt intereſt that can exiſt to bind him, can be only one year.

Holt, C. J. cited this caſe tried before Hale, C. J. A compoſition was agreed on between the parſon and his pariſhioners for tythes, as long as both parties ſhould agree. If the pariſhioner ploughs and ſows, the parſon ſhall not that year recede, and demand tithe in kind, but muſt make his election at the beginning of the next year; for the pariſhioner would not perhaps have ſowed his land, had he not relied on his contract. *Cro. Michaelmas, 1 Geo. Potter v. Pinkney.

To an action of treſpaſs for goods taken and carried away, the defendant pleaded, that he was ſeiſed of ſuch a leaſe; but in making out his title to the leaſe, ſet forth ſuch matter as ſhewed the leaſe to have determined before it began; and then went on, and ſaid, that by virtue of ſuch a leaſe, he entered and made a leaſe to the plaintiff, reſerving ſuch rent; and for the rent behind juſtified the taking, &c. The plaintiff replied, that the goods diſtrained were ſold. The defendant in his rejoinder juſtified the ſale, by virtue of a late ſtatute. To the rejoinder the plaintiff demurred; and the defendant joined in demurrer.

It was inſiſted for the plaintiff, that there was no good title ſet forth to the leaſe in the plea; but matter directly deſtroying it; and that the firſt leaſe failing, the ſecond muſt do ſo too.

To which it was anſwered, 1ſt. That if the defendant had failed in deriving to himſelf a lawful ability to make the leaſe to the plaintiff, the conſequence will only be, that the entry which he ſets forth to be by virtue of the leaſe, muſt be taken to be a diſſeiſin and a tortious fee-ſimple, ſufficient to ſupport the leaſe.

2dly. That the plaintiff by his replication, though he had not ſaid, it is true, the defendant made ſuch a leaſe, &c. yet by pleading ſuch matters as abuſe of the diſtreſs, (matter confeſſing and avoiding the plea of the defendant) that ~~plea muſt~~ now be taken for true; as that there was ſuch a leaſe made, and the rent behind. And of this opinion was the court.

Parker, Chief Juſtice, moreover ſaid, that the title was but matter of conveyance or inducement; that the ſubſtance of the plea was the leaſe, and arrearages of rent.

Then the following exceptions were taken by the plaintiff's council to the rejoinder.

1ſt. That notice ſhould be given to the owner of the goods, not to the leſſee.

2dly. Notice in the ſtatute muſt be underſtood to be notice in writing; but it is not ſet forth in the pleading, that this notice was in writing.

3dly. It is ſaid in the pleading, that immediately after the diſtreſs ſo taken; he left notice of the taking, &c. and for cauſe thereof, whereas the cauſe ſhould have been ſet forth.

As to the firſt exception, it was over-ruled by the court, who held that the ſtatute did not require notice to be given to the owner, for he might not be known; but to the leſſee.

As to the ſecond exception, it was ſaid by the council for the defendant, that if the word notice did in the act import notice in writing, it muſt do ſo in the plea.

But the third exception to the rejoinder was by the court held fatal, for that it was direct nonſenſe; and that if it had been with the cauſe, though that had been ſenſe, yet it had been inſufficient; for the court ought to be informed on the pleading what the cauſe was that was left. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 265.

Hilary 3 Geo. Smith v. Parks.

A leaſe being in ſtrictneſs forfeited by nonpayment of the rent, the leſſor brought an ejectment. The leſſee by bringing into court what was due for arrears of rent with coſts, &c. obtained a rule to ſtay proceedings on the ejectment. The leſſor moved the court to diſcharge the rule, unleſs the defendant would give ſecurity for the payment of the rent, on affidavit that the defendant was a ſoldier, and ſo by law intitled to a protection.

Per curiam. If you will have equity you muſt do equity; if by the equity of the court the plaintiff loſes the benefit of the forfeiture of the leaſe which the law gives; it is but reaſonabe that he ſhould have ſecurity for the payment of the rent, eſpecially when it appears on oath, that the defendant is a perſon, who by law is privileged from payment of his debts. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 383.

The defendant having a term of years whereof one year and three quarters were to come, agreed with the plaintiff, that he ſhould have the premiſes for the remainder of the term, paying to the defendant the ſame rent as was reſerved on the original leaſe. The plaintiff took poſſeſſion, and now brought an action of treſpaſs againſt the defendant for a re-entry.

It was objected, that this amounted to an aſſignment of the leaſe, and was therefore void by the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries, not being in writing; to which the plaintiff's council anſwered, that it muſt be taken as a leaſe, and not as an aſſignment, becauſe the reſervation was to the leſſee, and not to the original leſſor; and the leſſee might maintain an action of debt for rent on it, tho' he could not diſtrain for want of a reverſionary intereſt; and of this opinion was the Chief Juſtice, and the plaintiff obtained a verdict. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 405.

Hilary, 9 Geo. Mackdonnel v. Welder. Error.

In replevin, the defendant avows for rent under a leaſe, dated the 24th day of June, To hold from the aforeſaid 24th day of June, &c. by virtue whereof the plaintiff entered the ſaid 24th day of June.

On demurrer in C. B. it was objected, that the plaintiff was a diſſeiſor by entering on the 24th, when the leaſe was not to commence till the next day, and conſequently the poſſeſſion was not under the leaſe.

But after conſideration, judgment was given for the avowant, the court being of opinion, there was a great difference between this caſe, and an ejectment, where the plaintiff who claims a term, does at the ſame time, ſhew he has gained a tortious fee; whereas here, be the entry tortious or not, it cannot diſcharge the contract for the payment of the rent. Cro. El. 169. 2 Leon. 99. 1 Roll. Abr. 65. Therefore the judgment of C. B. was affirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 550. Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 54.

The caſe was, the rector of the pariſh of C. by a verbal agreement let his tithes to Fairclough, and others, paying to him 2*s.* 6*d. per* acre for one year, and Fairclough and the other farmers of the ſaid tithes, let the ſame to the reſpective tenants of the lands, paying to them 3 s. per acre for that year, excepting one tenant, for which they received the tithes in kind, and paid to the rector 2*s.* 6*d.* per acre.

Afterwards the ſaid Fairclough, and the other farmers were charged by the churchwardens, and overſeers of the poor of the ſaid pariſh of G. by a rate, towards the maintaining the poor of the ſaid pariſh, on ſtat. 43. Eliz. cap. 2. as occupiers of the tithes, and on an appeal to the ſeſſions they were diſcharged as to all, excepting only 7*s.* 6*d.* which they were ordered to pay for the tithes of that tenant, which they received in kind.

And the order being removed into this court by certiorari, the queſtion was, who ſhall be accounted the occupier of theſe tithes, the farmers who paid the rent to the rector, or the tenants of the lands, who paid their rent for the tithes to the farmers.

The court was of opinion, viz. That the farmers ſhall be accounted the occupiers of thoſe tithes; it is true, it might be otherwiſe if an under leaſe had been made thereof; but this is a particular caſe; and it appears by the rate, that the farmers have 6*d.* per acre profit, and if the rate is aſſeſſed, on the profits of the tithes, it ought to be aſſeſſed on them, becauſe it does not appear to the court, that the land-holders have any profit, for they may have a hard bargain.

Therefore they ſhall rather be accounted buyers of thoſe tithes, than occupiers; for where an agreement is made for tithes, they ſhall paſs by way of bargain, otherwiſe they cannot paſs at all, becauſe they lie in grant; and therefore cannot otherwiſe paſs than by deed, for a verbal agreement for them is good only for a year.

The money which the farmers receive of the land-holders, for thoſe tithes ſhall be accounted a modus, he who receives it ſhall be taken to be the occupier of the tithes.

So where a man has a wood or ſtanding corn, and ſells the ſame ſtanding, the ſeller ſhall pay the tithes, for that year.

In this caſe the rector who ſerves the cure for 2 s. 6 s. per acre, ſhall not contribute to the poors tax; but the farmers who have ſuch a benefit of 6 d. per acre, without any manner of conſideration for it, by raiſing ſo much on the land-holders.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice. I doubt, the farmer of the rector is to be eſteemed at firſt ſight occupier of theſe tithes: he retains the tithes, though he pays the value for them.

Eyre, Juſtice. The farmer is in this caſe the occupier, he having them by way of retainer, in purſuance of an agreement by parol. It would be otherwiſe if there had been an under leaſe of them. Cro. Jac. 137 pl.

Forteſcue, Juſtice. The farmer is the occupier, he having them in ſuch a manner as to make a profit of them.

Therefore the order of ſeſſions was quaſhed, and the rate confirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 62.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. Baggott v. Oughton.

Sir Edward Baggott (the father of the plaintiff) on his marriage with his wife, the plaintiff's mother, in conſideration of that marriage, and of a conſiderable ſum of money which he was to have with her as a marriage portion, which could not be raiſed otherwiſe than by ſelling her father's eſtate; and ſhe being the only child of the family; and for that reaſon, Sir Edward being unwilling the eſtate ſhould be ſold, it was agreed by indenture between them, that a fine ſhould be levied of the land, and the uſe thereof declared to Sir Edward for life, then to the uſe of his wife for life, remainder to the plaintiff in tail, &c. reverſion in fee to Lady Baggott, in which ſettlement there was a proviſo, that Lady Baggott ſhould have power to charge the whole eſtate with the payment of 500 l. to any perſon to whom ſhe ſhould give the ſame; and with a farther power, that any perſon who ſhould be actually ſeiſed of the lands by virtue of this ſettlement, might make a leaſe or leaſes for three lives, or for twenty-one years, of all or any part of the premiſes in the indenture of fine comprised, at ſuch yearly rents, or more, as the ſame were then let at.

Sir Edward Baggott died, and Lady Baggott being the next in remainder for life, entered, and afterwards married Sir Adolphus Oughton, (the now defendant) and then made a leaſe to him of the capital meſſuage for twenty-one years, but reſerved no rent, and about a month afterwards ſhe died; and the ſingle queſtion now before the court was, whether this was a good leaſe?

It was argued for the plaintiff that it was not, becauſe this capital meſſuage being never yet let, by conſequence there was no rent reſerved at the time of making this ſettlement, therefore this power can never be purſued, and for this the caſes of Lord Mountjoy, and Fitz-Williams, were cited as authorities in point.

The power in the principal caſe reſerved to make leaſes was intended for the benefit of the family, viz. to make leaſes of ſuch land which had been actually, antiently, and uſually let; and though it was indefinitely to make leaſes of all, or any part of the premiſes compriſed in the indenture of fine, yet theſe words are reſtrained in the latter part of the ſentence to ſuch leaſes, where the yearly rents, or more, were reſerved, as the ſame were let at when the ſettlement was made; and ſeveral authorities were cited to prove that general words in a deed are to be qualified and reſtrained by particular and ſubſequent words in the ſame clauſe.

It is true, this Lady had an intereſt coupled with her power, but her intereſt in reſpect to any charge to affect the remainder-man, is intirely void; for this leaſe, as to him, muſt ariſe out of her power, and is no more than if made by an attorney; now, ſuppoſing ſhe had made a leaſe of lands not in poſſeſſion, ſuch leaſe would have been abſolutely void, neither ſhall a leaſe without rent reſerved be good to charge the plaintiff, who is the remainder-man. Beſides, Sir Walter Baggott (the now plaintiff) is a purchaſer of this eſtate under the ſaid ſettlement, and is heir at law both to Sir Edward and the Lady, to whom this power was reſerved; and all powers given to tenants for life ſhould be ſtrictly conſtrued, becauſe they make the eſtate to continue as a charge on thoſe in remainder; therefore the words, viz. to make leaſes, &c. at ſuch yearly rents, or more, as the ſame were then let, muſt reſtrain this power to make leaſes only of ſuch lands which were let at that time.

It was argued for the defendant, that this was a good leaſe, and was warranted by the power, which is for the tenant in poſſeſſion to make leaſes of all or any part of the lands compriſed in the indenture or fine, &c.

Now, if the power had reſted there, this leaſe had been certainly good, and nothing could be objected to make it otherwiſe; but it had been ſaid, that the ſubſequent words, viz. to make leaſes at ſuch yearly rents as the ſame were let at that time, reſtrains this power to lands which were then let, and this capital meſſuage being never let, this power could never extend to it.

But theſe ſubſequent words are only explanatory of the firſt part of the ſentence, viz. that the lands uſually let may be leaſed at the uſual rent; now, by the firſt part of the proviſo, the tenant in poſſeſſion had power to make leaſes of all or any part of the lands compriſed in the ſettlement; and the ſubſequent part of the clauſe ſhall not controul that power without negative words, and there are no ſuch words in this caſe

Beſides, this power is reſerved to Lady Baggott, who had the inheritance of theſe lands, and from whom all the eſtates in the ſettlement moved; and it is not a power ſuperadded to the eſtate of a third perſon, ſo ſhould have a very favourable conſtruction.

As to Lord Mountjoy's caſe, there are ſome points reſolved, which have ſince been denied to be law; and in 2 Roll. Abr. 262. there is a contrary reſolution, but the caſe of Walker v. Wakeman, 1 Vent. 294. is full in point.

Now, as to the conſtruction of powers, it is various, according to the intent of the perſons by whom they were created, for ſometimes they are conſtrued liberally, and ſometimes very ſtrictly; but the power in the principal caſe being reſerved to her who had the inheritance of the eſtate originally before the ſettlement was made, is part of her old domain; and where the execution of ſuch a power is agreeable to the intention of the donor, and conſiſtent with his will at the time it was created, it muſt have a very liberal and favourable conſtruction; and this was the concurrent opinion of the Court of Chancery laſt term, in the caſe of Lord and Lady Coventry.

To which it was anſwered, that it is not material whether the eſtate moved from Lady Baggott, as being her inheritance before this ſettlement was made, becauſe the court will judge of this power as it appears on the face of the ſettlement.

It is true, there are no negative words ſimply in the ſubſequent part of this clauſe to controul the power given in the precedent part; but there are reſtrictive words, which imply a negative, and reſtrain the tenant from ever charging the reverſioner.

It is to be obſerved, that Lord Chief Juſtice Vaughan, in delivering the opinion of the court in a caſe ſtated by him, ſaid, that where a power is given to make leaſes of lands for twenty-one years, reſerving the rents which were thereon reſerved at the time of making the deed, that in ſuch caſe the lands demiſeable by that power muſt be lands then in leaſe on which ſome rent is reſerved; and the court were unanimouſly of that opinion for the plaintiff in this caſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 249.

Michaelmas, 12 Geo. Ryley v. Hicks.

The plaintiff declared, that on the 24th of February, 1723, ſhe demiſed to the defendant a chamber, cellar, and half a ſhop, to hold from Lady-day then next, for a quarter of a year, and ſo from quarter to quarter, ſo long as both parties ſhould pleaſe, at 5 l. per quarter.

It was objected, that this being to commence at a future day was but a leaſe at will, ſince the ſtatute of frauds. The Chief Juſtice at firſt thought it a good objection, but on further conſideration he was of opinion, that the exception was not confined to leaſes that were to commence from the time of making, but was general as to all leaſes that were not to hold for above three years from the making. So the plaintiff had a judgment. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 651.

Adjudged, That there are two methods of leaſing, in common uſe in this kingdom, viz. at the beſt rent; and on fines; which, as the lives and leaſes drop, are conſidered among the annual profits. A leaſe is defined to be a contract between landlord and tenant, by which both are bound in mutual ſtipulations. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 121.

On a demurrer to the declaration in this cauſe, being an action of covenant on an indenture of leaſe, aſſigning a breach in the non-payment of rent.

The queſtion before the court on arguing this demurrer was, whether the plaintiffs have made a good aſſignment of a breach in non-payment of rent, ſuppoſed to have become due on this leaſe.

The defendant's council made three objections to the leaſe, but the matter turned on the firſt; which was, whether the covenant therein is a relative covenant: it being to pay for and during a term of 7, 14, or 21 years; but if no term was ever granted, the covenant fails. He argued, that no term was created by this indenture: for it is void for uncertainty on the authority of the two following caſes. Plowd. 273. Say v. Smith and Fuller, proves, "That every contract ſufficient to "make a leaſe for years, ought to have certainty in "three limitations; namely, the commencement, con"tinuance, and end of the term." 6 Co. Rep. 35. The Biſhop of Bath's Caſe lay it down as a maxim:" That the certainty of continuance, "is to be intended, either "where the term is made certain by an expreſs enu"meration of years: or by reference to certainty; or "by reducing it to certainty, by matter ex poſt facto "i. e. done after the fact; or by conſtruction in law by "expreſs limitation."

Therefore the habendum in this leaſe is void for uncertainty. It is a demiſe to hold from Mich. &c. for the term, of 7, 14, or 21 years, as the leſſee ſhall think proper.

If the leſſee ſhould not elect, the leaſe could never commence, at leaſt, the continuance of it is quite uncertain. It is not (as leaſes are uſually made) a leaſe for 21 years certain, covenanted to be defeaſible at the election of the leſſee; nor is it made certain by any reference to a thing which has certainty at the time of the leaſe made; nor is there any ex poſt facto act to be done, or averred to have been done; (and the leſſee's entry determines nothing; it can be no more than evidence even after 7 years poſſeſſion;) nor can here be any conſtruction of law, by expreſs limitation.

Lord Mansfield. The leſſee has certainly entered, and continues in poſſeſſion: and it is as certain that he muſt pay the rent.

It is undoubtedly a leaſe for 7 years; (whatever may be the validity of it as to the other two eventual terms of 14 and 21 years,) and the breach is aſſigned for non-payment of rent incurred within the firſt 7 years.

Legacy.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Ewer v. Jones.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held clearly, that a deviſee may maintain an action at common law againſt a ter-tertant for a legacy deviſed out of land; for where a ſtatute, as the ſtatute of wills, gives a right, the party by conſequence, ſhall have an action at law to recover it. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 415.

Eaſter, 9 Geo. Goodright v. Opie.

In ejectment, on not guilty pleaded, the jury found the defendant not guilty as to part, and as to the other part, there was a ſpecial verdict, the ſubſtance whereof was as follows:

The teſtator being ſeiſed in fee of ſeveral lands, did, in the year 1705, deviſe all his ſaid lands to five perſons, (namihg them) and to their heirs as tenants in common, that one of the ſaid deviſees died two years before the teſtator, who by another clauſe in the ſaid will, deviſed all his other meſſuages, lands, &c. not therein before given, deviſed, or bequeathed, and all his money, houſehold goods, plate, rings, &c. and all his eſtates real and perſonal whatſoever, of what nature or kind ſoever, to his two neices M. Buce and M. Opie, their heirs, executors and adminiſtrators; that the teſtator died without making diſpoſition of the ſaid fifth part of his lands, other than by his laſt will aforeſaid.

The queſtion was, whether the ſame ſhould deſcend to the heir at law of the teſtator, as not being diſpoſed by him in his life, becauſe the deviſee died before him, or whether it ſhould paſs to B. and C. as reſiduary legatees by the latter clauſe of the will, as an eſtate not before diſpoſed of by the teſtator.

Per curiam. An executor has not the ſame right to the perſonal eſtate, as the heir at law has to lands, becauſe an executor is no more than a truſtee made by the teſtator, but an heir is to ſit in the ſeat of his anceſtor.

But as to the principal matter, if a particular eſtate for life had been deviſed to J. Paine (who died) remainder over, ſuch a remainder had been good, and ſo is Perkins 108 b. 109 a. and ſo ſhould this; and there is no objection againſt it, but that it did not appear in the will, that the teſtator had any thing to diſpoſe of, he having deviſed all his lands before by the firſt clauſe in his will, to five perſons and their heirs. No judgment was given. Vide Mod Rep. vol. 8. p. 124.

Trinity, 9 Geo. Hinton v. Parker.

On a prohibition the caſe was, the widow of the teſtator exhibited an inventory of his goods in the prerogative court; and thereon complaint was made by a legatee, that ſeveral goods of which the teſtator died (naming them) were left out of this inventory, and an account was demanded to be given what became of thoſe goods.

The defendant pleaded, that the ſaid goods were diſpoſed of by the teſtator in his life-time, and by his leave; and on this plea the ſpiritual court gave coſts, for that it was a confeſſion of more aſſets than were in the inventory.

Whereon the defendant now moved for a prohibition, on a ſuggeſtion, that the court proceeded to falſify an inventory, which they had not power to do, becauſe by exhibiting thereof, their juriſdiction was determined.

The court were of opinion, that the ſpiritual court could not falſify an inventory at the ſuit of a creditor, but at the ſuit of a legatee they might. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 168.

Adjudged, That legacies are of a different nature; and they are determined by different rules of law: they are directions to the executor to pay; and in legacies there is a known diſtinction between the time being annexed to the ſubſtance of the gift, or to the payment. If complete words of gift direct the executor to pay; the other words only fix the time of ſuch payment; and then the legacy veſts, and is tranſmiſſible, though the legatee ſhould die before the day of payment. As a legacy given to be paid at twenty-one, but if the time is annexed to the ſubſtance of the gift, as a legacy, "if or where," he ſhall attain twenty-one years, it will not veſt before that contingency happens. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 327.

Libel.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment given in C. B. in an action on the caſe, wherein the plaintiff declared, that he ſtood to be elected member of parliament, and that the defendant cauſed a libel to be printed of him, with theſe words as ſpoken by the plaintiff, viz. there is a war with France, of which I can ſee no end, unleſs the young gentleman on the other ſide of the water (meaning the Prince Charles) be reſtored, whereby he loſt his election to the damage, &c.

It was inſiſted, that an innuendo cannot beget an action, nor make that certain which was uncertain before, and that here was no ſcandal; and if ſo, this was not a libel.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Scandalous matter is not neceſſary to make a libel, it is enough if the defendant induces an ill opinion to be had of the plaintiff, or to make him contemptible and ridiculous; as for inſtance, an action was brought by the huſband for riding Skimmington, and adjudged that it lay, becauſe it made him ridiculous, and expoſed him. Every man underſtands what is meant by the young gentleman on the other ſide of the water; if the words are falſe, the defendants may juſtify in an action, but not in an indictment. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 225.

The King v. Pain.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. On an information for a libel, there muſt be fourteen days notice of trial, and this notice of trial, is ſufficient for him to appear; and if he does not, the recognizance muſt be eſtreated, though on ſuch recognizance to appear from day to day, the party muſt have notice to appear (unleſs in the ſaid caſe) except the firſt and laſt day of the term, when they muſt appear, or the recognizance is forfeited. Vide Forteſcue, p. 357.

An indictment for making, writing, compoſing, and collecting ſeveral libels, in one of which was contained according to the tenor and effect following, &c. after a verdict this was held good, for according to tenor imports the ſame words; for tenor is a tranſcript, which it cannot be if it differs from the libel; if it had been to the effect following, it would not do, for that might import an identity in ſenſe, but not in words. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 417. Ibid. vol. 3. p. 226. Raym. vol. 1. p. 414. *Mod. Trinity, 11 W. 3. The King v. Orme and Nutt.

On a certiorari brought to remove an indictment for a libel at the Old Bailey for making, printing, and publiſhing, a falſe and ſcandalous libel againſt divers good ſubjects of the King to the jurors unknown, to the intent and purpoſe to defame the ſaid ſubjects of the King to other ſubjects of the King to the jurors known, and to be known, &c. wherein the defendants were found guilty. The court was moved in arreſt of judgment, that this libel did not appear to be prejudicial to any perſon, for the jurors did not know the perſons who were affected by the libel; therefore they could not properly ſay that the matter was falſe and ſcandalous, when they did not know the perſons of whom it was ſpoken; nor could they ſay that any perſon was defamed by it. Wherefore judgment was ſtaid until, &c. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 486.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a man prefers a ſcandalous petition to the houſe of Lords, or makes an affidavit containing a ſcandalous libel againſt J. S. in this court, a man cannot juſtify the publication of this, but it will be an offence indictable, becauſe it tends to a breach of the peace: and ſuch an indictment was denied to be quaſhed. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 341.

Trinity, 5 Ann. The Queen v. Broun.

An information was brought to have judgment for a libel, called The Country Parſon's Advice to the Lord-Keeper. The judgment was regularly ſigned, but the defendant did not move in arreſt of judgment within four days, and the court doubted, this being a criminal caſe, whether they could hear counſel ſpeak to this point. But afterwards, the Attorney General conſented they ſhould take their exceptions.

It was excepted, that this did not import a ſcandal, but in their natural ſignification carry a credit, as to be wiſe as Somerſet, &c. Suppoſe an indictment for a nuiſance, which in itſelf is ſo, it is enough to ſay ſo generally; but if it is only a nuiſance, as it is accompanied with circumſtances, there it ought to be particularly ſet out; as for building an inn; or to build an inn to the common nuiſance, is not good, &c. 2 Roll. Rep. 345. So here the manner of ſpeaking ought to be ſet out.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. An information will lie for ſpeaking ironically. And the Attorney General ſaid it was laid to be wrote ironically, and he ought to have ſhewed at the trial that he did not intend to ſcandalize them; and the jury are judges with what intent this was done. Accordingly the defendant was adjudged to ſtand in the pillory, and fined forty merks. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 86.

Michaelmas, 5 Ann. The Queen v. Drake.

An information brought againſt the defendant ſet forth, that he being evilly diſpoſed, &c. did make a libel, intitled, Mercurius, containing divers ſcandalous matters, according to the tenor following, and ſo ſet forth ſome paragraphs, and in one of them was the word nec inſtead of non, ſo that it was not literally the ſame as in the libel; however, it did not alter the ſenſe; but on not guilty pleaded, this variance being perceived at the trial, the council for the defendant inſiſted, that it might be found ſpecially, which was done, and afterwards, on arguing the ſpecial verdict, judgment was given for the defendant.

It was objected againſt him, that this variance was immaterial, and that in every action for words, the plaintiff uſually declares for ſpeaking theſe following Engliſh words; but it is not neceſſary to prove every word; therefore to make every literal omiſſion or variation fatal, would be to make this action impracticable.

Per curiam. The tenor is the tranſcript of the copy of ſome original, to which it may be compared, and therefore there can be no tenor of words ſpoken, becauſe there is no written original; but there may be tenor of writing, which word always imports a true copy of the thing written, and conſiſts in identity.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. A libel may be deſcribed either by the ſenſe, or by the words, and therefore an information charging that the defendant made a writing, containing ſuch words, is good, and in ſuch caſe an exact niceneſs is not required, becauſe it is only a deſcription of the ſenſe and ſubſtance of the libel. But an information charging the defendant with making a writing according to the tenor following, there the written libel, and that ſet forth in the information muſt exactly agree, becauſe every word in the information is a mark of deſcription of the very libel itſelf.

Words are tranſient, and vaniſh in the air as ſoon as ſpoken, and there can be no tenor of them, as has been already obſerved, and therefore an identity is not required, and though the jury find ſome omiſſions, it will be ſufficient, if ſome be proved; and in ſuch caſe, the plaintiff ſhall recover; but when a thing is written, though every omiſſion of a letter may not make a variance, yet if ſuch omiſſion makes a word of another ſignification it is fatal. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 225.

An information being exhibited againſt the defendant for publiſhing an obſcene book, of which he was found guilty; his council moved the court in arreſt of judgment, for that, though the defendant may be puniſhable for this in the Spiritual Courts, as an offence againſt good morals, yet it cannot be a libel for which he is puniſhable in the Temporal Court. Libellus is a derivative from the word liber, and it is libellus from its being a book, and not from the matter of its contents.

Raymond, Chief Juſtice. I think this is a caſe of very great conſequence, tho' if it was not for the caſe of The Queen v. Read, I ſhould make no great difficulty of it. Certainly the Spiritual Court has nothing to do with it, if in writing; and if it reflects on religion, virtue, or morality, if it tends to diſturb the civil order of ſociety, I think it is a temporal offence. I do not think libellus is always to be taken as a technical word. The court were of opinion that it was a temporal offence: therefore they gave judgment for the King, and the defendant was afterwards ſet in the pillory. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 788.

Raymond, Chief Juſtice. The defendant is guilty of publiſhing this libel, the ſhop being kept under her authority and direction, and it would be of very dangerous conſequence if the law was otherwiſe: and it has been ſo ruled in a great many inſtances. Vide Fitz-Gibbons, p. 47.

The defendant was convicted on four informations for his blaſphemous diſcourſes on the miracles of our Saviour. And attempting to move in arreſt of judgment, the court declared they would not ſuffer it to be debated, whether to write againſt Chriſtianity in general was not an offence puniſhable in the temporal courts at common law; it having been ſettled ſo to be in Taylor's caſe, 1 Vent. 293. 3 Keb. 607. 621. and in the caſe of The King v. Hall, Hilary 7 Geo. They deſired it might be taken notice of, that they laid their ſtreſs on the word general, and did not intend to include diſputes between learned men on particular controverted points. The next term he was brought up, and fined 25 l. for each of his four diſcourſes, and ſentenced to ſuffer a year's impriſonment, and to enter into a recognizance for his good behaviour during his life; himſelf in 3000 l. and 2000 l. by others. Vide Stra. vol. 2. page 834. Fitz-Gibbons, p. 64.

Limitation. (Statutes of)

Trinity, 1 W. & M. Hall v. Wybourn.

To a plea in bar of the ſtatute of limitation, the plaintiff replied, that the defendant was beyond ſea, and it was held no plea, for the plaintiff might either file his original, or outlaw him; and in one Bynion's caſe, it was held by Bridgman, Chief Juſtice, that though the courts of juſtice were ſhut up ſo as no original could be filed, yet this ſtatute would bar the action; becauſe the ſtatute is general, and muſt work on all caſes which are not exempted by the exception. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 420.

Trinity, 2 W. & M. Budd v. Berkenhead.

The defendant having pleaded the ſtatute of limitation, the plaintiff replied in avoidance, that he ſued out an attachment returnable Michaelmas term, 34 Car. 2. and that ſuch proceedings were had thereon, that the defendant in Mich. term, 2 Jac. 2. appeared, &c.

Per curiam. This pleading is not good, it muſt be ſhewn that there were continuances till the time of declaring, and a taliter proceſſum is not ſufficient to ſhew a matter before the declaration, though it has been for matters after. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 420.

Michaelmas, 3 W. & M. Coventry v. Aſtley.

In an action of treſpaſs brought for impriſoning the plaintiff, and detaining him in priſon from 32 Car. 2. till the 3d day of April, 4 Jac. 2. The defendant pleaded as to all, till 34 Car. 2. ſuch a day, not guilty within four years; and as to the reſt, a plaint and a capias iſſued: to which the plaintiff demurred.

Per curiam. Though the impriſonment be complained of as one continued impriſonment, yet the defendant may divide the time, and plead the ſtatute as to part, and the plaintiff may reply the continuance; therefore as to this, judgment was given againſt the plaintiff on his demurrer, but for him as to the reſt; becauſe the capias was awarded by the court officially, and it did not appear that the defendant meddled in it. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 420.

H. was indebted to A. who died, B. received the money, and afterwards the plaintiff's wife took out letters of adminiſtration to A. and within ſix years after the letters of adminiſtration, but not within ſix years after the receipt of the money, brought an indeb. aſſum. againſt B. as for money had and received to the uſe of him and his wife; the defendant pleaded that he did not promiſe within ſix years; the plaintiff replied the ſpecial matter; and on demurrer, the court were of opinion, that the ſtatute could be no bar, becauſe the plaintiff's title commenced by taking out letters of adminiſtration, and this was not a cauſe of action in the inteſtate; but they thought it hard to make this ſo much money received to the plaintiff's uſe, when at the time of this receipt he was not adminiſtrator.

Note. There was a faulty replication, and the court adviſed the plaintiff to bring a new action, and ſo the matter went off. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 124.

At the Summer Aſſizes at Lincoln, 11 W. 3. Stockes or Stocker, v. Berry or Berny.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If A. has had poſſeſſion of lands for twenty years without interruption, and then B. gets poſſeſſion, on which A. is put to his ejectment, though A. is plaintiff, yet the poſſeſſion of twenty years ſhall be a good title in him, as if he had ſtill been in poſſeſſion.

The ſame point was ruled by Holt, Chief Juſtice, at Lent aſſizes for Bucks, 12 W. 3. becauſe a poſſeſſion for twenty years is like a deſcent, which bars the entry, and gives a right of poſſeſſion, which is ſufficient to maintain an ejectment. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 421. Raym. vol. 1. p. 741.

W. D. being poſſeſſed of a term for one thouſand years, aſſigned it to R. P. as a collateral ſecurity againſt a bond in which P. was bound jointly with D. in 1655. P. died, leaving R. P. his ſon his executor, D. died, leaving K. D. his wife his executor, and K. D. his daughter, his heir. In 1674 R. P. executor of R. P. and K. D. executrix of W. D. and K. D. the heireſs of W. D. aſſigned this term of one thouſand years to J. H. with a condition that on payment of 200*l.* the conſideration of the ſaid aſſignment, by K. D. the executrix, &c. K. D. received the profits till 1691, and paid the intereſt to the ſame time. And an ejectment being brought by the executor of J. H.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, adjudged, 1ſt. That he was not barred by the ſtatute of limitation, becauſe the ſtatute did not prejudice at the time of the aſſignment, there being but nineteen years elapſed; and then the joining of him in the aſſignment, who had the title to take advantage of the ſtatute, gives a new title.

2dly. If a man makes a mortgage for a collateral ſecurity, although the mortgage is not in poſſeſſion for twenty years and more; yet if the intereſt be paid on the bond according to the agreement of the parties, it ſhall not be barred by the ſtatute of limitation. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 740.

Hilary, 1 Ann. Hunt v. Burn.

The queſtion in this caſe was, whether it appeared by the verdict that the iſſue in tail was barred of his writ of formedon by ſtat. 21 Jac. 1.?

The court held, 1ſt. That the verdict was inſufficient; and that it ſhould have found that no writ of formedon was brought, elſe the court could not intend but that it was brought; for this is matter of bar, which ſhould be ſhewn on the defendant's part; and this act is not penned as the ſtatute of fines. It is enough in that caſe to find a fine, and you need not find that the party claimed or entered not, for that comes in by way of proviſoe; but here it is part of the body of the act.

2dly. They held, that ſuppoſing him barred of his writ of formedon, yet he is not thereby hindered to purſue his right of entry, which accrued to him by the death of the tenant for life; for this is a new right which he had not before: that where a man releaſes his right, he cannot purſue his action or remedy; but if a man has a right and ſeveral remedies, the diſcharge of one is not a diſcharge of the other; and that ſtat. 4 H. 7. enures and operates by way of bar to the right, which anſwers Saul v. Clerk's caſe, Jones 210, 211. But ſtat. 21 Jac. 1. operates by way of bar to the remedy, and the word right there is right of entry. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 422.

Hilary, 1 Ann: Reading v. Royſton, or Rawſterne.

A perſon ſeiſed in fee, having iſſue two daughters, deviſed his lands to his grandſon by his eldeſt daughter in fee; the eldeſt daughter being dead at the time of the deviſe: the grandſon died without iſſue, and the heir of the grandſon being the heir on the part of the father, and the heir of the other co-parcener, entered into the land, and took the profit by moieties for twenty years together, thinking according to the opinion of Sir Matthew Hale in his younger years, (who was their council) that the deviſe was void for one moiety. Now the miſtake being diſcovered, the heir of the grandſon brought an ejectment againſt the heir of the other co-parcener; and on a ſpecial verdict found, it was objected in his behalf, that the deviſe was void as to one moiety; but this being over-ruled; it was then objected, that the bringing of this ejectment againſt the heir of the other co-parcener, for this moiety, admitted the plaintiff to be out of poſſeſſion for twenty years, and then he was barred by the ſtatute of limitation.

Per curiam. The ſtatute of limitation never runs againſt a man, but where he is actually ouſted or diſſeiſed; and true it is, one tenant in common may diſſeiſe another; but then it muſt be done by actual diſſeiſin, and not by the bare perception of the profits only; but here the difficulty is not ſo great; there is no tenancy in common in this caſe, for the heir of the grandſon has the whole by deviſe, and the other is a mere ſtranger; and where two men are in poſſeſſion, the law will adjudge it in him that has the right. A man may be a tenant in common by preſcription, yet he may not be a tenant in common by wrong; nor can a man be diſſeiſed of an undivided moiety; therefore the bringing the ejectment admits nothing; for if a man be ſeiſed of the whole, and makes a leaſe to another of a moiety undivided, and a ſtranger ouſts the leſſee, he muſt bring his ejectment of a moiety, and ſo if they be both ouſted, they muſt bring *ſeveral ejectments. On an indebitatus aſſumpſit laid ſeveral ways, the defendant pleaded no action, becauſe the bill aforeſaid was exhibited on the 29*th day of June, and not before, and that he for all the time within ſix years before the exhibiting the aforeſaid bill had not aſſumed,* &c. The plaintiff replied a bill of Middleſex, teſted, &c. returned the ſame day, whereon was returned, he is not to be found, and continuance entered to Monday next after three weeks, &c. to this it was demurred, and judgment given for the defendant; for there cannot be ſuch a bill of Middleſex as this, which is returnable the very day of its teſte, and the ſtatute of limitation, on which the ſecurity of all men depends, is to be favoured. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 421. *Mod. Eaſter, 2 Ann. Brown v. Babbington. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in the C. B. on an indebitatus aſſumpſit for 14 l. the queſtion was, whether a clauſum fregit in the C. B. will ſave the ſtatutes of limitation. The defendant in error's council argued, that ſuppoſing the clauſum fregit was made out with intent to declare in another action, and was well continued till the time of declaring in the ſaid action; that will be a ſufficient proſecution within ſtat. 21 Jac. 1. c. 16. And though in this caſe the clauſum fregit was not continued, yet that will be aided by the verdict.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. This caſe is not like the caſe of latitats in this court; becauſe a latitat is an ancient proceſs of this court, and was a proceſs of this court at the time of making the ſtatute of limitation; and the uſe of them is only to bring in a man in cuſtody, and then they declare againſt him in the cuſtody of the Marſhal of the Marſhalſea, &c. But when a man is brought in by a clauſum fregit in the C. B. they do not declare againſt him in the cuſtody of the Warden of the Fleet, but on an original proper for the action. And this practice of the clauſum fregit in the C. B. is new, and they have another way to ſue there, viz. by original: but in this court a latitat in ſome actions is the only way to commence the ſuit. North, Chief Juſtice of the C. B. made a complaint of the writ of latitat in parliament, and the matter was thoroughly inveſtigated, but at laſt the latitat was approved of, as it is alſo by ſtat. 27 Eliz. c. 8. which gives a writ of error in the Exchequer Chamber, but excepts errors to be aſſigned for want of juriſdiction in this court. Now this being the proceſs of this court at the time of making the ſtatute of limitation, it muſt be underſtood to be compriſed within the meaning of the act. And he further ſaid, he imagined, that after the reverſal of the judgment in the caſe of Kinſey v. Hayward was affirmed in parliament, this point would never have been moved again. But here is a fault, viz. the plaintiff does not ſhew that the original was ever returned. Now if he ſues out a writ, and does not return it, that will not avoid the ſtatute of limitation. Accordingly the judgment which the plaintiff had obtained in the C. B. was reverſed. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 880.

On a libel exhibited in the Admiralty court by certain ſeamen againſt their owners for wages, the defendants pleaded the ſtatute of limitation, viz. that it appeared by the libel, that no ſuit was proſecuted for this matter within ſix years, whereas they ſhould have pleaded directly, that no ſuit had been brought within ſix years after the cauſe of action accrued; and if the ſtatute had been rightly pleaded, it would have been a good bar.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Though the ſtatute does not extend to maritime, ſpiritual, or equitable cauſes, but only to duties at common law, yet mariners wages are a duty at common law, and if ſued for at common law, the ſtatute would have been a *good bar. On an action of treſpaſs for an aſſault and battery, the defendant pleaded not guilty within ſix years by miſtake, and not according to the ſtatute, which is but four years: the plaintiff demurred, and after argument it was adjudged an ill plea; for if it be conſidered as at common law, there is no ſuch plea; if on the ſtatute, the act is not purſued, and the plaintiff can not take iſſue on it; for that he is guilty within ſix years, is an iſſue immaterial; becauſe it may be, the jury might find him not guilty within four years, but guilty within ſix years. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 424. Raym. vol. 2. page 1099. *Mod. Michaelmas, 4 Ann. Hide v. Partridge.

On a libel brought for mariners wages in the Admiralty Court, the defendant pleaded the ſtatute of limitation, viz. that no cauſe of action accrued within ſix years next before the time mentioned in the libel; and the plea was over-ruled there. And now on a motion for a prohibition it was urged, that mariners wages were ſuable in the Admiralty courts by indulgence only, and not of right; that at common law the ſtatute would be a good plea: on the other ſide it was ſaid, the ſtatute extended only to the common law courts; that it was not pleadable to a proceeding in the ſpiritual court for violently laying hands on a clergyman; a prohibition however was denied, becauſe the ſtatute was ill pleaded; but the plea was afterwards amended.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, it was ſtrange that the ſame matter, well pleaded, ſhould be a defence in one court, and not in another. The ſtatute of limitation is a good plea in Chancery; it is true, it is no plea to a ſuit for violently laying hands, &c. but that is, becauſe the proceeding is for reformation of manners, and not for damages; and ſo it is at common law, it is no plea to an indictment for treſpaſs, otherwiſe in an action. *Adjourned. An action on the caſe was brought on a promiſe made by the defendant to pay a bill of exchange drawn 14 years ſince.

The plaintiff replied, that the bill was a negotiable bill, and that it was on an account between merchants, &c.

The defendant demurred, and had judgment, becauſe the ſtatute excepts only accounts which are current between merchants, and not any that are ſtated; for if an action is brought againſt a drawer for value received, that is no account current, but a ſtated account. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 6 Ann. Matthews v. Phillips

An action of debt was brought in the Marſhalſea court, after ſome proceedings there, the ſix years expired; the defendant ſued out an hab. corp. and removed the cauſe into this court, where the plaintiff declared anew, and the defendant pleaded, that the cauſe of action did not accrue within ſix years before the teſte of the hab. corp. and this was held to be a good plea, but that the plaintiff might reply the ſuit below, and have ſhewn that to have been within the ſix years; not that this ſuit was a continuance of the ſuit below; but that the plaintiff had rightfully and legally purſued his right; and it ſhould not be in the power of the defendant to defeat or hinder him of a remedy, without any default; as where a perſon brings an action before the expiration of ſix years, and dies before judgment, the ſix years being then expired, ſhall not prevent his executor from proſecuting the ſuit with effect. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 424.

This caſe on evidence appeared to be thus: B. Moye the inteſtate, and one Scarlett were partners, who built a houſe for the defendant in the year 1693; afterwards the defendant failed, and came off by the ſtatute of compoſition. Scarlett dies, then Moye dies; adminiſtration was taken out by the plaintiff to Moye, who in the year 1708, ſent to the defendant to be paid his debt; the defendant acknowledged the debt, but inſiſted on it, that he ought to have the benefit of the ſtatute of the major and minor, by which he paid the reſt of his creditors only two ſhillings in the pound; and that therefore if the plaintiff would accept of two ſhillings in the pound as the reſt did, he would pay him. It was objected by the defendant's council, that this evidence was not ſufficient to take the plaintiff's debt out of the ſtatute of limitation.

Parker, Chief Juſtice, was of opinion, that there being a ſpecial promiſe laid in the declaration, it was neceſſary to prove the ſame, to prevent the operation of the ſtatute, and that a bare acknowledgment would not do; and ſo directed the jury to find for the plaintiff for 36 s. only, for which the promiſe was made. The defendant's council alledged, that this declaration was very oddly worded, for that the work was done by the inteſtate B. Moye, and the promiſe was ſaid to be made to the plaintiff without a new conſideration, which was ill; on which a verdict was found for the plaintiff, and the point reſerved. On further argument at another day, the Chief Juſtice held, that the declaration was rightly framed as to this caſe, and that if it had been otherwiſe, it would not have been good; for if the declaration had been of a promiſe made to the inteſtate, the evidence given would not have maintained the iſſue. The Chief Juſtice founded his judgment on the caſe of Green v. Crane, Hilary 3 Ann.

Another exception taken was, that the work being done by Moye and Scarlett, it ought to have been mentioned in the declaration that Moye ſurvived Scarlett, otherwiſe the plaintiff is not entitled to the debt. But it was over-ruled. Vide Forteſcue, p. 177.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſettlement made by two juſtices, and which was confirmed on an appeal to the ſeſſions, the caſe appeared to be thus, viz. Humphrey Carr about thirty years laſt paſt, built a cottage in the pariſh of B. on the waſte of a manor belonging to the Earl of Pembroke, but without any licence or order ſo to do, and he enjoyed the ſame during his life, without any other right, and then died, leaving iſſue, Elizabeth, his only daughter and heir, who intermarried with J. Darby, who with his wife, Elizabeth, being ſeiſed of this cottage, ſold it to J. Willy for 30 l. and now the queſtion was, whether this marriage had gained J. Darby the huſband a ſettlement.

It was inſiſted, that it had not, becauſe the father of Elizabeth, the wife of this Darby, had no ſettlement there, for his entry was by diſſeiſin, which gains no ſettlement; and if the father had none, his daughter could not have any ſettlement there.

But the court were of another opinion, becauſe thirty years poſſeſſion is a good title againſt the Lord of a manor, by virtue of the ſtatute of limitations, if he ſhould bring an ejectment to recover the poſſeſſion.

Beſides, Elizabeth, the wife of Darby, and daughter of H. Carr, was in poſſeſſion by deſcent, which is a good title againſt any eſtreat the Lord might have at common law, and therefore her huſband gained a ſettlement by this marriage. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 287.

Michaelmas, 13 Geo. Story v. Atkins.

On an action on the caſe on ſeveral promiſes, the plaintiff declared on a promiſory note, dated the 25th of March, 1772, ſigned and ſubſcribed by the defendant, whereby he promiſed to pay the plaintiff or his order 12 l. 11 s. for value received, &c. there was alſo another count on an indebitatus aſſumpſit for 20 l. laid out by the plaintiff to the defendant's uſe, &c. damage 20 l. The defendant as to the firſt promiſe and aſſumption in the declaration aforeſaid mentioned, pleads in bar, that for all the time within ſix years before the day of exhibiting the bill of him the ſaid plaintiff, the cauſe of action, as to the ſaid firſt promiſe and aſſumption, in the declaration aforeſaid mentioned, did not accrue to the ſaid Joſeph againſt the ſaid Daniel, &c. And as to the ſecond and third promiſes in the declaration mentioned, the defendant pleaded non aſſumpſit, and iſſue was joined thereon.

And as to the defendant's plea to the firſt count, the plaintiff replied, and admitted, that the cauſe of action as to the firſt count did not ariſe within ſix years before his exhibiting his bill in this court, but that it aroſe on the 25th of March, 1720, and that on the 11th of February, 1725, in order to recover the money due to him on that promiſe, he levied his plaint in the ſheriff of London's court in a plea of treſpaſs on the caſe, and avers, that according to the cuſtom of the aforeſaid city, he there declared againſt the defendant in an action on the caſe, and ſets forth his declaration; which was, for that the defendant ſuch a day was indebted to the plaintiff in 20 l. for divers ſums of money by the aforeſaid defendant, before that time due and owing to the plaintiff, which he promiſed to pay; then the plaintiff ſet forth, that the defendant hereon brought his writ of hab. corp. by virtue of which the ſaid plaint was removed into this court, and the plaintiff declared, againſt him de novo, and avers it to be for the very ſame cauſe of action, for which he levied his plaint aforeſaid, and then he averred, that the cauſe of action did not accrue within ſix years before his levying the ſaid plaint in the ſheriff's court, and therefore prays judgment, &c.

To this replication the defendant demurred, and ſhewed for cauſe, that it did not appear by the plaintiff's replication, that his bill againſt the defendant in this court was for the ſame cauſe of action, as that for which he levied his plaint in the court below, on which there was a joinder in demurrer.

Raymond, Chief Juſtice. The actions in the two courts are of ſuch a nature, that they may be averred to be the ſame; for ſtat. 3 & 4 Ann, only gives an additional remedy on promiſory notes, but does not take away the old one; and I think this note might have been given in evidence on an indebitatus aſſumpſit, for the note imports the drawer's having ſo much money of the other's in his hands; and though it may not perhaps be allowed in evidence in ſuch caſe as a promiſory note, without further proof of the conſideration; yet it may undoubtedly be given in evidence on an indebitatus aſſumpſit, as a paper or writing to prove the defendant's receipt of ſo much money from the plaintiff. Hard's Caſe, Salk. 23.

And as the two actions may therefore be averred to be the ſame, ſo I take the averment to be ſufficient and traverſable; and the averment is confined only to the firſt promiſe, which is ſingled out by the words as to in the replication, and cloſed as to the reſt.

As to the objection that is made againſt the declaration in the inferior court, I think it of no weight; for though the declaration ſhould be ill, yet if the plaint be regular, it is ſufficient to prevent the ſtatute.

Forteſcue, Juſtice, held ſtrongly, that the two actions were of ſo different a nature, that they could not be averred to be the ſame. He agreed, that the variance in the ſums did not prevent the averment of their being for the ſame cauſe; but he held ſtrongly, that ſince the ſtatute, a promiſory note could not be given in evidence on an indeb. aſſump. and cited the caſe put by Hale, Chief Juſtice. 1 Vent. 252.

In the other points he agreed with the reſt of the juſtices; and ſaid that the form of declaring in the court below was well enough, and that it had been ſo adjudged in the caſe of Stephens v. Greenland in this court, and that the caſes in 4 Leon. 105. was in point. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 719. Raym. vol 2. p. 1427.

In an action on the caſe brought by the executor of the executrix of G. Wilcocks againſt the defendant, on a promiſory note, dated the 30th of July, 1719. The defendant pleaded, that the cauſe of action did not accrue within ſix years: the plaintiff replied, that the firſt executrix, Trinity, 11 Geo. ſued out a bill of Middleſex againſt the defendant, returnable the Mich. term following, on which there was a continuance, and an alias taken out returnable in Hilary term following, before which the executrix died, and made the plaintiff her executor, who in Michaelmas, 3 Geo. 2. ſued out a latitat againſt the defendant, with intent to declare againſt him as above, which he accordingly did; and concluded with an averment, that the cauſe of action accrued within ſix years before the ſuing out the firſt bill of Middleſex.

To this the defendant demurred: and after ſeveral arguments, it was held, that the replication was ill, there being four years between the death of the firſt executrix, and the proceedings had by the now plaintiff, that the moſt that had ever been allowed was a year, and that within the equity of the proviſoe in the ſtatute which gives the plaintiff a year to commence a new action, where the judgment is arreſted or reverſed: but they ſaid they would not go a moment farther, for it would let in all the inconveniencies which the ſtatute was made to avoid. Indeed if the ſecond executor had been retarded by ſuits about the will or adminiſtration, and he had ſhewn that in pleading it would have been otherwiſe, becauſe then the neglect would have been accounted for: and wherever a ſuit is allowed to be continued by journies accounts, it muſt be a recent proſecution. 6 *Co. London. (its Cuſtoms)

If a freeman of London has no wife, but has children, the half of his perſonal eſtate belongs to his children, and the other half the freeman may diſpoſe of; ſo if the freeman has a wife and no children, half of his perſonal eſtate belongs to his wife, and the other half he may diſpoſe of: But if a freeman hath a wife and children, one third part belongs to the wife, and another third part to the children, and the freeman may diſpoſe of the other third part. And if ſuch freeman dies inteſtate, the cuſtom affects only two thirds, and the remaining third is ſubject to the ſtatute of diſtributions, and ſo dividing the whole into ninths, four ninths belong to the wife, and five ninths belong to the children.

If a freeman of London has two ſons, and the eldeſt ſon dies leaving a ſon, and then the freeman dies, the grandchild, though in law a repreſentative of the ſon, who never was advanced, has no part by the cuſtom; for the cuſtom of London extends only to the children, and not to the grandchildren; and ſo it has been certified by the recorder into chancery.

If a freeman of London has but one child, and he has received ſome portion from his father, and the father dies, leaving this child and a wife, the child ſhall have his full orphan's part, without any regard to what he has already received; for that advancement in part is only to be brought into hotchpot with children, and not with others.

If a freeman of London has advanced any of his children with a portion; yet if it appears what the portion was, by any writing under the father's hand, or by the father's will, or his marriage-ſettlement, and by the ſaid will or ſettlement it is ſaid, That the ſaid portion is or was in full of his child's part by the cuſtom; yet this child ſhall come in for the cuſtomary part of the reſt of the father's perſonal eſtate, bringing the portion already received into hotchpot; it is otherwiſe, if it does not appear under the father's hand what the advancement was. Vide Salk. v. 2. p. 426.

On an habeas corpus directed to the keeper of Newgate, he returned, That the city of London is an ancient city, &c. and that there is a cuſtom in the ſaid city, if any complaint ſhould be made to the mayor and aldermen of the ſaid city, by the maſter and wardens of any company, of a liveryman choſen, and refuſing to take the office, being admoniſhed by that court to accept it; that then the mayor and aldermen have committed the perſon ſo refuſing to the cuſtody of the ſheriffs of London, or to any other officer, there to be detained until he ſhould conſent, and declare that he would take on him the ſaid office.

That theſe cuſtoms were confirmed by act of parliament; and that before the iſſuing of the ſaid writ, one Iſaac Clerke being a citizen of London and a freeman of the company of Vintners, was choſen of the livery, and required to take on him the ſaid office, which he refuſed; on complaint being made to the mayor, &c. by the maſter and wardens of that company, the ſaid Clerke was ſummoned to appear, &c. which he did and refuſed to take on him the ſaid office, and being admoniſhed by the court to conform, did ſtill refuſe, that the mayor, &c. by warrant in writing did commit him to the cuſtody, &c. there to remain till he ſhould conſent and declare, that he would accept the ſaid office; and that this was the cauſe of his impriſonment.

It was urged againſt this return, that it conſiſted of ſeveral facts, of which this court could not take any notice, but that none of theſe facts were contained in the warrant of commitment, and no matter ought to be put into the return which the warrant itſelf does not lead unto.

The firſt exception taken was, that the return is void, both in ſubſtance and form; and is void in form for the following reaſons:

Becauſe it is laid ſpecially, that the mayor and aldermen have a cuſtom to commit, till the offender ſhall conſent and declare his willingneſs to take on him the office; but did not ſet forth to whom he ſhould ſignify ſuch conſent; beſides it is a void and impertinent cuſtom to commit a man to priſon, until he ſhould conſent and declare to hold an office.

On the return of an habeas corpus, 1 Mod. 10. the cauſe of impriſonment appeared to be, for that he being choſen of the livery, refuſed to ſerve, &c.

2dly, The gaoler has not ſet forth his warrant in theſe words, but only that by a certain warrant in writing according to the cuſtom, &c. the defendant was committed, and this is introduced with a long ſtory, not pertinent to the commitment itſelf, of which he has not ſet forth any cauſe.

3dly, That in the return a cuſtom was laid for the mayor, &c. to commit the offender to the cuſtody of the ſheriffs of London or other officer; and the gaoler has returned, that he was committed to my cuſtody, when it does not appear that he was either ſheriff or officer at that time; ſo that more is put in the judgment than is warranted by the cuſtom.

Per curiam, A commitment, till he ſhould declare his conſent to accept the office, is more than if he had been committed till he ſhould actually conſent; therefore though the court of aldermen might commit him until he ſhould conſent, yet they have no power to impriſon him till he ſhould declare it.

As to the warrant, it is always ſet forth at large in a return made on an extra judicial commitment, but when a man is committed by a court of record, there is no warrant at all; therefore the court of aldermen in this caſe cannot be intended to proceed judicially, becauſe the commitment is by warrant in writing. They are the proper judges of an excuſe made by the defendant, why he will not take on him the livery, and if they adjudge it inſufficient, and appoint him to accept it, and he refuſes, it is a contempt of their authority, for which they may commit him.

But here he is committed to the keeper of Newgate, who may be an officer of the city, but not one attending the court of aldermen; ſo that it does not appear, that he is a proper officer of that court to receive him, and therefore not like a commitment by this court to the Marſhal, who is the proper officer always attending the court; and ſo is the ſheriff, where the commitment is made by a judge of oyer and terminer: Neither does it appear that Newgate is in London; but if it did, he ought to be committed to the ſheriffs, and not to the keeper of Newgate, though they might have taken him as their officer; but this court cannot take notice that he is an officer to the ſheriffs, no more than they can what boroughs ſend burgeſſes to parliament. As for inſtance; by ſtat. 17. Car. 2. thoſe who preach in conventicles ſhall not come, or be within five miles of a borough which ſends burgeſſes to parliament. A man was indicted on this ſtatute for living in ſuch a borough; but it was quaſhed in this court, becauſe it was not averred, that the borough wherein the defendant lived did ſend burgeſſes to parliament.

Now certainly it is as well known by this court, what boroughs ſend burgeſſes to parliament, as that the keeper of Newgate is an officer of the ſheriffs of London; for which reaſon the return was held inſufficient; and the defendant was diſcharged. Vide Mod. Rep. v. 5. p. 156.

Now, Sir G. Heathcote had in fact made a return, but a return of different perſons, (as to three of them) than what (the council moving ſaid) appeared on the ſcrutiny to have been really choſen.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, the court refuſed to grant a mandamus, being of opinion that the granting of it would probably long continue that confuſion in the city, that a little good advice might ſoon put an end to. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 49.

Trinity, 5 Geo. Argyle v. Hunt.

A libel was brought in the ſpiritual Court for the word whore, which on the face of the libel appeared to have been ſpoken in London; and after ſentence the court was moved for a prohibition, becauſe the defect of juriſdiction appeared in the libel itſelf, and the court will judicially take notice of the cuſtom of London, where an action lies for the word whore.

Per curiam. The rule is, that you ſhall never alledge matters out of the libel as a ground for a prohibition after ſentence, but the foundation of our granting it muſt ariſe out of the libel itſelf in defect of juriſdiction. And if there is a defect of juriſdiction appearing in the libel, then the party never comes too late, for the ſentence and all other proceedings are a mere nullity. But where the ſpiritual court has an original juriſdiction which is to be taken from them on account of ſome matter ariſing in the ſuit, as for defect of trial; there after ſentence the party ſhall never have a prohibition, becauſe he himſelf has acquieſced in their manner of trial. It is true, theſe words appear to be ſpoke in London, but how does the cuſtom of London appear to us! There is nothing of that in the libel, and though we have ſuch a private knowledge of it, that on motion we do not put the party to produce an affidavit, becauſe the other ſide never diſputes it, yet we cannot judicially take notice of it, and if any body will inſiſt on an affidavit, we muſt have it in every caſe. It was never known, that the court judicially takes notice of private cuſtoms, but they are always ſpecially returned. Therefore here a prohibition was denied. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 187.

Eaſter, 6 Geo. Withers v. Warner. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment given in the C. B. in an action on the caſe on ſeveral promiſes, the want of an original and warrants of attorney were aſſigned for error.

It was argued by the defendant in error's council, that as to the warrants of attorney, the plaintiff has not verified the error by the return of a certiorari, ſo we have entered to that error, that he has not ſent the writ, and laid that matter out of the caſe.

As to the original, I apprehend the plaintiff has not verified his error in the manner he has alledged it, which can only be done by one of theſe two ways, either by the party's coming in and confeſſing it, or by his procuring the return of a certiorari, that there is no original in the cauſe: here is no confeſſion of the error, and therefore the queſtion will be on the return of the certiorari, whether by that return the plaintiff in error has ſo far eſtabliſhed the truth of his aſſignment of errors, as to be entitled to have this judgment reverſed. And I take it he has not done ſo in this caſe, for the action being laid in London, therefore the certiorari commands the cuſtos brevium of the C. B. that he ſearch for the original writ of the aforeſaid court of the Bench of London, of Eaſter term, in the fifth year of the King, he ſhould certify to the court what he found about it. To this the cuſtos brevium returns, that he has ſearched for the original writ of the ſaid Lord the King in his City of London, and has not any ſuch original writ of the City of London of the aforeſaid term in his cuſtody, all which may be true, and yet there may be an original to warrant the judgment, directed (as all other writs are) to the ſheriffs of London only: and therefore the command being to ſearch for a writ directed to the ſheriffs of London, and the return being, that there is none directed to the ſheriffs of the City of London, that amounts to no more than if he had ſaid, I am ordered, it is true, to ſearch the files of writs in London, but inſtead of that, I have peruſed all the writs of the City of London, and find none between theſe parties; or in other words, I cannot find an original directed, &c. as never any ſuch original in the world was ever made.

It was further objected, 1ſt. That taking this return as a matter of fact, then, though London and the City of London are one and the ſame, yet in point of fact a writ directed to the ſheriffs of London is not a writ directed to the ſheriffs of the City of London. 2dly. In the next place, to take it as matter of law, it is to be conſidered how this certiorari and return are poſſible to be reconciled; and I can ſee but one way to do it, viz. by the court's taking notice judicially that London is a City, which I apprehend they never will do. Adjourned.

And this term Pratt, Chief Juſtice, and the reſt of the judges were of opinion that they muſt take notice that London was a City, it being mentioned ſo in the ſeveral acts of parliament; and therefore held the error to be verified, and the judgment of the C. B. was reverſed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 309.

Trinity, 7 Geo. Fazerakerſley v. Wiltſhire.

On an hab. corp. directed to the Mayor's court of London, the cuſtom of London was returned, that the porterage from any veſſel in the river, and meterage of corn, roots, &c. imported or exported, belongs to the City, upwards from Stain's Bridge to London Bridge, and down as far as Yendal in Kent, and alſo another cuſtom to make bye-laws, confirmed by Richard 2. where any of their cuſtoms wanted a proper remedy.

That in the 18th year of James 1. a bye-law was made by the corporation, that the corn-porters ſhould be a company, with twenty-four aſſiſtants, who were called free porters, who ſhould work at a particular ſettled rate; and that none but the free porters ſhould intermeddle in importing or exporting any corn, roots, &c. within the bounds mentioned in the cuſtom, on pain of 20 s. for every offence, (except in time of danger or urgent neceſſity, or in the caſe of periſhable goods) the forfeiture to be recovered by action in the name of the Chamberlain, and thereby four hundred porters are appointed for the future.

That the free porters have ever ſince uſed and exerciſed this bye-law till the defendant intruded, by carrying of barley, tho' a free porter was preſent, whereby he forfeited 20 s. which the plaintiff as Chamberlain is entitled to demand and to have, and for which he ſues in the Mayor's Court.

The defendant's council argued againſt a procedendo, and that the return might be filed, 1ſt. Becauſe it is informal in ſetting out the claim. 2dly. Becauſe the cuſtom is ill. And then, 3dly. The bye-law muſt fall of courſe. Or, 4thly. Though the cuſtom ſhould be good, the bye-law is ill.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice. I am of opinion that both the cuſtom and bye-law are good, notwithſtanding the objections that have been taken: I ſhall not go over them all, becauſe the opinion of the court has been given as to ſome of them on the former arguments.

A cuſtom to reſtrain trade in a particular place is good; and ſurely much more ſo, where the reſtraint is only from bodily labour in one inſtance, than where it prevents a man from exerciſing an art he has been a long time learning. I think the cuſtom is good, as it is a convenience to the public, and that there is an equivalent by the obligation the city is under to provide porters; if they do not, I am of opinion that an action will lie, as in the common caſe of a ferry; neither ther is the merchant obliged to rely on an action only, for he may certainly employ whom he pleaſes, if the free porters do not attend. The convenience to the merchant is very great, in having perſons ready to aſſiſt him as ſoon as he comes into port, and ſo not obliged to go and ſearch for porters who are ſtrangers to him.

As to the objection about the extent, I think it is fully anſwered by the ancient records that have been cited, and above all, by the confeſſion of the Attorney General, which is of more weight than any of the reſt; ſince it cannot be imagined, that the King's Attorney would confeſs a juriſdiction againſt the Crown, which the City had not the cleareſt right to. We muſt take the port to be within the limits; or if it went beyond the limits of the City, yet I do not ſee how this caſe can be diſtinguiſhed from that of the Graveſend watermen. The cuſtom of meetage extends as far, and yet that has never been queſtioned on this account.

There is no doubt but the bye-law may be good in part, and not as to the reſt; for where it conſiſts of ſeveral particulars, it is to all purpoſes as ſeveral bye-laws, though the proviſions are thrown together under the form of one. I am of opinion there ought to be a procedendo.

The court was moved for a prohibition for theſe words ſpoken in London, " you are a cuckoldly dog, " and bid the bitch your wife come out." And the caſe of Evans v. Howard, Hilary 12 Ann, was cited, where the words, " ſhe is big with child," ſpoken of a ſingle woman, were held tantamount to calling her whore, and a prohibition iſſued. So Eaſter 1 Geo. Wilbourn v. Coddy, the wife libelled for calling her huſband cuckold; and a prohibition was granted.

Per curiam. Formerly, it was held that words tantamount were not within the cuſtom of London, but the later reſolutions have denied the caſe in Lutw. 1042. And Michaelmas 11 W. 3. Smith v. Glaſs in this court, the words ſpoken in London, were, " ſhe was " never married, and what is her hopeful ſon?" and by the opinion of the whole court a prohibition was granted: and ſo there muſt in this caſe. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 545. Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 115.

Trinity, 9 Geo. Cooke v. Wingfield.

On a libel exhibited againſt the defendant for defamatory words ſpoken by him in London, after ſentence, he moved for a prohibition, and obtained a rule that the plaintiff ſhould ſhew cauſe, &c. why a prohibition ſhould not go.

And it was ſhewn for cauſe, that it ought to appear on the face of the libel that the matter is not of ſpiritual conuſance; otherwiſe that court ſhall not be prohibited, eſpecially after ſentence; but no ſuch thing appears on this libel, for the defendant only ſuggeſts a cuſtom in London, that defamatory words ſpoken there are actionable, which ought not to be ſuggeſted, nor any thing offered in proof which is out of the libel, eſpecially ſince the defendant has ſubmitted ſo far to the juriſdiction of the ſpiritual court till ſentence was given againſt him.

If there had been any ſuch cuſtom it ought to have been pleaded in bar to the juriſdiction of that court, for the courts of Weſtminſter are not officially to take judicial notice that there is any ſuch cuſtom in London.

Per curiam, there is a difference between a motion of this kind before and after ſentence in the ſpiritual court, for in the one caſe this cuſtom need not be proved by affidavit, becauſe it is ſufficiently known; but a judicial notice ſhall never be taken of it after ſentence. So the rule was diſcharged. Vide Mod. Rep. v. 8. p. 176.

A bye-law was made in London, that no perſon but a freeman of that city ſhould exerciſe any trade or art therein under ſuch a penalty. The defendant not being free of the city of London played as a muſician at ſeveral city entertainments, for which he was ſued in the Mayor's court in London, for uſing the trade of a muſician, not being free of the city; which cauſe being removed into this court by hab. corp. it was inſiſted for him that he was a muſician, and attended with other maſters in muſic at the feaſt of the ſons of the clergy, being imployed by the ſtewards of the ſaid feaſt, and becauſe they did not employ the city muſicians, they ſet up this proſecution againſt the defendant, and would now extend this bye-law to muſick, which is a ſcience, and no trade; beſides it is improper to have the bye-laws of London tried in any of the courts of London.

Per curiam. Let there be a conſultation, it not being proper to determine this queſtion on motion. The cuſtoms of London are always tried in their own courts; but if the judge refuſes (on requeſt) to let the fact be ſtated ſpecially, we will ſet aſide the verdict; and therefore a procedendo was granted, but with this direction, that the plaintiff ſhould admit the matter to be found ſpecially at the trial, otherwiſe the court would not grant another procedendo in the like caſe.

Afterwards the cauſe was tried in London; and at the trial a diſtinction was made between exerciſing ſuch handicrafts for lucre and gain (which was the defendant's caſe) and exerciſing them for diverſion and amuſement; and that the one was within the bye-law, and the other not; and thereon the plaintiff had a verdict and judgment; but afterwards the defendant took up his freedom and acquieſced. Vide Mod. Rep. v. 8. p. 211.

On a mandamus to admit George Warren to his freedom of the city of London, he having ſerved an apprenticeſhip to the warden of the company of merchant taylors, the chamberlain made a return of the cuſtom of London to make bye-laws, and that a bye-law was made the 19*th of October* 6 W. & M. That no perſon uſing the trade of a joiner ſhould be made free of any other company but that of the joiners, with an expreſs prohibition to the chamberlain to that effect: and that every perſon who had ſerved an apprenticeſhip to a joiner ſhould on notice take up his freedom, with a penaly of 10*l.* if he is admitted of any other company. That this man has uſed the trade of a joiner, wherefore he was never admitted.

Per curiam. The common council have power to make any reaſonable bye-laws; and this ſeems to be of that nature.

Now this bye-law being agreeable to the conſtitution of the city, and not reſtraining trade, but rather regulating it by ſubjecting ſeveral artificers to be under the inſpection of others, who underſtand the ſame trade, which cannot be better done, than by compelling them to take their freedom in a company of that trade in which they are employed; therefore this was adjudged a reaſonable bye-law.

The freedom of the city cannot be taken from a man, provided he will take up his freedom in a proper company; and if that company will not admit him, the court will grant a mandamus to compel them; but on this return it appears, that every man who exerciſes the trade of a joiner, &c. within the city of London, ought to be free of the company of joiners, but it does not ſhew that the defendant did exerciſe that trade in the city, &c. but that he did exerciſe the trade of a joiner generally, without ſaying where, and then it might be at York or any where elſe; but it is his exerciſing it within the city of London which gives them juriſdiction; and for this cauſe the matter was adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. v. 8. p. 268.

The recorder of London came to the bar, and certified two cuſtoms of that city, ore tenus, i. e. by word of mouth.

On which the council for the motion moved, that the recorder of London might return two writs of certiorari directed to the lord mayor and aldermen of London, to certify two of the cuſtoms of their city.

The caſe was as follows, viz. An action of treſpaſs on the caſe brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant, for obſtructing his ancient lights, by a new erection or building which the defendant had raiſed againſt them: To which the defendant had (by leave) pleaded two juſtifications, both of them were, that there is an ancient cuſtom in the city of London, "That if any perſon has a meſſuage or houſe in the city of London, "adjoining or contiguous to another meſſuage or "houſe, or to the ancient foundations of one in the ſaid "city, which former houſe has ancient lights or windows fronting oppoſite to or over ſuch other adjoining or contiguous meſſuage or houſe or ancient foundation of one, ſuch other perſon, owner of the latter "meſſuage or houſe or ancient foundation of one, may "well and lawfully exalt ſuch his meſſuage or houſe, or "rebuild on the ancient foundations of ſuch his adjacent "or contiguous meſſuage or houſe any new meſſuage or "houſe, to any heighth that he ſhall pleaſe, againſt and "oppoſite to the ſaid ancient lights and windows of ſuch "firſt mentioned neighbouring meſſuage or houſe, to "which his meſſuage or houſe or ancient foundations of "a meſſuage or houſe are ſo contiguous or adjoining; "and thereby darken and obſcure ſuch ancient lights "and windows of ſuch firſt mentioned neighbouring "houſe, having ſuch ancient lights and windows: "unleſs there had been ſome written inſtrument or "record of an agreement or reſtriction to the contrary."

On this plea iſſue was joined; and a certiorari iſſued, directed to the mayor and aldermen of the city of London, to certify whether they have or have not ſuch a cuſtom.

The ſecond plea, iſſue, and certiorari, were the ſame with the firſt, only with this difference, or rather extenſion of the cuſtom pleaded, viz. That the owner of any erection or building, or the ancient foundation of any erection or building, might well and lawfully exalt ſuch erection or building, or erect and build thereon a new erection or building to any heighth that he pleaſes, &c. and ſo on as in the former plea: only that the former plea confined the claim of the privilege, to meſſuages or houſes; which this latter plea extends to all erections or buildings.

The Recorder of London accordingly certified ore tenus, by command of the lord mayor and aldermen (after having recited the pleadings and certiorari), That there is ſuch a cuſtom as is alledged in the former plea; but that there is no ſuch cuſtom as is alledged in the latter plea.

Then the Recorder delivered in both the writs of certiorari, with written copies of the reſpective returns annexed. And the court ordered the certiorari, on which the cuſtom was allowed to be filed, and the return recorded. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 248.

Lunatics and Ideots.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Hard's Caſe.

The court was moved to quaſh an order of juſtices, for removing an ideot to the place of the laſt legal ſettlement of his father; the council who moved the court compared it to the caſe of a baſtard, who is maintained by the pariſh where he is born.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The father of an ideot ought to maintain him, and if he cannot, the pariſh or place where the father is ſettled muſt do it. There is no difference between an ideot and any other poor child. The caſe of a baſtard differs, for this reaſon, becauſe he has no father, or rather none that the law looks on as ſuch; and therefore till ſtat. 18. Eliz. c. 3. the pariſhes where they were born were bound to maintain them. Eaſter, 12 Ann. The Queen v. —— Fellows, M. D.

The defendant was convicted on an information in this court, for aſſaulting and beating one Mr. A. pretending he was a lunatic, and for impriſoning him as a madman, until he procured him to ſign and execute a letter of attorney directed to his wife, by colour of which, he had received and diſpoſed of to the value of 1000 l. but it was not ſet out that it was diſpoſed of to his own uſe. Now the court was moved for judgment againſt the defendant, to have corporal puniſhment, becauſe he was worth nothing.

The defendant's council objected in mitigation of the fine, that the form of the indictment was not right; for that letter of attorney was not proper, and that the latin word litera did not ſignify a writing.

Secondly. That it is not ſaid, that he diſpoſed of this money to his own uſe, for he might diſpoſe of it to the uſe of the proſecutor in payment of his debts.

Per curiam. It is well enough, letter of attorney is a technical term, and well known in the law; and it is ſaid it was ſigned and dated ſuch a day; and it is intended neceſſarily, that the money was diſpoſed of to his own uſe when received in this manner; for this is a fraud mixed with great violence.

At another day the defendant had judgment given againſt him, it appearing by the evidence, that by this cheat and violence he had procured to himſelf about 1000 l. that he had debauched his wife, that pretending to cure him of lunacy, he beat him, hand-cuffed him, gave him ſeveral ſtrong purges in the night, and carried him about at one or two o'clock in the morning bare-headed in the rain.

The defendant was adjudged to ſtand in the pillory, to be ſent to the houſe of correction in Southwark, to be whipped naked, to be kept at work there for the ſpace of one year, to be fined 600 l. and to find ſureties for his good behaviour during life. Vide Forteſcue, page 166.

Mandamus.

Michaelmas, 2 W. & M. The King and Queen v. Lambert.

A mandamus was awarded for the reſtitution of Dr. Lambert to the office of Archdeacon of Saliſbury; and the return was, that he was not duly elected; which was inſiſted to be bad, becauſe a negative pregnant, but it ought to be, he was not elected as is ſaid. 1 Sid. 209, 210.

Per curiam. The return is good; for the writ recites, that he was lawfully and duly elected, and the return is a direct anſwer; and ſo held in the caſe reported by Siderfin. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 2.

Eaſter, 3 W. & M. The City of Exeter v. Glide.

A mandamus was brought to reſtore the defendant to the place of Alderman and Chamberlain of Exeter.

The ſubſtance of the return was, that the city is an ancient city and body politic, that the Mayor thereof is an ancient officer; that there are twenty-four Aldermen, and ſo many citizens there, who have uſed to be of the common council, and had a court there, &c.

That the defendant being an inhabitant of the ſaid city, was choſen Alderman thereof, and as ſuch was a juſtice of the peace, which is an office of truſt and magiſtracy.

That being ſo choſen, he retired from, and deſerted his habitation, and removed himſelf and family to Topſham, without the city, &c. and voluntarily neglected and refuſed to execute his ſaid office, and ſets forth wherein, &c.

That ſeveral courts of common council were held there, of which he had notice, but did not attend, being abſent forty times in three years.

That when he was preſent he gave ſcurrilous and reproachful language to the court; for which he was removed from his ſaid office.

That he could not be reſtored; becauſe he had not taken the oaths before the 1ſt day of Auguſt 1991, according to a late act of parliament, &c.

The defendant's council argued, that the return was inſufficient as to the matter returned. And that the firſt part thereof was not good for three reaſons.

1ſt, Becauſe it was not alledged that Topſham was without the liberty of the city, for it may be without the city, and yet within the liberty of the city; beſides if it had appeared that Topſham was without the city, yet the defendant removing there did not give them cauſe to deprive him of his office, becauſe it does not appear by the return that he was diſabled from doing his duty by reaſon of his abode there, or that his attendance was neceſſary.

2dly, It is not ſaid, that the defendant abſented himſelf, and removed his family, without a reaſonable cauſe, as ſickneſs, &c. or how long he was abſent.

3dly, The next cauſe aſſigned, that he voluntarily neglected thoſe things which appertained to his office as a juſtice of the peace; this is too general, and a return to a mandamus ought to be as certain as a return to a habeas corpus.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, the court refuſed to grant a peremptory mandamus.

Three of the judges were of opinion not to grant a peremptory mandamus, for they held, that among the many cauſes returned of the disfranchizement of the defendant, one was ſufficient, viz. that being an Alderman and juſtice of peace of the city of Exeter, he deſerted and left his habitation there, and went and dwelt at Topſham.

They ſaid it was incident to the duty and place of an Alderman to be reſident where he is choſen, his very name imports it, and a removal therefrom, makes him incapable of doing his duty where he ought, that it was not a place of any profit, but of freedom for the government of the city. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 33.

Trinity, 3 W. 3. Lee v. Oxenden.

The plaintiff Lee ſuggeſting that he was duly ſworn and admitted into the place and office of a proctor, &c. and alſo that he was diſplaced and amoved from his ſaid office, prayed a mandamus to be reſtored, and inſiſted, that he had a freehold in his office, and that it concerned the adminiſtration of juſtice, but the mandamus was denied, becauſe this matter was merely ſpiritual, and this court cannot take notice of it, nor correct errors in their proceedings, in caſes where they have a proper juriſdiction and cognizance; ſo that this being of an eccleſiaſtical nature, and the deprivation being a judicial act, it cannot be avoided but by appeal. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 230.

Trinity, 5 W. & M. King and Queen v. Gower.

A ſpecial mandamus was directed to Dr. Gower, &c. reciting, that ſuch particular fellows of his college had not taken the oaths, ſo that their fellowſhips were void by ſtat. 1 W. & M. and requiring him to turn them out, and to place new fellows in their room; the return was of ſeveral ſtatutes, one of which was, that no one ſhall loſe his freedom without being heard and admitted to anſwer the charge, and that the perſons named in this mandamus were duly elected, &c. and that it does not appear, &c. but they had taken the oaths.

Per curiam. As to this laſt part of the return, it is ill, becauſe the oaths are to be taken before the maſter and fellows; but the chief queſtion was, whether a mandamus would lie in this caſe, and in this manner, and the court inclined, that it would not, becauſe the fellows who are to be turned out, are no parties to this writ, ſo that they would be diſplaced without being heard, and without anſwer; and this differs from the common caſes of mandamus, which are uſually to reſtore men to their rights, and are directed to them by whom the injury is done; and though it may happen, that even in ſuch caſe a man may be turned out of his place, yet that is collateral, and not by command of the writ. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 231.

The King v. Taylor.

On a mandamus to reſtore him to his place of an Alderman of the city of Glouceſter; the Mayor and Bailiffs, returned their power, &c. and that Taylor was removed by thirty of the common council men in the council chamber aſſembled, for that he was a common drunkard.

Per curiam. The return is ill, becauſe it does not appear that the thirty common council men were then and there aſſembled as a common council, for they might be there to feaſt, or to other purpoſes.

But the cauſe returned is ſufficient to remove him. It is true, if a man is drunk by accident, that would not be cauſe to remove him; but habitual drunkenneſs makes a man unworthy to be a magiſtrate, and diſables him in point of government.

Though the removal was by the Mayor and thirty of the common council men, yet the writ ought not to be directed to them, but to the corporation by its proper name, as it was in this caſe to the Mayor and Bailiffs.

But the return being ill for the reaſons before mentioned, a writ of reſtitution was granted; and afterwards the queſtion was, whether the corporation might proceed againſt him de novo for his drunkenneſs? And the court held they might. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 231.

Michaelmas, 5 W. & M. The King and Queen v. St. John's College Cambridge.

By ſtat. 1 W. & M. made for the abrogating of the oaths of allegiance and ſupremacy, and appointing of other oaths, it is enacted, that if any governor, head, or fellow of any college or hall in either of the univerſities ſhall neglect or refuſe to take the oaths thereby appointed, for ſix months after the firſt of Auguſt, and before ſuch perſon or perſons, as by any act or acts are authoriſed and impowered to tender the abrogated oaths, &c. that then the government or fellowſhip of every perſon ſo neglecting or refuſing, ſhall be void.

The abrogated oaths were enjoined by ſtat. 25 Car. 2. to be taken by all perſons in office, either in the court of Chancery, or King's Bench, or quarter ſeſſions for the county where he or they ſhall inhabit.

Several fellows of St. John's college in Cambridge had not taken the oaths purſuant to ſtat. 1 W. & M. and thereon a mandamus iſſued out of this court, directed to Humphrey Gower, who was head of the ſaid college, and to the fellows and maſters there, ſetting forth the ſaid act, and that ſuch fellows had not taken the oaths, and and as we are informed they ſtill continue in the quiet enjoyment of their fellowſhips; therefore by this writ they are commanded to amove them; but it was not ſaid, or ſignify the cauſe to us.

The return to the mandamus was, ſtat. 25 Ed. 3. whereby it is enacted, that none ſhall be put out of his freehold, unleſs he is duly brought in to anſwer, and be forejudged by the courſe of the law; and likewiſe ſtat. 28 Ed. 3. whereby it is enacted, that none ſhall be put out of his lands or tenements, without being brought to anſwer by due proceſs of law; that the twenty perſons mentioned in the writ, were in the firſt year of W. & M. ſworn fellows of the ſaid college, and were ſeized of a freehold in their fellowſhips, and that ſince the making of that ſtatute, they had not been brought to any trial, &c.

Then it was returned, that it does not in any manner appear that they had not taken the ſaid oaths.

It was further ſet forth, that the college was founded by Margaret, Counteſs of Richmond. That the Biſhop of Ely for the time being, was, by the laws of the foundreſs, appointed viſitor; that by ſome particular ſtatutes of the college (which were recited in the return) it is provided, that for great crimes the maſter, by the conſent of the ſenior fellows, on examination and enquiry, may proceed to an expulſion, and that they cannot expel for any other cauſe, &c.

This return was not ſubſcribed by any perſon, neither was the common ſeal of the college affixed to it, which (as was inſiſted on) ought to be done, becauſe without it the perſons were not ſhewn againſt whom to bring an action if the return ſhould be falſe.

But it was held, that the ſeal was not material, becauſe the writ was directed to the head of the college by name, therefore he is the perſon who is to make the return, and by conſequence againſt whom the action will lie if it is falſe.

It was argued againſt the writ, 1ſt, That it was illegal, and not warranted by law.

2dly, Admitting the writ to be good, then the matter returned is a ſufficient excuſe.

Per curiam. Stat. 1 W. & M. has a reference to ſtat. 7 Jac. the one appoints the oaths to be taken before ſuch perſons, who by any act were authoriſed to tender the oaths of allegiance now abrogated, and by the other the fellows of the colleges as fellows, are obliged to take them in the open hall, before the preſident; and therefore the members muſt and ought to take notice of ſuch public acts done in their college.

This cannot be taken to be a peremptory writ, becauſe it ſets forth the fact as we are informed, which words muſt go to the whole, and ſuch a conſtruction muſt be made when the writ is grounded on a ſuggeſtion as this is, but when on a judgment, it is otherwiſe.

The viſitor is made by the founder, and is the proper judge of the private laws of the college; he is to determine offences againſt thoſe laws. But where the law of the land is diſobeyed, this court will take notice thereof, notwithſtanding the viſitor, and in this caſe the proper way to put it in execution, is by the writ of mandamus. Adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 233.

Eaſter, 6 W. & M. Knipe v. Edwin.

A mandamus was directed to the Dean and Chapter of Weſtminſter, to admit the defendant to the office of high bailiff there, on the nomination of the Duke of Ormond, the high ſteward, and it was inſiſted, that he could not have an aſſize, becauſe he had not any ſeiſin or freehold before admittance.

Per curiam. An action on the caſe will not put a man in poſſeſſion of the office, for by that he ſhall only recover damages; on which a mandamus was granted, but without prejudice. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 281.

Michaelmas, 6 W. & M. The King and Queen, v. St. John's College, Oxford.

On an alias mandamus to admit one Mr. King to the place of a ſcholar in the college, being nominated thereunto by the mayor, &c. of Briſtol, to whom the right of nomination for this turn, of right did appertain, on the reſignation of one B.

The ſubſtance of the return was, viz. that the college was founded by Sir Thomas White; that the biſhop of Winton for the time being was the local viſitor thereof; that B. reſigned; that after the nomination of Mr. King by the mayor, &c. of Briſtol, the preſident of the ſaid college and ten ſenior fellows thereof aſſembled to conſider of his qualifications, and for that it was their opinion on proof of ſeveral facts, committed by Mr. King, inconſiſtent with good manners, he was by them refuſed as incapable of the ſcholarſhip, and therefore they admitted another.

It was argued in his behalf, that there was nothing in this return to hinder this court from granting a farther proceſs to compel the college to admit Mr. King, becauſe the reaſon of their refuſal was not poſitive, but general; and therefore it is impoſſible to try the falſehood of it in a collateral action, becauſe there is no fact returned.

For that part of the return which concerns the local viſitor is very immaterial, viz. that if Mr. King had any wrong done him he may appeal to the viſitor, and that therefore this court ſhould not interpoſe, until his ſentence be given.

1ſt, Becauſe he is only a private judge appointed by the founder, or the law, to determine offences againſt the laws of the college or place where he is viſitor, ſo that his power extends only over collegiate perſons and things; but Mr. King is not of the college, before admittance.

2dly, His power is alſo to determine rights on the ſtatutes of the college; but not on grants, which muſt be tried at the common law; and the queſtion here ariſes on the grant of the founder to the city of Briſtol.

If there is any cauſe or truth in this return, the college may turn him out after he is admitted, for the very ſame reaſons they now refuſe to admit him; but if he is not to be admitted at all, then the right of the city of Briſtol is wholly defeated.

It is as reaſonable that this court ſhould grant a mandamus to the college to admit perſons, as to grant ſuch writs to corporations, or to a particular company to make a man free thereof, or to the ordinary to compel him to grant adminiſtration to the next of kin; for where the caſes are alike, the remedies ſhould alſo concur. But the matter was adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 368.

Michaelmas, 6 W. & M. The King and Queen v. The Mayor of Cheſter.

A mandamus was granted to reſtore one Brett and eight other perſons to the place of common council men of Cheſter; the Mayor made a bad return, however, the court quaſhed the mandamus, being joint for nine perſons, when they had ſeveral offices and intereſts, and ought to have ſeveral writs of mandamus. Vide Salk. vol 3. page 230. Ibid. vol. 2. p. 436. *Mod. On a return to a mandamus granted to reſtore Shaw to the place of one of the burgeſſes of Wilton, after arguments, a peremptory mandamus was granted, becauſe the crime for which they removed him, was not well alledged in the return. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 113.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. The King v. Owen.

On a mandamus to ſhew cauſe why the defendant did not deliver the mace, and other enſigns of mayoralty to one Bennet, the ſucceeding mayor, &c. in which writ the uſual clauſe or ſignify the cauſe to us, was left out; and on a motion made to quaſh the writ, it was argued, that thoſe words were ſo material, that they could not be omitted; and it was compared to a precipe that he reſtore, for land, or a precipe, that he render a juſt account, which writs muſt always conclude thus, or ſhew cauſe why he has not done it.

But on the other ſide, the caſe of The King v. St. John's College, was cited in this court, where the ſame words were left out of a mandamus, the writ concluding with the words, as we are informed, and the court would not quaſh it, becauſe it being a mandatory writ, the perſon to whom it was directed ought to make a return, or obey it, and it is not abſolutely neceſſary that theſe words ſhould be inſerted.

Per curiam. They were firſt introduced in J. Bagg's caſe, but have been omitted in many caſes ſince, and therefore a pluries mandamus was granted. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 314.

The court was moved for a mandamus to the juſtices of peace, for that they proceeded to remove W. R. from his place of abode, after he had offered to give ſecurity to indemnify the pariſh.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. In a matter of right, as for inſtance, where a mandamus is prayed to reſtore a man, &c. we never require an affidavit of the fact, but this is required on a ſuppoſed failure of duty in the juſtices, and therefore a mandamus cannot be granted till affidavit is made, &c. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 230.

In an action on the caſe in the C. B. for a falſe return of a mandamus, judgment was given for the plaintiff on demurrer; and now this court was moved for a peremptory mandamus; but the motion was denied.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Every mandamus recites the fact, as it appears to us by the record. How can we ſay that in this caſe? we cannot take notice of the records of the C. B. You might have brought your action here. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 428.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. The King v. The Mayor and Burgeſſes of Wilton.

A mandamus iſſued to reſtore Elias Chalk to the place of a burgeſs of Wilton, to which was returned a cuſtom for the Mayor and Burgeſſes to remove for miſbehaviour: then they ſet forth ſeveral inſtances of miſbehaviour, and that he being thereon fully heard to all that was objected in the common council of the Mayor and Burgeſſes, and the fact being fully proved on him, they turned him out. It was objected, that it was not ſaid he was ſummoned. Style 51, 46, 452. 3 Bulſt. 189. 2 Keb. 489.

Per curiam. The end of the ſummons is, that he may be heard for himſelf, and therefore where he has been heard, want of ſummons is no objection; but this was afterwards determined on other objections, and a peremptory mandamus was granted. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 428. Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 254.

A mandamus iſſued to the Mayor and Commonalty of Oxford to reſtore one Slatford to the office of town-clerk; they returned their charter of incorporation, which gives them power to chuſe a diſcreet perſon to be town-clerk, to hold at the will of the Mayor and Aldermen; ſtat. 13 Car. 2. cap. 2. and ſtat. W. & M. about taking the oaths, and that the office of town-clerk being void, they choſe Slatford, and that he took the oaths of office before us the Mayor and Bailiffs; but did not before us the Mayor and Bailiffs take the oath of allegiance, whereby his office became void, and for this reaſon, &c. on which theſe three points were argued and ſettled:

1ſt. Whether the party that comes in is to take the oaths at his peril, or they are to tender them; and if he refuſed, whether it muſt not appear on the return?

Per curiam. He muſt take them at his peril; the magiſtrate need not tender to him, but he muſt tender himſelf to the magiſtrate, and demand them; and if it be refuſed, muſt ſue out a mandamus, and the magiſtrate is puniſhable; if the law were otherwiſe, it would be in the power of the magiſtrate to elude the act in favour of the party.

2dly. Whether it be enough to ſay, he did not take the oaths before them? And this was held naught; for two juſtices have a power to adminiſter the oath, and he might take the oath before them.

3dly. Whether a perſon that was only tenant at will ſhould have a peremptory mandamus?

Per curiam. We do not here determine whether there ought to be a good cauſe, or not, for ſuch removal; but ſuppoſe it may be without cauſe, yet ſtill they muſt determine their will: now they do not return a determination of his office by their will, as the reaſon why they do not admit him, but the ſpecial matter of his not taking the oaths; therefore ſince his office continues, and this excuſe is inſufficient, he ought to be reſtored. A peremptory mandamus was granted. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 428. Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 316.

A motion was made for an attachment, for not returning an alias mandamus.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. In caſe of a mandamus out of Chancery, no attachment lies till the pluries, for that is in the nature of an action to recover damages for the delay; but on a mandamus out of this court, the firſt writ ought to be returned; yet an attachment is never granted without a peremptory rule to return the writ, and then an attachment iſſues for the contempt; and in this caſe a peremptory rule was made. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 429

They returned a mandamus, and there was neither the hand of the mayor, nor the ſeal of the corporation to it.

Per curiam. It is well enough without it; before the ſtatute of York, the ſheriff need not have ſet his hand to any return. If the return be falſe, you may bring your action againſt the whole body politic for making a falſe return; and againſt a particular perſon for procuring a falſe return. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 126.

Trinity, 9 W. 3. The King v. The Mayor of Andover.

On a mandamus to reſtore a perſon to the place of an Alderman in Andover, the return was, that he was ſo poor that he could not pay the taxes.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Where a man through poverty cannot pay ſcot and lot, it is a fit ground to deprive him of magiſtracy, but not of liberty; wherefore a mandamus was denied. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 229.

Michaelmas, 9 W. 3. Anonymous.

A mandamus was granted laſt term to the judge of the Spiritual Court, to grant adminiſtration to J. S. who, as he ſuggeſted, was next of kin to the inteſtate.

The court was moved for a ſuperſedeas to it, for that the fact was, that J. S. being cited, refuſed to come in; on which another of the kindred ſued for adminiſtration, but was oppoſed in it by one who pretended there was a will; which matter was now under controverſy before the judge there, and therefore till that was determined, the ſpiritual judge could not obey the mandamus.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, there is a difference between a controverſy and no controverſy; when there is no controverſy, we do ſo; but here is a controverſy, and we will not grant a mandamus till it is determined. For ſuppoſe the will ſhould prove good, what then will the granting adminiſtration ſignify? Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 374.

Michaelmas, 9 W. 3. Sir Richard Raine's Caſe.

One Mr. Grey made a will, dated the 19th day of March 1697, but did not ſign it, in which he made Mr. Tench, &c. executors, and died in the April following. After his death the executors produced this will in the Prerogative Court to prove it, but the court doubting of the validity, becauſe it was not ſigned by the teſtator, iſſued a citation to ſummon in all the perſons, who would be entitled to adminiſtration, if this will ſhould be adjudged null. And they all appeared, and retained proctors, except the brother of the party deceaſed, who was in contempt, for which the court proceeded againſt him to excommunication. On which, on the laſt day of laſt Trinity term, the brother moved this court for a mandamus to be directed to the judge of the Prerogative Court, to command him to grant adminiſtration to him, as next of kin to his brother deceaſed, on ſuggeſtion that he died inteſtate. And a mandamus was granted, returnable the beginning of this term. And now the court was moved for a ſuperſedeas to the mandamus, on affidavit that Mr. Grey made a will, the validity of which is now in conteſt in the Prerogative Court; and a ſuperſedeas was granted by the whole court. 1ſt. Becauſe they ſaid, that the court was ſurpriſed in the former motion; for they were not informed that Mr. Grey the brother was in contempt in the Prerogative Court, of which, if they had been appriſed, they ſhould have denied the former motion; for the party who makes ſuch a motion ought firſt to reſort to the ſpiritual judge, and requeſt the granting of adminiſtration to him, and not be in contempt for the ſame thing.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that the diſtinction always is, when it is admitted on all ſides that the party died inteſtate, and when not. When it is admitted, then, if the Ordinary will not grant to the next of kin, this court will grant a mandamus. But if a will is produced, the judge of the Spiritual Court muſt determine whether the will is good or not, before he grants adminiſtration. For if he grants adminiſtration, and afterwards the will is proved, the grantee will be executor in his own wrong. And the judge of the Spiritual Court is the only proper judge to determine the validity of wills for things perſonal, and therefore the probate is undeniable evidence to a jury: therefore if Mr. Grey, the brother of the deceaſed, will demand a return of the mandamus, if the judge of the Prerogative Court makes a return of the ſubſtance of the affidavit, it will be a very good return; or if he returns that the deceaſed made a will poſitively, although there may be an appeal, and the will thereon adjudged null, yet no action on the caſe will lie on that return, becauſe the party who made the return was the proper judge of the ſubject matter, and no action lies againſt a man for what he does judicially. To which the other judges agreed. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 262.

A mandamus was granted to admit J. S. to the office of Mayor. The court was moved, that the Mayor in poſſeſſion might have a rule to ſee the charter, that he might be able to make a return; for the other who had ſued out the mandamus was not duly elected: but it was denied, for he may return that; and in an action for a falſe return, ſhall have a rule to ſee the charter and take a copy; and it was ſaid, that the court went always on that difference. Vide Salk. vol 2. p. 430.

Eaſter, 10 W. 3. The King and Morrice v. The Mayor, &c. of Lincoln; or, The King v. Morrice.

On a mandamus to admit Morrice to the freedom of the city of Lincoln, he having ſerved ſeven years apprenticeſhip there, which the Mayor refuſed, becauſe he refuſed to take the freeman's oath, he being a quaker, but offered to make his ſolemn affirmation according to the late ſtatute of 7 W. 3. c. 34. And the court were of opinion that he ought to be admitted on his ſolemn affirmation; for the office of a freeman is no place of profit, or office in the government within that ſtatute: by his ſerving his apprenticeſhip he had a right to the freedom, and his admiſſion, whereunto the taking of an oath is not eſſential, but only by cuſtom: and the intent of the act was, that unleſs in thoſe caſes excepted by proviſoe, the affirmation of a quaker ſhould be as available as his oath; and though it was returned in this caſe, that every freeman had the liberty to run a cow on the common within the ſaid city, yet that will not alter the caſe; but becauſe the writ was directed to the Mayor, &c. of the city of Lincoln in the county of Lincoln, and not in the county of the city of Lincoln, the writ was quaſhed; there being no ſuch perſons to whom a peremptory mandamus ſhould go.

The mandamus in this caſe being to admit him to the place and office of a freeman.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, was of opinion, that the writ ſhould have been to admit him to the privilege of a freeman, and not to the place and office. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 190. Raym. vol. 1. p. 337.

Eaſter, 10 W. 3. The King v. Blythe.

By the local ſtatutes of Clare Hall in the Univerſity of Cambridge, it is provided, that the perſon choſen by the Maſter, and a Majority of the fellows, be accounted a fellow.

It happened that Mr. Jennings was choſen by eight of the fellows, and another was choſen by ſix; and the Maſter of the Hall, Dr. Blythe, gave his vote with the ſix.

Mr. Jennings, ſuppoſing himſelf to be duly elected fellow brought his mandamus to be admitted, having been refuſed by the Maſter, &c. becauſe it was inſiſted that his concurrence was neceſſary; for by the ſtatutes of the founder, he muſt be one, and that without him a fellow could not be elected. The words are, choſen by the Maſter and a majority of the fellows.

There was a clauſe, that if any doubt ſhould ariſe about the expoſition of theſe ſtatutes, it ſhould be determined by the viſitor.

It was argued, that the viſitor had only a power to diſplace on miſdemeanor, he was appointed to a ſpecial purpoſe, viz. for puniſhing, and that the Maſter had only authority to correct for miſdemeanors.

Per curiam. It was never yet determined what power the viſitor has. In Dr. Patrick's caſe, the queſtion was, who was viſitor? and the court were divided in opinion.

All eleemoſinary corporations, who are to receive the charity of the founder, have viſitors, if they are eccleſiaſtical corporations; and if a particular viſitor is not provided by the founder, then the Ordinary of the place is viſitor; if they are lay-corporations, the founder and his heirs are perpetual viſitors.

Rokeby, Juſtice, was of opinion, that a fellowſhip was ſuch an intereſt, for which a mandamus ought to be granted; and it would appear on the return, whether the party had ſuch an intereſt or not.

The court were alſo of opinion, that the maſter had only a negative vote in this caſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 404.

Trinity, 10 W. 3. Wilkins v. Mitchell.

In an action of debt for rent brought in an inferior court, the plaintiff was nonſuited, whereon the defendant had judgment, but they refuſing to execute it, this court was moved for a mandamus, but it was denied, becauſe the defendant had a legal remedy, viz. by writ de executione judicii out of Chancery. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 229.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. The King v. The Mayor, &c. of Coventry.

On a mandamus to reſtore J. S. to be one of the common council houſe; the defendants returned, that they were an ancient corporation, and that the King by his letters patent, reciting their cuſtoms, amongſt which was this of electing perſons to be of the common council houſe, and removing them at pleaſure, did grant and confirm all their liberties, cuſtoms, &c. and that they by force of the ſaid cuſtom time out of mind uſed, according to the form of the letters patent aforeſaid, did remove him: and firſt, it was agreed, that the eſtate, whether by cuſtom or charter, has this condition annexed to it, that the corporation might diſplace him at will, without aſſigning any cauſe; but this differed from the caſe of the Recorder of Bath, who was appointed by the commiſſioners for regulating corporations: by their cuſtom they were to chuſe one learned in the law for a recorder; the corporation turned out Lord H. and returned, that he was not learned in the law; and held good; for whoever put him in, he muſt be ſo qualified by the cuſtom, and he may bring an action for a falſe return, if he be a perſon learned in the law. 2dly. This return was held naught, becauſe it did not appear that the corporation had any ſuch power, but only by the recital; whereas they ſhould have returned, that they had ſuch a power poſitively. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 430. Raym. vol. 1. p. 391.

A mandamus was granted to the Mayor, &c. of Norwich; it was moved, that the ſenſe of the Mayor differed from the majority of the corporation, and that he would execute the writ, whereas the corporation were for returning an excuſe, &c. And they prayed, that the Mayor might be ordered to deliver the writ to the reſt of the corporation; but not allowed.

Hilary, 11 W. 3. The Biſhop of St. David's v. Lucy.

In this caſe the court was moved on behalf of the biſhop, for a mandamus to the commiſſioners delegates, to admit the biſhop's allegations; and it was compared to the caſes where the court grants mandamuſes, to compel the granting of probates of wills, and letters of adminiſtration.

Holt chief juſtice, this court cannot grant a mandamus to them, to compel them to proceed according to their laws. Indeed mandamuſes are grantable to compel probates of wills, becauſe they concern temporal right; and to compel the grant of letters of adminiſtration, becauſe the ſtatute directs to whom they ſhall be granted. Therefore in the preſent caſe a mandamus was denied. Vide Raymond vol. 1. p. 544.

Trinity, 11 W. 3. Buckly v. Palmer.

An action was brought for a falſe return, and a verdict was found for the plaintiff, and a peremptory mandamus was moved for, and oppoſed, becauſe it was a hard verdict, &c.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. When an action is brought for a falſe return, and that is falſified, we cannot refuſe a peremptory mandamus.

Note. This motion cannot be made till four days are paſt after the return of the poſtea; becauſe the defendant has ſo long to move in arreſt of judgment. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 430.

Trinity, 11 W. 3. The King v. The Bailiffs and Burgeſſes of Malden.

A mandamus iſſued, reciting that whereas they ought to chuſe yearly two bailiffs, out of ſuch as had not been bailiffs for three years before, therefore they were commanded to chuſe. They returned their conſtitution by letters patent to be, to chuſe two for Aldermen, and that they had choſen two, according to the form and effect of their letters patent generally; and this was held naught, for they ought to deny their conſtitution to be as is mentioned in the writ, or ſhew a compliance with the writ; whereas they have acted according to a conſtitution ſet forth in the return different from the writ, and do not deny the ſuppoſal of the writ; wherefore a peremptory mandamus was granted. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 431. Raym. vol. 1. p. 481.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Uſher's Caſe.

On a motion for a mandamus to the vice chancellor of Oxford, to receive an appeal on the expulſion of a fellow.

Holt chief juſtice, if a mandamus goes, it muſt be directed to the vice chancellor, maſter, and ſcholars in convocation. And the only queſtion in this caſe is, whether or no if an original viſitor refuſes to accept an appeal, and to do the party aggrieved juſtice, we ſhall compel him to do it? wherefore let us be attended with the ſtatutes of the college, and we will conſider of it. On an action on the caſe, for a falſe return to a mandamus, againſt the mayor and aldermen of Norwich; it was objected, that it was not alledged that it belonged to them to obey the writ.

A mandamus was directed to the Mayor, Bailiffs, and all the principal burgeſſes of A. (except R. and S.) ſetting forth the conſtitution, and that R. and S. were capital burgeſſes, choſen by the commonalty to ſtand and ſerve for the Mayor for the enſuing year; and that they were to chuſe one of them. Therefore they were commanded to elect one of them accordingly. They returned ſtat. 13 Car. 2. ſeſſ. 2. c. 1. and that within twenty years next after the 25th day of March 1663, R. and S. were elected principal burgeſſes, and within a year before their election they had not received the ſacrament, whereby the election of both became void, and they are not principal burgeſſes; and this return was held naught: 1ſt. The court conſidered without the laſt words, and they are not, &c. And as to that, Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, the writ ſuppoſes them to be burgeſſes, and ſo the court muſt intend them, and this is not anſwered by the ſpecial matter of the return, which ſhews only that they were once elected, and that was a void election; whereas they might qualify themſelves and be choſen again; and here is nothing to exclude the intendment of a ſubſequent election, which is according to the ſuppoſal of the writ.

2dly. The court conſidered it with the laſt words, and held the words, and they are not principal burgeſſes, &c. to be only part of the concluſion or inference; and the Chief Juſtice ſaid, the law requires the moſt exact certainty in theſe caſes, becauſe the party cannot traverſe nor interplead; and it is not enough to offer a matter, ſo that the party may be able to falſify it in an action; but the matter muſt be ſo alledged, that the court may be able to judge of it and determine, whether it be a ſufficient cauſe or not? If the matter ſet forth in this return had been ſo alledged in a plea in bar, the plaintiff might have replied a ſubſequent election: therefore this return is uncertain; for there might have been a ſubſequent election. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 432. *Mod. A mandamus was directed to the Mayor, Aldermen, and commonalty of Rippon, to reſtore Sir Jonathan Jennings to his place of Alderman of Rippon; they returned themſelves to be incorporated by another name, viz. Mayor, Burgeſſes, and commonalty; and farther, that Sir Jonathan Jennings, at ſuch a time, at an aſſembly of the corporation, came and perſonally, freely, and in due manner reſigned his office, declaring he would continue to ſerve no longer in that office; whereon they choſe another in his room: and this declaration in a corporate aſſembly was held good, eſpecially ſince the corporation accepted it, and choſe another in his place; but till ſuch election he had power to wave his reſignation, but not afterwards; and whether a deed was neceſſary, or not neceſſary, is not material, becauſe they have poſitively returned that he reſigned, which is falſe if a deed was neceſſary, and there was none: alſo the court held the writ naught, becauſe it was directed to the corporation by a wrong name, but refuſed to grant a new writ of mandamus, becauſe an action lay againſt the particular perſons for the falſe return of this: therefore a new one would be vexatious. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 433. Raym. vol. 1. p. 563.

The court was moved for a mandamus to ſwear in a ſteward of a copyhold court.

Holt chief juſtice, the true reaſon of mandamuſes was when aldermen, capital burgeſſes, or ſuch other officers concerned in the adminiſtration of juſtice, were kept out, to ſwear them into, or at leaſt reſtore them to their places; and we ought not to grant it to ſwear in a regiſter for a biſhop, tho' it is an office of a public nature; and he ſaid he ſhould not care to do it for the ſteward of a leet, tho' heretofore it was uſed to ſwear in a phyſician of the college; and it is rare to grant it, where the perſon has any other remedy; and here the perſon is a private officer to do ſervice for the lord. The court was moved for a mandamus to commit adminiſtration to G. S.

Per curiam. We cannot do that, but we may grant adminiſtration to J. S. or to the next of kin, according to the ſtatute. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 140.

Hilary, 1 Ann. Steward v. Eddy.

A mandamus iſſued to grant adminiſtration to the wife of the inteſtate, or to the next of kin, and it was ſhewed, that there was a will pretended below, and adjudged no will: on an appeal from that ſentence, (which being a ſuſpenſion thereof,) the rule for the mandamus was diſcharged by the court. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Dr. Watſon's Caſe.

A mandamus was moved for, to ſwear in a ſurgeon to an hoſpital.

Holt, C. J. ſaid, it could not be; for he was but a private ſervant, and it was agreed, a mandamus had iſſued toſwear in a ſexton: therefore the rule was made for them to ſhew cauſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 118.

On a mandamus to ſwear in A. and B. as churchwardens, ſuggeſting that they were in due manner elected: the return was, that A. and B. were not in due manner elected. It was objected, that it ought not to be in due manner; but that it ought to be in the disjunctive, nor was either of them elected.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, reſolved; 1ſt, That one cannot be ſworn on this writ; for either both were choſen or the writ is miſconceived. 2dly, Where the writ is to ſwear one in due manner elected, that he was not in due manner elected is a good return, for it is an anſwer to the writ; but where it is to ſwear one elected churchwarden, there that he was not in due manner elected is naught; becauſe it is out of the writ, and evaſive. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 433. Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 83.

A mandamus was directed to the churchwardens and overſeers of the poor of the pariſh of Littleport in the Iſle of Ely, to make a rule to reimburſe the old overſeer of the poor what money he had laid out of his own for the relief of the poor.

The return to the mandamus was, that the major part of the pariſhioners did not agree to his account, and the queſtion was, whether Tawney, having been formerly overſeer, ſhould have a mandamus to the preſent overſeers to make a rate to reimburſe him the money he had laid out of his own pocket, to relieve the poor? It was inſiſted on his behalf, that he ought to have a mandamus, becauſe he was indictable for not relieving the poor, though he had none of the pariſh money in his hands, and he might have died in his office, therefore it ſeems reaſonable that the law ſhould give him ſome remedy, ſince it ſubjects him to the charge.

Per curiam. The law does not oblige him to lay out his own money to relieve the poor; but he is to make a rate, and that is to be allowed by the juſtices, and the poor are to be relieved out of this money when raiſed, otherwiſe the conſequence would be, that overſeers of the poor would lay out what money they pleaſed, and charge the pariſh with it; ſo that what he did in this caſe was voluntary, being in no wiſe compellable to do it, and therefore it would be unreaſonable in this court to compel the ſucceeding overſeers to reimburſe him; he ſhould either have kept his own money, or taken care to have had a rate made, and that would have been his proper method, for this court never allows a mandamus where the law has provided another remedy, and a rate cannot be made for him, but to relieve the poor. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 531. Ibid. vol. 3. p. 236. *Mod. Trinity, 2 Ann. White's Caſe.

The court was moved for a mandamus to reſtore the clerk of the butcher's company, which is a company by charter.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Such mandamuſes have been granted, but I think they have gone too far in theſe caſes. I am of opinion, that no mandamus ought to be granted where the officer may have his writ of aſſize; therefore let the point be argued. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 959. Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 18.

Trinity, 2 Ann. Anonymous.

The court was moved to grant a mandamus to the maſter and warden of the company of gun-makers, to cauſe them to give a proof-mark to J. S. a freeman of that company, without which he could not ſell his guns; for neither the Queen nor any other perſon, would buy any guns which had not that mark.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. We cannot do it. They are no legal eſtabliſhment. You muſt petition the Queen to iſſue a quo warranto againſt them, to repeal their charter for this miſdemeanor; but we cannot help you. So the mondamus was denied by the whole court. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 989.

On an affidavit, that the defendant had been ſerved with a mandamus on the ſecond of July before, and made no return, the court was moved for an attachment againſt him, or at leaſt to have the alias returnable peremptorily.

Per curiam. It is matter diſcretionary in the court to let people run the line out, and we may make the alias returnable immediately, and for contempt grant an attachment; or if we ſee occaſion, we may make the firſt writ returnable from day to day, or we may give ſhort returns; as a mandamus returnable in a week, and an alias in four days after, and a pluries with the ſame ſhort return. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 25.

The court was moved for a mandamus to reſtore the plaintiff to his place of approver of guns, and ſetting his mark of approver on the guns made by the company. It was urged, that ſelling guns not marked, was a forfeiture of their charter, and that by a bye-law made by them, they had appointed him an approver, but now turned him out.

Per curiam. It is a thing in which the public is no way concerned, nor is there any public law for it;

therefore out of the rule for granting a mandamus; but your way will be to petition the Queen, and ſhe perhaps will order the Attorney General to bring a quo warranto againſt them. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 82.

On a mandamus directed to the bailiffs of the town, to ſwear in ſuch and ſuch perſons into the office of bailiffs;

The court was moved, that they ſhould not be obliged to make a return, for they could not well do it, becauſe the writ was not directed to them in their corporate capacities, and by their names, and two other perſons were bailiffs, ſo that it would be hard to put them to make a return.

Per curiam. If when bailiffs have ſworn in others, who were not rightly choſen, you notwithſtanding continue bailiffs ſtill, and therefore ought as ſuch to make a return to the Queen's writ; and they were ordered to make a return.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, they might amend the writ any time before it was returnable; but they on the other ſide could not, except to quaſh it till a return thereto was made and filed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 133.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The party ought to ſuggeſt whatever is neceſſary to entitle him to be admitted; and if that is not done, or if it is done, and the fact is falſe, that will be good matter to return. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 310.

A mandamus was directed to the defendant, to ſwear ſuch a one into the place of town clerk of Hereford, and a return was, that on the election of B. he had eighteen voices, and the party that ſued out the mandamus but ſeventeen, and that they ſwore in B.

Per curiam. It is a bad return, becauſe it is argumentative, when it ſhould be expreſs and direct, that he was not choſe.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that the caſe in Sir Thomas Jones was a ſtrange one, and contrary to ſubſequent reſolutions; but if the mayor had returned an election de facto, and that the party had given a bribe to get himſelf choſe, it had been ſomething. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 309.

A rule was made the firſt day of this term, viz. that if the corporation to which the mandamus is ſent, be above forty miles from London, then there ſhall be fifteen days between the teſte and the return of the firſt writ of mandamus; but if but forty miles, or under, but eight days only: and as to the alias and pluries, they made no rule, but ſaid they would conſider of that, and that the writ ſhould not be teſted before it was granted by the court; ſo that the alias and pluries may be made returnable immediately as they uſed to be: they further obſerved, that at the return of the pluries, if no return was made, and there was an affidavit of the ſervice, there ſhould go an attachment without hearing council to excuſe the contempt. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 434. *Mod. Eaſter, 5 Ann. The Queen v. Baines.

The defendant being removed by the juſtices of peace of the county of Weſtmoreland from the office of clerk of the peace of the ſaid county, obtained a mandamus out of this court, to command them to reſtore him to that office, or to ſhew cauſe to the contrary.

An exception was taken to the return of the mandamus, that the offence was uncertainly alledged, &c. and therefore a peremptory mandamus was prayed.

But the court ſaid, the order was a judgment, till ſet aſide, and therefore adviſed the defendant's council to take exception to the order returned on the certiorari, and refuſed to grant a peremptory mandamus. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1265.

On a mandamus to admit one Dunch to be an Alderman of Norwich; they returned the charter of Ed. 4. That the Aldermen be charged, and are charged as in London; and that in London, if a perſon be elected Alderman by the ward, the court of Aldermen may refuſe him; and that D. was elected by the ward, but refuſed by the Mayor and Aldermen; becauſe he had not received the ſacrament within a year then next preceding his election, and that he was turbulent and factious, and procured his election by bribery; and that he was not elected.

The court agreed that ſeveral cauſes might be returned, and that either, not qualified, or not elected, had been a good return; but the Chief Juſtice queſtioned whether bribery would vacate the election, becauſe it did not appear to be an office concerning the adminiſtration of juſtice, and within the ſtatute E. 6. alſo the whole court agreed, that as ſoon as D. was choſe by the ward, it was an election, and that the Aldermen did not chuſe, (having but one perſon ſent them) but approve; and that before approbation, the election was complete; as a preſentation is before the biſhop approves a clerk; or as a nomination is a perfect nomination before the other preſents. It follows then, that this return is repugnant, and the court cannot tell what to believe; for at firſt they admit an an election, and avoid it; and yet at laſt they return, there was no election at all. Therefore a peremptory mandamus was granted. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 436. Raym. vol. 2. p. 1244.

Michaelmas, 6 Ann. The Queen v. Sir Richard Raines.

A mandamus was directed to the defendant to admit a woman to the probate of a will, by which ſhe was executrix; the return was, that ſhe was made executrix during the minority of W. R. and that the ſaid W. R. was now of full age, ſo that the teſtator remained inteſtate.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. He ſhould have returned generally, that ſhe was not executrix, or if he would return the ſpecial matter as he has done, he ſhould have averred that ſhe was not executrix otherwiſe, or in any other manner, but the return now made was not a direct anſwer to the writ, but only argumentative, to ſhew that ſhe was not executrix.

But the court would not grant a peremptory mandamus; they quaſhed this for the inſufficiency of the return, and amerced the defendant, and ordered an alias mandamus, that the ſuggeſtion of the writ might be fully and plainly anſwered. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 233.

Michaelmas, 6 Ann. Anonymous.

The court was moved for a mandamus to be directed to the ſurrogate of the Biſhop to grant adminiſtration to B. The caſe was, that adminiſtration had been committed to one who died, and made an executor, who would have had it committed to him, and not to the next of kin to the inteſtate.

Trinity, 7 Ann. Wright v. Sharpe.

In an action on the caſe for a falſe return to a mandamus, a verdict and judgment was given for the plaintiff; a motion was made for a peremptory mandamus, but it was oppoſed; becauſe a bill of exceptions was tendered for refuſing a book to be given in evidence on the part of the defendant. But nothing was mentioned of a bill of exceptions at the trial, nor any thing done in it till after the verdict.

Powell, Juſtice, was of opinion, that whether on making this motion, the bill was mentioned in time or not, it ſhould not ſtop a peremptory mandamus. If a motion had been made for a new trial, it would have hindered it; and a new trial would have been granted for refuſing of evidence; but he ſaid, if a writ of error had been brought, it would not ſtay the peremptory mandamus; and accordingly a peremptory mandamus was granted by the court. *Vide Mod. Eaſter, 8 Ann. The Queen v. The Corporation of Doncaſter.

A mandamus was directed to the corporation of Doncaſter to reſtore one Vicars to be a capital burgeſs; to which they returned, that the corporation have time out of mind had a toll for coals, viz. for every wain load going through the town, a coal, of the value of one penny; for every cart-load, a coal, to the value of a half penny; and for every horſe-load, a coal, as big as a piece of wood, (kept time out of mind by the corporation) that the ſaid Vicars did, contrary to his oath, hinder the gathering of this toll, and told them, that he would uphold them in their refuſal.

After hearing ſeveral arguments, the court was of opinion that it was not a ſufficient cauſe to turn him out.

Powell, Juſtice, ſaid, that it was no more than ſaying the toll was unreaſonable, as it appears to the court, and alſo uncertain. Accordingly a peremptory mandamus was granted. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 214.

Michaelmas, 8 Ann. Butler v. Cobbet.

A mandamus was directed to the Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge, and other commiſſioners of the land-tax, to make an equal aſſeſſment on the inhabitants of St. Andrew's Barnwell.

The court was moved to quaſh the writ; for that it ſhould have been to make an equal aſſeſſment on the occupiers of the land; for every occupier may not be an inhabitant.

Holt Chief Juſtice, ſaid, the writ was bad; but if it was good, a mandamus was not a proper remedy for an unequal taxation: but a proper remedy is by an appeal to the commiſſioners; but perhaps if the aſſeſſors refuſe to tax any part, as the caſe of Stourbridge fair was, a mandamus will lie.

Powell, Juſtice, ſaid, it was uſual to grant mandamuſes to overſeers, where they will not make a taxation, but not on ſuggeſtion that they intend to make an unequal tax.

Another exception was taken to the writ, that it ſet forth the year in figures; but being in roman figures, it might be good for all that; otherwiſe had it been in Engliſh figures. The writ was quaſhed, unleſs, &c. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 254.

A mandamus was directed to the Mayor and burgeſſes of Pomfret, to reſtore William Lee to the office of burgeſs. To this they returned, that he was ſuch a day elected, and duly preferred, then they ſhewed for cauſe of removing him, his non-attendance at the ſeſſions; then they ſaid that he had not taken the ſacrament within a year before his election, and that therefore his election was null and void.

The court was of opinion that this return was bad, by reaſon of the repugnant and contradictory matter contained in it.

1ſt. They return that he was ſuch a day elected, and duly preferred, then ſhew for cauſe of removing him, his not attending at the ſeſſions according to his duty, and then ſhew matter, that proves him never to have been elected; and conſequently, that it was ſo far from being his duty to attend, that it would have been an act of preſumption for him to have done it; and though ſeveral cauſes may be returned, yet they muſt not contradict one another: according to the caſe of Dunch v. The City of Norwich, Eaſter 5 Ann.

The court were likewiſe of opinion, that returns to mandamuſes were to be held to the ſame ſtrictneſs ſince the mandamus act, 9 Ann. as before; therefore they granted a peremptory mandamus.

The court granted a mandamus on ſtat. 1 Geo. c. 34. directed to the juſtices of the peace, to allow the defendants, who were conſtables, their extraordinary charges in providing carriages on the late expedition into Scotland. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 42.

A mandamus was iſſued to reſtore A. to the office of under ſchool-maſter of the grammar ſchool at Morpeth, or the cauſe to us ſignify; which writ ſet forth, that King Edw. 6. founded this ſchool, and appointed that there ſhould be two maſters, and an uſher for ever.

The return was, that at the time of publiſhing the act in the firſt year of his Majeſty's reign, A. was under ſchool-maſter, and that he had never taken the oaths by the act appointed to be taken; by reaſon whereof he became incapable, and therefore they cannot reſtore him.

It was objected, that this return was improper. The writ ſuggeſts a poſſeſſion and expulſion, and therefore they ought to lay the reaſons of turning him out before the court. There does not appear ſo much as a power of turning him out.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. This is of a public nature, being derived from the Crown. And I think the defendants were not obliged to ſhew cauſe why they turned him out, but only why they do not reſtore him. But ſtill this return is inſufficient: it is only that he did not take the oaths in the act aforeſaid mentioned, now he is not obliged to take the Scotch oath. They ſhould have ſaid, he did not take the oaths of allegiance, abjuration, and ſupremacy, or the oaths required to be taken by a ſchool-maſter. The act excepts officers in the fleet, &c. and therefore it ſhould appear that he is not excepted: for the party having no opportunity to plead in this caſe, the return ought to be certain to every intent. And though we grant a peremptory mandamus, that will not be final, for if he has not qualified himſelf, he is ipſo facto deprived, and our granting a mandamus will have no effect.

Eyre, Juſtice. All that is ſet forth in this return may be true, and yet this man no way diſqualified. In the caſe of a pariſh clerk, we granted a mandamus on ſolemn debate. So a peremptory mandamus was granted. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 58.

Trinity, 3 Geo. The King v. The Mayor, &c. of Norwich.

The court was moved for a ſuperſedeas to a mandamus directed to the mayor, aldermen, and common council, to go to the election of a town clerk, on an affidavit that the writ was miſ-directed; for it was neither to the corporation by their corporate name, nor to the mayor and aldermen only, in whom the right of election was.

The court ſaid, they would not expect a return to this writ, which was directed to the common council, who had no right, but grant a ſuperſedeas becauſe improvidently iſſued. But on a propoſal of trying the right in a feigned iſſue, no ſuperſedeas was iſſued. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 55.

The court was moved for a mandamus to the judge of the court of Sandwich, to give judgment on a verdict, though he had granted a new trial for exceſſive damages, without payment of coſts. And for the mandamus was quoted 1 Vent. 187. Raymond 214. 2 Keb. 871. And it was likewiſe inſiſted, that a judge of an inferior court cannot grant a new trial, as was held by Holt chief juſtice, Mich. 1 Ann. in the caſe of Hall v. Hill, 1 Mod. 84. and likewiſe by Parker chief juſtice, Eaſt. 12 Ann, Page v. Round.

And to that opinion the court inclined, and granted a mandamus unleſs cauſe ſhewn, &c. and on that the judge below, as well adviſed, acquieſced. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 113.

A mandamus was directed to the churchwardens of the pariſh of Thame, to reſtore J. W. to the office of ſexton there.

They returned, that the pariſh of Thame is an ancient pariſh, &c. and that the ſexton is eligible by the churchwardens and pariſhioners, or the major part of them, for that purpoſe, at a day and place prefixed, aſſembled; which perſon ſo elected was to continue at the pleaſure of the electors, and was always amoveable by the major part of them in form aforeſaid aſſembled. That on the 1ſt of May 1703, J. W. was elected ſexton, and continued in the office till the 31ſt of July 1717, on which day the churchwardens and pariſhioners being duly aſſembled, to continue or amove the ſaid J. W. he at ſuch aſſembly, was, by the churchwardens and major part of the pariſhioners, removed from his ſaid office, and for that cauſe they cannot reſtore him.

It was argued, that the return is inſufficient. This is not a caſe within the mandamus act, ſo as the return might be traverſed; and therefore it muſt be certain to every intent. It muſt anſwer all the ſuggeſtions of the writ, which this return does not: It is laid that he was duly elected, preferred, and admitted: They anſwer to the electing and preferring, but not to the admiſſion: for though that may be implicitly taken to be anſwered, yet returns by implication, and ſuch as are argumentative only, are not good.

But the court held the return to be good.

Pratt chief juſtice. The admiſſion need not be anſwered, though it is fully done by the preferring. Nor does there need any ſummons, as he was not removed for any crime.

Forteſcue juſtice. We ought not to grant a mandamus, without a certificate that the ſexton was choſen for life. If he had been removed for a crime, a ſummons would have been neceſſary according to natural juſtice; but the preſent caſe is a removal for what the party cannot gainſay. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 115.

Michaelmas, 6 Geo. Haſſel's caſe.

The court was moved for a mandamus to be directed to the juſtices of peace for the county of Cheſter, commanding them to make a rate to reimburſe one Haſſel the money he had expended as ſurveyor of the highways, which was accordingly granted. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 211.

A mandamus teſted the 14th of November, returnable on the 28th, was moved to be ſuſpended, for want of fifteen days between the teſte and return. On this the practice was inquired into, and agreed to be, and ſettled accordingly, that where the party lives forty miles from London, there muſt be fourteen days, otherwiſe only eight days, and that one is to be taken incluſive, and the other excluſive; ſo that a writ teſted the 14th may be returned on the 28th. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 407.

A mandamus was directed to the juſtices of the peace, &c. to appoint overſeers of the poor in the town of Rufford, who returned that Rufford is an extra-parochial place, and therefore are not to provide for their poor.

It was objected againſt this return, that admitting it was true, yet the juſtices are obliged by ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. to appoint overſeers of the poor even in the extra-parochial places, becauſe in the enacting part of the ſtatute the words are general, and extend to all places, viz. That the churchwardens of every pariſh, and two more of every pariſh, and two or more houſeholders, there to be nominated yearly in Eaſter-week, or within one month after, under the hands and ſeals of the juſtices of peace, are to be called overſeers of the poor, &c.

Per curiam. Extra-parochial places are within the words of the ſtatute; for the juſtices of the peace by the general words have power to name overſeers in all pariſhes, which muſt extend as well to extra-parochial places, as to all pariſhes in general; and no ſubſequent words ſhould controul the general words in the enacting part; and certainly all the poor laws ſhould be conſtrued to extend to ſuch places, as well as to other pariſhes, when they are within the ſame miſchief, and ſhall be ſubjected to the controul of the juſtices of the peace; and the penalty for not meeting in the church ſhall never be inflicted on the overſeers of the poor, becauſe the inhabitants of extra-parochial places have no church to meet in; moſt of the foreſts in England are extra-parochial, and ſo is Chriſt Church in Oxford, but they ought to maintain their poor.

Now this is a vill, conſiſting of ſeveral inhabitants, and ſo is within the proviſion of ſtat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. cap. 12. for a vill in a county, not therein particularly mentioned, will be within the remedy thereby provided; for all caſes within the reaſon are within the remedy of the law. There is no doubt but juſtices have the ſame power to appoint overſeers in towns and vills extra-parochial, as in pariſhes; and this has been ſettled. The word pariſh is not in the body of ſtat. 43 Eliz. but only in the preamble. W. Jones, 163. Therefore let a peremptory mandamus iſſue. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 39.

The churchwardens of the ſaid pariſh, &c. made a tax for the relief of their poor for a whole year, which amounted to 600 l. and upwards, when they ſhould have made up a quarterly tax; and the ſame, through inadvertency, was confirmed by Alderman Beecher, who was Alderman of that ward; and afterwards he fearing that the churchwardens would collect the whole ſum, and make ſome ill uſe of it, refuſed to grant a warrant to diſtrain for this tax, whereon the churchwardens moved this court for a mandamus to compel him to grant his warrant, and obtained a rule for him to ſhew cauſe why a mandamus ſhould not be granted.

At another day the defendant by his council ſhewed all the matter before mentioned for cauſe, &c. and a rule was made, that he ſhould grant his warrant to diſtrain for the tax for one quarter of a year, and no more, for he could not confirm this tax in part; it muſt be for the whole, or for no part. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 10.

Trinity, 9 Geo. Anonymous.

The court was moved for a mandamus to the Official of the Biſhop of Glouceſter, to commit adminiſtration to the widow of an inteſtate.

Per curiam. That will be to deprive the Ordinary of his election, in granting it to her, or to the next of kin; therefore take your mandamus generally, to grant adminiſtration of the goods of the inteſtate. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 552.

Trinity, 9 Geo. The King v. The Univerſity of Cambridge.

A mandamus was directed to the Vice-Chancellor, maſters, and ſcholars of Cambridge, to reſtore Dr. Bentley to the degrees to which he had been admitted by the Univerſity, and from which he had been ſurreptitiouſly degraded, (as was ſuggeſted) or that they ſhould ſhew cauſe why he ſhould not be reſtored.

The council for the Univerſity deſired time to ſhew cauſe why a mandamus ſhould not go, for that there were ſeveral old books and charters which were neceſſary to be inſpected before they could ſhew cauſe, and thereon the time was prolonged for that purpoſe.

And on another day it was argued for the Univerſity, that by virtue of a charter given them by Queen Elizabeth, they had a court of judicature to try and determine all matters ariſing within their juriſdiction, in which court a plaint was levied by Dr. Middleton v. Dr. Bentley, and thereon a ſummons was ſent by the beadle to the Doctor, which he received, and ſpoke contemptuous words of the court, for which he was degraded, and from which no appeal would lie, no more than a writ of error would lie for oppoſing a fine by a temporal court, for a contempt; becauſe every court of record is intruſted with the final judgment of what ſhall be contempt to their authority.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, the court granted a peremptory mandamus; and in Eaſter 10 Geo. the Doctor was reſtored to his degree. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 149.

The court was moved for a mandamus directed to him, to proceed to the election of a new Mayor on the next charter-day; it appearing by affidavit, that under a clauſe for holding over he had been in poſſeſſion for four years; and it being doubtful whether, where there is a charter-day, there can be an election at any ſubſequent day, the court granted the mandamus. Vide Stra. vol. 1. page 555.

By ſtat. 6 Geo. c. 21. the Juſtices of peace have juriſdiction given them in ſome caſes to receive an information, and make their determination, on a ſeizure of brandy; and on an information exhibited by an officer of the cuſtoms, the fact appeared not to warrant the ſeizure, but the juſtice in favour of the officer refuſed to diſmiſs the information, ſo as the owners might have their brandy again; on which the court was moved for a mandamus to compel him to determine the matter, which was accordingly granted. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 530.

On a motion for a peremptory mandamus, the caſe was, that a former mandamus was directed to the Mayor and burgeſſes of Tregony in Cornwall, commanding them, viz. to elect and ſwear in a Mayor, &c. according to the authority in them veſted, &c.

The court was moved for a ſuperſedeas to the mandamus, for that the writ was not good, becauſe it was directed to the Mayor and burgeſſes to elect and ſwear in a Mayor; whereas the power of electing is only in the burgeſſes, and the power of ſwearing in is in the Mayor alone; ſo that the Mayor cannot make a return of this writ as directed to him to elect; nor the corporation as directed to them to ſwear in a Mayor; ſo that if the burgeſſes ſhould make a return as to the ſwearing part, they would be uſurpers; and if they do not make a return, they will be in contempt.

Beſides, it is incongruous for a mandamus to be directed to ſwear a Mayor not yet elected; therefore it being directed to a perſon who had no power to act, it ought to be ſuperſeded, like the caſe of the city of London, where ſuch a mandamus was directed to the Mayor and Aldermen, &c. when the power was in the Mayor alone, and that was adjudged in this court not to be good.

But the court were all of opinion in this caſe, that they ought to make a return, for the writ commanding them, to elect and ſwear a Mayor according to the authority in them veſted, it ſhall be taken as rendering to each his own, and to be the return of both, &c. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 111.

On a motion for a mandamus to the old churchwardens of the pariſh of C. to deliver the pariſh-books to the new churchwardens, &c. a rule was made for them to ſhew cauſe on ſuch a day why a mandamus ſhould not iſſue; at which day it was ſhewn for cauſe that this was a new motion, and that the late Chief Juſtice Holt had denied to grant it to a ſteward of a court-baron.

But that which was now inſiſted on was, that the old churchwardens had a right to keep the pariſh-books; ſo the rule was diſcharged; for a conteſt between pariſh-officers which of them has a right to keep thoſe books, ought to be tried at law on a feigned iſſue. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 99.

A motion was made for a mandamus to the Mayor, to aſſemble and do the buſineſs of the corporation, and the writ was accordingly granted. In filling up the writ, it was made out for an aſſembly, and to admit all perſons having a right to their freedom, who ſhould appear before them and demand it. On which the court was moved to ſuperſede it, becauſe every perſon has a diſtinct right, and it would be hard to oblige the Mayor to make a return, that he had admitted all who had a right.

Per curiam. It muſt be ſuperſeded, for we never intended ſuch a complicated mandamus as this. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 178.

Trinity, 10 Geo. The King v. Pindar.

On an information in nature of a quo warranto againſt the defendant, for uſurping the office of Mayor in the corporation of Penryn in Cornwall; the defendant pleaded, that he was duly elected, and ſworn into the ſaid office, &c. The plaintiff replied, that he was not elected, and ſworn in manner and form, &c. as he had pleaded, and thereon they were at iſſue, and the jury found that he was duly elected, but that he was not duly ſworn into the office, &c. And on motion to ſet aſide this verdict, it was inſiſted that he was not Mayor till duly ſworn, and therefore had uſurped the office, and judgment of ouſter ought to be given and entered againſt him.

Per curiam. Let them enter their judgment according to law.

Raymond and Forteſcue, Juſtices, held, that it was rightly entered. Reynolds, Juſtice, doubted. However, the court gave judgment of ouſter, which was afterwards affirmed in the Houſe of Lords. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 235.

Trinity, 11 Geo. The King v. Harwood.

To a mandamus directed to the defendant Dr. Harwood, as Commiſſary of the dean and chapter of St. Paul's, commanding him to ſwear William Folbigg one of the churchwardens of the pariſh of St. Giles, Cripplegate, London, being duly elected, &c. the defendant returned he was not elected. And it was inſiſted on behalf of Folbigg that the return was ill; that the archdeacon, who was only to return the writ, could not judge of the election, and therefore on ſuch a return a peremptory mandamus was granted laſt Michaelmas term. That the archdeacon could not judge of the qualities of a perſon choſen by the pariſh. Hil. 8 W. 3. The King v. Rice, 5 Mod. 325. But both Raymond chief juſtice, and Reynolds juſtice, held the return to be good.

But on the importunity of Folbigg's council, who preſſed the authority of the caſe of The King v. White, and no council for the defendant appearing, a rule was made for a peremptory mandamus, niſi, &c. At which Raymond chief juſtice, and Reynolds juſtice, were much diſſatisfied; and the defendant's council at another day coming to ſhew cauſe againſt the rule, they diſcharged it. But the court not being unanimous, it was ordered to come on again in the paper; but was never ſtirred again. Raymond, Chief Juſtice, however, ſtill retained his former opinion, that the return was good. Vide Raymond, vol. 2. p. 1405.

Trinity, 11 Geo. The King v. Harwood.

A mandamus was directed to the defendant as Official to the archdeacon of L. to ſwear T. S. churchwarden of the pariſh of H. who returned that T. S. was not elected.

The court was moved in arreſt of judgment, becauſe the return of not elected is a bad return; the archdeacon being no judge of the election.

Per curiam. The return is a void return, the writ of mandamus commands the defendant to ſwear the churchwarden, or to return cauſe why he cannot ſwear him. Now he may return ſome cauſes as an incapacity, for of that he is judge; but cannot deny the election, for of that he is no judge. The archdeacon is only a miniſterial officer, and therefore bound to ſwear him. The ſwearing is only matter of form; becauſe a churchwarden may act before he is ſworn. The office of a churchwarden is a temporal office. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 380.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. The King v. Beecher, and others.

A motion was made for a ſuperſedeas to a mandamus to be directed to the juſtices of the peace to ſign a poors-rate made by one part of the pariſhoners only, by which rate part of the pariſh were not charged, on pretence that it was extra-parochial; and there was another rate made by the majority of the pariſhoners, by which that part of the pariſh not before charged was thereby charged, which laſt rate was ſigned by two juſtices; ſo if this mandamus ſhould be directed to them to ſign this rate, it would contradict what they had already done by ſigning the other rate, which ought to be determined on an appeal, before a mandamus mandamus ſhould be granted for the ſigning another rate, for otherwiſe there would be a double appeal.

Per curiam If a mandamus was directed to the juſtices to ſign this rate, it would not be contradictory to that which was already ſigned, nor to themſelves, becauſe the conteſt is between the pariſhoners in which the juſtices are not concerned, therefore they ought to ſign this rate, and not conteſt the right, it being a queſtion of fact between the pariſhoners whether this place not charged in this rate, but charged by the other rate is extra-parochial or not, which is fit to be tried in a feigned iſſue. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 335.

On a motion for a mandamus to the new churchwardens and overſeers of the poor, to make a rate to re-imburſe the old ones the ſeveral ſums by them expended for the maintaining the poor the laſt year, it was denied; it having already been reſolved in Tawny's caſe, that a mandamus cannot be granted to the new overſeers to make a rate to raiſe money for the relief of the poor, for ſo is the act of parliament, which muſt be purſued; and an overſeer is not bound to lay out money till he has it; if he does, he muſt make a new rate for the relief of the poor, out of which he may retain as much as will pay himſelf. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 338.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. The King v. Simpſon.

To a mandamus directed to the Archdeacon of Colcheſter, to ſwear R. F. into the office of churchwarden, he returned, that before he received the writ, he received an inhibition from the Biſhop of London, with a ſignification that he had taken on himſelf to act in the premiſes.

Per curiam. The return is ill. It does not appear that the town of Colcheſter is within the dioceſe of the Biſhop who inhibits; beſides, the Archdeacon is but a miniſterial officer, and is obliged to do the act, whether it is of any validity or not. Therefore a peremptory mandamus was granted. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 609. Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 325.

The court was moved for a mandamus to be directed to the churchwardens of St. Botolph, Biſhopſgate, commanding them to call a veſtry in Eaſter-week, for the election of churchwardens: but the court refuſed it, ſaying there was no inſtance of ſuch a mandamus, and that they could not take notice who had a right to call the veſtry, and conſequently did not know to whom it ſhould be directed. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 686.

Eaſter, 12 Geo. Foot v. Prowſe, Mayor of Truro.

On a bill of exceptions, the court were of opinion, that the election of the Mayor was void for want of an annual election of the Aldermen, and on error brought, the judgment of the Exchequer Chamber, whereby the judgment given in this court for the defendant was reverſed, being now affirmed in parliament, the plaintiff came and moved for a peremptory mandamus: inſiſting, that he had now falſified the return, and conſequently ſet aſide the defendant's excuſe. To which it was objected, that no peremptory mandamus ought to iſſue, unleſs beſides the reverſal of the judgment given for the defendant, there had alſo been a new judgment given for the plaintiff; that a peremptory mandamus is a judicial writ, and muſt be founded on ſome judgment eſtabliſhing the party's right who applies for it.

But the court were of opinion, that a peremptory mandamus ought to iſſue; for this was not a judicial writ founded on the record, but is a mandatory writ, which the court always grants when they are ſatisfied of the parties right: the reverſal of our judgment is a declaring the opinion of the ſuperior court, that the plaintiff had a right; and there is no occaſion for any new judgment. We every day grant peremptory mandamus's on producing the poſtea; which ſhews a formal judgment is not neceſſary. Accordingly a peremptory mandamus was awarded. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 697.

On a mandamus to reſtore a recorder, they returned, that he was only an officer at pleaſure, and that on the ſummons to chuſe another, they did chuſe another, and accordingly the former was removed.

It was objected, that this was only argumentative, and that returns to writs of mandamus ſhould be certain to every intent.

Per curiam. This is good general doctrine, but not applicable to this caſe. They need not have ſaid any thing of his being removed, becauſe the chuſing another is a determination of their will, which is enough for them to ſhew. Adjourned.

At another day the Solicitor General objected, that the ſummons was only to elect a new Recorder, and that many a man, who would have appeared, had the ſummons been to remove, might abſent himſelf when it was only to chuſe a new one.

Per curiam. We muſt preſume people know the effect and conſequence of their own acts; and in caſe of an officer at pleaſure, a new election is an actual amotion. 1 Vent. 352.

Then it was objected, that the letters patent are only ſaid to be granted under the great ſeal of England, without the word ſealed.

Per curiam. The word under imports it; and the other would be but a repetition. So the return was allowed. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 674.

Michaelmas, 12 Geo. Pees v. The Mayor, &c. of Leeds.

On the return of a mandamus it appeared, that the power of amotion is in the Mayor, Aldermen, and others of the common council: and the court was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the writ was directed to the Mayor, Aldermen, and common council, which infers, that the Mayor and Aldermen are no part of the common council, for want of the word others, which is in the power of amotion.

Per curiam. The writ ſhould be directed to the body who are to do the act: here is no body in this direction but who muſt join in the act; this is only repeating the ſeveral conſtituent parts of the corporation, and the mentioning the entire common council, after the Mayor and Aldermen, is but a repetition as to the Mayor and Aldermen. The writ is well enough, and there muſt be a peremptory mandamus. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 640.

Eaſter, 13 Geo. The King v. The Commiſſioners of Sewers for the levels of Tendring, Lexden, and Winſhee, in the County of Eſſex.

A mandamus bearing teſte the 10th of February, 12 Geo. returnable on Wedneſday next after fifteen days of Eaſter, was directed to the defendants, commanding them to make a rate on the occupiers of lands within the hundreds of Lexden and Winſhee, to reimburſe D. B. expenditor of thoſe hundreds 349 l. 5 s. 8 d. which he had diſburſed, and had been allowed him by the commiſſioners on his account. To which the defendants returned, that on the 25th of November 1725, they made a rate on the occupiers of lands within the levels of the hundreds of Lexden and Winſtree, within the limits of their commiſſion, for 799 l. 17 s. 4 d. &c. which when collected, will be ſufficient and applicable to pay the ſaid D. B. the ſaid 349 l. 5 s. 8 d. which rate they cauſed to be delivered to the collector, &c. with the privity and conſent of the ſaid D. B. to collect and levy, &c. for the uſes aforeſaid, which rate is ſtill in force: then they further returned, that the King on the 17th of January, in the ſecond year of his reign, by his letters patent, appointed them commiſſioners, &c. which commiſſion not being ſuperſeded, by virtue of the ſtatute, expired and determined on the 17th of February, 12 Geo. and that the mandamus was delivered to them on the 12th of February, 12 Geo. and not before; and that on account of the ſhortneſs of the time, before the expiration and determination of our commiſſion aforeſaid, we could not execute that writ or precept, as within we are commanded. And the court were of opinion, that this return was good, becauſe the time was too ſhort for the commiſſioners to make a new rate. And if a peremptory mandamus ſhould be granted, the commiſſioners could not now make a rate, the commiſſion being expired. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 1479. Strange, vol. 2. p. 763.

To a mandamus directed to the Biſhop, as warden of Mancheſter college, to admit a chaplain, he returned, that by the royal foundation he was appointed viſitor.

It was objected, that though a mandamus will not lie where there is a viſitor free from any objection; yet here the two offices being in the ſame perſon, he cannot viſit himſelf; and no caſe can be ſhewn, where the founder has once granted the whole out of him, and on ſuch a temporary ſuſpenſion it has reſulted back.

Per curiam. It is plain he cannot now, becauſe his power is ſuſpended, for thoſe are powers that may ceaſe, and revive, without inconvenience, ſince there is this court to reſort to. In a lay corporation the founder and his heirs are viſitors; in a ſpiritual one the juriſdiction is here, unleſs there is an expreſs viſitor appointed: the ground of our interpoſing in this caſe is, that at preſent there is no other viſitorial power in being; therefore a peremptory mandamus was granted. See ſtat. 2 Geo. 2. cap. 29. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 797.

A mandamus iſſued to receive Dacoſta into the Ruſſia company, and afterwards a rule having been made for the return of the ſame at a certain day, the court was now moved to ſet aſide the ſaid rule, this being a caſe not within ſtat. 9 Ann. cap. 20. which makes a mandamus, directed to corporations for reſtoring of corporated officers, returnable at a day certain; whereas before the ſaid act it was not ſo, but an alias and pluries iſſued, and now this ſtatute being introductive of a new law, is excluſive of all caſes not within the ſame.

Per curiam. Before the ſtatute we might have made a rule for the return of a mandamus, and the ſtatute has not taken away this power. Vide Fitz-Gibbons, p. 4. Strange, vol. 2. p. 783.

The plaintiff having exhibited articles of the peace againſt the defendant, the court was moved in behalf of the defendant, for a mandamus to be directed to the three juſtices of the peace, for the county of Brecon in Wales, to take ſecurity of him for his keeping the peace towards the plaintiff, in regard of the defendant's age and infirmity, and his great diſtance from Weſtminſter, he living in the county of Brecon aforeſaid, which the court granted on ſome precedents ſhewn and remembered. Vide Fitz-Gibbons, p. 85.

A mandamus was granted to Dr. Betteſworth, as judge of the prerogative court of Canterbury to grant a probate of the will of the Earl of Londonderry, to the executors therein named. The day after it was returnable, a rule was prayed for the Doctor to return the writ inſtantly.

It was inſiſted for the Doctor, that it ought to be a four days rule, but on conference with the clerks of the crown-office, the court were of opinion, that there was no ſtated time for theſe rules, but that the diſtance of place ought to be the guide; and therefore they ordered the writ ſhould be returned the next day.

Whereon the Doctor returned, that it is the cuſtom and practice of the prerogative court, that if any creditor of the deceaſed enters a caveat againſt granting a probate, and ſwears himſelf to be a creditor, there iſſues a commiſſion of appraiſement, till the return whereof, the judge has not uſed, or ought to grant any probate: then he ſet out, that two creditors, who ſwore to their debts, entered a caveat, and prayed a commiſſion of appraiſement, which was decreed and iſſued, but is not yet returnable; and for that cauſe he cannot as yet grant a probate.

On argument, the court held the return to be ill, for that the judge can only ſtay the probate where there is a conteſt about the validity of the will. This commiſſion of appraiſement can be of no uſe but to ſpend money, and delay the executor from getting in the effects of the teſtator. And by ſtat. 21 H. 8. c. 5. the probate is to be granted with convenient ſpeed, without any fruſtratory delay; and the eccleſiaſtical court ſhall never be ſuffered to ſet up their practice againſt the law of the land: a peremptory mandamus was therefore granted.

An exception was taken to the writ, that it was only that the Earl had effects at Weſtminſter, and in divers dioceſes, but did not ſay within the province of Canterbury. But the court over-ruled it, ſaying they would not preſume an inferior juriſdiction, and it appeared he had already done ſome acts of office as the prerogative judge, and ſhall not be received now to ſay it does not appear he has any juriſdiction: ſo judgment was given for the defendant. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 857.

The court was moved for a mandamus to three juſtices of peace in Brecon, to take ſecurity on articles of the peace exhibited againſt the defendant in this court; and on an affidavit being produced of his being ſeventy years of age, and unable to travel; and Seymour's caſe, Michaelmas, 6 Ann. being cited, it was granted in this caſe. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 835.

Hilary, 4 Geo. 2. Smith's Caſe.

The court was moved for a mandamus to Dr. Betteſworth, commanding him to grant adminiſtration to Smith of the goods of his deceaſed ſon, during the minority of his grandſon.

The council inſiſted, that the father had not an equal right with the ſon; and that the ſpiritual court has always conſidered adminiſtrators only as truſtees for the infant, and have never kept to any rule in granting them, but according to the circumſtances of the family: where there are ſeveral in equal degree, as children, they have always choſen which they pleaſed.

Per curiam. When we grant mandamus's, it is to oblige the judge to do right to the party who ſues out the writ; but as there is no law which ſays to whom theſe adminiſtrations during minority ſhall be granted, there is no law to be put in execution. In the caſe of the next of kin he is entitled of right, and therefore in his caſe we will grant a mandamus of courſe. But we will grant no writ in this caſe. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 892.

Hilary, 4 Geo. 2. The King v. Ward.

On the return of a mandamus, the following points were reſolved by the court.

1ſt, That a mandamus lies for a deputy regiſter of the ſpiritual court, though it was objected, it did not lie for a deputy; and alſo that it did not lie to be admitted to a judicial office in the ſpiritual court, as that of a regiſter is, according to Hale's opinion. 6 Mod. 18.

Lee, Juſtice, ſaid, that the late caſes have gone contrary to Holt's opinion, viz. that a mandamus lies not for offices of a private nature, as to be admitted ſteward of a court-baron.

2dly, That it is no good return, that the office is filled by another perſon, for a mandamus gives no right; it only puts the party in a way to bring his action, and thereby to try the right; and a caſe between the King and —— was cited at the bar; and that he was not elected, was not a good return, was denied, for the court ſaid, that the caſe had been over-ruled, and that they hoped they ſhould never hear it cited again.

3dly, That to return, there is a conteſt before the delegates about this office, not yet determined, and for that reaſon, that the delegates had inhibited the defendant not to admit any perſon whatſoever to the ſaid office, before the aforeſaid ſuit was determined, is not good. Vide Fitz-Gibbons, p. 195. Stra. vol. 2. p. 893.

A mandamus was granted to Wildman on motion, requiring him to deliver to the company of blackſmiths, all books, papers, &c. which he had in his cuſtody by virtue of being their clerk, from which office he had been removed.

The officer took the rule to deliver the books, &c. to the new clerk; but the mandamus was made out right, which varying from the rule was ſuperſeded; and afterwards, on motion, a new one was granted. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 879.

Michaelmas, 4 Geo. 2. John Giles's Caſe.

The court was moved for a mandamus to the juſtices of the city of Worceſter, to grant a licence to Giles to keep an ale-houſe, the council inſiſting that it being within a city, ſtat. 2. Geo. 2. c. 18. did not extend to it.

It was inſiſted on the other ſide, that it was diſcretionary in the juſtices; and Salk. 45. was cited, that no appeal lies from the denial of a licence; and if the owner be committed, the want of a licence can only come in queſtion, and not the reaſon why it was denied.

Per curiam. There never was an inſtance of ſuch a mandamus, and therefore we will not grant it. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 881.

Affidavit being made, that the ſteward who kept the public books, had refuſed to produce them at the corporate meeting, to enter the elections of their members; a mandamus was granted to him, to attend with the books at the next corporate aſſembly. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 948.

Hilary, 7 Geo. 2. Ruding v. Newel. Error.

The plaintiff brought his mandamus to be reſtored to the office of regiſter of the Archdeacon; and he was not appointed being returned, brought his action, and falſified the return. The defendant brought error in the Exchequer Chamber, and it was held to be a ſuperſedeas to a peremptory mandamus. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 983.

Eaſter, 8 Geo. 2. The King v. Wheeler.

On ſhewing cauſe why a mandamus ſhould not iſſue to the defendant as regiſter of the conſiſtory court of Durham, to deliver over all the public books, records and entries to one Trotter; it came out on affidavits that Trotter had a grant of this office jointly with one Hilton, from the late lord Crew biſhop of Durham, and that Trotter ſurvived Hilton, and by deed poll the 7th of Auguſt 1731, made the defendant his deputy for three years, which expired on the 17th of September laſt, and that was the ground of Trotter's application for this mandamus; but it appeared now on affidavits that the parties entered into an agreement in writing under their hands, but not ſealed, for Wheeler's being his deputy for three years more, and that Wheeler had brought a bill in equity for the ſpecific performance thereof, which is now depending in Chancery, and is to be heard next term.

It was inſiſted that theſe writs are not due in juſtice, but at the diſcretion of the court; and that Trotter might have applied to the Biſhop's court.

Lord Hardwicke. The only material thing that has been ſaid for this mandamus, is, that Trotter appearing to be the legal officer, is intitled to this mandamus in juſtice: but I do not ſee that every officer who is rightfully the officer, though he has been diſſeiſed, is intitled to it in juſtice: the reaſon why we grant theſe writs is to prevent a failure of juſtice, and for the execution of the common law, or of ſome ſtatute, or of the King's charter; and never as a private remedy to the party, except on the ſtatute of Queen Ann, and that ſtands on another footing: nay the old caſes went ſo far as to refuſe a mandamus in all caſes where an aſſize lay; and though the court is not ſo ſtrict now, yet it ſhews in what light theſe writs are conſidered. Now here does not appear to be any failure of juſtice, but only a diſpute about a private right: if you ſay this is a diſſeiſin you may bring an aſſize. In the caſe of one Vincent, a mandamus was prayed to oblige the biſhop to grant a licence for preaching to a lecturer, and the court did not enter into the queſtion, whether that was a proper inſtance for granting a mandamus, but refuſed it becauſe a diſpute was then depending, whether Vincent was intitled to the lectureſhip.

Lee juſtice. The having a legal title to this office gives no title to the books, for if Wheeler has an equitable right it will bar the legal title, ſo that in this caſe how can it be ſaid that Trotter is intitled to the books in juſtice. Therefore the rule was diſcharged. Vide Caſes temp. Lord Hardw. p. 99.

On a motion, a mandamus was granted to compel Dr. Henchman to ſwear in one A. to be churchwarden of the pariſh of Finchley. Vide Caſes Temp. L. Hardw. p. 130.

Hilary, 9th Geo. 2. Dr. Walker's Caſe.

A mandamus was directed to Dr. Richard Walker, vice-maſter of Trinity college in Cambridge, commanding him to execute the ſentence of the biſhop of Ely, viſitor of that college, and without delay to deprive Dr. Richard Bentley of the office of maſter of the ſaid college, and of all the privileges, emoluments, and advantages thereto belonging, he having been found guilty of dilapidation, and violation of the ſtatutes; or to ſignify cauſe to the contrary.

Dr. Walker returned, among other things, the ſentence verbatim, and further that by reaſon the ſaid college was of King Henry 8th's foundation, the now King is general viſitor thereof, and as general viſitor has an undoubted authority to cauſe the ſaid ſentence of deprivation to be executed by the vice-maſter of the ſaid college, and on his failure to puniſh him, as to the ſaid King as general viſitor ſhall ſeem meet, and that he the vice-maſter of the ſaid college is not ſubject to any juriſdiction whatſoever in the premiſes aforeſaid, other than the now King as general viſitor; and prays judgment if he ought to give any other anſwer to the ſaid writ, and whether this court will further intermeddle in the premiſes.

The cauſe being ſet down in the paper for argument, after hearing council on both ſides, Lord Hardwicke delivered his opinion as follows:

Lord Hardwicke. There are two things which ſeem to be aimed at by this writ and return, which I do not ſee that the court can do. 1ſt, To aid the juriſdiction of the biſhop of Ely as viſitor: and 2dly, to determine that the King is general viſitor. This general rule muſt be admitted, that if there be a lay foundation, the viſitor has the ſole and intire power to execute juſtice, and all the caſes of applications to this court for admitting fellows have been refuſed if there has been a viſitor. I do not know any inſtance where the court has granted a mandamus to a viſitor to execute his power, though at the ſame time I do not know but the court may do ſo, for it is a kind of juriſdiction, but not taken notice of by the common law. This court only iſſues mandamus's for executing that authority which the party has, and I do not know that they have ever been granted in aid of any juriſdiction. But however in this caſe, the writ is felo de ſe; for it ſuggeſts that the biſhop is viſitor of the college, and the return will not help it: Now is there any caſe where a general viſitor has come to this court for us to help him to viſit his college? In the caſe of Phillips v. Berry it was held, that the ſentence of the general viſitor makes the place void, ſo that an action will lie for the meſne profits. So then if this writ be felo de ſe, the biſhop is taken to be the viſitor and judge, and the vice-maſter is only a miniſter to put his ſentence in execution; and can it be ſaid that ever any mandamus went to an officer of an inferior court to compel him to do his office? No ſure, for if the inferior officer will not do his duty, the judge of the inferior court muſt turn him out; and this objection is the ſame, whether the Biſhop or the King be viſitor in this caſe. And no defect of juſtice will enſue for want of a mandamus, for if the biſhop be viſitor, as the writ ſuggeſts he is, then he may viſit, or remove, or puniſh the vice maſter, and we could do no more; and if the King be viſitor you may apply to the King for him to viſit; ſo that I am very clear the return ſhould be allowed, or the writ be quaſhed.

The court took time to conſider, and on the laſt day of the term, they gave judgment that the writ ſhould be quaſhed, but ſaid they did not intend it ſhould be underſtood that they had thereby determined whether the King or the biſhop was general viſitor. Vide Caſes temp. Lord Hardwicke. p. 212.

Humphreys and Slater were candidates for the office of common councilman in the ward of Baſſiſhaw in London, and Humphreys had the majority on the poll; whereon Slater demanded a ſcrutiny, but did not deliver his objections againſt the bad pollers till the 12th day; whereas ſtat. 11 Geo. c. 18. directs, that the candidates ſhall within ten days next after the receipt of the copy of the polls taken at ſuch election, deliver to the preſiding officer the objections, &c. and therefore, Humphreys objected to the ſcrutiny's going on, for the defect in not delivering the objections in ten days. And thereon Slater moved for a mandamus to Everett the deputy alderman of the ward, for him to proceed in the ſcrutiny; and hereon the queſtion was, whether the ten days in that ſtatute were only directory, or were compulſory; and it was objected likewiſe, that as the ſtatute had laid a penalty on the preſiding officer if he offended in the premiſes, for that reaſon a mandamus ought not to iſſue.

Lord Hardwicke. As to the penalty there is nothing in it; for whenever an act of parliament directs ſomething to be done, the court will enforce the doing of it by mandamus; ſo on the act of parliament to oblige mayors of corporations to attend at the aſſemblies, we always grant a mandamus notwithſtanding the penalty.

The court ſaid, that as this was a queſtion of great conſequence, they would not determine it on motion, and therefore granted the mandamus, that it might come before them on the return. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke. p. 261.

Trinity, 9 Geo. 2. The King v. The Corporation of Oxford.

On application being made for a mandamus to the members of this corporation to proceed to the election of a Mayor purſuant to ſtat. 11 Geo. c. 4. It was objected, that the ſtatute extended only to the defect of election within the year, whereas here has been no Mayor ſince the year 1730, that is to ſay, no legal Mayor, for others have been actually choſen, but illegally, and have all ſince that year been ſucceſſively ouſted on writs of quo warranto.

Lord Hardwicke. This is a remedial law, and therefore the court ſhould make it as effectual as the words, or any conſtruction of them, can warrant; and the court has always made a liberal conſtruction of it in theſe caſes; ſo in the caſe of the borough of Tintagel, 2 Strange p. 1003. As to the objection that this is not within a year, whatever might be the intention of the ſtatute as to that, there are however no words to tie it up to a year; and as there are not, I think, a mandamus ought to iſſue in this caſe; and I rely on the proviſion intended by the ſtatute, which was, to prevent the diſſolution of corporations, and to give room for the election of head-officers; though theſe ſeveral elections have been adjudged void; but there are no words to diſſolve the corporation, but on the contrary the ſtatute ſays, if the election is held void, the corporation ſhall have power to elect, and ſhall not be diſſolved; ſo that here is a corporation in being, and capable of acting, and an expreſs clauſe in the ſtatute to enable the court to grant a mandamus, and no negative words to reſtrain it. The caſe of the borough of Macclesfield is in point. So the court unanimouſly agreed to grant a mandamus in this caſe.

Afterwards on the ſame day, the council who had oppoſed this mandamus moved for the like mandamus, that they too might have the carrying down a mandamus, and urged that two writs were ſo granted in the caſe of the borough of Eveſham.

A mandamus was directed to the defendants to make a rate for the poor, who returned that there are two townſhips, Further Spotland and Nearer Spotland, and that overſeers are appointed for the townſhip of Further ther Spotland; and that the inhabitants thereof have made a rate, and provided for their poor; and on this return, in behalf of the townſhip of Nearer Spotland, an information was moved for againſt the defendants as for a falſe return; for the queſtion is between theſe places, whether they ſhall join in the maintenance of the poor, as one pariſh or townſhip, or not; there being many in Nearer Spotland, and very few in the other; and therefore Nearer Spotland alledged that they are not diſtinct, but one and the ſame townſhip, which now on ſhewing cauſe was denied by Further Spotland, and they offered to try the matter.

Lord Hardwicke. If this had been a mandamus on ſtat. 9 Ann, c. 20, the return might have traverſed; or had it been a mandamus concerning ſome private right, the party might have had an action for a falſe return; and ſo a peremptory mandamus, if the return had been wrong; but here there cannot be an action for a falſe return, becauſe no one is particularly intereſted, ſo there is no remedy but an information, and there being a direct contrariety in the affidavits, it is the courſe of the court to grant an information to try the fact.

A mandamus was granted to admit the plaintiff to a canonry or prebend of Saliſbury, and to inſtitute, induct, and inveſt him therein; which was ſtrongly oppoſed on ſhewing cauſe, as turning the common law remedy by a quare impedit into another channel.

But the court ſaid, that though formerly mandamus's were not ſo frequent, eſpecially where the party had another remedy; yet they being found to be more expeditious and leſs expenſive, had been more allowed of late. And as to there being another remedy, it might be ſaid with equal propriety in caſes where an aſſize, or an action on the caſe would try the right; and yet that was never thought a ground to deny a mandamus; ſo the writ was ordered, but never iſſued, the parties agreeing to refer the diſpute. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1082.

A mandamus was granted, directed to the defendant as maſter of Peter-houſe College in the Univerſity of Cambridge, to admit Thomas Rogers to a fellowſhip of that college, on an affidavit of his election. A motion was made to ſuperſede this writ, on affidavits of there being a viſitor, viz. the Biſhop of Ely. But the court put the maſter to make a return, and refuſed to determine the point on affidavits, where the other party had no opportunity to right himſelf by an action. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1139.

Trinity, 14 Geo. 2. The Caſe of the Corporation of Aberyſtwith.

In this caſe, the court held, that though it was diſcloſed that there was in fact an election, yet if, on examining it, there was good reaſon to think it void, they would award a mandamus on the ſtatute, to proceed to a new election, and not wait the event of any controverſy about the former. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1157.

A mandamus was moved for on ſtat. 11 Geo. 1. cap. 4. ſect. 2. for the corporation to elect bailiffs, coroners, chamberlains, and other anual officers, on ſuggeſtion that there had not been any good officers ſince the year 1736, and ſeveral of thoſe that have been in fact choſen have had judgment of ouſter againſt them. And on conſidering the caſes of the corporations of Tintagel and Aberyſtwith, the court granted a mandamus: here being no reaſonable expectation of juſtifying the right of the preſent poſſeſſors, and the ſtatute being made to prevent the confuſion in corporations that muſt enſue. And the court further ſaid, it ſhould go not only for the head officer, but alſo for the others who were neceſſary conſtituent parts of the corporation, and equally within the reaſon of the ſtatute. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1180.

The court on conſideration refuſed to grant a mandamus to the Biſhop of London to grant his licence to a lecturer, who appeared to have nofixed ſalary, but wholly depended on voluntary contributions; and where there was no cuſtom, and the rector had refuſed his leave to preach in the church to the perſon now applying. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1192.

The rector claimed as lord of the manor to hold a court-leet, at which the in-burgeſſes of Wigan ought to attend to make a jury, which they having refuſed, and neglected to do at two courts, whereby no buſineſs could be done, the court granted a mandamus to enſorce their attendance. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1207.

A mandamus iſſued, ſuggeſting that M. Hubbard was in Eaſter week choſen churchwarden of Heſton, and commanding the defendant to ſwear him in, or ſhew cauſe to the contrary. To this he returned, that Hubbard was not elected in Eaſter-week, and that on his offering to ſwear him in, Hubbard refuſed to accept the office.

To this it was excepted, that the return had confined it to a particular time, and was in the nature of a negative pregnant, for he might be choſen at ſome other time; and returns (which are not traverſable) muſt be certain to every intent. Salk. 432. and Hubbard's refuſal could be no reaſon, for he might change his mind, and the pariſh had an intereſt in making him ſerve the office: and the court held the latter part of the return inſignificant; but as to the firſt exception, they held it good, as it purſued the ſuggeſtion of the writ: and therefore allowed the return. Vide Stra. vol. 2. page 1235.

The court refuſed to grant a manaamus, directing to inſert particular perſons in the poor's rate, on affidavits of their ſufficiency, and of their being left out to prevent their having votes for parliament-men, for that the remedy was by appeal, and this court never went further, than to oblige the making a rate, without meddling with the queſtion, who is to be put in or left out; of which the pariſh officers are proper judges, ſubject to an appeal. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 1259.

Eaſter, 32 Geo. 2. The King v. The Corporation of Wigan; or, The King v. Curghey, Eſq; and others.

On a vacancy in a corporation, if a proper application for a mandamus to go to election, be made and granted, it is not of courſe, that any other like motions may be made by other parties, for the ſame thing: but if there be a reaſonable cauſe to ſuſpect, "that the party "who firſt moved for it, does not really mean to carry

“ it into execution,” this muſt be particularly laid before the court by affidavit; and then a rule ſhall be made “ to ſhew cauſe,” which method was taken in the preſent caſe, where the other party had made a prior application: for on affidavits of particular circumſtances, a rule was made, to ſhew cauſe why a croſs mandamus ſhould not iſſue, directed to William Curgbey, Eſq; commanding him to hold a court-leet in order to proceed to the election of a Mayor.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, on ſhewing cauſe to this rule, the court diſcharged the ſame.

Lord Mansfield. The queſtion ſeems to be now taken up, (though not before diſputed) “ Whether theſe croſs or concurrent writs of mandamus are to be granted of courſe, without ſome ſpecial and particular reaſon.”

If we ſhould grant writs to both parties, it would occaſion not only double expence and double trouble, but double elections: which would be infinitely inconvenient to corporations, and could not be prevented under ſuch double writs.

The very words of ſtat. 11 Geo. 4. ſhew that it would be determining the right before-hand, if we ſhould order to whom the writ ſhall be directed.

As to the ſuſpicion here offered, the affidavits are extremely looſe, and built on mere imagination, therefore there is no ſufficient ground for granting two writs in this caſe.

Per curiam. Let the rule be diſcharged. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 783.

Trinity, 32 & 33. The King v. The Mayor and Jurats, of Rye.

On a rule to ſhew cauſe why an attachment ſhould not iſſue againſt the Mayor and Jurats, for not returning a mandamus directed to them; commanding them “ to admit and ſwear Edwin Wardroper into the office of one of the Jurats of that corporation; or to ſhew cauſe why they refuſe to admit him.”

The right claimed by the Mayor was, “ to fill up the vacancy of Jurats, happening during his year, generally:” but the Jurats deny that the Mayor has ſuch a right, generally; though they admit that he has it on the ſingle day of his election; but not afterwards.

On ſhewing cauſe to this rule, the matter ended in a rule by conſent, to try the right in a feigned iſſue, at the ſittings after this term, for Middleſex; on the queſtion, “ Whether Edwin Wardroper was duly elected, or not;” and further, that the books ſhould be inſpected, and copies taken, &c. and the books themſelves produced at the trial, on proper notice, &c. and that the party who ſhall prevail, may be at liberty to enter up this judgment as of this term. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 798.

Eaſter, 33 Geo. 2. The King v. Marſh, Deputy Governor of the Turkey Company.

This caſe (purſuant to what had been before ſettled) came on in the crown paper, on the return to a mandamus, which had iſſued ſince the laſt motion: which mandamus and return were as follows:

The writ was directed to John Marſh, Deputy Governor of the company of merchants trading into the Levant ſeas, commonly called the Turkey Company.

The return was in ſubſtance as follows:

And I do further humbly certify and return to our ſaid preſent moſt ſerene ſovereign Lord the King, that the ſaid Iſaac Rogers, in the ſaid writ named, hath not taken, but hath refuſed to take the ſaid oath required by ſtat. 26 Geo. 2. either before the Governor or Deputy Governor of the ſaid company, or before two of his Majeſty's juſtices of the peace: and therefore I cannot admit, or cauſe to be admitted, him the ſaid Iſaac Rogers into the ſaid company of merchants trading into the Levant ſeas, commonly called the Turkey Company, as by the ſaid writ I am commanded.

JOHN MARSH, Deputy Governor.

The queſtion before the court on this caſe was, whether a quaker, who has in due manner made and ſubſcribed his ſolemn affirmation and declaration to the effect of the oath, can be admitted to the freedom of this company, without actually taking the oath appointed by ſtat. 26 Geo. 2. cap. 18. enabling every ſubject of Great Britain, deſiring admiſſion into that company, to be admitted into it, on paying or tendering 20 l.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, Lord Mansfield, now delivered the opinion of the court as follows:

This man's claim is nothing more than to be admitted into a company of merchants trading to a particular part of the world. And ſurely, there can be no pretence to call this a place or office of profit in the government. Therefore this return muſt be quaſhed, and a peremptory mandamus muſt iſſue.

Per curiam. Let the return to this writ be quaſhed for the inſufficiency thereof; and let a peremptory mandamus iſſue. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1000.

This was a caſe reſerved at niſi prius before Lord Mansfield at Guildhall on the trial of an action for a falſe return to a mandamus.

The mandamus was directed to G. P. commanding him to deliver to G. C. the common ſeal, books, papers, and records of the corporation of Harwich, which the ſaid C. claimed to belong to his cuſtody, as having been duly elected town-clerk of that corporation; to this writ of mandamus, (to deliver the inſignia, &c.) the defendant G. P. returned, “ that the ſaid G. C. was not duly elected town-clerk:” on which return, alledged to be a falſe one, the foregoing action was brought:

On this caſe being argued before the court, the matter contended for was, that it was incumbent on the plaintiff to ſhew that he was duly elected, which he could not be, unleſs he had taken the ſacrament within the year, according to ſtat. 2 Car. 2. and 13 Car. 2.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, the court gave judgment for the plaintiff.

Lord Mansfield. Since ſtat. 5 Geo. 1. cap. 6. the election of a perſon who has not taken the ſacrament within a year next preceding it, is not void, but only voidable in caſe of a removal or proſecution within the time limited; and conſequently, as here was no ſuch removal or proſecution within that limited time, the plaintiff's election ſtood confirmed, and became abſolute. It is not like the caſe of Tufton v. Nevinſon in Lord Raymond's Reports, becauſe that aroſe on the officer's bringing a mandamus to ſwear him into his office, being then out of poſſeſſion; whereas this plaintiff is in poſſeſſion of the office, and only brings his mandamus for the inſignia, and other things belonging to it.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt a mandamus which had been prayed to be directed to one Samuel Blooer, a pariſhioner of Matfield in Staffordſhire, and an inhabitant of the chapelry within that pariſh, (who had turned Mr. William Langley, the curate of that chapel, out of it, after he had been eleven weeks in poſſeſſion, and locked it up) commanding him to reſtore the ſaid William Langley, clerk, to the place and office of curate of the ſaid chapel.

After hearing the arguments of council on both ſides, the court propoſed to the parties, to try the merits in a feigned iſſue, which was declined on the part of Blooer; who inſiſted on taking the opinion of the court, “ whether the rule ought not to be diſcharged.”

Three objections have been offered againſt making the rule abſolute.

The firſt was, “ That there is no ſufficient ground for aſking a mandamus.”

Anſwer. But this chaplain has ſhewn an appointment, and a licence, and was in quiet poſſeſſion for eleven weeks.

Second objection. That he has not the right; for the nomination was not in the vicar, but in the inhabitants.

Anſwer. We cannot try the merits on affidavit. He claims a right, though it is litigated: and that is ſufficient for the preſent purpoſe.

Third objection. That, even ſuppoſing him to have a title, and to have been in poſſeſſion, and turned out of it; yet he ought not to be aſſiſted by way of mandamus, but be left to his ordinary legal remedy, by ejectment or an action of treſpaſs.

Anſwer. A mandamus to reſtore is the true ſpecific remedy, where a perſon is wrongfully diſpoſſeſſed of any office or function which draws after it temporal rights; in all caſes where the eſtabliſhed courſe of law has not provided a ſpecific remedy by another form of proceeding: which is the caſe with regard to rectories and vicarages.

Here are lands annexed to this chapel, which belong to the chaplain in reſpect to his function. If the Biſhop had refuſed, without cauſe, to licence him, he might have had a mandamus to compel the Ordinary to grant him a licence. He is now turned out of the chapel, and every thing belonging thereto, by force. Such chapels were not objects of attention in the days when the regiſter was formed: and therefore there is no particular remedy provided for this caſe.

It is ſaid, “ he may bring an ejectment, or an action of treſpaſs,” I am not ſure that he could. It does not appear that the legal property is in him; on the contrary, it is certain, that it is not. It might originally be in feoffees. Thoſe feoffees may not have been regularly continued. It may be impoſſible to find the heir of the ſurvivor. If they have been continued, the preſent feoffees may refuſe to let Mr. Langley make uſe of their names. Neither of theſe actions, if he could bring them, would be a ſufficient remedy. In the one, he might recover damages, in the other, he might recover the land: but by neither would he be reſtored to his pulpit, and quieted in the exerciſe of his function and office. We may well take notice too, that the inhabitants refuſe to try the merits, in an iſſue. If a mandamus iſſues, we ſhall ſee what return they make to it. And this is what ought to be done in the preſent caſe.

On which the rule was made abſolute for granting a mandamus, but no return was made thereto: the parties agreeing to try the merits in a feigned iſſue; which was accordingly done. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1043.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt granting a mandamus to the defendant, treaſurer of the county of Dorſet, requiring him as treaſurer of the ſaid county, to reimburſe and pay to R. B. and E. A. late conſtables of the borough of Shafton, otherwiſe Shafteſbury, in the county of Dorſet, the ſeveral ſums of money (mentioned in the paper-writing annexed to the affidavit of the ſaid R. B. and another) expended by them in conveying and maintaining ſeveral rogues, vagabonds, and other idle and diſorderly perſons, according to an order made at the general quarter ſeſſions of the peace, holden at Shafteſbury, on the 10th day of July 1744, in purſuance of an act of parliament, made in the 17th year of Geo. 2. intituled, “ An act to amend and make more effectual the laws relating to rogues, vagabonds, and other idle and diſorderly perſons, and to houſes of correction.”

The council againſt granting the mandamus inſiſted, that the ſeſſions have a juriſdiction to examine into the accounts of the conſtables: whereas theſe are only allowed by a ſingle juſtice, which was denied on the other ſide.

Lord Mansfield. They are obliged by the act to apply to the quarter ſeſſions, and the ſurplus only is to be paid over: which ſhews, that the ſeſſions have a juriſdiction to make deductions. There is waſte enough on theſe occaſions, already; therefore diſcharge the rule. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1197.

On a motion for a mandamus to be directed to the ſurviving truſtees, under a deed of releaſe, made by one C. V. to J. E. a diſſenting miniſter at Plymouth, and other truſtees, ſettling a then new-built meeting-houſe, garden, &c. on the ſaid truſtees in truſt (among other things) “ to ſuffer the meeting-houſe to be for the public worſhip of God by ſuch congregation of proteſtant diſſenters, commonly called preſbyterians, as ſhould ſit under and attend the miniſtry of the ſaid Mr. J. E. or ſuch other preſbyterian miniſter or miniſters as ſhould in his or their room ſucceſſively, in all times then coming, be, by the members in fellowſhip of the ſaid, or ſuch like congregation or congregations, regularly and fairly choſen and appointed to be the miniſter, preacher, or paſtor, to preach in the ſaid meeting,” requiring them to admit C. M. to the uſe of the pulpit thereof, as paſtor, miniſter, or preacher there, he the ſaid C. M. being duly elected thereto.

The council for the motion produced an affidavit of the facts, and of Mr. M.'s election; and of a demand and refuſal of the uſe of the meeting-houſe: and cited the caſe of the King v. Blooer, which was for a mandamus to reſtore William Langley to the office of curate of a chapel; and that rule was made abſolute on this principle, “ that where there is a temporal right, this court will aſſiſt by mandamus.”

Lord Mansfield took this opportunity of declaring, that the court had thought of that caſe of the curate of the chapel of Calton, ſince the determination of it, as well as before: and they were thoroughly ſatisfied with the grounds and principles on which that mandamus was granted.

After hearing the arguments of council on this motion, Lord Mansfield delivered the opinion of the court as follows:

Every reaſon concurs here, for granting a mandamus. We have conſidered the matter fully: and we are all clearly for granting it. Here is a function, with emoluments; and no ſpecific legal remedy. The right depends on election; which intereſts all the voters. The queſtion is of a nature to inflame men's paſſions. The refuſal to try the election in a feigned iſſue, or proceed to a new election, proves a determined purpoſe of violence. Should the court deny this remedy, the congregation may be tempted to reſiſt violence by force; a diſpute, “ who ſhall preach chriſtian charity,” may raiſe implacable feuds and animoſities; in breach of the public peace, to the reproach of government, and the ſcandal of religion. To deny this writ, would be putting proteſtant diſſenters and their religious worſhip out of the protection of the law. This caſe is entitled to that protection; and cannot have it in any other mode, than by our granting this writ.

The defendants have refuſed either to go to a new election, or to try the matter in a feigned iſſue. We were all opinion, when a trial was propoſed to them, that a mandamus ought to iſſue, in caſe of refuſal. Their anſwer ought to be put into the rule, as prefatory to it; and I do this, with a view that their refuſal may be authentically given in evidence to the jury on a trial.

Eaſter, 3 Geo. 3. The King v. The Corporation of Weſt-Loe.

On a motion for a mandamus to the corporation, to go to the election of a Mayor; there being a judgment of ouſter againſt Mr. B. the late Mayor.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on this motion, the court denied the ſame.

The four day rule being expired, the adverſe parties had a trial of ſkill, “ which of them ſhould get the ſtart of the other in moving for a mandamus.”

But after hearing the arguments of council, the court were clear, that the proſecutor was entitled to the priority of this motion for a mandamus, and granted it to him accordingly. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1386.

On a mandamus directed to Dr. Harris, commiſſary of the conſiſtorial and epiſcopal court of the Biſhop of Wincheſter, directing him to admit and ſwear in H. G. and T. G. churchwardens of St. Olave's, Southwark, they being duly elected, &c

A like mandamus was alſo directed to him, to ſwear and admit D. G. P. C. J. A. and W. S. into the ſame office.

To the firſt writ the Doctor returned, that there were two cauſes depending before him, which had afterwards been conſolidated into one; in which, it was diſputed, "Who were elected churchwardens;" the former, on the promotion of G. C. A. and S. aſſerting themſelves to have been duly elected, and praying to be ſworn; the latter, on the promotion of G. and G. and two others, againſt G. C. A. and S. and the parties on each ſide reciprocally denied the others to be duly elected. By reaſon whereof, and of the law and practice of the epiſcopal court, he could not ſwear or admit the ſaid H. G. and J. G. into their office till it had been judicially determined before him, that the ſaid H. G. and T. G. were duly elected.

To the other writ of mandamus at the inſtance of D. G. P. C. J. A. and W. S. was the ſame return only it was added at the end, (after the words, "were "duly elected into ſuch office,") "by a majority of "legal votes."

Note, Both theſe cauſes ſtood together, in the crown-paper, for argument; and the like rule was made in both: but it was the former only that was actually argued; and the fate of this, of courſe, determined the other.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, the court diſallowed the return, and ordered a peremptory mandamus to iſſue.

Lord Manſfield and Wilmot, Juſtice, obſerved, that the Doctor ought to obey both writs. It being without prejudice to the right of either claimant.

Lord Manſfield. All the caſes, cited on both ſides, prove this return to be wrong. It would be ſo, even if he could try it; (which he cannot do:) he cannot try the legality of the votes.

Wilmot, Juſtice, concurred with the Chief Juſtice in opinion.

Per curiam. Let the return be diſallowed; and a peremptory mandamus iſſue.

Note, The court propoſed, and the parties conſented, to try the right in a feigned iſſue; and the execution of the peremptory mandamus to be ſuſpended till after the trial; and then the peremptory mandamus to go "to ſwear in the victors at the trial," unleſs the judge who tries it, ſhall declare himſelf diſſatisfied with the verdict. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1420.

Hilary, 4 Geo. 3. The King v. Bankes, Eſq; and others.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt a rule made on John Bankes, Eſq; Lord of the leet for the borough, manor or lordſhip of Corſe-Caſtle in the iſle of Purbeck, in the county of Dorſet, and ſundry other officers of the ſaid leet, to ſhew cauſe why a writ or writs of mandamus ſhould not iſſue againſt them to proceed to the election of a Mayor of the ſaid borough of Corſe-Caſtle, for this preſent year, and do all other neceſſary acts for that purpoſe as the law directs.

Their council did not go on the merits; but only objected to the want of notice to the Mayor de facto; who ought (he ſaid) to have been made a party to this rule, being in poſſeſſion of the office already; and ought in common juſtice, therefore to be heard in defence of his right, before the iſſuing of a mandamus to proceed to the election of another in his ſtead.

The court allowed this reaſoning, and ordered, that the rule ſhould be amended by inſerting the name of Mr. P. the Mayor de facto, and that he ſhould be ſerved with it.

Afterwards on ſhewing cauſe againſt making the rule abſolute, the defendants council inſiſted, 1ſt, That this election of the Mayor de facto was not apparently and clearly ſuch a one as was merely colourable only and void.

2dly, That if it was, yet the proſecutors would not be entitled to this ſpecial mandamus, but only to a general one.

Lord Manſfield, propoſed, that the council for the defendants ſhould file their affidavits; that the proſecutor's council might be able to judge, whether, on the affidavits on both ſides compared together, it was a doubtful election, and fit to be tried on an information in nature of a quo warranto; or whether it was a mere colourable election, and clearly void. For if the former ſhould prove to be the caſe, the court ought not to grant a mandamus: in the latter caſe, they ought: but ſtill, he ſaid, this ſpecial mandamus, which confined it to the very individuals, who were ſummoned on the 24th of October, was certainly wrong; ſo that the rule cannot be made abſolute in its preſent form.

Four days afterwards the proſecutor's council having read over the affidavits filed on the part of the defendants, was content to give up his rule, in caſe the defendants would not inſiſt on coſts.

Mr. Bankes not being willing to quit his claim to coſts on the rule being diſcharged, that point was litigated.

The court having heard the council on both ſides, thought it reaſonable, on the circumſtances diſcloſed to them, to diſcharge the rule without coſts. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1452.

Hilary, 5 Geo. 3. The King v. Holmes, Mayor of Wigan.

On a motion to take off of the file the return to a mandamus, directed to the defendant Holmes, commanding him to reſtore E. L. to the office of an in-burgeſs of Wigan; on affidavit, "that Holmes was dead at the "time of the return being filed:" the import of it was, "that Holmes was dead before the motion was "made for filing the return."

Lord Manſfield, and Wilmot, Juſtice, obſerved, that it turned on, "whether the court would have admitted the return to have been filed, if the fact had been "diſcloſed to them?"

Note. The mandamus iſſued in 1759, and Holmes died about three years ago.

The difficulty was, againſt whom to grant the rule; both Holmes and L. being dead.

This motion ended in a conſent, that the matter ſhould ſtand over till the firſt day of the preſent term; the proſecutor's council undertaking to ſhew cauſe then, and file his affidavit in anſwer to the preſent affidavit a week before the term.

On the firſt day of the term the proſecutor's council ſhewed the following cauſe why the writ of mandamus and the return thereof ſhould not be taken off the file, viz. That the return was duly made in 1759, and then actually ſigned by the Mayor, at a common-hall, and in July 1760, delivered over to Mr. H. Lee, the agent for the proſecutors of the writ: and the perſons commanded by the writ to be reſtored always afterwards, acted as inn-burgeſſes, in conſequence of ſuch reſtoration. Holmes died in 1762. And Bromley, the preſent agent for this motion, knew all this; but has ſuppreſſed it. We did not indeed then think it neceſſary to file it: but we had a right to file it, even after Holmes's death; and it was no irregularity to do ſo.

After hearing the arguments of the council for and againſt this motion, and the court taking time to conſider the point, the opinion of the court being moved for, they delivered the ſame as follows:

Wilmot, Juſtice. I think this return ought to ſtand on the record.

The mandamus was moved for as of courſe, and was directed "to the Mayor" alone. I think it ought to have been directed to thoſe who had power to return it. If ſo, the writ and return ſeem to be a nullity. But I do not go on that.

The writs were delivered to the Mayor in 1759; he called a common-hall; the common-hall reſtored the perſons named in the writs; the Mayor then ſigned a return, “ that he had reſtored them;” in July 1760, he delivered this return to Lee, their agent; the Mayor died in 1762; in Trinity 1764, the writs were filed.

The queſtion is, “ whether they ought to have been “ filed after the Mayor's death, under theſe particular “ circumſtances?”

If the return ought not to have been received, it ought to be taken off the file.

In general, every return is ambulatory, and in the breaſt of the perſon to whom the writ is directed, till it is filed. Signing is not neceſſary, nor material.

Though this mandamus is directed to the Mayor only, yet he himſelf underſtood the return to be made with the conſent of the corporation, or common-hall.

This return, if it ſhould ſtand, may be urged as a concluſive evidence, not only “ that it was made by him,” but alſo “ that it was made with the conſent of the “ corporation.”

As long therefore as this return ſtands, the queſtion, “ whether the reſtoration was or was not with the con- “ ſent of the corporation,” is bound down, and can never be entered into: for no evidence can now be received to controvert this fact of the corporation's conſent. And as it may be applied to this purpoſe, I therefore think the return ought to be taken off the file.

The council for the motion continued to inſiſt on the return being taken off the file; and offered to admit the fact, “ that the Mayor himſelf did make ſuch a re- “ turn.”

Lord Mansfield, and Wilmot, Juſtice. If a returning officer was to die immediately after ſigning a return, and before the filing it, the court might direct an iſſue to try the validity of it.

Wilmot, Juſtice. I conſider this return, now, as ſtanding on the admiſſion of the proſecutors of the writ, “ that no other uſe ſhall be made of it than “ barely that the Mayor did reſtore him in fact,” without prejudice to the queſtion concerning the legality of this reſtoration, or entering into the queſtion about the corporation's concurring with him or not.

Lord Mansfield. Let this be taken down, as by the conſent of council on both ſides, in all the cauſes. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1641.

On a mandamus being moved for on behalf of Lord Hardwicke, directed to the Vice-Chancellor and others of the Univerſity of Cambridge, to complete the election of the ſaid Earl into the office of High-Steward of that Univerſity, a rule to ſhew cauſe was granted.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides for and againſt the rule, the ſame was granted by the court.

Lord Mansfield. As to the remedy, there is no other than what is now applied for. And this is the very reaſon of the court's iſſuing the prerogative writ of mandamus, becauſe there is no other ſpecific remedy.

It is admitted, that a mandamus would lie, if it can be conſidered as the caſe of a ſteward of a court-leet.

But it is ſaid, “ that the franchiſe of the court-leet is in the town of Cambridge, and not in the Univerſity.

But the Univerſity have enjoyed it long; and they are now in poſſeſſion of it: and they have elected Lord Hardwicke under this claim of many ages ſtanding. And the town do not appear, to us, to diſpute it.

But if it was not ſo, I ſhould ſtill think that, as here is no other ſpecific remedy, the court ought to grant the writ. And ſo they will do in eccleſiaſtical caſes, where it appears that there is no other ſpecific remedy.

The laſt queſtion is, how the mandamus ought to be directed?

The council for the motion has gone fully into the argument, “ that the rule for a mandamus ought to be “ founded on the merits of the election, and not on the “ declaration of the proctors.”

It now appears that Lord Hardwicke was duly elected; and the laſt part of the rule will procure him the proper remedy. Therefore the mandamus ought to go to the keepers of the ſeal for the time being, requiring and commanding them to put the ſeal of the Univerſity to the inſtrument of his appointment; and the two former parts of the rule ought to be diſcharged.

Wilmot, Yates, and Aſton, Juſtices, gave their opinion at large, and concurred with the Chief Juſtice, “ that “ a mandamus ought to go; and that it ought to be di- “ rected to the keepers of the Univerſity-ſeal, com- “ manding them to affix it to the diploma of Lord “ Hardwicke's appointment to the office of High- “ Steward.”

Eaſter, 2 Ann. Tomkin v. Crocker. Error.

In replevin for a braſs-pan taken by the defendant in a place called the Kitchin, at the pariſh of St. Agnes in Cornwall, judgment was given for the defendant in the C. B. on which a writ of error was brought by the plaintiff, and the general errors were aſſigned.

The plaintiff's council objected, 1ſt. That the tenure found in the verdict varies in its nature from that which the conuſance mentions, and conſequently the verdict does not maintain the iſſue; and therefore the judgment being given for the defendant is erroneous, and ought to be reverſed, becauſe the ſuit to the court mentioned in the conuſance muſt be intended to be a ſuit to the Court Baron, tenure at common law; but the ſuit to the court found by the verdict is cuſtomary tenure, becauſe it is a ſuit to the cuſtomary court. The court of the manor muſt be intended to be a Court Baron. It is the peculiar ſtile of the court.

2dly. It was argued for the plaintiff in error, that admitting the court would intend the ſervice in the conuſance, and that in the verdict to be the ſame, yet it appeared by the verdict that the manor is deſtroyed; and if there is no manor, there is no court; if no court, no ſuit can be due to it. And for this it was urged, that the manor was deſtroyed, becauſe there was but one ſuitor, and the court cannot be held, but before two ſuitors at leaſt. That it is found poſitively, that there has been but one free ſuitor for twenty years laſt paſt; that the verdict being ſpecial, ſhall not be aided by intendment; and therefore it ſhall not be intended, that any of the other freeholds are only ſuſpended, and that ſo the tenure remains, and the manor continues.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. There muſt be two ſuitors at leaſt to continue the manor, for without two no court can be held. Now, in this caſe, the jury have expreſsly found that this was a manor. The queſtion then will be, whether it appears to be deſtroyed: and in my opinion it does not. For ſuppoſe there were two ſuitors, and one of them makes a leaſe for life, the leſſee for life does not hold of the lord, but of the reverſioner, and he holds of the lord; and then for that time there is but one free ſuitor. The manor ſeems to be ſuſpended for a time, but the ſuit-ſervice remains, notwithſtanding the ſuſpenſion. As where lands held by homage are granted to a corporation aggregate, the tenure remains, though the corporation cannot do homage; and if the corporation grants it over, the homage will revive. Farther, the iſſue is, whether Hugh Tonkins held by rent, ſuit of court, &c. which is not confined to any time, and the jury have found expreſsly a time when he held ſo, viz. before the twenty years laſt paſt: and therefore this objection will not avail here. Accordingly the judgment was affirmed. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 860.

On ſhewing cauſe to this rule, the queſtion was, "Whether the Lord of a manor is aſſeſſable to the poor-rates, under ſtat. 43 Eliz. cap. 2. for the quit-rents, heriots, and caſual profits of his manor."

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on this rule, the court took time to conſider the point.

On Tueſday the 13th of May 1760, Lord Mansfield delivered the opinion of the court, viz. "That theſe quit-rents and caſual profits of the Manor are not rateable to the poor's tax;" which he ſaid, was ſo clear, that there was no need to enter into any reaſoning thereon. They were never rated before, in this pariſh; and as far as appears to us, the rating ſuch quit-rents and caſual profits has never been at all attempted before: and there is no colour for this attempt now, after more than a century and an half has elapſed ſince the making of the act of parliament, on which it is grounded.

Per curiam. Let the rule be made abſolute for quaſhing the rate; and alſo the order of ſeſſions confirming it. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 991.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. An obligation taken in the admiralty to appear and ſue there, is ſuable in that court, for it is a ſtipulation in nature of bail at common law; but where there were thirteen part owners of a ſhip, and one of them refuſed to let her go to ſea, whereon a ſtipulation was taken for the ſhare of the party refuſing, and afterwards the ſhip went her voyage, and this ſtipulation being put in ſuit in the ſaid court, a prohibition was granted, becauſe the ſhip was built, and the charter party made at land. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 23.

Hilary, 3 W. & M. Anonymous.

Adjudged, That where there is a falſe capture of goods at ſea, the Admiral has juriſdiction; and if they be brought to land, the common law has; and the cauſe may be brought in either place, at the plaintiff's election. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 16.

Eaſter, 5 W. & M. Opy v. Child, and others.

The Attorney General moved for a prohibition to the Court of Admiralty, in a ſuit depending there for mariners wages, on a ſuggeſtion of a contract made for them at land.

The court held, that for convenience of ſeamen, the Admiralty had been allowed to hold ſuit for mariners wages; but yet with this limitation, that if there be any ſpecial agreement by which the mariners are to receive their wages in any other manner than is uſual; or if the agreement be under ſeal, ſo as to be more than a parol agreement, in ſuch caſe a prohibition ſhall be granted, and it was accordingly granted in this caſe. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 31.

Eaſter, 5 W. & M. Sir Joſiah Child v. Sands; or, Sands v. Child, and others. Error.

The plaintiff Sands in his declaration ſet forth the ſtatutes 13 R. 2. 15 R. 2. and 2 H. c. 11. which gives the party grieved double damages, and 13 l. to the King; and that he was owner of a ſhip lying in the Thames, within the body of the county, laden with divers goods, wherein he had a fifth part to his own ſhare; that the ſhip was ready to ſail, and that the defendant cauſed a proceeding to be made in the Admiralty againſt the ſhip, and the ſhip to be arreſted and ſtaid until he gave ſecurity not to go to the Madeiras, or to the Eaſt-Indies, whereby he was ſtaid three months, and loſt his voyage, to his damages of 3000 l. On not guilty pleaded, the jury found ſpecially, that the E. I. Company by charter had the ſole trade to the E. I. and Madeiras, and that the plaintiff was going thither; and Sir Joſiah Child, one of the defendants, was governor of the company, and procured an order of council to the King's Advocate General to proceed in this manner, &c. and that the defendants ſued this proceſs out of the Court of Admiralty; and if a verdict is found for the plaintiff, the jury find 1500 l. damages, and 51 l. coſts, which were doubled in the judgment according to the ſtatute. Judgment was given for the plaintiff in the C. B. on which a writ of error was brought,

1ſt. In this caſe it was agreed, that the King might lay imbargoes, but then it muſt be pro bono publico, and not for the private advantage of a particular trader or company.

2dly. Though here was but one act, and but one offence, yet every ſeveral perſon injured might have an action, and recover damages, and on every conviction the defendant would forfeit 10 l. to the King. Thus, if H. drives a diſtreſs above three miles from the place where it was taken, by ſtat. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 12. he is to forfeit 5 l. to the party aggrieved. In that caſe, ſuppoſe the diſtreſs be of three cattle, and every beaſt has a diſtinct owner, H. ſhall forfeit three times 5 l. Noy 62, 158. Dyer 351. b. 2 Lev. 8.

4thly. That Child was a proſecutor within the ſtatute, though no ſuit was in his name, becauſe he promoted and maintained it: and if he did it of his own head, then it is properly his own action; if as agent to the company, and by their command, then that command being to do an unlawful act, muſt be void; but they held a mere attorney would not be a proſecutor within the ſtatute.

5thly. That all the five proprietors being joint-owners, ſhould have joined in this action; but this being not pleaded in abatement, as it ſhould have been, all is now well; for though it appears by the declaration that there were four others, joint-tenants of theſe goods with the plaintiff, yet it does not appear but they are dead, and then Sands alone is entitled to the action; and wherever joint tenancy is pleaded in abatement, the life of the other joint-tenant not named is averred in the plea, otherwiſe the plea is ill. 1 Saund. 29.

Note. Whether theſe were joint-tenants, or tenants in common, either way the action ſurvives. Therefore the judgment was affirmed. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 31. Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 176.

The court was moved for a prohibition, on a ſuit in the Admiralty by a maſter of a ſhip, againſt the part-owners for ſeamen's wages, he having paid off the ſeamen, and would now ſtand in their places.

Per curiam. Let a prohibition iſſue: for when the maſter has paid the ſeamen, and they are diſcharged, there is an end of that privilege and indulgence to the ſeamen, which is perſonal, and cannot be transferred. Vide Forteſcue, p. 230.

Michaelmas, 6 W. & M. Wilſon v. Bird.

A ſhip was libelled againſt in the Admiralty, for that the maſter being taken by a French privateer had ranſomed the ſhip for 300 l. and had ſued for the payment of it, and was carried priſoner to Dunkirk, and the money was not paid, &c. and ſentence was given in the Admiralty againſt the ſhip. And the court being moved for a prohibition, it was denied by Holt, Chief Juſtice, who was alone in court; becauſe the taking and pledge being on the high ſeas, the ſhip, by the law of the Admiralty, ſhall anſwer for the redemption of the maſter by his own contract. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 22.

Hilary, 8 & 9 W. 3. Benzen v. Jeffries.

A motion was made for a prohibition to the Court of Admiralty, where a ſuit was proſecuted againſt a ſhip, which the maſter had hypothecated for neceſſaries, being on the ſea in ſtreſs of weather; and the ſuggeſtion was, that the agreement was made, and the money lent on land, viz. in the port of London, it being a Venetian veſſel, which came here by way of trade, and not ſtreſs of weather.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The maſter of the ſhip has power to hypothecate it, but cannot ſell it; and by the pawning the ſhip becomes liable to condemnation. This was reſolved on ſolemn argument in the caſe of Coſtard v. Lewſtie, 2 W. & M. There is no remedy here for the hypothecation, but by way of contract; therefore ſince this court cannot do right to the parties, it will not hinder the Admiralty; for if this court allows the hypothecation, and yet denies the remedy, it will be a manifeſt contradiction.

An action was brought on ſtat. 2 Hen. 4. c. 11. for ſuing in the Admiralty on an hypothecation, and it was held to be out of the ſtatute, in Lord Hale's time. And as to the objection that the contract was made on the land, and money paid there, it muſt be ſo; for if a man be in diſtreſs on the ſea, and is compelled to go into port, he muſt receive the money there, or not at all. And if his ſhip be impaired by a tempeſt, ſo that he is obliged to borrow money to refit, otherwiſe ſhe will be loſt, and for ſecurity of this money he pledges his ſhip; ſince the cauſe of the pledging ariſes on the ſea, the ſuit may well be brought in the Admiralty court. But becauſe there was a precedent, where a prohibition in ſuch a caſe had been granted, the court granted one here, and ordered the plaintiff to declare on it, for the law ſeemed clear to them as before recited. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 152.

There were ſeveral part-owners of a ſhip, ſome of whom were deſirous that the ſhip ſhould go to ſea, to which the others would not agree; on which they procured the ſhip to be arreſted by a proceſs out of the Admiralty, and compelled thoſe who intended to ſend the ſhip a voyage, to enter into a recognizance in the Admiralty, conditioned, that the ſhip ſhould ſafely return. After which, the ſhip began a voyage, in which ſhe was loſt; on this the perſons who were bound for the ſafe return of the ſhip, were ſued in the Admiralty: on which this court was moved for a prohibition. 1ſt, Becauſe the recognizance not being in the nature of a ſtipulation, the Admiralty had not power to compel the party to enter into it. 2dly, Becauſe this ſuit being in nature of debt on a recognizance, the Admiralty had no cognizance of it.

The court refuſed to grant a prohibition, (Holt, Chief Juſtice, being abſent) becauſe this ſuit being between the part-owners of the ſhip, the property is admitted; and therefore it is properly conuſable there. 2dly, If the Admiralty had not power to take ſuch recognizances, all navigation muſt be obſtructed, if one obſtinate part-owner would not conſent, that the ſhip ſhould go a voyage; and on the other ſide it is very reaſonable, that he ſhould have ſecurity, that the ſhip ſhall return in ſafety, ſince he does not conſent to the voyage. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 223.

The defendant by letters of mart, &c. from the African Company, took a French ſhip in the river of Beſaw, near Gambore, which he carried to Africa, and the Admiralty there condemned it as the King's prize: After this Broom ſold the ſhip at land, and applied the money to his own uſe; and came into England, and was ſued in the Admiralty here for an account. After ſentence againſt him he appealed, and then moved for a prohibition, but it was not obtained; for the ſuit here is but an execution of the firſt ſentence, by which the ſhip is adjudged the King's prize; now the Admiralty having a juriſdiction, that ſentence has bound the property, and we cannot examine the property, but muſt take it according to their determination, which cannot be gainſaid till it be repealed on an appeal. So the rule for a prohibition was diſcharged. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 32. Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 134.

Trinity, 9 W. 3. Blackett v. Anſley.

Thirty-ſeven part-owners of a ſhip would ſend her a voyage, but two or three of the other part-owners would not conſent. On which the admiralty took a ſtipulation in the nature of a recogniſance of the thirty-ſeven, as a ſecurity for the ſafe bringing back the ſhip. And the ſhip being loſt, the two or three part-owners who oppoſed the voyage, libelled on this ſtipulation againſt the thirty-ſeven. On which the court was moved for a prohibition, but the motion was denied.

Per curiam. Though by the law of England two or three part-owners may hinder the others from ſending the ſhip a voyage without their conſent, yet the law of the admiralty is otherwiſe. For the court of admiralty, for the encouragement of navigation, will permit the ſhip to make the voyage, on ſecurity given to bring her back ſafe. For it is reaſonable that the others, who oppoſe the voyage, ſhould have ſome ſecurity for their ſhare. Then, if the ſhip be loſt, it is at the peril of the adventurers, and they ſhall be ſuable on their ſtipulation by the others in the admiralty; for now it is not doubted, but the admiralty may take ſtipulations. Vide Raymond, vol. 1. p. 235.

Michaelmas, 9 W. 3. Terremoulin or Shermoulin, v. Sandys or Sands.

The defendant was proprietor of a ſhip called the Conſtant Mary, and ſent her to ſea, where ſhe was taken off Yarmouth, on the high ſeas, by one Dubart of Dunkirk, who ſold her to the plaintiff; after which the ſhip being at Spithead, the defendant ſeized her by the admiralty proceſs, whereon a ſuit was commenced in the admiralty court by the defendant againſt the ſaid ſhip, and then Terremoulin came in for his intereſt, and ſuggeſted, that the ſhip was his, and that he had been in poſſeſſion of her three years laſt paſt, and prayed his poſſeſſion might be reſtored; whereon Sandys put in his libel, that he was poſſeſſed of the ſaid ſhip divers years till 1689, that then the ſhip was forcibly taken away from him, without ſaying on the high ſeas, and thereon prayed reſtitution. Terremoulin replied, that the ſhip was taken by one Dubart on the high ſeas, who ſold it to him at Bergen in Norway. Sandys rejoined, that after the taking, the ſhip was never condemned as a prize, and ſo his property ſtill continued: Accordingly, after examination of the caſe, the Admiralty gave judgment for Sandys; for a capture without condemnation alters not the property by their law; whereon Terremoulin appealed to the Delegates, and now againſt his own appeal prayed a prohibition.

Holt Chief Juſtice. The libel does not ſay, that the violent taking away was at ſea; and if it was not, what have the admiralty to do with it, and how can it be cured by any ſubſequent matter; for if the admiralty have not the conuſance of the original cauſe, though a civil queſtion ariſe, they ſhall not have juriſdiction; and if they have juriſdiction, and a common law queſtion ariſe, yet they ſhall determine it. And Holt Chief Juſtice, and Rokeby Juſtice were of opinion, that a prohibition ſhould iſſue, becauſe the libel was a mere replevin at common law.

But Turton and Eyre Juſtices held otherwiſe: becauſe it appeared by a ſubſequent allegation, that the capture was on the high ſeas; wherefore the rule for the prohibition was diſcharged. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 143. Raymond. vol. 1. p. 271.

Holt Chief Juſtice denied a prohibition to the admiralty, for refuſing to give a copy of the libel; becauſe ſtat. 2. H. 5. c. 3. extends only to the eccleſiaſtical court, and not to the admiralty. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 244.

Michaelmas 10, or Eaſter 11, W. 3. Rigdon or Rigden, v. Hedges.

Goods were arreſted in the river Thames by a proceſs out of the court of admiralty, and a reſcue being made, a warrant iſſued againſt Rigden for a contempt of their proceſs; and on a motion for a prohibition it was ſuggeſted, that the original proceſs was of a thing out of their juriſdiction, and therefore there could not be a contempt.

On the other ſide it was urged, that this ſuggeſtion came too ſoon, becauſe it cannot be known whether they have juriſdiction or not, till bail is put in to try the action, and ſo it is in the eccleſiaſtical or inferior courts, if a prohibition be ſued on ſuggeſtion that the cauſe of action is out of their juriſdiction. 1 Vent. 180. 1 Mod. 81.

Holt Chief Juſtice. Sure the cauſe that brings it within their juriſdiction ought to be ſet forth in their proceſs; and it is too general to ſay a maritime cauſe; if goods are taken at ſea by pirates, and ſold by them at ſea, and afterwards brought on ſhore, whether a prize or not ſhall be tried in the admiralty.

Per curiam. If a ſhip be arreſted by a warrant out of the court of admiralty within their juriſdiction, and is afterwards reſcued, they may re-ſeize it out of their juriſdiction, and no prohibition lies. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 246. Raymond, vol. 1. p. 446.

On an action of trover for goods, the defendants pleaded that they were in a ſhip, and that the ſhip took fire, and that they hazarded their lives to ſave them, and therefore they were ready to deliver the goods, if the plaintiff would pay them 4 l. for ſalvage, &c. to which plea the plaintiff demurred generally.

Holt Chief Juſtice held, that they might retain the goods until payment, as well as a taylor, hoſtler, or a common carrier. And ſalvage is allowed by all nations, it being reaſonable that a man ſhall be rewarded, who hazards his life in the ſervice of another. But though the detainer be lawful, yet it does not amount to a converſion, no more than a diſtreſs for rent. And he ſaid, he never knew but one ſpecial plea good in trover, except a releaſe. And Yelv. 198. a man may plead that ſpecially, which he might give in evidence on not guilty, if he confeſſes and avoids the fact. For the reaſon why you may plead ſpecially is not the doubt in the law; but it is, becauſe the matter of the plea cannot be given in evidence on not guilty. But this cannot be good though after a general demurrer, becauſe it does not confeſs a converſion. Therefore a rule was made by conſent, that the defendant ſhould waive the ſpecial plea, and plead the general iſſue. Vide Raymond, vol. 1. p. 393.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Hook v. Moreton.

The court was moved for a prohibition to be directed to the admiralty court, to ſtay a ſuit there on a libel, by the mate of a ſhip for mariners wages, on ſuggeſtion of ſeveral ſtatutes, which reſtrain the admiralty from proceeding on contracts made on land.

On the other ſide it was argued, that if all the mariners ſue for their wages in the admiralty, this court at preſent will never grant a prohibition, and there is no difference where the ſuit is brought by one mariner, or by many.

Per curiam. There is no difference. For the reaſon why this court permits mariners to libel in the admiralty for their wages, is not only becauſe they are privileged to join in the ſuit in the admiralty, whereas they ought to ſever at common law, becauſe the contracts are ſeveral; but alſo becauſe by the maritime law mariners have a ſecurity in the ſhip for their wages, and it is a ſort of implied hypothecation to them. Therefore this court allows mariners to ſue in the admiralty for their wages, becauſe they have the ſhip there for a ſecurity. But the queſtion here is, whether the mate of a ſhip differs from any other mariner; for if the plaintiff had been a ſingle mariner, doubtleſs no prohibition would have been granted; and the court were of opinion that a mate is but a mariner.

Holt Chief Juſtice. Heretofore the common law was too ſevere againſt the admiralty; it did not allow ſtipulations, but at preſent they are always allowed. Wherefore a rule was made that the court ſhould be moved for their opinion at another day. Vide Raymond, vol. 1. p. 397.

A ſeaman ſued in the admiralty court for his own wages, on a contract with a freighter; and the words of the libel were, between the ebbing and flowing of the ſea.

It was urged that the libel ought to ſtate the contract to have ben made on the high ſeas.

Holt C. J. In this caſe it need not be ſo, becauſe in the caſe of wages they may ſue in the admiralty, though thecontract be not on the high ſeas; and where the queſtion is on the payment of wages, it is proper enough in the admiralty court. Accordingly a prohibition was denied. Vide Forteſcue. p. 230.

Hilary, 11 W. 3. Wiggan v. Branthwaite. Error.

On an action of treſpaſs for taking goods, the caſe was: a manor to which wrecks belonged by preſcription came to the King's hands, who granted to A. the office of high admiral, with all wrecks at ſea, and all profits to the ſaid office belonging; and to B. the above manor.

Holt Chief Juſtice, at the trial in Suffolk, held, that as the wreck belonged to the manor by preſcription, it could not paſs as appurtenant to the office of high admiral; and it being moved to have the matter found ſpecially, it was refuſed; and a bill of exceptions was tendered and ſealed, and a writ of error brought, and error aſſigned; and it was argued, that beſides the grant of wreck appurtenant to the office of high admiral, there is alſo a grant of goods thrown up by the ſea, which is not relative to the office, and will comprehend a grant of all wreck then in the hands of the King; and the reſtraining clauſe of thereunto relating and belonging, ſhall not relate to the wreck of ſea granted; for wreck cannot belong to the office by preſcription, for the office itſelf is within time of memory.

Holt Chief Juſtice. Wreck may be claimed by preſcription, and may belong to the lord admiral by preſcription; for it is an ancient office from time whereof, &c. though it might not be veſted in a ſingle perſon, or in the ſame manner, as it is now. Dy. 152. b. there is a preſcription for the lord high admiral to grant the office of regiſter of the admiralty for life; and no doubt but ſome wreck may belong to the admiral by preſcription; as that about the Cinque Ports, and ſuch places where he was moſt converſant in ancient times. And as to the objection that there is but one conceſſit or word of grant, all the clauſes ſhall be taken to be dependant on it, and the clauſe of reſtraint ſhall extend to all of them; otherwiſe if there had been any word of grant intermediate. So the judgment was affirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 261. Raymond, vol. 1. p. 476.

Holt Chief Juſtice held, that if a ſhip is loſt before ſhe arrives at any port of delivery the ſeamen loſe all their wages, but if ſhe is loſt after ſhe comes to any port of delivery, then they loſe all their wages from the laſt port of delivery: but if they run away, though it is after ſhe come to a port of delivery, they loſe all their wages. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 23. Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 408. Ibid. vol. 12. p. 442. Raym. vol. 1. p. 639.

Trinity, 12 W. 3. Clay v. Snelgrave, Snalgrave, or Sudgrave.

The adminiſtrator of a maſter libelled againſt a ſhip for the maſter's and ſeamen's wages; and a prohibition was moved for on ſuggeſtion that the contract was made on land. It was agreed by the court that the ſuggeſtion was naught, in the caſe of a ſuit for ſeamen's wages only; but the doubt was as to the maſter.

Holt Chief Juſtice. It is by indulgence that ſeamen may ſue for their wages in the admiralty, but that was never extended to maſters but once, which was in Lord Herbert's time; for the maſter's caſe differs from that of the mariners, for he is a principal ſervant, and contracts with the part-owners, and the mariners with him; and a prohibition is a matter of right, with ſome reſtrictions; and that which is the ground for prohibitions in theſe caſes, is the contract being made on land; but that does not hold in all caſes; for in Croſby v. Loſmell's caſe, the money was taken up at land for the uſe of the ſhip diſtreſſed in her voyage; and a conſultation was granted; otherwiſe, if it had been taken up before the voyage began. And in the caſe of a local juriſdiction, as that of the admiralty is, there is no difference between the contract's being by deed and by parol.

To which Gould Juſtice agreed. Wherefore a prohibition was granted. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 405. Raymond, vol. 1. p. 576. Salk. vol. 1. p. 33.

The mate ſued the maſter for his wages in the Admiralty, and this court was moved for a prohibition, becauſe the maſter himſelf could not ſue there, and the mate was not in nature of a mariner, but was to ſucceed the maſter, if he died in the voyage.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The maſter contracts with the owners, but the mate contracts with the maſter for his wages, as the reſt of the mariners do. Therefore a prohibition was denied. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 33. Raym. vol. 1. p. 632. Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 440.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. Betts v. Hancock.

In a ſuit in the Admiralty, the principal died before ſentence: notwithſtanding this, that court proceeded againſt the bill on the ſtipulation in the nature of a recognizance, by which he bound himſelf and his heirs. This court was moved for a prohibition, and it was inſiſted that the court could not take notice of the courſe or law of the Admiralty being not pleaded, becauſe it was foreign to the common law; and there was a particular reaſon why they took notice of the ſpiritual law, viz. That both the ſpiritual and temporal laws were originally adminiſtered in the ſame court, a reaſon which failed in this caſe: alſo that lands were intirely under the protection of the common law, and they could not take ſtipulation in the realty. Laſtly, that if the defendant had been in gaol, and had died within the walls of the priſon, the ſuit muſt have abated; and there was no reaſon why the ſuit ſhould be in a better condition by the defendant's being in cuſtody of his bail, than in caſe he had been in actual cuſtody. And that whereas the ſecurity given was only that the defendant ſhould abide their judgment, the Admiralty now have extended it to the defendant's executor. On the other ſide it was ſaid: The bail in the Admiralty are ſued as principals, and this is the courſe of this court, becauſe the plaintiff and defendant, being ſea-faring men, are more than others ſubject to caſualties.

Trinity, 13 W. 3. Maddox v. ——.

A prohibition was moved for to ſtay a ſuit in the admiralty, brought by a ſurgeon of a ſhip for his wages; and the ſuggeſtion was, that all was paid to the maſter.

Per curiam. Payment to the maſter is not payment to the ſeamen, but the ſhip itſelf is liable for their wages. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 526.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Juſtin v. Ballam.

The defendant libelled in the Admiralty, for that the ſhip being in great diſtreſs on the ſea, and wanting a cable, the maſter contracted with the defendant for a cable, which he delivered, &c. And for that he libelled in the Admiralty; the plaintiff ſuggeſted the contract was made at land, viz. at Ratcliffe on the River Thames, where the ſhip then lay. The caſe of Coſtard and Lewſtie was urged, where an hypothecation at Rotterdam was allowed to be within the juriſdiction of the Admiralty; and though the cable was ſold at land, yet the want of the cable was occaſioned by ſtreſs of weather at ſea; which was the cauſe of ſuit: and that all matters, incident to navigation, belonged to the Admiralty's juriſdiction by the laws of Oleron.

Per curiam. By the maritime law, every contract of the maſter implies an hypothecation; but by the common law it is not ſo, unleſs it be ſo expreſsly agreed: in Coſter's caſe there was an expreſs hypothecation, and that was in a place where hypothecations were allowed good; for that reaſon we allowed the juriſdiction of the Admiralty in that caſe, for there was no remedy at common law: but in this caſe there is nothing but a mere common contract at land. So a prohibition was granted.

Note alſo, the maſter may hypothecate either ſhip or goods, for the maſter is entruſted with both, and repreſents the traders as well as owners of the ſhip. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 34.

Trinity, 2 Ann. Johnſon or Jonſon, v. Shippin or Shepney.

A Ship put in at Boſton in New-England, and there the maſter took up neceſſaries, and gave a bill of ſale by way of hypothecation; and now there being a ſuit brought againſt the ſhip and owners to compel re-payment, a prohibition was moved for. And the court held, that the maſter could not by his contract make the owners perſonally liable to a ſuit, and therefore as to them granted a prohibition; but as to the ſuit againſt the ſhip denied a prohibition; for the maſter can have no credit abroad but on giving ſecurity by hypothecation, and it is not reaſonable we ſhould hinder the court of admiralty from giving a remedy, where we can give none ourſelves. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 35. Raym. vol. 2. page 982. Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 79. Ibid. vol. 11. p. 30.

A proceſs was awarded by the Admiralty at the ſuit of the maſter againſt the owners, to arreſt the goods at Briſtol, on account of ſalvage, and now before appearance, the court was moved for a prohibition, on affidavits of the matter on the proceſs before the libel, whereby it appeared the goods landed were arreſted on account of ſalvage; and Sands's caſe was cited, where on a proceſs to ſtay a ſhip in the river, a prohibition was granted before appearance.

Per curiam. Though the goods be now arreſted at land, yet the ſalvage which was the cauſe of that arreſt, might be at ſea, which will appear by the libel; therefore we will not grant a prohibition before appearance or libel to try the validity of their proceſs; the rather, becauſe the party may have another remedy by action of treſpaſs or replevin; and this is not like Sands's caſe, for that proceſs was not for an appearance, as this is; but in the nature of an execution. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 35. Raym vol. 2. p. 931. *Mod. Eaſter, 3 Ann. More v. Rowbothom.

Among ſeveral part-owners of a ſhip, ſome were againſt freighting her; but by the practice in the Admiralty in ſuch caſe for advancing of navigation, it was decreed that the majority ſhall prevail and freight, they giving the diſſenting party caution for their parts of the ſhip againſt all riſques; which was done here, and the ſhip being loſt, the caution was libelled againſt, and ſentence given in the Admiralty; on which a prohibition was moved for, ſuggeſting that the caution was given on land, and that all matter of property is to be ordered by the common law only: and the court were of opinion, that they had ſuch power; and if ſo, by conſequence they had juriſdiction over the caution, as incident thereto: yet it being a matter of conſequence, and never yet determined, they granted a prohibition, and directed them to declare according to their ſuggeſtion forthwith: and though it be after ſentence, yet if they had no juriſdiction, a prohibition ought to iſſue. And it was ruled accordingly. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. page 162.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a ſhip be bound for the Eaſt Indies, and from thence to return to England, and the ſhip unlades at a port in the Eaſt Indies, and takes a freight to return to England, and in her return is taken by enemies; the mariners ſhall have their wages for the voyage to the Eaſt-Indies, and for half the time that they ſtaid there to unlade, and no more. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 739.

On a motion for a prohibition to the Admiralty, in a ſuit there for ſeamen's wages, the caſe appeared to be thus: Wells the plaintiff built a ſhip, and launched her, and afterwards on a treaty between him and one B. who was to buy the ſhip, in order to get to be maſter of her, (as is uſual in ſuch caſes) but before any bill of ſale was executed by Wells to him, B. hired Oſman and other ſeamen to launch and rig the ſhip, and to go with him in this ſhip a voyage propoſed, and ſent them on board the ſhip, and Wells permitted them to come on board; and there the ſeamen continued for four months, fitting out the ſhip for ſea, but afterwards, on ſome difference happening between B. and Wells, the treaty for the ſhip was broke off, and the things fetched from on board the ſhip, and the ſeamen diſcharged, having never been with the ſhip any lower than Deptford, where the ſhip lay when they went on board. And now the ſeamen libelled in the Admiralty againſt the body of the ſhip for their wages, and on ſuggeſtion that the work and labour was done within the body of the county, the court was moved for a prohibition. And the council grounded their motion on this, that though here was a voyage intended, yet no voyage having been made, the mariners could not ſue in the Admiralty for their wages.

It was alſo objected, that this was the common courſe of dealing between ſhip-builders and maſters of ſhips; and that it would be very hard to ſubject the builders of ſhips to the ſeamen's wages, where the contract never proceeded, the builders having nothing to do with the ſeamen; but they ſhould be put to their remedy againſt the maſter who contracted with them.

Per curiam. If a contract be made with ſeamen to go a voyage, and they, in order there to work in an harbour, and afterwards the voyage is intercepted through the owner's fault, as if the ſhip be arreſted for his debt, &c. the ſeamen ſhall ſue in the Admiralty for their wages, for their work ſo done in the harbour in purſuance of a contract to go on a voyage, is as much as if they had gone the voyage; otherwiſe if the retaining of them had only been to do the work in the harbour; and in this caſe the ſhip ought to be liable for their ſuit, becauſe the builder, by putting it into the owner's poſſeſſion, gave him an opportunity of engaging with ſeamen, who are the more eaſily induced, becauſe they ſee him in poſſeſſion of it; and they being ſtrangers to the builder's bargain with the owner, ought not to ſuffer by its not being performed; for the builder might have taken care to ſecure himſelf from any ſuch charge, when he entruſted the owner with poſſeſſion of the ſhip, whereby he rendered it ſubject to the wages of ſuch ſeamen as he ſhould bring on board, in order to a voyage in her. So the motion for a prohibition was denied.

The court alſo ſaid, that the true reaſon why ſeamen may ſue for their wages in the Admiralty, though the real contract be at land, is, that there the ſhip itſelf is made liable to them; and beſides, there they may all join in the ſuit, neither of which can be at common law, and yet both are much for the eaſe of poor ſeamen. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1044. Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 238. Ibid. vol. 11. p. 31.

Michaelmas, 4 Ann. Benns v. Parre.

The court was moved for a prohibition to a ſuit in the Court of Admiralty for ſeamen's wages, on ſuggeſtion that the contract was made by deed at land. But on reading the ſuggeſtion, it appeared to be general, that the contract was made at land. Then the court directed the ſuggeſtion to be amended; on which it was amended, and made by writing.

But the court held that it was not ſufficient, for it might be by writing, and yet not by deed; and if it was ſo, that would not alter the caſe, for notwithſtanding the writing, it is but a parol contract.

It was then urged, that it was a ſpecial agreement.

But the court held, that even this did not withdraw it from the Admiralty's juriſdiction. Wherefore the motion was denied. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1206.

Michaelmas, 4 Ann. Wiggins v. Ingleton.

On an action brought for mariners wages for a voyage from Carolina to London, it appeared, that the plaintiff had ſerved three or four months, and before the ſhip came to London, which was the delivering port, he was impreſſed into the Queen's ſervice; and afterwards the ſhip came ſafe to the delivering port.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ruled, on evidence, that the plaintiff ſhould recover for as long as he had ſerved, the ſhip having arrived ſafe to the delivering port.

Afterwards, in another cauſe, viz. Chandler v. Mead at the ſittings after this term at Guildhall, it appeared, that the plaintiff was hired by the defendant at Carolina, to ſerve on board the Jane ſloop, whereof the defendant was maſter, from Carolina to England, at 3 l. per month: that he ſerved two months, then the ſhip was took by a French privateer and ranſomed; and juſt as ſhe came off Plymouth, the plaintiff was impreſſed, &c. and then the ſhip came ſafe into the river Thames, where ſhe diſpoſed of her cargo.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The plaintiff can have no wages, the ſhip having been taken by the enemy and ranſomed.

It was inſiſted by the plaintiff's council, that he ſhould recover for a proportionable part, and that the uſage among merchants was ſo.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, if it could be proved it would do; but wanting proof of it, the plaintiff was nonſuited. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1211.

The court was moved for a prohibition to the court of Admiralty in a ſuit there brought by ſeamen for their wages, on a ſuggeſtion that the court refuſed to allow the defendants, allegation, that the place, on the arrival at which the plaintiffs intitled themſelves, was not a port of delivery; and that they refuſed to receive the allegation, unleſs the defendants would bring the money demanded into court.

But Holt, Chief Juſtice, and Powell, Juſtice held, that the Admiralty court were judges of that matter, and that if they did not do the defendant juſtice, his only remedy was by appeal; but it was no ground for a prohibition: that the juriſdiction of the Court of Admiralty in caſe of ſeamen's wages was an ancient concurrent juriſdiction, as ancient as the conſtitution of the Admiralty court here: and that you cannot appeal in the Court of Admiralty before definitive ſentence, for a grievance, as you may in the Eccleſiaſtical court.

Powell, J. ſaid, he remembered a caſe of thelike nature, where a ſuit was commenced in the Court of Admiralty by ſeamen for their wages, on the arrival of the ſhip at Newfoundland; and though the merchants all held it no port of delivery, yet the Court of Admiralty held the contrary. And ſo did the court of C. B. on a motion for a prohibition. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1247.

Eaſter, 6 Ann. Degrave v. Hedges.

There were eight part-owners of a ſhip, ſix of them would ſend her a voyage, to which two would not conſent, the ſix thereon libelled in the Admiralty againſt the others, in order to obtain a decree of that court, that the ſhip ſhould make the voyage, which was decreed accordingly; and that the ſix ſhould enter into a ſtipulation to the other two for the ſafe return of the ſhip. The ſhip ſailed, and was loſt in the voyage: the two ſued the other ſix on this ſtipulation in the Admiralty. On which this court was moved for a prohibition to ſtay the ſuit, on ſuggeſtion of ſtat. 13 Rich. 2. c. 5. and 15 Rich. 2. c. 3. and of the facts before alledged.

The court were of opinion, that this point was not fit to be determined on motion, but ordered the plaintiff to take a prohibition, and declare on it, and then on the defendant's demurrer, the point would come judicially before them, and would receive a more ſolemn determination.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that the Court of Admiralty might take ſtipulations for bail, and that they might proceed on them, and it was conſtantly allowed, though Co. 4. Inſt. 135. is of another opinion, and yet ſuch ſtipulations are as much within the words of ſtat. 13 & 15 Rich. 2. as the recognizance in this caſe. But the queſtion in this caſe is, if by the cuſtom of England the Admiralty has not ſuch a juriſdiction, if it has, neither the ſtatute, nor common law will reſtrain them. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1285.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. A ſhip carpenter, though a warrant officer, is held to be within ſtat. 2 Ann. for diſcharging enliſted ſoldiers and Mariners.

The cargo of a ſhip was loſt by the capture of the ſhip by a Swediſh privateer, who carried her into Gottenburgh; the maſter ſtaid there three months, to refit the ſhip, and take in new lading; to prevent the ſeamen from going away, he agreed to pay them ſo much per month whilſt they ſtaid there: and in an action brought for this the maſter would have diſcharged himſelf, on the rule that freight is the mother of wages, and that none are ever paid while the ſhip is lading and unlading; which Pratt Chief Juſtice agreed to be the general doctrine: but he held it not to be ſufficient to controul a ſpecial agreement, as there was in this caſe, and where too there was ſo long a ſtay at Gottenburgh. Vide Strange vol. 1. p. 405.

A prohibition was moved for to the admiralty court, on affidavit that the cauſe of action did not ariſe on the high ſea.

Trinity, 11 Geo. The Mariners Caſe.

A libel was brought in the court of admiralty for mariners wages, the plaintiff ſuggeſted for a prohibition, a contract reduced into writing for the wages; but the prohibition was denied, for the court always indulges mariners to ſue in the admiralty, becauſe by the courſe of that court, many of them may join in the ſuit, and it is the cheapeſt and moſt expeditious method to recover their wages; if there is a ſpecial contract, as is now ſuggeſted, the defendant may plead it in that court; and if they do not allow that plea, then it is proper to move this court for a prohibition; for if it ſhould be granted before the plea is diſallowed, it is a prejudging the juſtice of the admiralty court. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 379.

Eaſter, 12 Geo. Liſter v. Baxter.

One Liſter being maſter of a ſhip that was in diſtreſs at ſea, put in at Amſterdam, and there borrowed 60 l. of Baxter to repair the ſhip, and hypothecated it for repayment of the money. The money not being paid B. libelled in the admiralty; whereon a prohibition was moved for, on account of its being a contract at land; and it not appearing by the words of the contract, that the ſhip was on her voyage, it would be preſumed ſhe was only to begin her voyage from Amſterdam.

But the court were clearly of opinion, no prohibition ſhould iſſue, it appearing by the libel that the ſhip was on her voyage; and if ſhe was not, it might be pleaded below, which would ouſt the admiralty court of juriſdiction, the maſter having no power to hypothecate the ſhip in port, before ſhe ſet out on her voyage. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 695.

Eaſter, 13. Buck. v. Atwood.

In a ſuit in the admiralty for mariners wages, a deed was pleaded to have been made at land, whereby the mariners agreed to ſubject themſelves to the loſs of their wages on particular circumſtances; and it being replied thereto, that the deed was obtained by fraud and circumvention, it was ſo declared below, and a ſentence given for the wages.

The court was moved for a prohibition. It was urged that the admiralty has no original juriſdiction for wages, but it is connived at for the eaſe of mariners, who may join in the ſuit, which they cannot do at common law: but then it muſt be on a parol contract, and not by deed; and here being a deed made at land, that is the ſubſiſting contract, and will deſtroy the other. Salk. 31.

Per curiam. This is only a deed on one ſide, to forfeit the wages on particular circumſtances; but that will not enable them to ſue for their wages at law. The deed therefore comes only by way of incident, and then they may proceed to try it. Therefore we can grant no prohibition. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 761.

For they ſaid the cauſe in the admiralty might as well be followed in an action of trover: and they paid no regard to the admiralty method of ſending over a commiſſion to examine foreign witneſſes, which was a privilege, as was urged, the plaintiffs below could not have in this court. Vide Strange, vol. 2. p. 936.

Hilary, 8 Geo. 2. Boucher v. Lawſon.

On a trial at Guildhall, a ſpecial verdict was found as follows, viz.

That the defendant was ſole owner of the ſhip; that he appointed one F. to be maſter of her; that the plaintiff put goods on board this ſhip to be carried from the river Tagus to London, and the bill of lading was found in theſe words, viz. whereby the plaintiff was to pay ſo much freight for the goods, and that the goods were to be delivered at the port of London on the 9th day of Auguſt, dangers of the ſea excepted; which bill of lading was ſigned by the maſter.

They further find, that the ſhip did arrive ſafe at London; that the plaintiff had no aſſignment of the goods; that in September the plaintiff made a demand of them, and that the defendant refuſed to deliver them; and that the plaintiff was ready to pay the defendant the freight: They further find, that the goods were Portugal gold, and that to export it is an unlawful trade, according to the law of Portugal. They laſtly found it to be uſual, that when any gold is exported from Portugal to this kingdom for the maſter of the veſſel to take the whole freight to his own uſe, without accounting for any part of it to his owners, unleſs there be ſome ſpecial agreement between them to the contrary, and that in the preſent caſe there was no ſuch ſpecial agreement.

It was argued for the plaintiff, that this caſe did not differ from the common caſe of owners of ſhips, who in like manner as carriers are liable for the maſter's neglect in reſpect of freight, and in ſupport of this argument, the following caſes were cited, Mors v. Sluce, 1 Mod. 85. 2 Lev. 69. 1 Vent. 238, 190. Boſon v. Sandford, Carth. 60. 2 Salk. 440. 3 Lev. 268. Comb. 116. 1 Show. 29. Brandon v. Peacock, Eaſter 3 Geo. 2. And urged, that this was likewiſe the practice in Chancery, 2 Vern. 442.

Lord Hardwicke. Since by ſtatute 7th Geo. 2. cap. 15, owners of ſhips are liable for goods taken in by their maſters without their privity, no further than their intereſt in the ſhips and in the freight, the point of law here brought in queſtion, only concerns the Parties in this ſuit, and will not affect any future determinations.

Had this caſe been directly within the reaſon of Boſon v. Sandford, or Mors v. Sluce, the ſpecial verdict would not have been directed to have been found. Theſe two caſes are under the like reaſon, as is likewiſe that of Brandon v. Peacock, and therefore muſt be taken for law not now to be ſhaken, and where there is a trading ſhip concerned in a voyage, it muſt be conſidered in the nature of a common carrier, and the owners are liable for the negligence or fraud of the maſter. Theſe caſes depend on two grounds, 1ſt. That the owners appoint the maſters; and, 2dly. That the freight comes to the owners.

Here it is found by the verdict, that the laſt of theſe reaſons fails, and therefore it will ſtand on this ſingle ground, that the maſter being the owner's ſervant, they are liable for his act.

The firſt difference attempted to be made between this caſe and the other is, that this trade of exporting gold is found to be a trade prohibited by the laws of Portugal, but though the trade is found to be there unlawful, yet the verdict has not found the conſequences of it, whether it might incur the loſs of the ſhip, or a perſonal penalty on the maſter only; and I am not ſatisfied that this will make any difference: the carrying on indeed a trade prohibited by the laws of England, is of material conſequence, and it is ſaid that the parties in that caſe ſhall receive no relief, as they are both parties to the crime, and therefore the law will not give one any remedy againſt the other. But if it ſhould be laid down, that becauſe goods are prohibited to be exported by the laws of any foreign country, from whence they are brought, therefore the parties ſhall have no remedy or action here, it would cut off all benefit of ſuch trade to this kingdom, which would be of very bad conſequences to the principal and moſt beneficial branches of our trade, nor does it ever ſeem to have been admitted.

In the time of Car. 2. a ſuit was brought on a contract of marriage, the ſentence of the eccleſiaſtical court at Turin was given in evidence, and allowed to be concluſive.

But though a determination in a particular caſe may be binding here, yet that will not make the general rule of their laws concluſive in this kingdom, therefore it does not ſeem that the unlawfulneſs of this trade in Portugal, ſince it is lawful in England, will have any effect on the determination of this caſe.

The next diſtinction made is, that it is found to be uſual when any gold is exported from Portugal to London, that the maſter ſhould take the freight to his own uſe, without accounting for it to his owners, unleſs there is ſome ſpecial agreement to the contrary. This point, if any, will make the material difference; but it wants to be a little more cleared up.

The bill of lading is found by the verdict in theſe words, and in it are theſe words, to pay freight for the ſaid goods: now freight being the fruit and earnings of the ſhip, by rule of law belongs to the owners, and the maſter is only entitled to his wages. And therefore had it ſtood on the bill of lading, and nothing elſe, the court would have took it, that the freight belonged to the owners.

But the queſtion is, whether the ſubſequent finding of this uſage will make any difference: now as to that the point will be, whether this is to be taken as a ſtrict cuſtom, or for no more than the common practice, and that the owners only make an allowance to the maſter of this part of the freight, whether that they pay him leſs wages, or any other conſideration; for then it is only an allowance of part of their profits to the maſter, and they are notwithſtanding liable; and therefore if this finding on the uſage is to be taken conſiſtently with the bill of lading, and the reward for carrying the gold is freight, and conſequently by the rule of law belonging to the owners, they are within the caſe of Boſon v. Sandford.

Per curiam. Let the matter ſtand over.

In Hilary term 9 Geo. this caſe came on again, when the court unanimouſly gave judgment for the defendant. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. p. 85. 194.

Trinity, 9 Geo. 2. Smith qui tam v. Gibſon.

An action was brought on the ſtatutes of 13 R. 2. c. 5. 15 R. 2. c. 3. and 2 H. 4. c. 11. for impleading the plaintiff in the Admiralty for a matter at land, and arreſting the two-and-thirtieth part of a ſhip, which two-and-thirtieth part belonged to the plaintiff, whereby the ſhip was detained, and he put to expence.

The defendant pleaded in abatement, that there were other part-owners not joined in the action, who it appeared were injured as well as the plaintiff, ſince the whole ſhip was detained in detaining a two-and-thirtieth part.

Per curiam. The giſt of this action is the ſuit in the Admiralty, which was againſt the plaintiff only, and therefore the reſt of the part-owners could not join, and therefore there muſt be a reſpondeas ouſter. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1045.

In an action on a charty-party to go to Calais, and there to take in corn for Spain, the defendant pleaded, that the ſhip was unfit for the voyage, being rotten, and therefore he did not load her. And iſſue being joined on the goodneſs of the ſhip, and ſeveral witneſſes examined, the defendant offered to give in evidence a proceeding in the Admiralty Court at Calais, whereby commiſſioners were appointed to ſurvey the ſhip, on whoſe report there was a ſentence of condemnation. It was objected, that this being a contract under ſeal on land here, the Admiralty had no juriſdiction, and conſequently their ſentence was void. It appeared that the plaintiff had intervened in the ſuit, and had an inſpector of his own nomination put into the commiſſion. And it was inſiſted, that faith was to be given to theſe proceedings; and that it was not to be ſuppoſed that the ſame boundaries between courts ſubſiſt there as here: and that on inſurances nothing is commoner than to read proteſts made in foreign Admiralties.

Lee, Chief Juſtice, refuſed to let it be read, this being a contract under ſeal at land, in which caſe, according to our law, the Admiralty has no juriſdiction. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1078.

On a motion for a new trial without payment of coſts, by conſent of the judge who tried the cauſe, on a verdict for the defendant in an action brought by a ſailor for wages " in a voyage to Newfoundland; and " from thence to Spain or Portugal, or ſome port in " the Mediterranean."

The queſtion was, " whether ſailors in ſuch voy- " ages are entitled to their wages at Newfoundland, " or not till the ſhip's arrival at the port of delivery of " the fiſh."

The contract was, " that the wages ſhould be paid " at that port at which ſuch wages were uſually due."

The fact was, " that this ſhip was taken, after its " arrival at Placentia in Newfoundland; and on its " voyage from Newfoundland to it's port of delivery of " the fiſh."

After hearing the arguments of the council on this motion, the court ordered the poſtea to be delivered to the defendant.

Lord Mansfield. It depends on a matter of fact, whether this caſe is within the general rule of law; which matter of fact is, " where the firſt place or port of deli- " very, on this voyage or contract is."

This is a voyage from Barnſtaple to Portugal or Spain, or other port in the Mediterranean, taking in a cargo of fiſh at Newfoundland; and ſo is the very contract itſelf:

ſelf: which deſcribes it as one ſingle voyage, which is to end either in Spain or Portugal, or ſome port in the Mediterranean, at the election of the freighter. The ſhip was loſt before it arrived at its port of delivery: therefore the verdict is right.

Wilmot, Yates, and Aſton, Juſtices, concurred with the Chief Juſtice in opinion.

Per curiam. Let the poſtea be delivered to the defendant. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1844.

Michaelmas, 6 Geo. 3. Ricord v. Bottonham.

On an action brought for a Ranſom bill by the plaintiff, who was captain of a French privateer, againſt the defendant, who was captain of an Engliſh ſhip called the Syren, for the ranſom of the ſaid ſhip, which had been taken by the ſaid French privateer.

The cauſe was tried before Lord Mansfield at Guildhall, at the ſittings after Eaſter term, 1765, on which a ſpecial caſe was ſtated for the opinion of the court, the purport of which was as follows:

That the capture of the Syren, by the Badine privateer, commanded by the plaintiff, was four leagues off Cape Negrillo at ſea, the 24th of Auguſt, 1762.

The plaintiff was then a natural born ſubject of the French King, from whom he had a commiſſion. The defendant was a natural born ſubject of Great Britain: And the Syren was the property of the defendant's owners, being Britiſh ſubjects.

On the capture of the ſaid ſhip, a ranſom-bill was given at ſea the ſaid 24th of Auguſt 1762, ſigned by the plaintiff, the defendant, and J. B. the mate of the ſaid ſhip Syren, (who was given as a hoſtage to the plaintiff).

The value of the ranſom bill given was 300 piſtoles, or 236*l.* ſterling, though the ſhip Syren was of greater value.

J. B. the mate died in priſon, at Port au Prince, on the 12th of October 1762.

The ſhip Syren being ſo ranſomed as aforeſaid, arrived at her deſtined port, viz. St. Lucca Martha Brae.

That at the time of the capture, and till the 3d of Nov. 1762, there was an actual war between Great Britain and France.

The queſtion was, whether, on theſe facts, the plaintiff is entitled to recover in this action.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, on arguing this ſpecial caſe, and Mr. Blackſtone, who was of council for the defendant, obſerving to the court that he had made enquiries abroad, and had anſwers from very eminent lawyers of France and Holland, "that ſuch an action had been allowed, and on "principles that could not be diſputed."

N. B. There were ſeveral other actions depending on this queſtion, but on this judgment (which gave univerſal ſatisfaction) the ranſoms in thoſe actions were paid.

Marriage, &c.

Trinity, 1 W. & M. Alleyne and Wife v. Grey.

In an action of debt on a bond, the defendant pleaded ne unques accomple in loyal matrimony, the plaintiff demurred, and had judgment, for it alters the trial; inſtead of trying it, per pais, it puts the trial on a certificate from the Ordinary. 2dly, It admits a marriage, but denies the legality of it; whereas a marriage de facto is ſufficient, and whether legal, or not legal, is no ways material. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 437.

Eaſter, 5 W. & M. Hinks v. Harris.

The defendant married one ſiſter, who died, and afterwards he married the other, by whom he had iſſue, he was proſecuted in the Archdeacon's court of Litchfield for an inceſtuous marriage; pending that ſuit his ſecond wife alſo died. It was urged, that according to Kenn's caſe, all proſecution in the eccleſiaſtical court ought to ceaſe; for after the death of either of the parties before a divorce, they cannot proceed to make the marriage void, and baſtardize the iſſue.

But notwithſtanding that authority, ſentence was given in this caſe, declaring the marriage to be void; and on motion in this court for a prohibition, cauſe was ſhewn why it ſhould not go, viz. becauſe this was an offence of eccleſiaſtical cognizance, and that court had the proper juriſdiction over it.

Kenn's caſe is, that no proceedings ſhall be in order to be a divorce, where both parties are dead; but here is one living who may defend the ſuit.

It was argued on the other ſide, that there is no occaſion for a divorce, when the death of one of the parties has determined the marriage; but the conſequence of this proceeding is to baſtardize the iſſue.

The inceſt may be ſtill determinable in that court, but then the marriage muſt not be declared void; let the party be puniſhed if the marriage was inceſtuous, but as to the ſentence of divorce, a prohibition was prayed, which was granted niſi. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 182.

Hilary, 7 W. 3. Haines, or Hains v. Jeffell, or Jeſcott.

A day was appointed in this cauſe to hear council, why a prohibition ſhould not be granted to the ſpiritual court of Worceſter, to ſtay a ſuit againſt Hains for marrying with the baſtard daughter of his ſiſter.

It was urged for the prohibition, that it was not prohibited by any law, for there was neither affinity nor conſanguinity, for a baſtard is nobody's daughter. Co. Lit. 123, 157. It is no conſideration to raiſe an uſe 5 Co. 65. 41 Ed. 3. 19. Old Bendl. 102.

The court was of opinion that no prohibition ſhould be granted; for though baſtards are deprived of privileges by particular laws, the ſame reaſon prohibits them from marrying, as others. And it has been always held accordingly, eſpecially where it is the child of a woman relation. And as it is argued, Hains might marry his own baſtard, which doubtleſs could not be allowed. The matter was adjourned. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 68. Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 168.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Clement v. Beard.

On a libel in the ſpiritual court againſt the defendant, for having married and cohabited with his wife's ſiſter, it was urged, that it is prohibited by the Levitical law. 1 Inſt. 235. 2 Jac. 1. Rot. 1032. Jo. 2. 191. Noy. 29. Vaugh. 303.

It was further argued, that by ſome of the books, an uncle might marry his niece, but that a man may not marry his aunt, by reaſon of the ſuperiority which ſhe has over him. Therefore a conſultation was prayed.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. What ſuperiority has an aunt over a nephew? What ground is there for the diſtinction? I cannot ſee any difference between the two caſes. Now for this caſe it is certainly within the degrees of affinity, and in the ſame degree of conſanguinity, there can be no doubt of it; for a man cannot marry his own ſiſter's daughter. I thought this caſe had been ſettled, there is a caſe in the books againſt you in point.

But indeed, if this marriage is not within the Levitical degrees, we are to hinder the ſpiritual court from proceeding on a wrong foundation. Adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 448.

The court was moved for a prohibition, to ſtay a ſuit in the ſpiritual court on a contract of marriage by words in the preſent tenſe, ſuggeſting that the contract was in fact by words in the future tenſe, for which if not performed the party had a remedy at common law.

Holt Chief Juſtice ſaid, that tho' it was by words in the future tenſe, yet it was a matrimonial matter, and the ſpiritual court had juriſdiction; and this was the great objection againſt actions at law, when firſt brought up in thoſe caſes. But in anſwer to this it was held, that the remedy in the ſpiritual court was waved by betaking himſelf to damages for the breach. He alſo ſaid, that a contract by words in the preſent tenſe, was a marriage, viz. I marry you: You and I are man and wiſe; and this is not releaſeable: By words in the future tenſe; I will marry you, I promiſe to marry you, &c. which does not intimate an actual marriage, but refers it to a future act; and this is releaſeable: and as it is releaſeable, the party may admit the breach and demand ſatisfaction.

He alſo ſaid, he remembered a caſe on evidence, viz. an action of aſſumpſit, in conſideration that the plaintiff promiſed to marry the defendant, the defendant promiſed to marry him; on evidence it was proved that there was a promiſe; yet the defendant producing a ſentence in the ſpiritual court, in diſaffirmance of that contract, it was held good counter-evidence, and the plaintiff was nonſuited. Therefore a prohibition in this caſe was denied. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 437. Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 155.

Trinity, 5 Ann. Andrews v. Strowd.

This caſe was, a ſettlement made to huſband and wife for life, and if he died without iſſue male living, or in ventre ſa mere at the time of his death; a remainder over to truſtees for five hundred years, to raiſe portions for the daughters; the huſband died, leaving iſſue male at the time of his death; which iſſue male ſoon after died without iſſue male; the wife dies; the queſtion was, if this term ſhould riſe again for the benefit of the daughters? The court was of opinion, that it ſhould not, it being a condition precedent, and not a remainder on the determination of the eſtate tail. This judgment was reverſed for this reaſon, viz. That the time of his death related only to the ventre ſa mere; and then it was no more than an uſual limitation; for the wife was not pregnant. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 88.

Michaelmas, 5 Ann. Wigmore's Caſe.

The wife ſued in the ſpiritual court for alimony. In fact, the huſband was an anabaptiſt, and had a licence from the biſhop to marry, but married this woman according to the forms of their own religion.

Holt Chief Juſtice. By the canon law a contract by words in the preſent tenſe, is a marriage; as I take you to be my wife: ſo it is of a contract by words of the future tenſe, viz. I will take, &c. If the contract is executed, and he does take her, it is a marriage, and they cannot puniſh the parties for fornication. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 438.

Maſters and Servants.

In an action on the caſe brought againſt A. and B. part owners of a ſhip, for that he put goods on board, and the defendants undertook to carry them ſafely for hire, but yet were ſo negligent, that the goods were ſpoiled: on not guilty pleaded, in evidence it appeared, that C. and D. were alſo part-owners, and that the ſhip was under the care of a maſter, to whom the goods were delivered; and this being found ſpecially it was argued for the plaintiff. That the action is grounded on the wrong, and may be againſt all, or any of the proprietors: there was alſo another doubt ſtarted, and that was, whether the owners were liable, when in truth they did not undertake, but in fact the maſter undertook on himſelf, &c.?

Eyre, Juſtice, held, there was no difference between a land-carrier and a water-carrier, and that the maſter of a ſhip was no more than a ſervant to the owners in the eye of the law; and that the power he has of hypothecation, &c. is by the civil law.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The owners are liable in reſpect of the freight, and as employing the maſter; for whoever employs another, is anſwerable for him, and undertakes for his care, and ſo alſo for all that makes uſe of him 2dly. The court held, that all the owners were liable, for they are charged in point of contract as employers, and are all equally entitled to the freight: either maſter or owners may bring an action for the freight; but if the owners bring the action, they muſt all join: therefore they muſt all be joined, as the freight belongs to all, ſo all are equally undertaking; and a breach of truſt in one is a breach of truſt in all; as where two make one officer, the act of one is the act of the other. 3dly. The court held this was not an action on the caſe, but in nature of a contract, and that it was not the contract of one but all; that there was no other tort but a breach of truſt. Therefore the court gave judgment for the defendant, becauſe all the owners were not joined. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 440.

In an action of treſpaſs for taking a negro worth 100 l. the jury found a ſpecial verdict, viz. that the father of the plaintiff was poſſeſſed of this negro, and of ſuch a manor in Barbadoes, and that there is a law in that country, which makes the negro part of the real eſtate: that the father died ſeiſed, whereby the manor deſcended to the plaintiff as ſon and heir, and that he endowed his maſter of his negro, and of a third part of the manor; that the mother married one Watking, who brought the negro into England, where he was baptized without the knowledge of the mother; that Watking and his wife are dead, and that the negro continued ſeveral years in England; that the defendant ſeiſed him, &c. And after ſeveral arguments at the bar, this term it was adjudged, that this action would not lie; but treſpaſs will lie for taking an apprentice, or heir apparent; an abbot might maintain treſpaſs for his monk, and any man can maintain treſpaſs for another, if he declares with a whereby he loſt his ſervice; but it will not lie in this caſe.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, an action of trover will not lie for a negro, contrary to 3 Keb. 685. Butts v. Penny. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 146.

Sir Robert Wayland's Caſe.

Sir Robert uſed to give his ſervant money every Saturday to defray the charges of the foregoing week, the ſervant kept the money.

Holt, Chief Juſtice The maſter is chargeable, for the maſter at his peril ought to take care what ſervant he employs; and it is more reaſonable that he ſhould ſuffer for the cheat of his ſervant than ſtrangers and tradeſmen; ſo if a ſmith's man pricks my horſe, the maſter is liable for the damage. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 234.

Eaſter, 9 W. 3. Boulton v. Arlſden.

In this caſe it was held, that where a ſervant uſually buys for his maſter on credit, and takes up things in his maſter's name, but for his own uſe, that the maſter is liable, but it is not ſo where the maſter uſually gives him ready money.

That where the maſter gives the ſervant money to buy goods for him, and he converts the money to his own uſe, and buys the goods on credit, yet the maſter is liable, ſo as the goods come to his uſe, or otherwiſe not.

That a note under the hand of an apprentice ſhall bind his maſter, where he is allowed to deliver out notes, though the money is never applied to the maſter's uſe.

But where he is not allowed or accuſtomed to deliver out notes, there his note ſhall not bind the maſter, unleſs the money is applied to the maſter's uſe. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 234.

Eaſter, 9 W. 3. Bolton v. Hillerſden.

The defendant being a merchant, his apprentice delivered a note to the plaintiff, obliging his maſter to pay 100 l. to the plaintiff or his order, according to the cuſtom of merchants. On this note aſſumpſit was brought againſt the defendant; and on the trial this note was proved to be the writing of the apprentice, and that the apprentice had once given ſuch a note to one Mr. Monpeſſon for money received by the apprentice of Mr. Monpeſſon, which was applied to the maſter's uſe, and that Mr. Monpeſſon had recovered the money of the maſter.

The proof for the defendant was, that he did not truſt his apprentice to give ſuch notes; and that was proved by ſeveral, who had been his apprentices. The apprentice himſelf ſwore, that he had loſt 100 l. of his maſter's money at play, and that the day following a foreign bill was drawn on his maſter, which he could not pay, and the money he had loſt at play too; therefore he reſorted to the plaintiff Bolton, with whom his maſter uſually had dealings: and becauſe the perſon who brought the foreign bill would not receive guineas, being the only money that he had, he perſuaded the plaintiff to receive the guineas, and pay the foreign bill, which the plaintiff did; and the apprentice gave this note to the plaintiff for the money received of him to pay the 100 l. which he had loſt at gaming.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. In Stowell's caſe it was reſolved, that though Stowell gave ready money to his ſervant to buy proviſions, yet the ſervant took them on credit, and becauſe they came to the uſe of Stowell, he was adjudged liable, but I doubt it. So in the caſe of Sir Robert Wyland's, who every Saturday gave his ſervant money to diſcharge the expences of the week; the ſervant did not pay the money due for ſeveral weeks together, though he received it of his maſter; yet the vendor recovered againſt Wylands for goods delivered to the ſervant, becauſe every man ought to take care what ſervant he makes uſe of; and if a maſter happens to have a bad ſervant, it is more reaſonable that he ſhould ſuffer for the negligence or villainy of his ſervant than a mere ſtranger.

2dly. If a maſter has never intruſted a ſervant, to charge him by ſigning of notes in the maſter's name; yet if the money for which ſuch note is ſigned comes to the uſe of the maſter; or if in this preſent caſe the ſervant gave the note to raiſe money to pay the foreign bills charged to his maſter, though he never permitted the ſervant to ſign ſuch notes before. But if in this caſe the note was given for the money which the apprentice loſt at gaming, and which did not come to the maſter's uſe, the maſter ought not to be bound by it. But the jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff; which Holt, Chief Juſtice, approved. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 224.

Michaelmas, 9 W. 3. Turberville v. Stampe.

In an action on the caſe for negligently keeping his fire, whereby the plaintiff's heath was conſumed, it was ſet forth in arreſt of judgment, that the defendant's ſervant had kindled this fire by way of huſbandry, and a wind and tempeſt aroſe, and drove it into his neighbour's field. It was urged that it could be no neglect in the defendant, but the act of God.

Holt Chief Juſtice. If my ſervant throws dirt in the highway I am indictable. So in this caſe if the defendant's ſervant kindled the fire in the way of huſbandry and proper for his employment, though he had no expreſs command of his maſter, yet his maſter ſhall be liable to an action for damage done to another perſon by the fire, for it ſhall be intended, that the ſervant had authority from his maſter, it being for his maſter's benefit. Vide Raymond, vol. 1. p. 264.

Holt Chief Juſtice. If the ſervant of A. drives his cart againſt another cart wherein is a pipe of ſack, and over-turns the cart and ſpoils the ſack, an action lies againſt A. So where a carter's ſervant drove his cart over a boy, it was held the boy ſhould have his action againſt the maſter. So in the caſe of Lane v. Cotton, a letter with bills in it was delivered at the poſt office to a ſervant, and it was held that an action on the caſe lay againſt the poſt-maſter, and not againſt the ſervant, unleſs he had ſtole them, for then he was a wrong doer, as were a gaoler ſuffers an eſcape wilfully; otherwiſe if negligently. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 441. Raymond vol. 1. p. 739.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. Roſiere v. Sawkins.

On an action of treſpaſs brought by the maſter for a battery on the ſervant, whereby, &c. The defendant pleaded, that the plaintiff and three more were owners of a boat for conveying of paſſengers between L. and G. and they conſtituted the defendant maſter of it; and that finding the ſaid ſervant on board damage feaſant, he took him and turned him out. The plaintiff replied, that being part-owner, he commanded him to go on board and ſerve there, to which the defendant demurred; and adjudged for the defendant; for when the part owners had made the defendant maſter, they could not put any ſervants on him without a ſpecial agreement for it, for breach whereof an action would lie; for the very making him maſter impowers him to chooſe his ſervants, for he is anſwerable for all events, and therefore but reaſonable he ſhould have liberty of chooſing ſuch men as he can confide in, and for whoſe honeſty and diligence he may take ſecurity; and the owners have no means to avoid it, but to recall the maſter's authority; and it is one of the inconveniences of joint-tenancy, that one alone cannot do that: therefore judgment was given for the defendant. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 434.

Holt Chief Juſtice. A lieutenant of a man of war may give moderate correction to a ſeaman, but not wound him, for that is not moderate correction. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 504.

Holt Chief Juſtice. If a ſervant uſually employed to pawn goods for his maſter, or to borrow money for him, borrows of me, or pawns his maſter's goods with me for money; I can maintain an action of debt againſt the maſter thereon.

2dly. If my ſervant has a note for money due to me, or other goods which in their nature are not properly in the cuſtody of a ſervant, that is evidence at firſt ſight that he has an authority from me to apply them to ſuch uſe as he afterwards puts them to; but the contrary may be given in evidence, as that he came by the note by undue means, or had it for another particular purpoſe, which was agreed to by the court. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 564.

An order was made by two juſtices on the defendant, reciting, that 42 s. and 4 d. was due from him to J. S. for work and labour in huſbandry, which they ordered him to pay.

On this order being removed into this court by certiorari, the defendant's council took an exception to the order, that it does not appear to be ſtatute wages, and that only ſuch are within their juriſdiction.

Powell and Gould Juſtices, ſaid, though the ſtat. gives them a power only to ſet the rate for wages, and not to order payment; yet in conſequence thereof, they have alſo taken on them to order payment; and the courts of law are indulgent in remedies for wages, as appears by their ſuffering the admiralty court to have cogniſance of mariners wages, and therefore we will intend it to be ſuch wages as are within the ſtatute. Therefore the order was affirmed. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 44. Raymond vol. 2. p. 820.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Ward v. Evans.

The plaintiff ſent his ſervant to receive a note of 50 l. of B. who went with him to Sir S. Evans's ſhop, who indorſed off 50 l. from a note B. had on him, and gave Ward's ſervant a note of 50 l. on one Wallis a goldſmith, to whom the note was carried the next day by Ward's ſervant, Wallis refuſed to pay it, and that day broke; on this the note was ſent back to Sir S. Evans.

2dly, That the act of the ſervant ſhall not bind the maſter, unleſs he acts by the authority of his maſter; and therefore if a maſter ſends his ſervant to receive money, and the ſervant inſtead of money takes a bill, and the maſter, as ſoon as told thereof, diſagrees, he is not bound by this payment, but the acquieſcence in any ſmall matter will be a proof of the maſter's conſent, and that will make the act of the ſervant the act of the maſter.

3dly, That this was no payment; for a goldſmith's note is only paper, and received conditionally, if paid; and not otherwiſe, without an expreſs agreement to be taken as caſh.

4thly, That the party receiving ſuch note ſhould have a reaſonable time to receive the money, as in this caſe, the next day, and is not obliged as ſoon as he receives it, to go directly for his money: ſo judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 442. Raymond vol. 2. p. 928.

Trinity, 3 Ann. The Queen v. London.

An order was made for payment of wages, which recited, that two perſons were retained by the defendant, who was overſeer of the works in the gardens of Hampton Court, at ſo much per day, and had worked there ſo many days; therefore the order was, that the defendant ſhould pay them.

Per curiam. The ſtatute extends only to ſervants in huſbandry, not to gentlemen's ſervants, nor to journeymen with their maſters: had the order been general, viz. to pay ſo much to two of his labourers, &c. or two of his ſervants, the court would have ſuppoſed them two of his ſervants in huſbandry, but here is no room for ſuch intendment, ſince the contrary appears. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 442.

Eaſter, 5 Ann. Smith v. Gould.

On an action of trover for a negro, and ſeveral other goods, the defendant let judgment go by default, and the writ of enquiry of damages was executed before Holt, Chief Juſtice, at Guildhall in London, on which the jury gave ſeveral damages, as to the goods and the negro; and as to the negro a motion was made in arreſt of judgment, that trover would not lie for him, becauſe one perſon could not have ſuch a property in another as to maintain this action.

It was argued for the plaintiff, that a negro was a chattel by the law of the plantations, and therefore trover would lie for him; and that by the Levitical law, the maſter had power to kill his ſlave, Exodus, cap. 20. verſ. 21. it is ſaid he is but the maſter's money; that if a Lord confines his villain, this court cannot ſet him at liberty. Fitzh. Villain 5. and the caſe of Butts v. Penny. 2 Lev. 201. 3 Keb. 785. was relied on as a certain point, where it was held that trover would lie for negroes: But not allowed.

Per curiam. This action does not lie for a negroe, no more than for any other man; for the common law takes no notice of negroes being different from other men. By the common law, no man can have a property in another, but in ſpecial caſes, as in a villain, but even in him not to kill him: ſo in captives took in war, but the taker cannot kill them, but may ſell them to ranſom them: there is no ſuch thing as a ſlave by the law of England. And if a man's ſervant is took from him, the maſter cannot maintain an action for taking him, unleſs it is laid whereby he loſt his ſervice. If A. takes B. a Frenchman captive in war. A. cannot maintain an action, wherefore he took B. his priſoner from France. And the court denied the opinion in the caſe of Butt v. Penny, therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff for all but the negroe, and as to the damages for him, that the plaintiff take nothing by his bill. Vide Raym. vol. p. 1274.

Eaſter, 5 Ann. Sir Charles Thorold v. Smith.

The defendant being indebted to Sir Charles in 100*l.* Sir Charles ſent his ſervant to receive the money; the ſervant took a goldſmith's note on one Johnſon, and gave a receipt to Smith; within a week after Johnſon failed, the queſtion was, if this was good payment to Sir Charles, or if the ſervant had purſued his authority in taking a note in lieu of money, and had a power to give a receipt, and diſcharge the debt without receiving the money.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. A bill is no payment; but if a man will give a receipt, he by that accepts the bill as money, and payment; and therefore this caſe turns on the receipt.

Powell, Juſtice. Sir Charles ſhould have ſent his man back again the ſame day to have diſſented, elſe it is a preſumption that his maſter was acquainted with, and acquieſced in what he had done, and this might have altered the caſe. To which the court agreed, and ſaid this caſe differed from the caſe of Ward v. Evans. Adjourned.

In Trinity term following, the matter came on again, when Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, the receipt of a ſervant that had power, was the receipt of the maſter. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 71. 87.

Hilary, 8 Geo. Mead v. Hammond.

The plaintiff according to the common courſe of dealing delivered to the defendant's ſervant, an ingot of gold to aſſay; and it not being returned, he brought an action of trover againſt the maſter.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice, held, that the delivery to the ſervant was ſufficient to maintain the action againſt the maſter, on proving the ſubſequent demand and refuſal; ſo the plaintiff had a verdict. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 505.

Hilary, 8 Geo. Hazard v. Treadwell.

The defendant who was a conſiderable dealer in iron, and known to the plaintiff as ſuch, though they had never dealt together before, ſent a waterman to the plaintiff for iron on credit, and paid for it afterwards. He ſent the ſame waterman a ſecond time, with ready money, who received the goods, but did not pay for them. Pratt, Chief Juſtice, held the ſending him on truſt the firſt time, and paying for the goods, was giving him credit, ſo as to charge the defendant on the ſecond contract. Vide Strange, vol. 1. p. 506.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. Cary v. Webſter.

The defendant was a clerk of the South-Sea company, and took in the payments on the third ſubſcription: the plaintiff paid him 600 l. and he by miſtake never entered it in the book, but however paid it over to the company.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice, held, that no action would lie againſt him. That if he had not paid it over, the plaintiff would have had his election, either to charge him, or the company; as in the common caſe of payment to a goldſmith's ſervant, who does not carry it to the account of his maſter, the party has an election to ſue either; he may charge the ſervant, becauſe till the money is paid over, he receives it to his own uſe; or he may paſs by the ſervant and make his demand on the maſter, becauſe payment to the ſervant is made in confidence of the credit given him by the maſter. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 480.

On an action of treſpaſs, aſſault, and battery againſt Reynolds and Weſtwood, Reynolds pleaded ſon aſſault, and Weſtwood pleaded that he was ſervant to Reynolds the other defendant, and that the plaintiff having aſſaulted his maſter in his preſence, he in defence of his maſter ſtruck the plaintiff. And on demurrer the plea was held ill, for the aſſault on the maſter might be over, and the ſervant cannot ſtrike by way of revenge, but in order to prevent an injury; and the right way of pleading this matter is, that the plaintiff would have beat the maſter, if the ſervant had not interpoſed, as it was lawful for him to do: ſo the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 953.

Merchants and Factors.

Anonymous.

A factor of the Eaſt-India Company carried over 1200 l. in gold to India, where a cuſtom was due for it, but ſaved by the factor, and never paid.

Per curiam. The factor ſhall have the benefit of it, and not the Eaſt-India Company, for it was due from them, and ought to have been paid; therefore they cannot make a title to it againſt one who has the poſſeſſion, for that is ſufficient againſt all perſons but againſt him who has the very right, and the non-payment in this caſe was at the peril of the factor. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 235.

Hilary, 3 W. & M. Meggadow v. Holt.

An action was brought on a bill of exchange, in which the plaintiff declared, that the defendant drew a bill of exchange according to the cuſtom of merchants, on one W. a merchant at Rotterdam, payable to H. within two uſances and an half; and alledged them to be at Rotterdam two months and an half; and then ſet forth the cuſtom, that if ſuch bill be proteſted for non-payment, the drawer is liable; that the bill was aſſigned over, and being tendered to W. he did not pay it: whereon the plaintiff proteſted, and brought this action againſt Holt.

Per curiam. The plaintiff muſt have judgment: 1ſt, becauſe the law of merchants is the law of nations, and part of the common law, and therefore we ought to take notice of it, when ſet forth in pleading. 1 Inſt. 11 b. 182. a. The law of merchants in this caſe is, that if he, who has ſuch bill, lapſes his time, and does not proteſt, or make his requeſt, if any accident happens by his neglect, in prejudice to the drawer, he has loſt his remedy againſt him; but if ſuch a thing had happened, it ought to have come from the other ſide; and not being ſo, we muſt judge on the declaration. It is not neceſſary to ſhew the cuſtom of merchants, but neceſſary to ſhew how the uſance ſhall be intended, becauſe it varies as places do. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 15.

Mich. 4 W. & M. Lethulier's Caſe.

On an action brought on a policy of inſurance ſigned by the defendant at London, who inſured a ſhip from thence to the Eaſt-Indies, warranted to depart with convoy; and the declaration ſhewed that the ſhip went from London to the Downs, and from thence with convoy, and was loſt. After a frivolous plea and demurrer, the caſe ſtood upon the declaration; to which it was objected, that here was a departure without convoy.

Per curiam. The clauſe, warranted to depart with convoy, muſt be conſtrued according to the uſage among merchants, i. e. from ſuch place where convoys are to be had, as the Downs, &c.

Holt Chief Juſtice, contra. We take notice of the laws of merchants that are general, not of thoſe that are particular uſages. It is no part of the law of merchants to take convoy in the Downs. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 443.

Michaelmas, 9 W. 3. Evans v. Martell.

In an action brought againſt the part-owners of a ſhip, called the Upton Galley, a verdict was given for the plaintiffs; and the following point was ſaved to the defendants, viz. one Harvey loaded the goods for which the plaintiff brought this action, and conſigned them to the plaintiff by a bill of lading, but the goods appeared by the invoices to be Harvey's; and the queſtion was, whether Harvey or Evans ought to bring the action.

The court were of opinion that the invoices ſignified nothing; but that the conſignment in a bill of lading gives property, except where it is for the account of another; ſo that if a bill of lading is made to A. he has thereby an ownerſhip to maintain an action; but if it is to A. for the account of B. then A. is only B.'s factor, and B. has the ownerſhip, and muſt bring the action; and in this caſe the action is well brought by the plaintiff. *Vide Mod. Holt, Chief Juſtice. Every factor of common right is to ſell for ready money; but if he be a factor in a ſort of dealing or trade, where the uſage is for factors to ſell on credit, there, if he ſells to a perſon of good credit at that time, and he afterwards becomes inſolvent, the factor is diſcharged; but otherwiſe, if it be to a man who is notoriouſly diſcredited at the time of the ſale: but if there is no ſuch uſage, and he, on the general authority to ſell, ſells on truſt, let the vendee be ever ſo able, the factor only is chargeable; for in that caſe the factor having gone beyond his authority, there is no contract created between the vendee and the factor's principal; and ſuch ſale is a converſion in the factor; but if the ſale is not in a market overt, the property is not thereby altered, but trover will lie againſt the vendee. So likewiſe if it be in a market overt, and the vendee knows that the factor ſells as factor. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 514.

Holt Chief Juſtice. The proper remedy againſt a factor, acting as ſuch, is an action of account; but if he converts, trover will lie againſt him. If A. finds goods, the property of B. and refuſes to deliver them to him, his remedy is trover; and if C. happens to get them, A. may maintain trover againſt him, but he ſhall have but one ſatisfaction; but after A. has recovered againſt B. B. may maintain trover againſt C. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 602.

On an action on the caſe on a policy, which was to inſure the William Galley in a voyage from Bremen to the port of London, warranted to depart with convoy: The caſe was, the galley ſet ſail from Bremen under the convoy of a Dutch man of war to the Elbe, where they were joined by two other Dutch men of war, and ſeveral Dutch and Engliſh merchant ſhips; from thence they ſailed to the Texel, where they found a ſquadron of Engliſh men of war, and an admiral: After a ſtay of nine weeks they ſailed from the Texel, when the galley was ſeparated in a ſtorm, and taken by a French privateer: But being afterwards taken from the French by a Dutch privateer, paid 80 l. ſalvage.

Holt Chief Juſtice, held, that the voyage ought to be according to uſage, and their going to the Elbe, though in fact out of the way, was no deviation; for till after the year 1703, there was no convoy for ſhips directly from Bremen to London. Therefore the plaintiff had a verdict. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 445.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Bates v. Grabham & al.

On an action on the caſe on a policy of inſurance, on non aſſumpſit pleaded, the caſe was as follows, viz. one Mr. Criſp being at the Weſt Indies, ſent a letter to one Bates to inſure goods on the Mary Galley of St. Chriſtopher's, Captain A. Hill, Commander, at London, Bates carried the letter to one Stubbs, an inſurance broker, and he by miſtake made the aſſurance on the Mary, Captain Haſlewood, commander, &c. this policy thus made, was ſubſcribed to by the defendant. The Mary Galley was loſt, and then Stubbs applied to the inſurers to conſent to alter the policy, to which they agreed, and the miſtake was rectified. It was objected at the trial, that the Mary was a ſtouter ſhip than the Mary Galley, and that the inſurers ought to have an increaſe of premium for the alteration.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, that the action well lay, and that the miſtake might be ſet right, and that Stubbs was a good witneſs, and cited a caſe which happened when Pemberton was Chief Juſtice, where an inſurance was made from Archangel to the Downs, and from the Downs to Leghorn; but there was a parol agreement at the ſame time, that the policy ſhould not commence till the ſhip came to ſuch a place; and it was held, that the parol agreement ſhould avoid the writing. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 444.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Ward v. Apprice.

On an indeb. aſſumpſit for money received to the plaintiff's uſe, the caſe was: the plaintiff, and defendant and others, were part-owners of a ſhip, and ſeveral ſums of money were given by the reſt of the part-owners to the defendant for the uſe of the ſhip, for the receipt whereof he had given a note; that the defendant had actually laid out the ſaid ſums on the ſhip and voyage, and entered an account of the manner, &c. in a certain book kept for the affairs of the ſhip; and then an allowance thereof was entered likewiſe in that book, which book belonged to the plaintiff, defendant, and other part-owners in common, and now was in the plaintiff's poſſeſſion; and on this matter the court was moved, that the plaintiff ſhould either produce that book at the trial, or let the defendant take copies of ſuch entries, and allowances of payment therein, as would be proper for him to make his defence by; and it was argued, that this ought to be as well in this caſe as if a man brings an action of covenant on an indenture, and the defendant ſwears he never had a copy, the court will not compel him to plead till the plaintiff furniſhes him with a copy, to which the court agreed.

Per curiam. Here the defendant ſhould have taken up his note on account being allowed, and you have intruſted him with the cuſtody of this book; and if he has broke his truſt, you muſt ſeek for remedy in equity; and if an action is brought by a ſhop-keeper for money due on the ſale of goods, we never oblige him to produce his books; but if very ſlender evidence be againſt him, then if he will not produce his books, it brings a great ſlur on his cauſe.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, the plaintiff would do well to conſider whether an indeb. aſſumpſit would lie in this caſe; and they would do nothing in it: they notwithſtanding owned it to be a miſchievous caſe, as where many are tenants in common, or co-partners in a trade, and have one common book of their tranſactions, and one has poſſeſſion of it, and then brings actions againſt the others. *Vide Mod. The defendant rejoined, that he was a proteſtant diſſenter, and exempted by the toleration-act, which he ſet forth; and on a demurrer to this rejoinder it was adjudged, that this is a private act, of which the court cannot take notice without pleading it; that by ſeveral other ſtatutes all perſons are to obſerve the diſcipline of the church of England; that the law took no notice of diſſenters before this act of toleration, which extends only to ſuch diſſenters who take and ſubſcribe the declaration at the quarter-ſeſſions; that ſtat. 13 Car. 2. now pleaded by the defendant, does not exempt men from ſerving in offices to which they were obliged before that act was made, but to qualify them to execute it, and that the ſubject cannot be exempted from this office, but by act of parliament, or a grant from the King. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 134. Ibid. vol. 1. p. 167. Raym. vol. 1. p. 29. *Mod. A diſſenting miniſter having qualified himſelf according to the toleration act in one county, kept a conventicle in that county; and afterwards removed into another, and kept a new conventicle without a new qualification. The Juſtices convicted him, notwithſtanding the toleration. The Attorney General moved for an attachment againſt the juſtices, but it was denied; then he moved for a mandamus to permit him to preach, and that was denied alſo.

The court held, 1ſt. That a mandamus is always granted to do ſome act in execution of the law, whereas this would be in nature of a writ de non moleſtando.

2dly. That a diſſenting miniſter is ſtill liable to the old penal laws for preaching in conventicles, unleſs he qualifies himſelf according to the act of toleration.

Trinity, 11 Geo. 2. Rice v. Oatfield. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment given in the K. B. in Ireland in a ſuit in ejectment, there brought on the demiſe of Mary Rice, on not guilty pleaded, there was a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff, and a bill of exceptions was ſealed, wherein it was ſtated, that the plaintiff made title under Sir Stephen Rice, who was ſeized in fee and died a papiſt in February 1715, leaving three popiſh ſons, Edward, James, and Thomas: that Edward in January 1716, renounced the errors of the church of Rome, and conformed as by law required, and died in 1720, leaving iſſue the leſſor of the plaintiff. That in oppoſition to this the defendant gave in evidence, that Edward in the year 1720 deviſed the premiſes to one under whom the defendant claimed. To ſurmount which, the plaintiff inſiſted that Edward died a papiſt, and conſequently was by the law in Ireland diſabled to deviſe; and this was offered to be proved by witneſſes, which was oppoſed by the defendant, who inſiſted that the plaintiff ſhould produce ſome record of the conviction of Edward; notwithſtanding which the judges admitted the evidence, and the jury found for the plaintiff.

And now it was argued on behalf of the defendant, 1ſt, That the plaintiff could not be allowed to contradict his former evidence; or 2dly if he could, yet parol proof of the apoſtacy was not ſufficient.

To the firſt it was anſwered, that here is no contradiction; he might conform in 1716, which is all the plaintiff ſhewed at firſt, and relapſe in 1720, which is the latter proof produced. But if there was any contradiction, it is no objection, for in the caſe of Pike v. Badmering on a trial at bar in this court in Lord Chief Juſtice Pratt's time, where the three ſubſcribing witneſſes to a will were called and denied their hands, the court admitted the plaintiff to contradict that evidence; and he ſupported the will againſt ſuch teſtimony.

As to the ſecond point it was anſwered, that ſtatutes 2 or 8 of Ann in Ireland do neither of them require a conviction; and it would be abſurd if they did, for a man cannot be convicted after his death, and any conviction before cannot prove that he died a papiſt, which is the circumſtance inducing the diſability: and as this is mere matter of fact, it may be proved by witneſſes, as all other facts are.

Beſides, it was ſaid to be a point determined in the houſe of Lords here 2d February 1729 Roſs v. Cloſe. The appellants claimed as purchaſers under Sir George Maxwell: the reſpondents inſiſted that he was a papiſt, and could not diſpoſe: in anſwer to which the appellants inſiſted that he was never convicted: but the court and the houſe of Lords were of opinion, that a conviction was not neceſſary, to avoid any voluntary diſpoſition; though to ſubject a papiſt to the penalties impoſed by the act for a relapſe, it might.

And on the authority of this caſe, and the reaſon of the thing, the court here were all of opinion, that the parol evidence was well received; and affirmed the judgment. Vide Strange, vol. 2, p. 1095.

In an action on the caſe for a falſe return of no goods on a fi. fa. when there were goods ſufficient, the plaintiff declared on a judgment in C. B. and in evidence produced a copy of a record of Mich. 8 W. 3. in the margin of which was wrote Cook (who was one of the prothonotaries of the C. B.) but there was no pleas before, &c. at the top; for which omiſſion the defendant inſiſted that this was no fair copy of a record, and that it did not appear who this Cook was. That the plaintiff declared of a plea held before Sir G. Treby, and it did not appear that the record produced by him was ſuch a one; and of that opinion was Holt Chief Juſtice, who tried the cauſe, which the plaintiff perceiving was a nonſuit, moved the court, though in ſtrictneſs he ſhould have began again, that the nonſuit might be ſet aſide, and that they might try the cauſe de novo.

Holt Chief Juſtice. Formerly, and eſpecially in Twiſden's time, if you had declared that ſuch a one was impleaded in this court by bill, if you had produced the plea roll, where it is entered, that memorandum ſuch a one came and exhibited his bill, this was not adjudged ſufficient, unleſs you had alſo produced a copy of the bill on the file, for want of which there were frequent nonſuits; though I could never be of that opinion; and have on debate ruled a copy of the plea roll to be a ſufficient proof of the bill. But in this caſe the defendant would not conſent; wherefore the court ſaid, they could not do it: when he had, by his voluntary act, put himſelf out of court, they could not by their own authority bring him in again. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 127.

Trinity, 12 W. 3. Lover v. Salkeld. Error.

On an action of treſpaſs againſt two defendants, a verdict was given for the plaintiff, one of the defendants being an infant, the plaintiff took judgment againſt the other, and entered a non proſ. after judgment againſt the other: on this judgment the plaintiff ſued out execution, on which a writ of error was brought.

It was objected, that the execution and judgment could not vary from the demand of the writ.

On the other ſide it was argued that the torts were ſeveral, and that the plaintiff might as well enter a non proſ, as to one defendant on a trial by verdict, as if one defendant had demurred, and a verdict had been given againſt the other; and that a non proſ. may be entered after judgment as well as before; and for a non proſ. entered after judgment he cited 15 E. 4. 26. 14. On an indictment for perjury, the defendant entered into a recognizance to try it, and was deſirous to carry it down to try, but the proſecutor entered a non pros.

Per curiam. It was an ancient but an illegal practice, that if an indictment had lain ſtill for a long time to enter a non proſ. on it. But that ought not to be without the leave of the Attorney General, not even at the requeſt of the proſecutor; for it would be of intolerable miſchief, that it ſhould be at the diſcretion of the proſecutor to make an end of the King's ſuit, and alſo to get a bill for an infamous crime found of record againſt one, and by ſuch entry of a non proſ. deprive him of the means of clearing himſelf by trial. The court were of opinion, that if the plaintiff was a pauper when the cauſe was tried, he ſhould not pay coſts, and that the deſcent of lands to him ſhould have no relation to that time; ſo a rule was made to diſcharge him. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 344.

Trinity, 30 Geo. 2. Weller v. Goyton and Walker.

On a motion for the directions of the court to the maſter, that he ſhould tax the defendant Goyton his coſts, purſuant to rule.

The plaintiff brought his action againſt the above defendants, on a joint-promiſe; judgment was given againſt the defendant Walker, by default; on which iſſue was joined by the defendant Goyton; and the plaintiff neglecting to bring the cauſe on to trial, the common rule for judgment as in caſe of a nonſuit was obtained.

The queſtion before the court on this motion was, "Whether the maſter would tax the coſts as in caſe of a nonſuit, as there was a judgment by default for the plaintiff againſt the other defendant."

Lord Manſfield expreſſed a doubt, "Whether there could be judgment as in caſe of a nonſuit, in a caſe where the plaintiff was not liable to a nonſuit."

Stat. 14 Geo. 2. enacts, "that all judgments given by virtue of it, ſhall be of the like force and effect as judgment on nonſuit, and of no other." Sect. 2. provides, "that the defendant or defendants ſhall, on ſuch judgment, be awarded his, her, or their coſts, in any action or ſuit where he, ſhe, or they would on nonſuit be entitled to the ſame, and in no other action or ſuit whatſoever." So that the point ſeems to be, "whether the plaintiff could, in this caſe, have been nonſuited at the trial." For if he could not, then the caſe of a nonſuit does not exiſt in this caſe; and conſequently the court cannot give judgment and coſts, as in caſe of a nonſuit, when the caſe of a nonſuit does not at all exiſt. Here a judgment was obtained by the plaintiff againſt one of the defendants: how then can the plaintiff be out of court as to him? But if he is nonſuited in this action, he will be out of court, as againſt both defendants.

The defendant pleaded, that it did not appear what was due to the attorney, &c.

The plaintiff replied, that 9*l*. was due to the ſaid attorney, of which the defendant had notice, but had not paid it.

It was rejoined, that it did not appear what was due, &c. and traverſed that he had notice thereof.

On an action on the caſe brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant, for being bit by his dog,

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, that the declaration was ill for want of ſhewing that the defendant had notice that the dog was fierce. For there is a great difference between horſes and oxen, in which a man has a valuable property, and which are not ſo familiar to mankind, and dogs; the former the owner ought to confine, and take all reaſonable caution that they do no miſchief, otherwiſe an action will lie againſt him; but otherwiſe of dogs, before he has notice of ſome miſchievous quality. But in the former caſe, if the owner puts a horſe or an ox to graſs in his field, which is adjoining to the high-way, and the horſe or the ox breaks the hedge, and runs into the high-way, and kicks or gores ſome paſſenger, an action will not lie againſt the owner; otherwiſe if he had notice, that they had done ſuch a thing before. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 608.

Trinity, 13 W. 3. Anonymous.

Per curiam. When a motion is made to have ſubmiſſion to award, made a rule of the court, there ought always to be an affidavit of notice, becauſe the ſtatute gives the court power to examine the juſtice of the award. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 525.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Lazier or Leſauld, v. Dyer.

On iſſue joined and entered in Trinity term, the plaintiff reſted till Trinity term following, and then gave notice of trial after the term, and a venire facias and diſtringas were taken out in the vacation, but teſted and entered as of the term.

Per curiam. This is not ſufficient notice; for tho' in law, this was a proceeding within the term; yet in fact it was a proceeding in vacation: and therefore there was not a term's notice of trial. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 457. Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 57.

Eaſter, 3 Ann. Williams v. Jackſon.

On a queſtion, what notice there ſhould be to defendants of trials, and executing of writs of inquiry, the following points were agreed by the court:

1ſt. That convenient notice was as much neceſſary, and fit to be given of the executing of a writ of inquiry, as of a trial.

2dly. That by a late rule of the court, if a writ of inquiry or iſſue is to be tried in London or Middleſex, and the defendant lives not above forty miles off, eight day's notice will ſuffice; but if it is above forty miles, there ought to be fifteen days notice in either caſe.

3dly. That the reaſon is the ſame in all other caſes, where the parties are above forty miles diſtant from the place where the trial is to be, though they be country cauſes. Yet, becauſe it is an ancient rule, that eight days notice ſhould be ſufficient in all country cauſes, and that had been done in the caſe now in queſtion, it being a country cauſe, the execution of the writ of inquiry ſtood, and the court ſaid, they would conſider of altering the rule.

Per curiam. The reaſon why by common law there are fifteen days between the teſte and return to a proceſs, is, becauſe that was a ſufficient time to come from any part of the kingdom to another, for at twenty miles a day a man in fifteen days will travel all over the land. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 146.

On a mandamus to reſtore Mr. Serjeant Whitaker to the place and office of recorder of the town of Ipſwich, (among other things) the notice was objected to; 1ſt. that there was no time appointed by the notice when he ſhould appear to anſwer the matters charged therein. 2dly. That he was not charged in the notice with not holding a ſeſſions of the peace, but of Oyer and Terminer, and goal delivery.

To theſe objections it was anſwered and reſolved, that the Serjeant appearing, and being charged, and anſwering, ſupplied the want of notice, both of the time and of the offence.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, alſo ſaid, that the court could not take notice of towns any otherwiſe than they appeared to them on the record, though they did of counties. Vide Raym vol. 2. p. 1233.

Eaſter, 4 Ann. Smith v. ——.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, that on a general promiſe to pay money when a bond is delivered up, it muſt be intended to be delivered up to the obligor, though he is a third perſon; and the defendant ought to take notice of the delivery, for he might have applied to the obligor to have had notice. For where every party may have notice by their own inquiry, notice is not neceſſary. In caſe of marriage of one's ſelf, notice need not be averred, becauſe marriage is of itſelf notorious. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 48.

Eaſter, 4 Ann. Smith v. Goff.

The plaintiff declared, that H. owed him 30 l. on bond, and the defendant promiſed, that if the plaintiff delivered up the ſaid bond, he would pay him the ſaid 30*l.* and ſays he delivered up the ſaid bond to H. before the action was brought, and that the defendant had notice, and had not paid it. On non aſſumpſit pleaded, a verdict was given for the plaintiff; on motion in arreſt of judgment, it was held, 1ſt. That the delivery muſt be intended to the obligor, for that is properly delivering up; and delivering up muſt be conſtrued the moſt effectual delivering; which is ſuch as that the bond may be cancelled. 2dly. That there needs no notice, becauſe the defendant knew who to reſort to; and the diſtinction is, where a perſon is named, and where not. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 457. Raym. vol. 2. p. 1126.

Hilary, 8 Ann. Anonymous.

On a motion to ſet aſide an execution executed after a writ of error was allowed: the court held, that tho' there was no notice given to the plaintiff's attorney of the allowance of the writ of error, yet it was a ſuperſedeas to the execution: but to bring the attorney into contempt, he muſt have had notice; ſo the motion was granted. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 272.

Trinity, 8 Ann. Rice v. Wilmer.

Adjudged, That if the defendant brings on a trial by proviſoe, he muſt firſt give the plaintiff a rule to enter iſſue, which is conſidered as notice of trial, or elſe if the plaintiff is nonſuited, ſuch nonſuit will be ſet aſide as irregular. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. page 237.

Hilary, 6 Geo. Whitehead v. Barber.

Per curiam. On conference with the other courts, we are of opinion, that within the reaſon of ſtat. 4 & 5. W. & M. c. 21. which appoints, that the delivery of a declaration againſt a priſoner to the goaler ſhall be good, a notice of trial to him is good alſo; though the defendant has an attorney in one caſe, and not in the other. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 248.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. The Inhabitants of Warminſter v. Leiceſter.

One who was hired to be a ſervant for a year, but had ſerved there three quarters of a year only, was removed by two juſtices, ſuppoſing he ſhould give notice, it being before ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. which orders ſervice but for a year.

Per curiam. It is a good ſettlement, though he did not ſerve out the year, and he need not give notice; for no notice is required of a ſervant or an apprentice, becauſe it is to no purpoſe; for if they were to give notice, they could not be removed from their maſters. Vide Forteſcue, p. 326.

Michaelmas, 9 Geo. Green v. Gauntlett.

The court on motion for a new trial held, that the giving notice of trial at the end of half a year after iſſue joined, would prevent the neceſſity of giving a term's notice, till a year after the laſt notice which was given and countermanded. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 531.

Hilary, 10 Geo. The King v. The Chancellor, &c. of the Univerſity of Cambridge.

A mandamus was directed to the Chancellor, maſters, and ſcholars of the Univerſity of Cambridge, commanding them to reſtore Dr. Bently to his degrees.

The council on behalf of the Doctor, among other things, inſiſted, that there was a fatal fault in the return, which could not be anſwered; which was, that it did not appear that the Doctor was ſummoned, or had notice of the proceedings againſt him, therefore he had no opportunity of making his defence.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, Pratt, Chief Juſtice, delivered the reſolution of the court as follows:

The return is ill: for as it is not ſhewn that the proceedings in the Vice-Chancellor's court, or in the congregation, are according to the rules of the civil law, they muſt be intended to be agreeable to the rules of the common law; and if ſo, it not appearing that the party has any redreſs by applying to another court, this court will relieve him, if he has been proceeded againſt and degraded without being heard, which is contrary to natural juſtice. This caſe therefore will fall under the rules for the removing of corporations, which cannot be done without ſummoning the party, and giving him an opportunity of being heard. The caſes determined on that head are ſo numerous, and the rule ſo well ſettled and known, that it cannot be diſputed; for want of doing which, this ſuſpenſion or degradation cannot be ſupported: therefore a peremptory mandamus was granted. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1334.

Eaſter, 11 Geo. Steed v. Layner.

The execution of a ſcire fieri inquiry was ſet aſide on motion, becauſe no notice was given of the time the writ was to be executed, for which purpoſe it is neceſſary to give notice; and ſo it was held before in a like caſe in Trinity 9 Geo. in this court, and an inquiſition taken on ſuch a writ ſet aſide. Michaelmas, 3 Geo. 2. Whitlock v. Humphries.

On debate it was ſettled, that to ſave coſts for not going on to trial, it would be ſufficient to countermand notice in a town-cauſe two days, and in a country-cauſe four days before the aſſizes; and that it ſhould be a general rule, without conſidering the charges or inconveniences in any particular caſe. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 849.

Michaelmas, 7 Geo. 2. Bates v. Pettipher.

The defendant lived at Ayleſbury, and not having fourteen days notice of trial, moved to ſet aſide the verdict, on an affidavit that it meaſured forty-two miles from London, and that he paid for ſo many miles.

For the plaintiff it was ſworn, that it was computed to be but thirty-three miles.

Per curiam, We muſt go by the uſual computation; our rule was ancienter than theſe poſt-miles, and conſequently reſpected the computation before the erection of poſt-miles. It was therefore held that the notice was good. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 954.

Michaelmas, 12 Geo. 2. Peyton v. Burdus.

An interlocutory judgment was ſigned in Trinity term 1737, and in Auguſt 1738, a writ of enquiry was executed on eight days notice; which was ſet aſide as irregular, and held, that where a term's notice of trial is required, there muſt be the ſame notice of executing a writ of inquiry. Vide Stra. vol. 2. page 1100.

Nuiſance.

Hilary, 1 W. & M. The King and Queen v. Wilcox.

The owner of the glaſs-houſe at Lambeth, was indicted for maintaining that houſe, being a nuiſance, and was convicted and fined; and now the court was moved, that by the act of general pardon the defendant was excuſed and diſcharged, both as to the fine, and the abatement of the nuiſance; but the court upon conſideration held, that he ſhould be diſcharged only as to the fine, and not as to the abatement; for that is not a puniſhment of the party, but a removal of that which is a grievance to other people, and any perſon may abate a common nuiſance. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 458.

Hilary, 9 Will. 3. The King v. Webb.

It was ruled by Holt, Chief Juſtice, on an indictment for a nuiſance, that the building of an houſe in a larger manner than it was before, whereby the ſtreet became darker, was not any public nuiſance by reaſon of the darkening. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 737.

Michaelmas, 9 Will. 3. Lodie v. Arnold.

In an action of treſpaſs for breaking his cloſe, and throwing bricks and other materials, there lying towards the building an houſe, into the ſea; the defendant ſhewed it was a nuiſance, being a houſe built acroſs the way, and that he pulled down the walls, &c. and they rolled into the ſea: the plaintiff demurred, and judgment was given for the defendant.

And, 1ſt, The court ſeemed to agree, that the treſpaſs, which is juſtified, is not the treſpaſs complained of, for that was throwing materials there lying; this, which is confeſſed, is pulling down a wall. 2dly, That when H. has a right to abate a public nuiſance, he is not bound to do it methodically, and with as little hurt as poſſible; and therefore was not anſwerable in this caſe for the rolling into the ſea. In the caſe of James v. Haward, the defendant might have opened the gate without cutting it down; yet the cutting was lawful; and the court denied Hill's caſe, 3 Cro. 384. that matter of aggravation need to be anſwered. But, 3dly, The court held, that the declaration was repugnant and inſenſible; there could not be materials towards the building of a houſe which was already built. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 459.

Michaelmas, 9 W. 3. Arnold v. Jefferſon.

In this caſe Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, that a writ of aſſize or quod permittat, &c. wherefore he erected a certain edifice, is good, for there may be a building without a proper name; it lies of a fabric, which is a word more uncertain than edifice, yet it will not lie de mole, becauſe the thing itſelf is not to be recovered as in a præcipe. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 247.

The defendant pleaded, that the plaintiff brought an action in Eaſter term laſt paſt, for the erecting of this wall the firſt of October before, and recovered; and averred, that this was the ſame erection, &c. The plaintiff demurred, whereon judgment was given for the defendant; for though he might have another action for the continuance, yet he cannot have another action for the ſame erection. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 370.

One was indicted for a nuiſance for keeping ſeveral barrels of gun-powder in a houſe in Brentford town, ſometimes two days, ſometimes a week, till he could conveniently ſend them to London.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, reſolved, 1ſt, That to ſupport this indictment there muſt be apparent danger, or miſchief already done. 2dly, That though it had been done for fifty or ſixty years, yet if it is a nuiſance, time will not make it lawful. 3dly, If at the time of ſetting up this houſe in which the gun-powder is kept, there had been no houſes near enough to be prejudiced by it, but ſome had been built ſince, it would be at the peril of the builder. 4thly, Though gun-powder is a neceſſary thing, and for the defence of the kingdom, yet if it is kept in ſuch a place as to be dangerous to the inhabitants, or paſſengers, it will be a nuiſance. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 342.

On an information for public nuiſance, the jury found the defendant guilty; yet becauſe it appeared to the court to be doubtful on the evidence, and that the jury had not had a view, though very proper in this caſe, they hoped the parties would conſent to let this jury have a view, and come to trial again; and it was ſo done by conſent. Eaſter, 1 Ann. Anonymous.

If a leſſee for years builds an houſe on the leaſed premiſes, it is waſte; and if he lets it fall, it is a new waſte. If a man has an upper room an action lies againſt him by one who has an under room, to compel him to repair his roof; and ſo where a man has a ground room, they who live over him may have an action to compel him to keep up and maintain his foundation. See ſtat. Weſtm. 2. c. 23. 2 Inſt. 403. Moor. 374. 6 E. 4. 7. Kelw. 98. Reg. 153. But quere, whether if a man builds a new houſe, under the roof of an old houſe which is ready to tumble, if he ſhall have a writ de reparatione facienda; becauſe he ought, and is uſed, or has been uſed, are neceſſary words in the declaration. 1 Vent. 274.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Every man of common right ought toſuppor this own houſe, ſo as it may not be an annoyance to another.

Powell, Juſtice, put this caſe; ſuppoſe a man makes a vault, and builds a wall thereto, and then his neighbour makes a cellar adjoining to the vault, which is damaged by a default in the wall of the vault, he thought that the owner of the cellar might well have an action.

But Holt, Chief Juſtice, was of a different opinion, ſaying, that before the party could entitle himſelf to an action in that caſe, he ought firſt to build a wall to his cellar, as well as the other to his vault, otherwiſe he ought not to have any benefit from the firſt wall, unleſs it indeed be agreed, that he ſhall contribute to the repair of it, &c. Suppoſe a man has a vacant piece of ground, and there builds a houſe on part thereof, and then ſells the reſt, the vendee cannot build ſo as to ſtop any lights in the firſt houſe, but muſt take the ground ſubject to the incumbrance of the former lights. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 17.

Eaſter, 3 Ann. The Queen v. Leich.

The defendant was indicted for a public nuiſance to Billingſgate Dock, the indictment ſet forth, that Billingſgate Dock was a common dock, to which all ſmall ſhips coming with proviſions to the markets of London might come, but that no great ſhip ought, or uſed to come there; that, notwithſtanding, the defendant brought a great ſhip, of three hundred tons, into it, to the common nuiſance of all the Queen's ſubjects, &c.

It was excepted, on a motion for quaſhing this indictment, that it was inconſiſtent to ſay that a place is a common dock, and that it would be a nuiſance for a great ſhip to come there; for a common dock, in its nature, is free for all ſhips.

Per curiam. Why may there not be a common dock only for ſmall ſhips, as well as a common pack and horſe-way. And if a man with a cart uſes ſuch a way, ſo as to plow it, and render it leſs convenient for horſemen, will not that be a nuiſance indictable. Beſides, we never quaſh indictments for nuiſances. But if a nuiſance is removed, and the party confeſſes it, it will be a great mitigation of the fine; and it may in that caſe be proper to offer affidavits to the court to leſſen the offence, but not otherwiſe. And they put the defendant to demur, which he did. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 145.

Hilary, 12 Geo. The King v. Pappineau. Error.

On a writ of error directed to the juſtices of the peace of the county of Surry to remove a conviction for a nuiſance on an indictment for building a mole on a certain river adjacent, and contiguouſly adjoining to the common highway of the King, and alſo near ſeveral dwelling-houſes; and for ſteeping and dreſſing in the ſaid water thirty ſheep-ſkins, which emitted a ſtink and unwholſome ſmell, &c. whereby the air there was greatly infected, and ſtill is corrupted and infected, to the common nuiſance, &c.

After not guilty pleaded, a trial was had, and the defendant found guilty; on which the judgment was entered, that the defendant be fined 100 l. for the ſaid nuiſance, and that he be taken, &c.

On this judgment the general errors were aſſigned, and the Coroner and Attorney General pleaded no error.

Raymond, Chief Juſtice. Regularly the judgment ought to be, to abate ſo much of the thing as makes it a nuiſance, 9 Co. 53. Godb. 221. Winch. 3. If a houſe be built too high, only ſo much of it as is too high ſhall be pulled down. Here the erecting of the mole was not the nuiſance, (for it might be lawful to do that) but the nuiſance ariſes from the uſe it was put to; and therefore the judgment muſt be affirmed. To which Powys, Juſtice, agreed.

Forteſcue, Juſtice. The queſtion is, whether in the caſe of a public nuiſance it is not neceſſary to give two judgments in all caſes. I am not ſatisfied this is not a permanent nuiſance; the erecting is the cauſe of the nuiſance, and the concluſion of the indictment to the common nuiſance, &c. goes to the whole, as well the erecting, as the ſteeping. I remember the caſe of a glaſs-houſe, where the judgment was to abate the nuiſance, not that the houſe ſhould be pulled down, but only to prevent his uſing it again as ſuch; which might have been done in this caſe to prevent his dipping ſkins again. Co. Ent. 92. b. 9 Co. Batten's caſe, it appears the plaintiff could not go on for damages after the defendant had abated the nuiſance, which ſhews an abatement to be the moſt neceſſary part. 2 Roll. Abr. 84. And as no inſtance is given where the judgment has varied in purſuance of the diſtinction now ſet up between permanent and tranſitory nuiſances, I am of opinion that this judgment is erroneous, and ought to be reverſed.

Reynolds, Juſtice. I think the judgment is right. Every judgment ſhould be adapted to the nature of the caſe; where the erection is the nuiſance, there ought to be a demolition. Roaſting of coffee was formerly thought a nuiſance, and yet nobody ever imagined the houſe in which it was roaſted ſhould be pulled down; and what other way is there to abate ſuch a nuiſance? A glaſs-houſe is a nuiſance in its own nature; but this is a lawful act, provided the ſkins which are dipped are not ſtinking ſkins. I ſhould think it would have been going too far, if they had adjudged the whole erection to be abated for a particular abuſe of it in dipping ſome ſtinking ſkins.

The judges took further time to conſider; and in Trinity term following it was mentioned again, and all ſtanding to their former opinions, the cauſe was again adjourned.

It was put in the papers about a year afterwards, and nobody appearing for the defendant, the judgment was affirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 686.

On a demurrer brought to an action for a treſpaſs committed in breaking and entering the plaintiff's cloſe, called the River Thames; and taking up, breaking, and deſtroying his bucks, there erected and placed for the catching of fiſh; and taking his fiſh out of the bucks, and carrying them away, and converting them to their own uſe.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, on arguing this demurrer, the court gave judgment for the plaintiff.

Lord Mansfield. An offence is here created by an act of parliament. If you take advantage of the ſtatute, you muſt purſue the method preſcribed by it. This is the plaintiff's own fiſhery; and he might have done what he would in it, before this prohibition by the ſtatute.

Wilmot, Juſtice, concurred, and obſerved, that this is not to be conſidered as a nuiſance, either public or private. The violation of this public law is not within the idea of a nuiſance.

Yates, Juſtice, concurred, and ſaid, this was the plaintiff's own fiſhery; and the defendants have taken up the bucks, and taken the fiſh. The laying the bucks was no nuiſance; and no power is given by the ſtatute "to ſeize." The defendants are not to be their own judges. They ought to have followed the method preſcribed by the ſtatute. The water bailiff has no right to take the nets of a perſon fiſhing in his own fiſhery.

Aſton, Juſtice, concurred with the Chief Juſtice, and the other Judges.

On a mandamus to reſtore Evans to the office of clerk of the peace, a miſbehaviour was returned, to wit, that a demand having been made of the rolls, he did not deliver them to the Cuſtos Rotulorum; on which a peremptory mandamus was moved for, when it was urged, that ſtat. W. & M. veſts a freehold in the clerk, ſo long as he behaves himſelf well, he cannot be removed but on miſdemeanor in execution of his office, and articles againſt him are to be put in writing, which is not ſaid to have been done.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The keeping of the rolls of right belongs to the Cuſtos Rotulorum; the clerk of the peace is a diſtinct officer, and not a mere ſervant, and it is his buſineſs to make up the rolls and enter them. So a peremptory mandamus was granted. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 13.

Eaſter or Michaelmas, 3 W. & M. Jones v. Pugh, or Beau.

On an action on the caſe for diſturbing the plaintiff in his office of vicar-general, a ſpecial verdict was found, viz. That the Biſhop of Llandaff granted the office of vicar-general to the plaintiff and J. S. to hold jointly and ſeverally to be exerciſed by themſelves, or their ſufficient deputy. It was objected, that a judicial office could not be granted to two; for if they differ, nothing can be done. To which it was anſwered, that may be ſaid of four judges, as in this court, and in miniſterial offices, as two ſheriffs.

But the court held the grant good, and ſaid, if an office be granted to two, and one dies, the office does not ſurvive, but determines; as if there were two ſheriffs, and one dies, the other cannot act; otherwiſe if granted to two and the ſurvivor of them. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 465. *Mod. Per curiam. This bond is not within the ſtatute, becauſe the condition is not to pay him ſo much in groſs, but half the profits, which muſt be ſued for in the principal's name; for they belong to him, though out of them a ſhare is to be allowed to the deputy for his ſervice. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 466. *Mod. Hilary, 8 W. 3. Linch v. Coote.

A tenant for life, with remainder to his firſt ſon in tail, remainder to J. S. in fee, was attainted of high treaſon, and died without iſſue. It was objected, that the whole eſtate being veſted in the King by ſtat. 33 H. 8. without finding the office ſpecial, the remainder-man cannot enter, for the ſtatute veſts it in the King like a general office; and if a general office had been found, it would have been ſuppoſed a fee.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. No other eſtate veſts in the King, by virtue of the act of parliament, than the party attainted had; juſt as if a ſpecial office had been found: and therefore in this caſe, as in that, the remainder-man may enter on the King, his eſtate being determined, for the ſtatute ſaves the rights of others; otherwiſe where an office finds an eſtate in fee in the party attainted, for then it muſt be avoided by traverſe, or amoveas manum. Dyer 335. *b. Hilary 9, or Trinity, 10 W. 3. Saunders, or Sanders, v. Owen. Error.

On a writ of aſſize of novel diſſeiſin for the office of clerk of the peace of Kent, the recognizors found a ſpecial verdict, viz. that the Earl of Winchelſea being Cuſtos Rotulorum of that county, made P. Owen clerk of the peace, to hold at his pleaſure, by writing under his hand and ſeal; and becauſe the juſtices of peace at their ſeſſions ſcrupled to admit him upon this paper, the Lord Winchelſea came into court, and ſaid, I nominate P. Owen to be clerk of the peace, according to act of parliament.

And the court held, that it always belonged to the Cuſtos Rotulorum to nominate the clerk of the peace, but the clerk of the peace was removeable whenever the Cuſtos was removed or changed; and moreover was removeable at the will of the Cuſtos till ſtat. 32 H. 8. which makes him hold his office as long as the Cuſtos ſhall continue in power. Now by the late act, he is to continue for life; and though the words be, give and grant to him; yet it is only an appointment, and conſequently may be without deed: that it cannot be a grant from the Cuſtos, or enure as ſuch, is plain, becauſe the Cuſtos is only at will; and he that has an office at will, cannot make a grant for life, becauſe there is no original eſtate ſufficient to ſupport it; therefore this muſt enure as an appointment, or the execution of a power given by the ſtatute; like a power to an executor to ſell, or a tenant for life to make leaſes; the conſequence of all which is, that this was a good appointment, though without deed; for whatever is to take effect out of a power or authority, or by way of appointment, is good without deed; otherwiſe, where it takes an effect out of an intereſt, and is to enure as a grant; for then, if it be of a thing incorporeal, it muſt be by deed. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 467. Ibid. vol. 3. p. 250. *Mod. Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Godolphin v. Tudor.

Sir William Godolphin being auditor of Wales made a deputy during his good behaviour, who, by articles of agreement between them, was to have the fees, and in conſideration thereof to pay Sir William 200 l. per annum, and ſave him harmleſs. On an action of debt on the bond for the performance, judgment was given againſt the plaintiff.

1ſt, The court held this an office within ſtat. 5 & 6 E. 6. c. 16.

2dly, The court held, that where an office is within the ſtatute, and the ſalary is certain, if the principal makes a deputy, reſerving a leſſer ſum out of the ſalary, it is good: ſo if the profits be uncertain, ariſing from fees, if the principal makes a deputy, reſerving a ſum certain out of the fees and profits of the office, it is good; for in theſe caſes the deputy is not to pay, unleſs the profits amount to ſo much; and though a deputy by his commiſſion is in place of his principal, yet he has no right to the fees, they ſtill continue to be the property of the principal; ſo that as to him, it is only reſerving a part of his own, and giving away the reſt to another; but where the reſervation or agreement is not to pay out of the profits, but to pay generally a certain ſum, it muſt be paid at all events, and ſuch bond is void by the ſtatute. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 468. Ibid. vol. 3. p. 251. *Mod. It was objected, that this was rather a ſervice or employment than an office; that if it be an office, it is eccleſiaſtical, for of common right the parſon appoints the clerk, and the court will not intend a cuſtom; and unleſs a clerk comes in by the election of the pariſhioners according to cuſtom, he has not a temporal right; and the court will not grant a mandamus for a clerk, without an affidavit that he is appointed by the pariſh. 2dly, It does not appear that any fees appertain unto this office, and no action lies at common law for diſturbance in the enjoyment of a ſeat in the church, without a temporal right; and ſo it is here. Adjourned. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 468.

Orders, on Removals, Settlements, &c.

Eaſter, 4 W. & M. The King v. ———

The court was moved to quaſh an order made by two juſtices of the peace at their ſeſſions, which reciting a precedent order made by two juſtices to remove a poor man from H. to B. in the ſame county, becauſe it appeared to them that he rented a farm of 10 l. per annum in H. they ordered that he ſhould be removed to H. The motion was, that the matter might be examined here; but the motion was denied.

The court agreed, that in all caſes where the ſtatute gives appeal from two juſtices to the ſeſſions, the order on ſuch appeal is final, though the ſtatute does not expreſly ſay ſo; and this court cannot examine the fact, but only quaſh the order if contrary to law.

Dolbin, Juſtice. If a conviction be on the ſtatute againſt deer-ſtealing, the fact cannot afterwards be examined here; for the parliament has made the juſtices ſole judges of ſuch petty matters.

Then the court was moved to quaſh the order, becauſe the ſeſſions ought only, as was urged, to quaſh or confirm the order of the juſtices; yet they have not reverſed the former order, but only ordered a ſettlement at H.

Dolbin and Eyre, Juſtices. The ſettlement at H. being the place from which he was removed, is a reverſal of the firſt order.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, thought the ſeſſions had not power to ſettle him at H. becauſe it did not appear that he had been ſettled there forty days; for though he had a farm there, yet it is not a ſettlement if he leaves it within forty days; then the ſeſſions ought to have quaſhed the firſt order of the juſtices, but not to have ſettled a poor perſon who had no ſettlement. Holt, Chief Juſtice. We are of opinion that all the inhabitants ſhould contribute.

For though it may be thought hard, that thoſe inhabitants ſhould pay towards the pavement who did not live on it; yet the words of the ſtatute are ſo ſtrong, that it lays the charge on all the inabitants without diſtinction; and where the ſtatute does not make a diſtinction, we have no power to do it; wherefore the firſt order is good, and the other bad, and muſt be quaſhed. *Vide Mod. Floud was born in Talbury, and ſerved ſeven years apprenticeſhip there, which ended in the year 1693; ſince 1693, he lived in Foſton and other places out of the pariſh of Talbury, and the blackſmith that lived in Foſton dying, and the inhabitants wanting one, in 1694 Floud went thither, and rented the ſhop and a chamber of the widow of the former blackſmith for a year, at 52 s. per annum, with the conſent of the bailiff of the lord of the manor: here he worked publicly, was publicly employed by the pariſhioners, and particularly by the bailiff of the lord of the manor, the vicar, and the juſtices of peace; and now having never given notice, nor rented a tenement of 10 l. per annum, or exerciſed any office, the queſtion was, whether this public way of living was not tantamount and equivalent to notice in writing, which was only deſigned to prevent clandeſtine entries and livings.

Per curiam. This public notice taken by the pariſh might perhaps have ſatisfied ſtat. 1 Jac. 2. but there being doubts concerning the notice preſcribed by that act, ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 11. was made to explain it, and this latter ſtatute has particularized the notice, and what ſhall be tantamount to it, and what not; but this is not among the particulars of the ſtatute; for which reaſon the order was confirmed. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 475.

Hilary, 8 W. 3. Hatton's Caſe.

An order was made by five juſtices to maintain a baſtard child; and it was objected, that the complaint is not ſaid to be made by any pariſh or officers there, but only of a town which may include ſeveral pariſhes; but the court held that well enough. 2dly. That the order is under the hands of five juſtices, whereas it ſhould be only under the hands of the two next; but the court held that well, for the ſtatute is not reſtrictive to two, but there muſt be two at leaſt. 3dly. That it does not appear that either of thoſe was a juſtice of the quorum; on this laſt objection it was quaſhed, but the party was bound to appear at the next ſeſſions. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 477.

Hilary, 8 W. 3. The Pariſh of Cuckfield v. Boxſtead.

One Anne Talby was by an order removed from Cuckfield to Boxſtead; and this order being appealed from, was confirmed at the ſeſſions; but the ſeſſions after that made an order of review, and quaſhed the former order of ſeſſions, becauſe made by ſurprize.

Per curiam. The order of review muſt be quaſhed; for the juſtices have no power after the firſt ſeſſions. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 477.

Hilary, 8 W. 3. Spencer's Caſe.

An order was made by two juſtices, to remove S. from H. in Leiceſterſhire to R. in Warwickſhire, who appealed; and at the adjourned ſeſſions, the two pariſhes agreed to put off the determination of the cauſe till the next ſeſſions, which ſeſſions vacated the order of the two juſtices; and now it was moved, to ſet aſide that order, becauſe the appeal ought to be at the next ſeſſions, by ſtat. 13 Car. 2. and ſtat. 3 & 4 W. 3. there to be finally determined; and for this reaſon it was quaſhed. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 258.

Trinity, 8 W. 3. The Pariſh of St. Nicholas v. The Pariſh of St. Helen.

Two orders were made for ſettling one R. a poor man, the firſt by two juſtices, the other by the ſeſſions on appeal, confirming the former. The caſe was, R. being ſix years ago legally ſettled at St. Nicholas's, clandeſtinely came into the pariſh of St. Helen, and lived there without giving notice to the officers of the pariſh of St. Helen during all that time; they ſent him back to the pariſh of St. Nicholas, &c. And the queſtion was, whether living in St. Helen's ſo long as ſix years ſhould not induce the court to preſume the notice and other things requiſite well done, to gain a ſettlement?

Per curiam. No perſon that is not a removeable perſon, is to give notice; as he that rents a tenement of 10 l. per annum, a ſervant, &c. need not give notice, becauſe they cannot be diſturbed: in this caſe, if it had appeared on the order, that the pariſh of St. Helen had taken notice of him, and looked on him as one of the pariſh, as by relieving of him, making him an officer, &c. there, after ſo long a time, we would have preſumed notice given, becauſe the notice need not be exactly proved; for the churchwarden to whom it was given, and the witneſſes atteſting the matter, may be dead; but here it is returned on the order, that he clandeſtinely removed himſelf, ſo that he might eaſily continue in the ſame manner; wherefore in ſuch caſes we muſt conſtrue the ſtatute ſtrictly; and therefore the order was confirmed. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 472.

An order was made by two juſtices to remove a poor perſon, and exception was taken, that it did not appear by the order that the juſtices were of the diviſion, or that either of them was of the quorum: the laſt was held a good exception, but the firſt was over-ruled, for in that the ſtatute is only directory. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 473.

The King v. Dobbyn.

An order of two juſtices was quaſhed, becauſe it did not appear they were juſtices of the county, or for the county, but only reſiding in the county. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 474.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. The King v. Turnock.

On an indictment found againſt the defendant for refuſing to relieve and maintain Elizabeth the wife of his ſon John Turnock, according to an order made at the ſeſſions, which order was ſet forth in the indictment, in theſe words, viz. at the general ſeſſions of the peace held at Marlborough in and for the ſaid county of Wilts, &c. on motion the indictment was quaſhed, becauſe the order was only ſaid to be made at the general ſeſſions, and not at the general quarter-ſeſſions; for the quarter ſeſſions are appointed by ſtat. 2 H. 7. c. 4. though it appears by the ſame ſtatute that there may be a general ſeſſions at other times; and ſtat 43 E. c. 2. ſ. 7. appoints orders in theſe caſes to be made at the general quarter ſeſſions. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 474.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. The Pariſh of Much-Waltham v. The Pariſh of Peram in Eſſex.

The court was moved to quaſh an order of ſeſſions for the ſettlement of a baſtard child of E. L. She being big with child, a little before her delivery was removed by the order of two juſtices of peace, from Much-Waltham to Peram; before the next ſeſſions ſhe was delivered at Peram of a baſtard child: at the ſeſſions Peram appealed, and the juſtices adjudged the woman to be legally ſettled at Much-Waltham, and ordered her to be ſent back thither; after which an order was made for ſettling the child at Peram, which the court was moved to quaſh, becauſe, though regularly baſtards muſt be maintained where born, yet in this caſe, where there ſeems to be a contrivance, it ſhall not be ſo, as in Tuming's caſe, 2 Bul. 349. Whenever an order is reverſed, all things happening ſubſequent thereunto, ſhall be avoided thereby: this child being born pending the order, ſhall be eſteemed in law to be born in that pariſh whereunto the mother on the appeal is returned back. The court ſeemed to agree to this; and a rule was made to ſhew cauſe, but none was ſhewn. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 474

At the complaint of the churchwardens of Terrent-Keinſton in Dorſetſhire, to two juſtices of the peace of the ſaid county, concerning a poor man and his wife; they the ſaid juſtices adjudged him to be laſt legally ſettled at Tirrin-Crawford, on which they appealed; and there it was ordered, that it appearing to the ſeſſions that he was laſt ſettled at Amner, therefore they diſcharged Tirrin-Crawford, and ordered the poor man to be removed to Amner: this was quaſhed on motion, becauſe it was making an original order, which the juſtices at ſeſſions have no power to do; they might have reverſed the firſt order, and ordered the party to be carried back to Terrent-Keinſton, but they could not remove the party to Amner, a third pariſh, which was noways concerned in the order or appeal; and if they are really chargeable with it, it muſt be at the complaint of Terrent-Keinſton to two juſtices of the peace. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 475

8 W. 3. The King v. Harding.

A certiorari was directed to the Lord Mayor and juſtices of peace of London, to remove an order; before filing whereof a procedendo was prayed: the fact was, the ſervant of one Harding complained to the ſeſſions, that her maſter was in arrear to her for wages: on hearing the matter, both parties agreed to refer it to Sir Thomas Lane, late Lord Mayor, to be determined; which was done accordingly by order of ſeſſions: he made an award or order, but before a report was made thereof, this certiorari was brought, whereon a procedendo was now prayed.

Per curiam. A judge of niſi prius, by conſent of parties, may make a rule after a cauſe, but the ſeſſions cannot do ſo, though by conſent: they may refer a thing to another to examine, and make a report to them for their determination, but cannot refer a thing to be determined by another: and therefore the certiorari was filed, and no procedendo granted. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 478.

The Pariſh of St. Mary le More v. The Pariſh of Heavy-Tree in Devonſhire.

One Facy was ſettled at Heavy-Tree, and afterwards went into the pariſh of St. Mary le More in Exeter, and took a houſe there of 1 l. per annum, wherein he lived a year and a half, and paid the rates and taxes due for the ſaid houſe; and the juſtices at their ſeſſions held, that the rate for a houſe, without a rate on his perſon, was not ſufficient to make a ſettlement; but the court of K. B. quaſhed this order for this very cauſe, and held him ſettled in St. Mary le More. Vide Salk. vol. 2. page 478.

The King v. Beard.

An order was made by two juſtices of the peace in Suſſex, adjudging Beard to be the father of a baſtard child, which was quaſhed, becauſe it appeared thereby, that the examination of the woman was by one juſtice only, though the order was ſaid to be made by both; and Beard was bound over to the next ſeſſions. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 478.

Hilary 9 W. 3. The Pariſh of Downhead v. The Pariſh of Broadchalk in Wilts.

Two juſtices of the peace made an order to remove one John Rainsford, his wife and three children, from Rowborough in Somerſetſhire, to Broadchalk in Wilts, which order, on an appeal to the quarter-ſeſſions, was confirmed; after this Rainsford, with his wife and three children, came into the pariſh of Downhead; whereupon two juſtices, reciting the former order and confirmation thereof, ordered him to Broadchalk; and and now it was objected to this order, that it did not appear that one of the juſtices was of the quorum. On the other ſide it was argued, it was not neceſſary here, becauſe it was not an original order, but an order made in purſuance of an order of ſeſſions.

Per curiam. A ſettlement by order upon appeal, binds all parties: if the poor man goes to the pariſh from whence he is removed, the ſeſſions muſt ſee their order obeyed; but if he goes to another pariſh not concerned in the appeal, then it is proper for two juſtices of the peace to remove him to the pariſh where he was ſettled by the ſeſſions by the original order; but then it muſt appear therein that one of them was of the quorum. And for this defect the order was quaſhed. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 481.

Hilary, 9 W. 3. The Pariſh of King's Norton in Wigorn, v. The Pariſh of Swolhill in Warwick.

An order was made to remove a poor woman from Yarly in Worceſterſhire, to Swolhill in Warwickſhire; afterwards two juſtices in Warwickſhire made an order to remove her to King's Norton in Worceſterſhire; whereupon two juſtices of Worceſterſhire ſent her back to Swolhill; and upon an appeal to the ſeſſions in Warwickſhire, the juſtices confirmed her ſettlement at King's Norton, and then an order was made by two juſtices of the peace to execute the ſaid order: theſe orders being brought up by certiorari, the court was moved to quaſh all except the firſt, all the others being made before no judge; for when an original order is made, it binds all perſons until it be ſet aſide, and it cannot be ſet aſide but on appeal to the ſeſſions. On the other ſide it was inſiſted, that though in this caſe two juſtices could not ſend the woman back again to Yarley, yet they might ſend her back to a third place, as King's Norton is in this caſe; ſo that as to King's Norton it is but an original order.

But the court ſeemed to be of another opinion, for then King's Norton might ſend to Yarley, and there would be a perpetual circuity; but ſeeing in this caſe King's Norton had appeared at the ſeſſions, and had been concluded there, they would not quaſh the order, and ſeveral other queſtions ariſing, the whole was referred to a judge of aſſize. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 482.

Hilary 9 W. 3. The Pariſh of Dimchurch v. The Pariſh of Eaſtchurch.

An original order was made at the quarter-ſeſſions, ſetting forth, that whereas the pariſh of Dimchurch was over-burdened with poor, and the pariſh of Eaſtchurch had no poor, the pariſh of Dimchurch ſhould be annexed to the pariſh of Eaſtchurch, and that the occupiers of lands there ſhould contribute 20 l. per annum, by equal monthly payments to Dimchurch, as long as that was over-burdened with poor, and Eaſtchurch had none.

It was objected, 1ſt. That the juſtices of peace cannot alter pariſhes, and annex one to another.

2dly, That the ſeſſions cannot make an original order.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. There are two ways by ſtat. 43 Eliz. to make one pariſh contributory to the poor of another pariſh, viz. either the juſtices may tax particular perſons in aid to that pariſh which cannot relieve its own poor; or they may aſſeſs the whole pariſh in a certain ſum, and leave it to the churchwardens and overſeers to levy the ſame, or to particular perſons, which was well done in this particular caſe; but ſo much of it as concerns the annexing of the pariſhes is void, and the reſt good. The court however took time to adviſe. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 481.

Eaſter, 9 W. 3. Tudy v. Padſtow.

An order made by two juſtices for ſettling a poor man at ſuch a place, was quaſhed at the ſeſſions; but becauſe it did not appear that it came before them by way of appeal, the order of ſeſſions was quaſhed, for they have no original juriſdiction, but the matter muſt be brought before them by appeal. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 257.

Eaſter, 9 W. 3. The Pariſh of St. Giles Cripplegate, v. The Pariſh of Hackney.

An order reciting, whereas complaint has been made to us, that Elizabeth Fulford, wife of Uriel Fulford, is lately come into the pariſh of St. Giles Cripplegate, and is likely to become chargeable to the ſame; and whereas, an oath made by the ſaid Elizabeth Fulford, it appears that her huſband was laſt legally ſettled at Hackney; theſe are therefore, &c. was quaſhed, becauſe there was no judgment of the juſtices concerning the legal ſettlement, but only the oath of the woman. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 478.

Eaſter, 9 W. 3. Anonymous.

An order made by two juſtices of the peace for ſettling a poor perſon, was quaſhed by the ſeſſions; but becauſe it did not appear to this court, that it came before them by way of appeal, without which they have no juriſdiction, this order of ſeſſions was quaſhed. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 479.

Eaſter, 9 W. 3. The Pariſh of Berry v. The Pariſh of Arundel.

An order reciting, whereas complaint has been made to us, that Jacob Duckin, with his wife and children, came from his place of abode and laſt legal ſettlement in Berry to Arundel; we therefore require you, &c. was held naught; becauſe there was no adjudication of the juſtices, which was his laſt legal ſettlement, but only a complaint, that Berry was, the truth or falſehood of which does not appear. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 479.

Eaſter or Trinity, 9 W. 3. Elizabeth Aſhley's Caſe.

Two orders were removed by certiorari, the return whereof was quaſhed, becauſe the return in the ſchedule annexed to the writ, was not made by two juſtices, but by the clerk of the peace, who was not the perſon to whom the certiorari was directed, and thereon a new certiorari was granted, which being returned and filed, it was objected, that the order made by two juſtices to remove the poor perſon, &c. was naught, becauſe it was not ſaid, that it was made by two juſtices of the diviſion, &c. according to ſtat. 13 & 14 Car. 2.

Per curiam. The ſtatute as to this matter is only directory, it is not reſtrictive or qualificatory, as the word quorum. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. 138. Salk. vol. 2. p. 258. Ibid. vol. page 479. 400.

Trinity, 9 W. 3. The King v. The Pariſh of Cheſterfield.

One Jerriſon was a ſervant to Sir Paul Jenkinſon in Waltham; afterwards he left his ſervice, and was put out by his maſter, Sir Paul Jenkinſon, to a barber in Cheſterfield, who was to teach him to ſhave and make periwigs, for which he was to have 5 l. from Sir Paul: Jerriſon continued a year in this employment, according to covenants between Sir Paul and the barber, to which Jerriſon was no party; and the court adjudged that this did not make a ſettlement at Cheſterfield, becauſe it was no ſervice; and that the ſaid Jerriſon was thereby no more than a boarder there for his education, which is no ſervice to make a ſettlement. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 328. Salk. vol. 2. p. 479.

Trinity, 9 W. 3. The King v. Brown.

An order was made, adjudging the defendant to be the father of a baſtard-child, May 2, 1696. And in Michaelmas ſeſſions following, the ſaid order was diſcharged: now both orders being brought here by certiorari, the latter was quaſhed, becauſe it appeared thereon, that Michaelmas ſeſſions was the firſt ſeſſions after notice given to the reputed father, of his being ſo adjudged; for though ſtat. 18 Eliz. appoints the appeal not to be the firſt ſeſſions after the order of the two juſtices, but the firſt ſeſſions after the party has notice of the ſaid order; yet, by ſtat. H. 5. there might be a ſeſſions intervening, as in this caſe, between the order by the two juſtices and the order of ſeſſions; and it muſt appear on the order, that this was the firſt ſeſſions after notice had been given of the former order: afterwards the firſt order by the two juſtices was quaſhed, becauſe there was an adjudication therein, that the reputed father ſhould pay a certain ſum weekly, till the child be ſeven years of age; whereas they cannot charge the father for any certain determinate time, but as long as the child ſhall be chargeable to the pariſh. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 480.

O.* an inhabitant of S. for ſo much wages, to ſerve him from the ſaid 25th day of March till Michaelmas following, which ſhe did accordingly, and then made a new contract with the ſame maſter, to ſerve him for a longer time, and accordingly did ſerve him on that contract till April following, in all above a year.

Hilary, 10 W. 3. The Caſe of the Churchwardens of Topſham.

Three juſtices took the account of the churchwardens, &c. of Topſham, for the year 1697, and adjudged that there was thereupon due from them to the pariſhioners of Topſham 69 l. 18 s. 10 d. for the re-payment whereof to the ſucceeding overſeers for the year 1698, the juſtices made an order, to which it was excepted, that the juſtices had no power to make ſuch order, but only to iſſue warrants to diſtrain.

But the court ruled the order to be well made, and confirmed the ſame. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 484.

A mandamus was granted to the juſtices of peace on ſtat. 43. Eliz. commanding them to compel the precedent overſeers of the poor of the pariſh of A. to come to an account with the preſent overſeers, and this writ was now quaſhed: 1ſt, For that the account by ſtat. 43 Eliz. is to be given to two juſtices, and not to the ſucceeding overſeers. 2dly, Two of the perſons named in the writ, whom the juſtices were to compel to come to account, do not appear to have been overſeers. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 525.

A perſon ſaid in the order to be a ſingle woman, (but not ſaid, as in the words of the ſtatute, unmarried perſon not having) was hired for half a year, and ſerved it up, and then contracted with the ſame perſon for a year, and ſerved half a year, and then went away by conſent.

Rokeby, Turton, and Gould, Juſtices. This anſwers the end of the ſtatute; ſuch ſervice as this is a good ſervice for a year, and a good order, though ſaid ſingle woman, for that infers ſhe had no children, nor ever was married. Vide Forteſcue, p. 316.

Eaſter, 10 W. 3. The Pariſh of Batterſea v. The Pariſh of Weſtham.

Two juſtices made an order to remove a poor man from Weſtham to Batterſea, on which the pariſh of Batterſea appealed to the ſeſſions, where the order of the juſtices was ſet aſide; afterwards, but in the ſame ſeſſions, on the allegation of council, the ſeſſions ſuperſeded the firſt order, and confirmed the order of the two juſtices; and on a motion being made to this court, it was urged, that the record was in the breaſt of the court during the whole ſeſſions, and therefore they might lawfully ſuperſede their own ord r. And accordingly the court affirmed the ſecond order of ſeſſions, and quaſhed the firſt. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 396.

Hertford Summer Aſſizes, 10 W. 3. Hampton v. Lammas.

A warrant was made by the juſtices of peace to levy a poor's rate on J. S. which was directed to the conſtables of A. J. S. had land in the pariſh of A. on which he had no chattels; but his houſe ſtood in the adjoining pariſh of B. in the ſame county, in which he had goods. The conſtables of A. levied theſe goods by virtue of the ſaid warrant.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ruled on evidence at the trial, that the goods were well levied. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 735.

An order was made by two juſtices of the peace, adjudging Shaw to be the reputed father of a baſtard; whereupon he appealed to the next quarter-ſeſſions of the peace after notice, where the order of the two juſtices was diſcharged; and now it was here moved to quaſh the order of ſeſſions, becauſe by the ſtatute the appeal muſt be to the next general ſeſſions, and there might have been a general ſeſſions before the general quarter-ſeſſions, as in London and Middleſex, where there are four general ſeſſions in a year, beſides the general quarter-ſeſſions. And for this fault the order was quaſhed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 203. Salk. vol. 2. p. 482.

An order was made to remove three men and their families; it was urged that it was too general, for ſome of their family might not be removeable.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a man who is ſettled at A. marries a woman who is ſettled at B. and has children by a former huſband; his wife ſhall be removed with him to A. but her children, ſuch of them as are above ſeven years old, ſhall not be removed; thoſe under ſhall be removed, but that only for nurture; for they ſhall be kept at the charge of the other pariſh: but ſuch a general order ſweeps all away; wherefore the order was quaſhed. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 395. Salk. vol. 2. p. 412. Ibid. vol. 3. p. 260

The court was moved to quaſh an order made by the juſtices of peace at their ſeſſions for ſevants wages, and coſts of ſuit, they having committed a perſon to priſon for not obeying it, which, as was urged, they had no power to do, for they ought to have indicted him for diſobeying their order; and the juſtices of peace have no power to compel the payment of ſervants wages.

The churchwardens, &c. made a rate for relief of the poor, which was confirmed by two juſtices, and therein nothing was taxed for the perſonal eſtate, but all upon the real, which was erroneous. Several inhabitants appealed to the ſeſſions, and the rate was there quaſhed; and the churchwardens, &c. ordered to make a new rate, upon both real and perſonal eſtates: in the new rate there was ſtill a great inequality, the real eſtate being taxed ten times more, in proportion, than the perſonal eſtate; for this reaſon ſeveral inhabitants appealed again, and this rate was likewiſe vacated by order of the ſeſſions. And now the court was moved to quaſh theſe orders, for that the ſeſſions could only relieve particular perſons overrated or grieved, but could not ſet aſide whole rates at once.

Per curiam. Surely the juſtices at ſeſſions, upon an appeal of particular perſons grieved, may, if they ſee cauſe, ſet aſide the rate; for the act is, that if any perſon or perſons find themſelves aggrieved, it ſhall be lawful for the juſtices at the quarter-ſeſſions to make ſuch order therein, as by them ſhall be thought convenient. Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. ſect. 6. And in either of theſe caſes, of the firſt or ſecond rate, the juſtices could not have given relief without ſetting aſide the whole rate, becauſe the rate was burthenſome to a whole ſet of men; and they may make a new rate themſelves, or order the churchwardens and overſeers to make a new rate, as was done in this caſe; they having it in their diſcretion to make a new rate at ſeſſions, or remand it to the churchwardens, &c. to make one. Therefore the orders were confirmed. Vide Salk. vol. 2. page 483.

A poor man was removed from Harrow to Ricelip by an order of two juſtices, which order was confirmed on an appeal to the next ſeſſions, ſo that now he became ſettled at Ricelip; afterwards the pariſhioners of Ricelip diſcovering that Hendon was the place of his ſettlement, got an order from two juſtices to remove him thither; and on a certiorari to remove that order into this court, the queſtion was, whether after an adjudication on an appeal, Ricelip is eſtopped to ſay, that is not the laſt place of his legal ſettlement, and adjudged they are; for if Ricelip had not been the laſt place of his ſettlement, they could not have ſent him there, but he would have been ſent back to Harrow, which was firſt poſſeſſed of him, ſo that this is in effect but the ſame queſtion again, which has been already determined; and there muſt be an end put to it. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 394. Salk. vol. 2. p. 524. Ibid. vol. 3. p. 261. Forteſcue, p. 311.

Hilary, or Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Anonymous.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If H. being ſettled at A. becomes afterwards a vagrant, ſome juſtices have thought that to be a determination of the ſettlement; but I never could think ſo; for if H. be found a vagrant within ſtat. 39 Eliz. c. 24. he may be ſent to the place of his birth; but then by ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. he may be ſent from thence as a poor perſon, to the place of his laſt legal ſettlement; for his being ſent to the place of his birth, ſatisfies ſtat. 39 Eliz. and ſo both the ſtatutes agree. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 319. Salk. vol. 2. p. 525.

Hilary, 11 W. 3. The Pariſh of St. Michael Bedenham, v. The Pariſh of Kingſton-Bowſey.

One H. was ſent by the order of two juſtices from St. Michael Bedenham to Kingſton-Bowſey, and that order was reverſed upon an appeal to the ſeſſions: then the man went to Bedenham, and Bedenham ſent him to D. and a motion was made to quaſh this order, becauſe the order of reverſal upon the appeal as to Kingſton-Bowſey, was concluſive againſt all the world.

But the court held, that the determination upon the appeal between other parties, ought not to bind a third pariſh which was no party. Vide Raym. vol. 1. page 513. Salk. vol. 2. p. 486.

An order was made at the quarter-ſeſſions for the relief of poor priſoners in gaols, and providing materials to ſet them at work, upon the ſtatutes 14 Eliz. c. 5. and 19 Car. 2. c. 4. whereby a ſum was aſſeſſed on the ſeveral pariſhes, not exceeding what is allowed by both acts; but the order was quaſhed, becauſe they ought to have made diſtinct orders on the different ſtatutes, the money to be levied by virtue of each ſtatute being applicable to different purpoſes. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 487.

A ſpecial order of Seſſions was, that H. was bound apprentice, and ſerved ſeven years to a hemp-dreſſer, within the precincts of Bridewell, and afterwards he lived nine years in Clerkenwell pariſh, but gained no ſettlement there: the juſtices ſent him to Bridewell as his laſt legal ſettlement, by an order which ſet forth Bridewell to be an extra-parochial place.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a place is extra-parochial, and has not the face of a pariſh, the juſtices have no authority to ſend any man thither; and ſo it was reſolved in the caſe of Sir John Oſborn: poſſibly a place extra-parochial may be taxed in aid of a pariſh, but a pariſh ſhall not be taxed in aid of that. This is an omitted caſe. Therefore the order was quaſhed. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 549. Salk. vol. 2. p. 486.

The queſtion was on ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 3. which enacts, that an unmarried perſon hired for a year, ſhall not be ſettled, unleſs he ſerves the whole year, whether that extended only to caſes that might happen after the ſtatute, or to ſuch alſo as had happened?

Per curiam. To ſuch only as may happen after the ſtatute. It can have no retroſpect, but declares a law for the future, notwithſtanding the words, declared and enacted. So adjudged on a ſpecial order. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 525.

Trinity, 11 W. 3. The Pariſh of St. Nicholas, Guilford in Surrey, v. The Pariſh of Killington in Suſſex.

The court was moved to quaſh an order of two juſtices to remove a woman and her baſtard child from A. to B. whereas it appeared in the order, that the child was born at C.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The baſtard muſt be kept where it is born. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 485.

Trinity, 11 W. 3. The Caſe of Chriſt's Hoſpital.

A poor child was left in Chriſt Church Hoſpital; upon complaint of the wardens of the hoſpital, two juſtices made an order on the overſeers of the poor of the pariſh, to receive and maintain the child; but this order was quaſhed, becauſe it was not ſaid, that the parents were unknown, or likely to become chargeable to the pariſh; for though a child of three months old be helpleſs, yet the parents are bound to provide for it. As to the principal matter which was hinted, viz. That the hoſpital was bound to provide for poor children there expoſed, the court thought there was nothing in that. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 485.

The court was moved to quaſh an order of ſeſſions, for that the only ground for ſettling a poor perſon in a pariſh appeared on the order to have been, that the bans of matrimony of the poor perſon were publiſhed in the pariſh church; which is ill, for the notice given to the pariſh muſt not only be in writing, but the other ceremonies required by ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. muſt be obſerved, and that ſtatute being an explanatory one, cannot be taken by equity.

A conditional order was made, viz. that in caſe the court of *K. Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. The Pariſh of Bloxom. v. The Pariſh of Kingſton.

An order of ſeſſions, ſetting forth, that the perſon was likely to become chargeable, as we are credibly informed, was quaſhed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. page 323.

Hilary, 12 W. 3. Anonymous.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. There needs no notice to churchwardens of a ſervant's coming into a pariſh to gain a ſettlement, becauſe the juſtices of peace, tho' there had been notice, cannot diſturb him. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 441.

Hilary, 12 W. 3. The Pariſh of Thackham v. The Pariſh of Findon in Suſſex.

A poor perſon was removed in 1694 from Weſt Starring to Findon; whereon Findon did not appeal. In 1700 the man went to Thackham, and Thackham ſent him by order of two juſtices to Findon; Findon appealed, and the order was diſcharged. All three being now brought up by certiorari, it was moved to quaſh the order made on appeal, and urged that Findon was bound by the firſt order from Weſt-Starring to them, from which they never appealed, with reſpect to all the world, and are concluded to ſay, that the place of his laſt legal ſettlement was not with them: but in reſpect of the diſtance of time, the court could not tell but he might have gained a new ſettlement at Thackham, and that might appear to the juſtices, and they might have good ground to diſcharge the order of the two juſtices. Then the council offered to produce an affidavit, that there was no new ſettlement proved; but the court held they could not examine that by affidavit, nor inquire thereby into the reaſon of making the order. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 489.

An order of adjudication of the reputed father of a baſtard child, was held bad for two faults, 1ſt. That it did not appear that one of the juſtices was of the quorum. 2dly. Nor that the examination was by them both. And either of the defects was held to be fatal; but becauſe the defendant was not preſent in court as he ought to have been, the order was only quaſhed niſi. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 392.

Eaſter, 12 W. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of Kirford.

An order was made by two juſtices to remove a man with his wife and family, which order was wholly quaſhed; becauſe the family might have another ſettlement: ſo it would be, if the order was to remove him and his children. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 398.

Trinity, 12 W. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of Marlborough.

A certiorari was directed to the juſtices of ſeſſions to ſend up what orders they had before them; and hereon an order of two juſtices for the removal of a woman ſervant, who was got with child within the year of her ſervice, was certified without ſhewing how it came there.

Per curiam. 1ſt. The order is well removed; for when two juſtices make an order, it is very proper for them to certify it to the ſeſſions, and when they do ſo, the ſeſſions are legally poſſeſſed of it, and it may well be removed from thence hither.

2dly. If a perſon hires a maid-ſervant for a year, and before the year's end ſhe is pregnant, ſhe ſhall not for that be removed, but ſhall ſerve out her time; there ſhall be a year's continual ſervice to make a legal ſettlement for the charging of a pariſh; but till the year be out, none ſhall diſturb the party from ſerving. And ſince ſhe is not removeable within the year, if ſhe leaves her maſter without his conſent, ſhe may be ſent back to her ſervice; but then it is to ſerve her time, and not to charge the pariſh.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. On complaint made to one juſtice of a perſon's being likely to become chargeable to a pariſh, two juſtices may examine and order jointly; but they muſt both join in the examination and order. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 402.

One H. lived ten years in the foreſt of Dean, and then died, and left ſeveral children: two juſtices made an order to remove them to Linton in Herefordſhire.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a place be a reputed pariſh, and has churchwardens and overſeers of the poor, it is within ſtat. 43 Eliz. though in truth it be no pariſh; but if it be merely extra-parochial, as the juſtices cannot ſend to ſuch a place, ſo they cannot ſend from it: as it is exempt from receiving, ſo it ſhall not have the benefit of removing, for they have not proper perſons to complain. Perſons in extra-parochial places muſt ſubſiſt on private charity, as all perſons did at common law before ſtat. 43 Eliz. which enacts, that every pariſh ſhall keep their own poor; in conſequence of which the juriſdiction of removals was firſt ſet up before ſtat. 14 Car. 2. For unleſs the poor were removed to their own pariſhes, every pariſh could not maintain their own poor. But ſtat. 43 Eliz. does not extend to extra-parochial places.

Gould, J. ſtarted a queſtion, whether the juſtices of the county where the pariſh lies, wherein he was laſt legally ſettled, might not make an order upon the pariſh to make a rate for the relief of this poor man in the extra-parochial place, becauſe not having gained a ſettlement there, he remains an inhabitant of that pariſh ſtill, elſe the man may be ſtarved for want of relief?

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Quaſh this order, and then get another order: viz. foraſmuch as H. was ſettled in the pariſh of Liton, and is not able to provide for himſelf, theſe are, &c. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 487.

Trinity, 12 W. 3. The Pariſh of Chalbury v. The Pariſh of Chipping-Farringdon.

One H. was removed by the order of two juſtices, from the pariſh of A. in Warwickſhire, to Chalbury in Oxfordſhire; from thence, by order of two juſtices, to Chipping-Farringdon in Berkſhire. It was objected, that Chalbury ought to have appealed, and got the order upon them diſcharged, to which Holt, Chief Juſtice, agreed; for ſending the poor man to another place, is falſifying the firſt order, which cannot be done but by appeal; for the order of two juſtices is a determination of the right againſt all perſons, till it be reverſed: Chalbury ſhould have appealed from the Warwickſhire order, and got that ſet aſide, and ſent the man back thither, and the juſtices there ſhould have ſent him to Chipping-Farringdon; therefore the order is naught. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 488.

Trinity, 12 W. 3. The Inhabitants of Ware v. The Pariſh of Stanſtead-Mount-Fitchet.

An order was made by two juſtices, to remove one H. with his wife and children, from Ware in the county of Eſſex, to Stanſtead in the ſame county. The following exceptions were taken to this order:

1ſt, Becauſe it was ſaid, with his wife and children.

2dly, Becauſe it was ſaid, It appears upon examination before us, or one of us, &c. and the examination ought to be before both, becauſe both are to make the judgment of removal. The council would have diſtinguiſhed this, as to the firſt exception, from the caſe of Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. becauſe he might have ſervants not removeable, but children ought to follow their parents. To the ſecond he ſaid, that by ſtat. 14 Car. 2. c. 12. the complaint is directed to be made to any juſtice, and in conſequence one juſtice may examine; and it was only neceſſary that two ſhould join in removing.

To the firſt point Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, ſuppoſe H. had put his ſon out to ſervice at ſixteen years old at B. and accordingly he had ſerved there a year, and after the father comes to live at B. himſelf, and the ſon to live with him; ſuch an order would remove the ſon, though he be not removeable.

To the ſecond, Gould, Juſtice, ſaid, the ſtatute directed, and the practice was, to make complaint to one juſtice, and he grants his warrant to bring the poor man before two juſtices, and then they two examine and remove. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 488.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of Long-Critchell, or Long-Crickhill.

A man was removed from the pariſh of Allhallows to the pariſh of Long-Critchell. He went from Long-Critchell to P They got ſeveral orders from two juſtices, by way of execution of the firſt order, to remove him from P. to Long-Critchell. But all of them were quaſhed, becauſe P. ought to have made an original complaint, and upon that have got an order, and not have grafted on the order of removal from A. to Long-Critchell, though they might have uſed that as evidence to induce the juſtices to make ſuch original order; for P. is a third pariſh, againſt which Long-Chritchell is not bound by the order of removal from Alhallows to Long-Critchell, but may conteſt the right of ſettlement with them. An exception was then taken, that the enforcing orders did not appear to be made by two juſtices, one of the quorum.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſeemed to think that a good exception, becauſe ſuch perſons as cannot make an order, cannot execute it: but the orders were quaſhed upon the firſt reaſon. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 419. Salk. vol. 2. p. 489.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. An order of juſtices of peace, whereby the churchwardens were ordered to pay a ſcrivener 5 l. due to him for drawing indentures for ſetting out poor children to trades, was quaſhed, as being a thing out of their power; but the way had been, to order a pariſh rate for levying ſo much a week till a convenient ſum was raiſed; and in that caſe, as ſoon as the money was raiſed, an action could not lie for the ſcrivener againſt the churchwardens. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 417.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. Mayfield v. Heathfield.

An order for removing E. A. and four children from Mayfield to Heathfield; an order of ſeſſions on appeal was made, making mention of the woman and her four children, and it diſcharged the order of the two juſtices; it was moved by the pariſh of Mayfield to quaſh their own order of two juſtices, for not ſaying her children.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, would not quaſh the order of the juſtices, becauſe it was vacated by the juſtices in ſeſſions; he held it was naught; but the order is now gone: and ſo the order of ſeſſions was confirmed. The order of ſeſſions only quaſhed the order of two juſtices, but no other adjudication in order to ſend them to Mayfield. Vide Forteſcue, p. 307.

An exception was taken to an order of ſeſſions, which was, to remove a child to the place of his mother's ſettlement, and it was ſet forth he was an infant, but did not ſay his laſt ſettlement, and though he was an infant, yet he might gain a ſettlement of himſelf; accordingly the order was quaſhed. Vide Forteſcue, page 307.

—— 12 W. 3. The King v. Saxmundham.

Adjudged, That a child of a former huſband, where a woman is married to another, though but a year old, cannot gain a ſettlement where its mother goes with the ſecond huſband, but ſhall only go there for nurture, but muſt be maintained by the pariſh where the child's father had a ſettlement. The King v. Gregory.

An order was made by the juſtices of peace for the defendant to pay 40 s. for wages, generally; and becauſe it was not ſaid for what wages, the court was moved to quaſh it; for they can only ſettle wages in huſbandry.

The Caſe of Sylvanus Johnſon.

The juſtices of Suſſex, on complaint that Johnſon was come into the pariſh of Brood, in the ſaid county, and was likely to become chargeable to the ſaid pariſh, and adjudging Sandhurſt in Kent to be his laſt legal ſettlement, ordered that Johnſon, and his wife and family, ſhould be removed to Sandhurſt; which was quaſhed; becauſe it does not appear what is meant by his family, and ſome of them may have a legal ſettlement at Brood, though Johnſon himſelf had not. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 485.

An order of ſeſſions made on an appeal from a poor's rate, being removed into this court by certiorari, the caſe was, on September 11, 1665, a certain rate was agreed to by the inhabitants of the pariſh of Audly; which had been followed ever ſince till the laſt year, when a new rate was made. On appeal to the ſeſſions the new rate was quaſhed, and the old one ordered to ſtand: and now it was objected, that it did not appear this was a poor's rate, being called a pariſh-levy, which might be as well for the church as the poor, and then the juſtices had no juriſdiction.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Twiſden, C. J. uſed to ſay, if a particular juriſdiction does not ſhew the Matter to be within its authority, it muſt be taken to be out of it. Another exception was taken, viz. that the whole rate could not be quaſhed at the complaint of one man; and alſo that the old rate, however juſt at firſt, might not be unequal now, and therefore the juſtices could not make a ſtanding rate; which laſt exception was allowed; for lands may be improved. By ſtat. 43 Eliz. the rate muſt be equal; therefore it ought to be continually altered, as circumſtances alter. The juſtices could not confirm an old rate, and in that caſe their order is naught: and the Chief Juſtice obſerved, that though the juſtices at ſeſſions need not give a reaſon for their order; yet if they give a reaſon which is wrong, we muſt be guided by it, and quaſh the order, becauſe it appears to us to be their reaſon. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 525.

An order made to remove a woman and her children to the place of the huſband's laſt legal ſettlement, was held bad as to the children, for they might have a legal ſettlement different from the huſband, but it might ſtand as to the wife.

To this order another exception taken, viz. that there was no adjudication that any of them were likely to become chargeable to the pariſh from whence they were removed; and though it was ſaid they came to ſettle here contrary to law, yet, for the laſt exception, the order was quaſhed in the whole. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 667.

An order of two juſtices, made for the removal of a poor perſon, was quaſhed at the quarter ſeſſions, and before the poor perſon came back, the pariſh, whoſe order was quaſhed, made a new order to fix him in another place.

Per curiam. It cannot be good, becauſe a new order ought not to have been made till the party was returned; and if that order had been confirmed here, it would not have made it good, becauſe it was merely void. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 633.

An order of juſtices, in which it was ſaid that he may become chargeable, was quaſhed. Vide Forteſcue, p. 314.

Hilary, or Michaelmas, 13 W. 3. Mynton Pariſh v. Stony Stratford: or The King v. The Pariſh of Minton.

A poor man was ſent by an order of two juſtices to Mynton, and on an appeal to the ſeſſions, the order was diſcharged; then by another order of two juſtices, he was ſent to Stony Stratford, and on an appeal to the ſeſſions, that order was confirmed: afterwards he was by another order of two juſtices, ſent to Mynton again.

Per curiam. This laſt order is illegal.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Where an order is diſcharged on an appeal, it binds only between the contending pariſhes, but where an order is confirmed on an appeal, it is concluſive to all parties, for it is an adjudication, that the place to which he was ſent is the laſt place of his legal ſettlement, which can never be avoided but by the pariſh againſt whom it was made; and that a pariſh in reputation is chargeable, if it has officers, as churchwardens, &c. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 668. Salk. vol. 3. p. 260.

An original order of ſeſſions was made on him to diſcharge his apprentice, purſuant to ſtat. 5 Eliz. c. 4. ſect. 35. and alſo to refund ſome of the money he had received with him.

It was objected, 1ſt. That they had no power by the ſtatute to order him to refund the money, but only to diſcharge the apprentice; and that on an enrollment of the diſcharge the indentures were defeated.

But it was ruled, that clearly they had power to award reſtitution by neceſſary conſequence; for ſuppoſe the apprentice had given a conſiderable ſum, and had ſerved but two months.

2dly. It was objected, that they had no power to make an order, but on the appearance of the maſter on being ſummoned, which is not ſhewn to have been done here.

To which it was anſwered, that the words are indeed, that they ſhall make an order on appearance, but it would be hard to conſtrue it that they ſhall not meddle if the maſter will not appear, for then he would take the advantage of his own wrong; but it ought to appear that he was ſummoned, or warned to appear.

3dly. It was excepted, that it appeared that this was originally begun at the ſeſſions, whereas they have no juriſdiction till after application to the principal magiſtrate of the corporation, or to a juſtice of peace.

And of this opinion was Holt, Chief Juſtice; but on conſideration, that the precedents tended the other way, the order was confirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 498. Salk. vol. 2. p. 490.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. The Pariſh of Watford v. The Pariſh of Wendover.

Two juſtices of St. Albans made an order, that whereas they were credibly informed, that Wendover was the place of H's laſt legal ſettlement, but no where adjudged it to be ſo; from this order there was an appeal to the quarter ſeſſions of St. Albans, where it was confirmed; and afterwards both were quaſhed; the firſt, becauſe there was no adjudication of what was the place of his laſt legal ſettlement; and the ſecond, becauſe the appeal ought to have been to the ſeſſions of the county, not of the corporation; and as it was, it was before no judge. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 490.

An exception was taken to an order of two juſtices, becauſe it was only ſaid to be complained of by the churchwardens, that the perſon removed was likely to become chargeable, but not adjudged ſo by the juſtices.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that the juſtices cannot remove a man, unleſs he be likely to become chargeable, for otherwiſe they might remove a man of real property; and he made a diſtinction, that where the order is, Whereas it appears to us, &c. on the complaint, &c. that J. S. is likely to become chargeable to the pariſh, that will be well enough; but where it is, as here, Whereas complaint has been made, &c. that is ill: but it was agreed to be referred to the judge of aſſize. Afterwards, Eaſter, 2 Ann. The caſe of the inhabitants of Darnall in Cheſhire, the ſame point was reſolved. It ought to appear, that the perſon removed, is a perſon removeable, and there ought to be a particular averment, that he is likely to become chargeable. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 491.

Trinity, 13 W. 3. Anonymous.

Per curiam. If an order of two juſtices be quaſhed here, an order of ſeſſions confirming that order, falls of courſe; for the juſtices at ſeſſions have not power to make an original order.

And if an order of juſtices for the removal of a poor perſon be confirmed on appeal, the appellants are for ever concluded from diſcharging themſelves of that poor perſon as to all places; for if another pariſh than that from which he is ſent to them by the two juſtices, be the laſt place of his legal ſettlement, they may ſend him there by order of two juſtices to be made for that purpoſe; or on an appeal another place being the laſt place of his legal ſettlement, may be given in evidence at the ſeſſions.

Note. A perſon cannot be removed to an extra-parochial place. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 548.

Trinity, 13 W. 3 Minchamp's Caſe.

He being a merchant at Mile-End, two juſtices bound a poor girl apprentice to him; he appealed to the ſeſſions, and the order was diſcharged; becauſe they thought it unfit to compel a merchant to take an apprentice; and now this court, on conſideration of the matter, confirmed the order of ſeſſions; becauſe the late act having made perſons compellable to take apprentices, and given an appeal to the ſeſſions, it was in the diſcretion of the juſtices at ſeſſions to determine, whether it was, or was not fittting to put an apprentice upon any one; and therefore the court would not diſturb what the ſeſſions had done, but confirmed the order. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 491.

Michaelmas, 13 W. 3. The Pariſh of St. Andrew Underſhaft in London v. Jacob Mendez de Breta.

The defendant, being a Jew, had an only daughter, who embraced Chriſtianity, whereon he turned her out of doors, and refuſed to allow her any maintenance. On which complaint was made to the juſtices at their general quarter-ſeſſions, where they, reciting that ſhe was the defendant's daughter, and that he was a man able to maintain her, made an order, that the defendant (who was very rich) ſhould allow her 20 s. per month for her maintenance, under the penalty of 12 l. and founded their order on ſtat. 43 Eliz.

The court was moved to quaſh this order, when it was urged, that the juſtices had not any juriſdiction to make ſuch an order, it not being within the ſaid ſtatute, becauſe it was not alledged that ſhe was poor, or likely to become chargeable to the pariſh. And accordingly the order was quaſhed. Vide Raym. vol. 1. page 699.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Five juſtices of the peace are too many to join in an order for ſettling a poor perſon; for they may well make a majority at the ſeſſions, and ſo confirm their own order. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 559.

Harriſon v. Lewis.

The court was moved to quaſh an order made at the quarter-ſeſſions in Coventry: the caſe was, Lewis, with his wife and children, were ſettled in the pariſh of A. and from thence they removed to the pariſh of B. where the huſband gained a ſettlement; but the pariſh of A. having given a certificate to the pariſh of B. that they (the ſaid pariſh of A.) would receive them again whenever Lewis ſhould become chargeable to B. and he now being chargeable, they obtained an order from two juſtices to ſend him and his wife and children to A. again; which order was confirmed upon an appeal to the ſeſſions, and he was ſent thither accordingly; but the order was by this court quaſhed: for though it was according to the agreement made between the two pariſhes, yet a private agreement in this caſe ſhall not alter the law. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 253.

An order was made for removing one E. C. who was hired in Aſhton for a year, as a ſervant, and ſerved there ſix months, and then the maſter removed into Silveſter, where ſhe ſerved out the year.

The queſtion was where ſhe was ſettled.

Per curiam. She was ſettled at the laſt place.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. She could not be ſent from her ſervice before the ſtatute; if ſhe was hired for a year, and ſtayed there forty days, ſhe was ſettled. A man is an hired ſervant in every place where his maſter goes, if he ſtays forty days, for he is hired to ſerve him the whole year; ſuch ſervice is a ſervice for a year on the ſame contract, and the continuance was to be forty days; for then he could not be removed; and there is no difference between unremoveable and ſettled. Like the caſe of one Edgar, who had a ſmall copyhold, his children could not be ſent away, and if he could not be ſent away, he was ſettled. Vide Forteſcue, p. 308.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, that where juſtices remove a woman big with child from A. to B. and ſhe is brought to bed in B. before the order can be quaſhed, and afterwards it is quaſhed; A. ſhall maintain the child, becauſe A. ſhall not take advantage of their own wrong, the order being illegal. Vide Forteſcue, p. 315.

The Pariſh of Kentis-Beer v. The Pariſh of Halberton.

An order recited, that Halberton had notice, and that Kentis-Beer prevented the appeal, but the other did not appear, and that the pariſh of Halberton not appearing, the poor perſon was for ever ſettled in Kentis-Beer.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. I put it on the overſeers not appearing; they have made default; to what purpoſe was it to give evidence, when nobody was there to defend? So the order of ſeſſions muſt be affirmed. Vide Forteſcue, p. 308.

The King v. The Pariſh of St. Nicholas in Abingdon.

One D. was an inhabitant of the pariſh of St. Helens, in Abingdon, where he had four Children, and removed from thence into the pariſh of St. Nicholas, where he lived ſome time, and was taxed to the poor there, but was removed back to St. Helens before he paid the tax, and there he died; afterwards his children were by order of the juſtices removed into the pariſh of St. Nicholas, for that their father had gained a ſettlement there, by being taxed to the poor, and this by ſtat. 3 & 4 W. 3.

Per curiam. There muſt be a paying as well as taxing, to make a ſettlement by that ſtatute. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 252.

The King v. The Inhabitants of Winſly.

One M. T. a poor woman, was, by the order of two juſtices, removed from Beverley to Knaveſborough in the Weſt-Riding of Yorkſhire, that being adjudged by them to be the laſt place of her legal ſettlement: Knaveſborough appealed to the next ſeſſions, and thereon an order was made, reciting the difference between Beverley and Knaveſborough, but that it appeared to them, that this woman was laſt legally ſettled at Winſly, which was a third pariſh not concerned before, and ſo ſhe was by that order removed to Winſly; but it was quaſhed, becauſe the ſeſſions had no juriſdiction, but only to affirm or reverſe the order between the contending pariſhes, and not to make an order to charge a third pariſh. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 254.

Scrivenham Pariſh v. The Pariſh of St. Nicholas.

An order to remove a poor perſon was quaſhed, becauſe it was not ſaid, that he was poor, or likely to become chargeable to the pariſh, &c. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 255.

Luckington v. St. Auſtin's Pariſh.

The caſe was, one S. H. was ſettled at L. in Wilts, but afterwards he and his wife came into the pariſh of St. A. in Briſtol, where he lived ſome time, and had a child born there, which child was now under the age of ſeven years; the father went to ſea, and there died, the mother returned to L. and there ſhe died; two juſtices made an order to ſend the child to L. that being the place where the father was ſettled, which order was confirmed upon an appeal; but the court was moved to quaſh this order of ſeſſions, becauſe the child muſt be ſent to the place where it was born, unleſs it can be ſent to his parents, where they are ſettled, which could not be done in this caſe, becauſe they were both dead. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 257.

A poor man was ſent by two juſtices to Shensfield, and on an appeal the order was confirmed; afterwards Shensfield ſent him by an order to Swanſcomb: theſe orders being brought up by certiorari, the order to ſend him to Swanſcomb was quaſhed, becauſe by the determination of the juſtices in affirmance of the order on the appeal, the pariſh of Shensfield was eſtopped againſt all the world to ſay, that was not the place of his laſt legal ſettlement, for the juſtices cannot remove but to the place of the laſt legal ſettlement; and ſhewing any place of ſettlement will diſcharge the order on the appeal; and the diſtinction is between an order diſcharged and an order confirmed on appeal, or not appealed from. In the firſt caſe, the matter is at large as to all places, but the place to which the poor man was ſent, which, on the appeal, was determined not to be the place of his laſt legal ſettlement. But in the latter caſe, the place to which he was ſent is bound, and the order final and concluſive as to all the world. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 492.

Eaſter, 1 or 2 Ann. The Pariſh of Farringdon in Berks v. The Pariſh of Wilcot or Witty in Oxfordſhire.

A ſervant came into the pariſh of S. was hired for a year, and having ſerved half a year of the time, married a woman in the pariſh of Witty; and the queſtion was, 1ſt, Whether the juſtices, on complaint of the churchwardens, could make an order to remove him to the place of his laſt legal ſettlement? 2dly, Whether his ſerving here would not gain a ſettlement? To the firſt point it was admitted, that the contract between the maſter and ſervant was not diſſolved by the marriage; and that admitting it might be diſſolved by an order made on complaint of the maſter, yet without that, and upon complaint of the officers only, it could not be diſſolved.

Powell, Juſtice, contra. That an order to diſturb him and not remove him, was not within the meaning of the act; diſturbing him, without power to remove, is vain; and this does not unſettle, nor is like the caſe of forty days ſettlement. 2dly, It was queſtioned, whether ſuch a ſtay, &c. would gain a ſettlement; becauſe the ſtatute makes the party's being unmarried a qualification as well as his ſtay, viz. if any ſuch perſon, being unmarried, being hired, &c. ſuch ſervice, &c. So that the words ſuch ſervice go to all, not only the ſtay, but the ſtate of the party.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Such is only ſuch ſervice, and the marriage does not hinder the ſervice; the contract continues; and ſuppoſe the woman he marries be of the ſame pariſh, ſhall not that gain a ſettlement? Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 528, 529.

Trinity, 1 Ann. The Pariſh of All-Saints v. The Pariſh of St. Giles in Northampton.

On an appeal a ſpecial order was made, and the caſe was; a perſon was born at A. came and lived at B. ſome years, but never gained any ſettlement there; then he removed to C. for convenience of getting his livelihood, and B. gave him a certificate according to the late act. The man became chargeable, and was ſent back to B. who found that he was laſt legally ſettled at A. and ſent him thither.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The reaſon of the act of parliament about certificates, was only to encourage pariſhes were minded to go, to receive them; and therefore it enacts, that when the poor perſon ſhall be chargeable, the pariſh which gave the certificate ſhall receive and provide for him as a ſettled inhabitant, which words lay an obligation on the pariſh which gave him the certificate to receive and provide for him againſt that pariſh which they gave the certificate to. But as to all other pariſhes, they are as they were before, for the concluſion is only by reaſon of the words of the act of parliament, which extend only to the pariſh to which he was ſent; by conſequence the concluſion can extend no farther.

Powell, Juſtice, concurred with the Chief Juſtice. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 531.

A man who was ſettled at Cumner, having ſeveral children born in that pariſh, afterwards removed to Milton with his children, and rented a farm of 10 l. per annum there, by which he gained a ſettlement in the pariſh of Milton, and becoming very poor, his children born in Cumner were, by an order of two juſtices, ſent thither, (viz.) thoſe who were under ſeven years old, the juſtices apprehending that the place of their birth was the place of their lawful ſettlement, and this order being removed into this court by certiorari, it was inſiſted to maintain the order, that the children had gained a ſettlement in Cumner by birth, which was not altered or defeated by any ſubſequent act of their father, in gaining a ſettlement at Milton, for his children were with him there only as nurſe-children, and his ſettlement ſhall not be the ſettlement of his children.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The place where a baſtard is born is the place of his ſettlement, unleſs there is ſome trick to charge the pariſh; but the place where legitimate children are born is not the place of their ſettlement, for let that be where it will, the children are ſettled where their parents are ſettled; as for inſtance, if the father is ſettled in the pariſh of H. but goes to work in the pariſh of B. and before he gains any ſettlement there, has a ſon born in the pariſh of B. and then dies, this child ſhall be ſent to the pariſh of H. for it is not the birth, but the ſettlement of the father that makes the ſettlement of the child; and if the father has gained a new ſettlement for himſelf (as he had done in the preſent caſe) he has likewiſe gained a new ſettlement for his children, who do not go with him to his new ſettlement as nurſe-children, but as part of his family: and to what purpoſe is the father, upon coming into a new pariſh, to give notice of the number of his family, but only upon a ſuppoſition that they may gain a ſettlement there: but if a man is ſettled in the pariſh of H. and has children born there, and dies, and afterwards the mother of theſe children marries a huſband, who is ſettled in another pariſh, the children ſhall go along with her, not as part of her family, but as nurſe-children, to be maintained at the charge of the pariſh where they were born, and where their father, whilſt living, was ſettled, and to that pariſh they may be ſent after ſeven years old, as to the place of their lawful ſettlement; for this accidental ſettlement of their mother, which was only by the marriage with a ſecond huſband, whereby ſhe is now become one perſon with him, ſhall not gain a ſettlement for her children. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 259.

An order of two juſtices was made to remove a man and his two children from the pariſh of C. where he might become chargeable, he not having rented a tenement of 10 l. a year.

The court held, that ſaying he might become chargeable was not well; but it ſhould have been, that they were likely to become chargeable: but that ſaying he had not rented a tenement of 10 l. a year was ſufficient.

It was held bad as to the children, for they are only removeable as perſons not ſettled and likely to become chargeable, or ſo young as they are not able to provide vide for themſelves; wherefore the order was quaſhed as to the children. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 54.

An order of two juſtices made for diſcharging an apprentice on ſtat. 5 Eliz. was quaſhed, it not being ſigned by them as that ſtatute requires: and it was ſaid by the council, that one piece of wax might be the ſeveral ſeal of ſeveral people, by their putting their ſeals on it ſeverally. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 1 Ann. The Queen v. Aberford-Eaſt.

An original order made at the general quarter ſeſſions for the Weſt Riding of Yorkſhire, was removed into this court by certiorari; the tenor of which was as follows: "It is ordered that the churchwardens and
" overſeers of the poor of the pariſh of Aberford do
" make an aſſeſſment to the church and poor by a
" pound rate, and in the ſaid aſſeſſment do aſſeſs Graſtonfield lands, and all other lands within the ſaid
" conſtabulary to the uſe aforeſaid by a pound rate."

The court was moved to quaſh this order, becauſe the juſtices have not any juriſdiction to make ſuch original order at the quarter ſeſſions, though it had been otherwiſe if it had come before them by appeal. And a day was given to hear council on both ſides. At which day nobody appearing to maintain the order,

It was quaſhed by Powell, Powys, and Gould, Juſtices. Holt, Chief Juſtice, abſent. Powell, J. ſaying it was impoſſible to make it good. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 798.

A woman big with child was removed by order of the juſtices from Weſtbury to Coſton, and pending the order, before the next quarter-ſeſſions, ſhe was delivered of a baſtard child: Coſton appealed, and thereupon the order of the two juſtices was reverſed; but the child was ſent back to Coſton, as the place of its birth.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Though there be no fraud, here was a wrongful removal, and the reverſal makes all void from the beginning: fraud, or not fraud, is not material in this caſe; but the ſettlement of the child depends on the removal, for if that was wrong, they ſhall not eaſe themſelves by it. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 532.

A pariſhioner of the pariſh of A. came to B. with a certificate, according to the late act of parliament; and the juſtices reciting that matter, and becauſe he was likely to become chargeable to B. ſent him back to A. It was moved to quaſh the order, becauſe he was not removeable till he was actually chargeable by the expreſs words of ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 30.

Per curiam. Let the order be quaſhed, niſi.

Powell, Juſtice, contra. If there was a fault in the certificate, it ought to appear to be the reaſon why he was ſent back, and the juſtices at their ſeſſions have not a juriſdiction by way of appeal on ſuch a certificate. Vide Salk vol. 2. p. 530.

A juſtice of peace was ſurveyor of the highway, and a matter which concerned his office coming in queſtion at the ſeſſions, he joined in making the order, and his name was put in the caption.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. A man took part of an houſe in the pariſh of D. and was rated as an inhabitant of that pariſh, &c. and a diſtreſs was made for that rate; an in replevin it was held, by Holt, Chief Juſtice, that if two houſes are inhabited by two families, and there is but one common door where both enter, yet, in reſpect of their original, which is ſeveral, they continue ſeveral houſes, and are ſeverally rateable to the poor; and if one family goes away, the part where he dwelt ſhall be taken as an empty houſe; but if one houſe is divided by partitions, and inhabited by ſeveral families; as for example, if the owner dwells in one part, and a ſtranger in another part, theſe are likewiſe ſeveral tenements, and the inhabitants thereof ſeverally rateable to the poor whilſt they dwell in theſe ſeveral tenements; but if the ſtranger removes out of his part, and his family goes away, then the whole becomes an entire tenement, and the poſſeſſion thereof is devolved on the owner, and he is rateable for the whole as one tenement, &c. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 260.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. The Pariſh of St. Andrew's Holborn v. The Pariſh of St. Clement's Danes.

The court of quarter ſeſſions of Middleſex made an order, and afterwards the ſame ſeſſions vacated it by a ſubſequent order, and a certiorari being brought, both orders were returned thereon.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. You ſhould not have returned the vacated order, but only the latter. This is as if we, diſliking our judgment, ſhould the ſame term make an entry of two different judgments, and return both on a writ of error, which ought not to be: the ſeſſions is all one day, and the juſtices may alter their judgments at any time, while it continues: thus, at the Old Bailey, you ſee judgment de pain forte & dure given; and yet, if the party will plead, we will ſet aſide that judgment, and admit him to plead. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 494.

On an order of ſeſſions made to remove a child, which was inſiſted to be a baſtard, though born in lawful matrimony, becauſe the man and his wife were divorced by the Spiritual Court.

Per curiam. It is a baſtard; for being divorced we will not intend that the man and wife had been together unleſs it had appeared not to be ſo; and it was held to be a good order, though it did not ſay they did not come together. Vide Forteſcue, p. 315.

Hilary, 4 Ann. The Pariſh of St. Bride v. The Pariſh of St. Saviour's.

A poor perſon was ſent from St. Bride's in London to St. Saviour's in Southwark, and on an appeal a ſpecial order was made: the caſe was, B. was bound apprentice for four years to J. S. and lived out theſe four years at St. Bride's with him; J. S. was only a lodger, and had no ſettlement there.

And the court held, that the apprentice was well ſettled in St. Bride's, for he was not a perſon removeable, nor does his ſettlement depend on his maſter, as that of a wife on her huſband; but he gains a ſettlement for himſelf within ſtat. 14 Car. 2. by forty days inhabitation, and ſo of a hired ſervant; but the matter went off upon another exception. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 533.

Michaelmas, 4 Ann. The Queen v. Whiten.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions on a ſettlement, for that it was not in the order, that they adjudged him to be laſt ſettled in ſuch a pariſh, which he came from:

The court held it not neceſſary ſo to adjudge it; but it not appearing in the order that he had been chargeable to a pariſh, but only, that whereas he was likely to become chargeable, the court quaſhed it; for by the certificate the pariſh is bound to receive him, and cannot remove him till he becomes chargeable actually. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 64.

Michaelmas, 4 Ann. The Queen v. Hedges.

An order was made at the quarter-ſeſſions upon appeal: the caſe was, Hedges, an overſeer of the poor, accounted before two juſtices, and this account was allowed; the pariſh appealed to the quarter-ſeſſions from this allowance, and they diſallowed the account, and ordered him to pay ſo much over, which they adjudged to be in his hands; and for not doing this, they committed him. On a motion to quaſh this order, becauſe by ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. ſect. 4. they ſhould have levied the arrears by diſtreſs and ſale, and in default of diſtreſs have committed him: the whole court agreed, that the juſtices at the ſeſſions upon the appeal muſt execute their judgment in the ſame manner as the two juſtices muſt do, and that the two juſtices muſt have ſent their proceſs to diſtrain, and on a return that there was no diſtreſs, ſhould have committed him. Then it was moved, that it might be only quaſhed as to this part; but not allowed: then it was further objected, that the firſt order, as recited in the order of appeal for the allowance of the account, was not by two juſtices, one of whom was of the quorum; but not allowed.

Per curiam. We cannot judge of that upon recital, ſo as that you may take advantage of it; you muſt bring in that order by certiorari. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 533.

Hilary, 5 Ann. The Queen v. The Inhabitants of Barkin, and the Hamlets of Donneſdon and Needham in the ſame Pariſh.

On quaſhing of ſeveral orders made relating to the poor's rate, the following queſtion was ſubmitted, by conſent, to the opinion of the judges of this court, viz. "whether a farmer for his ſtock ſhall not be chargeable to the poor's rate, as well as a tradeſman for his ſtock in trade."

Powell, Powys, and Gould, Juſtices, were of opinion, that a farmer for his ſtock was not taxeable, contrary to the opinion of Holt, Chief Juſtice. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1280.

Eaſter, 5 Ann. Jenkins's Caſe.

An order of ſeſſions was made, that the defendant ſhould pay 2 s. per week towards the ſupport of his father, till that court ſhould order the contrary; which was held good, becauſe it was indefinite and no ſet time limited; and if an eſtate happened to fall to him, they might apply to the juſtices; otherwiſe if a time was limited. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 534.

A ſpecial order was made, wherein the caſe was; H. being a poor perſon went to Buckingham, where he took part of a houſe of W. T. at 3 l. per annum, and inſiſted when he took this apartment, that he would pay no taxes for it, but that the leſſor ſhould; this was agreed to, his rent being the more and the greater on that account: this appeared upon evidence, and alſo that this apartment before the taking, and while he continued in it, was diſtinct from the reſt of the houſe, without communication, and was taxed as a houſe of itſelf, and that the tax was laid upon W. T. the leſſor; and that while H. lived there he took up his freedom in the corporation, and once voted as a freeman at the election of bailiffs for the corporation. The juſtices at the quarter-ſeſſions adjudged this to be a good ſettlement; but on motion it was quaſhed. It was inſiſted, that ſince the explanatory ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. nothing makes a ſettlement within that ſtatute which does not come within the words; an explanatory act implying a negative of every thing elſe.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, and Powell, Juſtice. The coming into a pariſh, and being taxed by the pariſh, makes a good ſettlement without a notice in writing, within ſtat. Jac. 2. But the law is altered by ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. and as to his voting, we cannot take notice that it implied a ſettlement; for a bare reſidence might, by the conſtitution of the corporation, intitle him to that, and his voting was an act that related to the corporation, and not to the pariſh. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 534.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions, it was excepted, that it did not appear that there was any complaint of the overſeers, only A. B. &c. one of the quorum, do order, &c.

Per curiam. The juſtices have no power but on complaint of the overſeers; therefore the order muſt be quaſhed.

Alſo a like order of ſeſſions in the caſe of The Queen v. The Inhabitants of Crediton, was quaſhed for the ſame reaſon. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 222.

Michaelmas, 8 Ann. The Queen v. Cecil.

The court was moved to quaſh an order of ſeſſions, made on the defendant to pay one J. Y. his ſervant in huſbandry 7 l. for wages; to which order the two following exceptions were taken:

1ſt. That Y. was a covenant ſervant, and the ſtatute does not extend to covenant ſervants.

2dly. That by the order, it appears to be made on the oath of the ſervant.

Powell, Juſtice, ſaid, that as to the firſt exception, the ſtatute having always had a favourable conſtruction, has been extended to covenant ſervants in huſbandry.

As to the ſecond, he ſaid it would be hard to charge the maſter on the oath of his ſervant on a private contract or covenant between them, and that it is againſt a rule of law, that any perſon ſhould be a witneſs in his own cauſe; and the ſtatute not directing that the ſervant's oath ſhould be taken in this cauſe, the juſtices ſhould have proceeded according to the rules of law. But the matter was adjourned.

And on the laſt day of the term it being moved again, and the laſt exception urged a ſecond time,

Powell, Juſtice. The oath of the party has been allowed ſometimes in caſe of neceſſity, but there is no neceſſity in this caſe, for there might have been evidence of the ſervice.

To which Powys and Gould, Juſtice, agreed; wherefore the order was quaſhed. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1305. Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 266.

On an appeal to the ſeſſions, that court diſcharged the firſt order, and now this court was moved to ſet aſide the order of diſcharge, becauſe the juſtices did not ſay whether they diſcharged it for form, or on the merits; for if it was for form, the pariſh is not bound; but if on the merits, the pariſh in conſequence is hereby diſcharged for ever.

Per curiam. The juſtices are not bound to expreſs the reaſon of their judgment in the judgment, no more than other courts; and if it was otherwiſe held in the late Chief Juſtice's time, it paſt without due conſideration. The reaſon of their judgment muſt be collected from the record; as where judgment is arreſted on an inſufficient indictment.

If the ſeſſions reverſe the firſt order, and that being removed appears not to be good, we muſt intend it was reverſed for form, and affirm the order of reverſal.

So if the ſeſſions affirm the firſt order, and that appears to be good, we muſt affirm the order of ſeſſions.

But if the firſt order appears bad, and the ſeſſions affirm it, this court muſt reverſe it, becauſe it appears bad. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 607.

It appeared by a ſpecial order, that a perſon hired a ſervant to live at Ridgwick for half a year, and after that the ſervant was hired again to live there for another half year with the ſame perſon, and thereupon ſerved a year in one continued entire ſervice, but by ſeveral hirings: it was urged, that here was a ſervice for a year, and a hiring for a year, though by ſeveral contracts; and that the hiring need not be by one entire contract, and that ſo it had been held.

Per curiam. It ought to be one entire contract, and one entire ſervice; the one is required by the ſtatute, as well as the other. If a ſervice under ſeveral contracts ſhall gain a ſettlement, a perſon who ſerves by the month, by the week, or by the day, may, if he continues a year, gain a ſettlement; one may hire by the day for charity; but there is danger of being chargeable in hiring ſuch a perſon by the year: for ſuch a term as a year it is not ſuppoſed a maſter would hire one, unleſs able of body, and ſo a perſon not likely to become chargeable. Alſo the Chief Juſtice obſerved, that by ſtat. Eliz. the retainer of ſervants was for a year; that ſtat. 14 Car. 2. requires forty days ſtay, and that this was inconvenient, for by gaining a ſettlement in forty days, ſervants grew inſolent; and that theſe latter ſtatutes, viz. 3 & 4 W. 3. c. 11. and 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 30. only turn the forty days into a year's ſervice, and the hiring to be a retainer for a year according to the ſtatute of Eliz. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 535.

One H. came to Honiton with a certificate from the pariſh of A. after this he went to the pariſh of B. and now being ſent to the pariſh of A. the ſaid pariſh offered to prove that he was ſettled at the pariſh of St. Mary-Axe; and the queſtion was, whether A. was bound by the certificate as to Honiton only, or concluded as to all pariſhes whatſoever?

Per curiam. Before the ſtatute a certificate was only an evidence of a private undertaking between the pariſhes, in the nature of a contract; but now it is a ſolemn acknowledgment, like the conuzance of a fine; and thereby the party is owned to be legally ſettled there, and that they will provide for him; and as all other pariſhes on this certificate are bound to receive him, ſo the pariſh that certifies is concluded as to all other pariſhes. And there is no reaſon why it ſhould differ from an adjudication, ſince this is the acknowledgment of the pariſh ſigned by the proper officers, and made before two juſtices of peace, who are proper judges, and upon leſs evidence could have adjudged it a ſettlement, by which ſentence all parties would be bound, and there is no remedy but to repeal it. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 536.

An order was drawn up ſpecially for the opinion of the court; and the queſtion was, whether one appointed clerk of the pariſh by the parſon, and executing the office for a year, ſhould gain a legal ſettlement within ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. of which the words are, viz. ſhall execute any annual office or charge? For it was objected, that this was not an annual office.

Powell, Juſtice. His being put in by the parſon makes no difference, no more than where the conſtable is put in by the leet, and not by the pariſh; it is more than an annual office, he is not removeable, and has fees.

Eyre, Juſtice. He is but a ſervant to the parſon at will: where he comes in by election, he has an eſtate for life by the cuſtom; but here is no deed or writing: how can he have an eſtate for life in this office?

Powell, Juſtice. At that rate he has not an office at will, for a man cannot have an office at will without deed. The office of churchwarden was by common law, and yet that is for a year without any deed or writing. So it is with a pariſh-clerk, he is by common law an officer, and is in for life without deed; ſo ruled in the abſence of Parker, Chief Juſtice. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 536.

Trinity, 10 Ann. The Pariſh of Petworth's Caſe.

The court being moved to quaſh an order of juſtices, the following exceptions were taken.

1ſt. That there was a former order from the pariſh of A. to that of P. and this order being affirmed on an appeal to the ſeſſions, it was final not only between the pariſhes that were parties, but to all others, except a ſubſequent ſettlement could be found out: that therefore this order which was to remove one W. P. and K. his wife, together with their children, from P. to R. ſhould be quaſhed.

The ſecond exception was, that the ages of the children not appearing, they may have gained a ſubſequent ſettlement.

The third exception was, that three was no adjudication to become chargeable, but likely to become chargeable.

Per curiam. The firſt and ſecond exceptions are good; and the firſt is a point lately ſettled. Notwithſtanding the laſt, the order is valid. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 26.

The court was moved to quaſh an order of juſtices made for the payment of two ſhillings per week till further order, to H. for the relief of herſelf and her four poor children.

The firſt exception was, that the order did not ſet forth that H. was indigent, which is the very foundation of the juſtices juriſdiction; and for this reaſon the order was quaſhed.

Another fault in the order was, that the money was made payable till further order, whereas it ſhould have been during her poverty.

Two orders were returned, the firſt for ſettling a poor man, one Thomas Gill, and the ſecond a confirmation of the firſt, on an appeal to the quarter-ſeſſions: the firſt order recited, "That whereas complaint has been "been made to us, &c. that T. G. had of late intruded into the pariſh of St. George's, we adjudge him "to be laſt legally ſettled at St. Olave's: theſe are "therefore to require you to convey the ſaid T. G. to "the pariſh of St. Olave's;" and the direction on the order was, "To the churchwardens and overſeers of "the poor of the pariſh of St. Olave's". The order was quaſhed. For they ought, and can only order the pariſh-officers where the intruſion is made, to make the removal. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 493. Ibid. vol. 3. p. 257.

Hilary, 1 Geo. The King v. The Inhabitants of Bury-Pomroi.

A poor child, of the pariſh of Stock-Fleming, was, by the churchwardens, bound apprentice to A. in that pariſh, and there lived with his maſter two years. Then A. removed to the pariſh of Bury-Pomroi, but gained no ſettlement, and there the apprentice ſerved out the remaining five years of his time.

It was held, that this was a ſettlement of the apprentice in the pariſh of Bury-Pomroi; and that it was not neceſſary that the binding and ſervice ſhould be in one and the ſame pariſh.

Stat. 12 Ann. whereby it is declared that the ſervant can gain no ſettlement, unleſs the maſter does, relates only to certificate-maſters. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 279.

Three weeks after Michaelmas a ſervant was hired, till the Michaelmas following; and on Michaelmas-day, he was hired for a year until the next Michaelmas; but did not ſerve out the year, though his ſervice in both years was above a year.

The queſtion was, whether this was a ſettlement? For though here was a hiring for a year, and a ſervice for a year, yet it was not a year's ſervice ſubſequent to that hiring.

Parker, Chief Juſtice, and his brethren, concurred, that it was a ſettlement; for here is a hiring for a year, and a ſervice for a year, though not under that hiring; which was reſolved not to be neceſſary, in the caſe of Overton v. Steepleton.

If a ſervant, during a whole year, is hired from week to week, and then is hired for a year, and ſerves one week; this is no ſettlement, for want of continuance in the ſervice forty days after the ſecond hiring. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 287.

Eaſter, 1 Geo. The King v. Gully

An order of ſeſſions, ordering the father to pay ſo much per week towards the maintenance of his daughter, was quaſhed; becauſe it was not ſet forth in the order, that ſhe was unable to work, without which the juſtices have no juriſdiction.

By being unable to work, the act means a perſon not able by work to get his own living; and not a perſon that is able to get nothing at all.

Another exception to the order was, that this allowance was to be paid until further order; whereas it ſhould have been, as long as the father continued able to allow, and the daughter poor and unable to work.

But this exception was over-ruled. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 308.

A covenant-ſervant for a year, at the rate of 3 l. per annum, left his maſter by conſent, three weeks ſhort of a year; his maſter deducting ſix ſhillings for the three weeks out of his wages.

By order of two juſtices, it was adjudged a good ſettlement.

On an appeal to the ſeſſions, the court being divided, the order of the juſtices was confirmed. The caſe being ſtated ſpecially, and removed here by certiorari, it was urged in ſupport of the order, 1ſt, That it being ſet forth in the order, that he was a covenant-ſervant, it muſt be intended a covenant in writing; for the law knows nothing of a parol-covenant; if ſo, the covenant could be diſcharged by parol, and conſequently in point of law, he continued a ſervant to the end of the year.

2dly, It was ſaid, that his departure, only three weeks before the end of the year, ſhews it to have been a fraud, contrived to prevent a ſettlement.

Per curiam. Let the order be quaſhed, for an actual ſervice for a year is neceſſary. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 261.

One W. and his wife and children were, by an order of two juſtices, removed to Workſworth as the place of their laſt legal ſettlement.

On an appeal to the ſeſſions it appeared, that Newark was the laſt legal ſettlement of W. and conſequently of his wife and children; they are therefore all removed to Newark.

The court was moved to quaſh the order of ſeſſions as to the children, becauſe it was no conſequence that Newark, being the laſt legal ſettlement of the father, muſt be ſo of the children, for they might have gained a new ſettlement.

Per curiam. This is not to be ſuppoſed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 272.

Trinity, 3 Geo. The Pariſh of Horton v. ——

The caſe ſtated on an order was as follows:

A ſervant was hired for eleven months, and then went home with his cloaths to his father for a week; and afterwards was hired for eleven months more by the ſame perſon, and then went home for a week; and ſo, &c.

The queſtion was, whether this was a ſettlement?

It was inſiſted that it was not, for by ſeveral reſolutions there muſt be a hiring for a year, and a ſervice for a year.

On the other ſide it was urged, that if this was no ſettlement, the act of parliament was eluded; and there will be no more ſettlements in this pariſh by virtue of it. That the fraud was very apparent from the circumſtances of the caſe; and that it is a rule in pleading, that nothing need be averred, that appears ſufficiently without.

That the reaſon on which this ſtatute was founded was, that a perſon of that bodily ſtrength as to be fit to be hired for a year, is not ſuch a perſon as the law preſumes is likely to become chargeable. Beſides, ſome regard is to be had to ſervants that they ſhould gain a ſettlement, and not be hurried from place to place.

And of this opinion was Parker, Chief Juſtice.

Pratt, Juſtice, was of a contrary opinion: ſo the matter was adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 392.

The juſtices remove a certificate-man, being likely to become chargeable.

Per curiam. On another order, the juſtices adjudged, that a perſon may become chargeable.

Per curiam. This is not ſufficient, for the ſtatute only enables the juſtices to remove perſons likely to become chargeable; for a man of the greateſt eſtate may poſſibly one time or other become chargeable, tho' it is very unlikely; and is ſuch perſon removeable? There is as much difference in this caſe between the words may and likely as between a poſſibility and a probability. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 77.

It was ſigned, ſealed, and delivered in the preſence of S. H. Mayor, and Thomas Maſcal, and it appeared he was a juſtice of peace; and the queſtion was, whether this atteſting by the juſtices was allowing?

Per curiam. It is not a good certificate, for the juſtices ought to allow, and theſe are only witneſſes here to the execution, and it is no mark of their approbation, which is matter of judgment. VideForteſcue, p. 301.

And the court held it not a good hiring for a year; if a man wants a day of being of age, it is all one as if he wanted a year. Therefore the order was quaſhed. Vide Forteſcue, p. 303.

A woman, who was intitled as ceſtui que truſt, to the truſt of a term of ninety-nine years, for her life only, of two rooms, &c. the reſt of the houſe being let by her for twenty-one years, married.

Per curiam. The huſband has a good ſettlement; the ſtatute was meant of thoſe who went from one pariſh to another, to rent tenements under value, not of ſuch as had them; and if you cannot remove him, he is ſettled. Theſe are ſynonymous. Vide Forteſcue, page 302.

An order of ſeſſions for one pariſh to relieve another pariſh in the ſame hundred was quaſhed; for the ſeſſions have power only when out of the hundred, and two juſtices when in the ſame hundred. Vide Forteſcue, page 303.

Hilary, 5 Geo. Between the Inhabitants of Stallamberg and Haney.

An order was made by two juſtices to remove one A. unleſs they ſhew cauſe.

Per curiam. This is not final, but conditional.

It was alſo objected that the juſtices ſaid we do believe.

Per curiam. It is ill. Vide Forteſcue, p. 323.

An order of ſeſſions being brought into this court by certiorari, it was adjudged, that the deſcent of a copyhold to the wife of a certificate-man gives him a ſettlement: the order of removal was therefore quaſhed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 163.

Trinity, 5 Geo. The King v. The Inhabitants of South-Marſton.

The order ran thus; "whereas J. C. and his wife "are come into your pariſh, endeavouring to ſettle "themſelves contrary to law, and are likely to become chargeable: theſe are therefore to require you "to convey the ſaid C. and his wife from your ſaid pariſh to the pariſh of A. &c.

The court was moved to quaſh the order, for the uncertainty whether the huſband or wife came into the pariſh, it being in the ſingular, when it ſhould have been in the plural number; and Salk. 122. was cited, where an order of two juſtices was doth, and was quaſhed.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice. I do not think it neceſſary to ſhew they came in, but only an endeavour to ſettle; for that may be where the party never came in, as in the caſe of children born in one pariſh, when the ſettlement of the parent is in another. But if it was neceſſary, it is implicitly ſet forth, which in the complaint is ſufficient.

To which Powys and Eyre, Juſtices, agreed.

Forteſcue, Juſtice. The only two things that are requiſite for the juſtices to adjudge is the place of the laſt legal ſettlement, and that the party is likely to become chargeable. And theſe muſt be poſitive, though as to the complaint it is well enough to take it by implication. This is not falſe grammar as doth, which was in Weſt's caſe, for it is common for Latin authors to put the ſingular number where there are two nominative caſes. Therefore the order was confirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 189.

Trinity, 5 Geo. The King v. Munday.

An order was made for the huſband to maintain the wife's mother, which order was made againſt both the huſband and wife. It appeared by the order, that the huſband had conſiderable effects with the wife, and that her mother fell into poverty after the marriage.

Per curiam. The order muſt be quaſhed, becauſe the ſon in-law is not within the act of parliament, and the wife cannot be of ability, becauſe her eſtate is a gift to the huſband, and he is a purchaſer for a valuable conſideration; and it would be inconvenient if the wife ſhould have children by a former huſband. Vide Forteſcue, p. 303.

On a ſpecial order of ſeſſions, the caſe was ſtated for the opinion of the court, that in 1702 one Richard Plower was bound apprentice to John Emmerton, who was legally ſettled in Ivinghoe; that he ſerved part of his time there, and then the maſter went with all his family as a certificate-man to Stonebridge, where he purchaſed an eſtate of the value of 60 l. and after ſuch purchaſe, the apprentice lived with him ſix months till the apprenticeſhip expired; and becauſe ſtat. 12 Ann, c. 18. provides that the apprentice of a certificate-man ſhall gain no ſettlement in the pariſh to which the maſter goes by certificate; therefore the juſtices adjudge the ſettlement at Ivinghoe, where the binding and great part of the ſervice was.

Per curiam. The order muſt be quaſhed, for as the apprenticeſhip expired in 1709, ſtat. 12 Ann is out of the caſe, not being made with any retroſpect; and then the caſe is no more than that an apprentice of a certificate-man lives forty days in Stonebridge, which before that ſtatute was enough to gain him a ſettlement. But if this had been a caſe ſince that ſtatute, yet we think the ſettlement would be in Stonebridge; for according to the caſe of Burclear and Eaſtwood-Hay, Eaſter 5 Geo. when the certificate-man makes a purchaſe, he immediately ceaſes to be there in nature of a certificate-man, and becomes a ſettled inhabitant; ſo that laying the ſtatute out of the caſe, (as we muſt do, it being nothing to the purpoſe) in this view here is a ſervice for ſix months as an apprentice in a pariſh where the maſter was legally ſettled, which is more than ſufficient to give a ſettlement to the apprentice. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 265.

Hilary, 6 Geo. The King v. Furneſs.

An order for non-payment of ſmall tithes was quaſhed, becauſe ſaid only on complaint generally, and ſtat. 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 6. requires the complaint to be in writing. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 264.

On an appeal from an order of removal made by two juſtices, one of whom was of the quorum, the ſeſſions, reciting that they had peruſed the charter of Albrighton, and it not appearing thereby that the two juſtices were either of them of the quorum, therefore they quaſhed the order of removal.

Per curiam. The order of ſeſſions muſt be quaſhed, not for want of our power in the ſeſſions to look into the juriſdiction of the two juſtices, for that they certainly have; but becauſe that want of juriſdiction is not ſufficiently alledged, ſince they might have a juriſdiction, thought it did not appear on the charter of Albrighton. The ſeſſions ſhould have ſaid in general, that it appeared to them that the two juſtices were neither of them of the quorum, and that would have been a good cauſe to quaſh the order of the two juſtices. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 300.

Per curiam. The order muſt be quaſhed, for it being for the contributory pariſh to make a rate at 6 d. in the pound is ill for uncertainty: it ſhould have been, to raiſe ſuch a certain ſum. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 314.

Michaelmas, 6 Geo. The Pariſh of Little Bitham v. The The Pariſh of Somerby.

An order was made by two juſtices to ſend A. to B. as the laſt place of his legal ſettlement. B. appeals, and the order is confirmed. Soon after, without ſtating that A. had gained any new ſettlement, B. ſends him to C.

Per curiam. An order of reverſal is final only between the two pariſhes; but if it is confirmed, it is final as to all the world; and therefore no new ſettlement appearing, the order of removal from B. muſt be quaſhed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 232.

Eaſter, 7 Geo. The Pariſh of Ratcliffe Culy v. The Pariſh of Exall in Coventry.

On an order for the removal of a widow and her two children from Exall to Ratcliffe Culy, it appeared that ſometime ſince A. B. was hired, and ſerved for a year in the pariſh of R. C. and gained no other before his death, therefore the juſtices adjudge the wife and her children to be ſettled in R. C. and ſend them thither, which was the ſettlement of the huſband.

The court was moved to quaſh the order, becauſe a married man gains no ſettlement by any hiring or ſervice; and likewiſe becauſe the children are called her children, and not his.

Per curiam. We never make intendments to deſtroy an order, and it does not appear he was married at the time of the hiring, and if he was married during the ſervice, that will not prevent his ſettlement. And as to the children, we muſt intend them to be his children by her, till the contrary appears; and that they are ſo, is implicitly averred in the adjudication of the children's being ſettled with him; for that they could not be, if they were her children by a former huſband; we muſt then conclude them to be his. Therefore the order was confirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 211.

One W. was hired by one J. as ſervant for a year in the pariſh of Iſlip; in the year he fell was for about ſix days, and was abſent from his maſter's houſe four days, to ſee his mother who lay ſick, without his maſter's leave, and three days before the end of the year he aſked his maſter's leave to go to Biceſter to be hired for the next year; but he refuſed to give leave, and ſaid, if he did go he ſhould go for good and all, and he would deduct ſix pence per day for his wages for the three days; but the ſervant refuſed to conſent to any ſuch deduction, and ſaid he would ſerve out the year, but agreed to deduct for his ſickneſs ſix pence, and for his four days abſence ſix pence more. whereon the maſter paid him his wages all but the two ſhillings and ſix pence deducted as before. The ſervant went to Biceſter and did not return after; the maſter twice at different times during the ſaid year, told the ſervant he ſhould not have any ſettlement at Iſlip. This was an order of two juſtices made to ſend him to Iſlip.

Per curiam. The order of appeal muſt be affirmed, for the ſickneſs was the act of God, and that will not make him ceaſe to be a ſervant; and going to ſee his mother was his duty, and but a ſmall neglect, and the maſter received him again: as to the three days before the end of the ſervice, it is well enough, it was reaſonable to go to be hired, he ought not to have been denied, and he would not conſent to go away. But beſides, it is apparent fraud in the maſter, and done to prevent a ſettlement; for he declaring twice that he ſhould not be ſettled. Therefore he is ſettled at Iſlip. Vide Forteſcue, p. 305.

Trinity, 7 Geo. The King v. Butcher.

An exception was taken to an order of baſtardy, that it did not appear the child was born in the pariſh to which the relief is ordered; for it ran thus, we A. and B. two juſtices of the borough of Lime Regis, reſiding within the limits wherein the pariſh church is, within which pariſh the child was born, do, &c. which is only an averment that the juſtices reſided in that pariſh where the child was born, but that might not be the ſame pariſh to which relief is given; and for this fault the order was quaſhed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 437.

An order of removal was made from B. to C. reciting that the party had fifteen years ſince come with a certificate allowed according to the act of parliament from C. to B. and being now actually chargeable, they ſend him back to C.

The court was moved to quaſh it; 1ſt. Becauſe they do not ſay that during the fifteen years he gained no ſettlement in B. for a certificate-man may gain a ſettlement as well as any other: but not allowed; for all that is neceſſary to be ſhewn, is the certificate, and that the party is chargeable, and the length of time makes no difference.

2dly. That it was not mentioned that the certificate was atteſted, but only that it was allowed.

Per curiam. The atteſtation is by the ſtatute made previous to the allowance, and therefore when they ſay it was allowed according to the act of parliament, we muſt intend it was atteſted, or elſe it could not be allowed. Therefore the order was confirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 402.

In an order of removal it was held well, to ſhew a complaint that the party is come into the pariſh of A. and is likely to become chargeable, without ſaying farther, to the ſaid pariſh of A. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 393.

Eaſter, 8 Geo. The King v. The Inhabitants of Brickhill.

Two juſtices of the peace made an order to remove one Green, his wife, and ſeven children from the pariſh of Horewood to the pariſh of Brickbill, which order was confirmed on an appeal to the ſeſſions; and both the ſaid orders being removed into this court by certiorari, the caſe appeared to be thus:

This Green being a poor man, lived at Horewood at a place called Roſcoe's Tenement, and paid taxes there by the name of the occupier of Roſcoe's, and for that reaſon he, his wife, and children were ſent thither.

The court was moved to quaſh theſe orders, becauſe this man ought to be perſonally charged to pay taxes, otherwiſe he gains no ſettlement by paying them as occupant of a tenement, though he was likewiſe charged as a farmer thereof at that time; for the word farmer does not prove him to be occupant, becauſe he may let the tenement over to another.

But on the other ſide it was inſiſted, that paying taxes by the name of occupant of Roſcoe's tenement, and naming him farmer of the ſame at that time, is a ſufficient deſignation of the perſon to gain a ſettlement there; and the court being of that opinion, theſe orders were quaſhed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 38.

Trinity, 8 Geo. The Pariſh of Hobey v. Kingſbury.

Two juſtices adjudging the ſettlement of the huſband to be at Kingſbury, and that he is likely to become chargeable to Hobey, they ſend him, his wife, and ſon of one year old, to Kingſbury, and whether this was good as to the wife and child, was the queſtion: and it was held well enough; therefore the order was confirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 527.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. The King v. Cleg.

An order of baſtardy was made at the ſeſſions, which was admitted to have original juriſdiction. It was objected, that it was not ſaid the defendant was ever ſummoned or appeared, and natural juſtice required that he ſhould at leaſt have an opportunity to defend himſelf.

Prtt, C. J. Theſe orders made originally at ſeſſions are very rare, the uſual way being to bring the matter before the ſeſſions by way of appeal from the order of two juſtices. If it ſhould be taken, that the order of two juſtices is ſufficient, without their ſhewing a ſummons or appearance; yet, I think this caſe will fall under a very different conſideration. For in the other caſe the party has an opportunity to relieve himſelf by appeal, whereas on an original order at ſeſſions he can have no opportunity to bring the matter to a farther examination; ſo that it is but a lewd woman's going behind his back and ſwearing a baſtard on him, and the moſt innocent in the world may be condemned. In the caſe of the Queen v. Simpſon, Raym. 1406, it was long debated, whether there ought not to have been a perſonal appearance of the deer-ſtealer; at laſt it was determined, that a ſummons was ſufficient, but it was never offered to be ſupported on the footing of not ſhewing a ſummons; ſo far from it, that exceptions were taken to the manner of the ſummons, and the court delivered a ſpecial opinion as to them.

I do not ſee to what purpoſe we exerciſe a ſuperintendency over all inferior juriſdictions, unleſs it is to inſpect their proceedings, and ſee whether they are regular or not. I have often heard it ſaid, that nothing ſhall be preſumed one way or the other in an inferior juriſdiction. And as to the caſe of wages, it was always wondered at; in Lord Parker's time it was actually contradicted, in the caſe of the King v. Helling. Adjourned. In Trinity, 12 Geo. the matter was again moved, and confirmed without oppoſition. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 475.

Two juſtices made an order for the removal of two different families, and the ſeſſions on appeal quaſhed the order for inſufficiency; and to maintain the order of ſeſſions, it was objected to the order of two juſtices, that though the pariſhes are the ſame in both caſes, yet the removal of two families by one order, is ill; for ſuppoſe the removal of one is legal, and the other illegal, and there is an appeal to the ſeſſions as to both, and the order is confirmed as to one, and reverſed as to the other; what is to be done in that caſe as to coſts? Stat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 30. giving coſts to the pariſh in whoſe favour the appeal is determined, and now the appeal will be determined in favour of neither, and of both; it cannot be ſaid that the order is reverſed, becauſe it ſtands good as to part; and it cannot be ſaid to be confirmed, becauſe it is not held good as to the whole.

Eyre and Forteſcue, Juſtices, were of opinion, that the order was ill, giving this reaſon, that the party removed had a right to appeal; for it may be he was removed from his own eſtate, and then, on his appeal, it will conſequentially draw over the other matter, in which perhaps the parties on all ſides acquieſce.

The Chief Juſtice ſaid, he had not fully conſidered it; but the other juſtices were clear, that the order of the two juſtices was ill, and the council for the maintenance of that order, refuſing to refer the whole matter to the judge of aſſize, he pronounced that the order of ſeſſions ſhould be confirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 471.

Hilary, 9 Geo. The Pariſh of St. Michael in Bath v. The Pariſh of Nunny in the County of Somerſet.

An order of removal was made, reciting that the wife of B. who is now living, and C. his child, had intruded, &c. and were likely, &c. and that the place of ſettlement of the wife and children was in St. Michael, they are therefore removed thither. The court was moved to quaſh the order, becauſe it did not appear that the huſband was, at the time of the removal, in the pariſh of St. Michael, ſo that it may be, they ſent the wife away from the huſband.

Per curiam. We cannot intend he was not; if he was in the pariſh from which ſhe was ſent, that indeed would vitiate the order; but as neither of theſe facts appear againſt the order, to ſatisfy us that it is bad, we are not to preſume it to be ſo; therefore the order muſt be confirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 544.

Trinity, 9 Geo. The Pariſh of Foſton v. The Pariſh of Carlton.

Two juſtices of peace ſent a poor perſon from F. to C. On appeal the order was quaſhed; and at three months end two juſtices, without ſhewing any new ſettlement ſince the laſt order, made a new order to remove him from F. to C. a ſecond time.

Per curiam. The laſt order muſt be quaſhed. The caſe of Barrow v. Ingoldſby, Eaſter, 11 Ann. was at the diſtance of nine months; but the court quaſhed it, becauſe there could be no inconvenience in putting them to ſhew a new ſettlement. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 567.

Per curiam. The order muſt be confirmed. This is exactly the caſe that was in this court, Michaelmas, 3 Geo. Between the Pariſhes of Holy Trinity and Shoreditch, where F. was bound to T. with an intent to ſerve G. (which he did) and the court, on a ſpecial reſolution, adjudged the ſettlement to be with G. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 554. *Mod. The court held him ſettled at Wycomb, becauſe of his ſervice and inhabitancy; his maſter's reſidence is nothing; nor whether he was ſettled or no, he could not be ſent to St. Peter's, becauſe it did not appear on the ſpecial ſtate of the order, that he was there for the ſpace of forty days. Vide Forteſcue, p. 318.

Two juſtices made an order to remove the father and mother, and J. E. and S. their children, from the pariſh of, &c. to the pariſh of, &c. The court was moved to quaſh it, becauſe it did not ſet forth the reſpective ages of the children, for they might be apprentices, or ſervants for a year, and ſo gain a ſettlement elſewhere; and for this reaſon it was quaſhed as to the children; but held good as to the father and mother. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 337.

On a ſpecial order of ſeſſions, the caſe appeared to be, that thirty years ſince, H. C. built a cottage on the waſte in Wyley, belonging to the Earl of Pembroke, and lived on it till his death, about three years ſince, when it deſcended to his daughter E. who was then married to J. D. that they entered and enjoyed it three quarters of a year, and then ſold the poſſeſſion of it to J. W. who has enjoyed it ever ſince without any moleſtation from the lord; but no original grant appears. And whether J. D. and his family are ſettled in Wyley, where they lived three quarters of a year in the cottage, in right of his wife, or in Aſhbrittle, which was the place of his laſt legal ſettlement before the marriage, was the queſtion; and by the order of two juſtices, and the order of ſeſſions, it was adjudged to be a ſettlement in Wyley.

Per curiam. The order muſt be confirmed; he lived forty days in the capacity of a perſon irremoveable, and that is a ſettlement of itſelf. Here has been an enjoyment for thirty years, during all which time the lord never claimed any thing. The leaſt that can be made of it is a title by diſſeiſin, and a deſcent is caſt. This man had undoubtedly a title againſt all the world, but the lord, and even againſt him it may be doubtful, after ſo long a poſſeſſion. Therefore in this caſe there is no colour to determine againſt his right, when the lord does not think fit to impeach it; though if he did, it would never be allowed to determine the title on an order of removal, but on an ejectment only. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 608.

An order made to tax this place in aid of another pariſh.

It was objected, firſt, That it was not ſhewn that Borough-Fenn was out of the pariſh.

2dly, They have made a rate, and taxed only ſome particular perſons.

Per curiam. The order is naught, particularly for the firſt objection; becauſe it is the foundation of their authority that it lies in another pariſh.

The Chief Juſtice doubted as to the ſecond, becauſe of the words, any other of other pariſhes, though he thought it reaſonable the rate ſhould be equal. Vide Forteſcue, p. 326.

An order was made to ſend a poor perſon from Capel to Weſt-Pecham, and on appeal to the ſeſſions this order was quaſhed on the merits; and four years afterwards, two juſtices ſent the ſame perſon from the ſame place to the ſame place.

It was inſiſted, that the court would intend a new ſettlement in four years.

Per curiam. The order muſt be quaſhed; for here is a judgment that Pecham was not the place of ſettlement; and as long as that is in force, the juſtices have no authority to ſend to the ſame place, unleſs a new ſettlement was gained, or a good reaſon had appeared in the order as a foundation for their authority, for the court can intend nothing. Vide Forteſcue, p. 327.

An order was made by juſtices at ſeſſions to make a rate on other pariſhes, becauſe that pariſh was not ſufficient; and though it did not appear whether the order was made before the ſix days work was done, or after, yet it was held well.

The court held, that it was founded on ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. and not on ſtat. 1 Geo. 1. which ties up the appeal to the next ſeſſions, and that ſtat. 4 Geo. 1. was only explanatory of ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. and though they did not appeal to the next ſeſſions, yet they might at another ſeſſions; and as to the matter of accompting, that is within ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. only; ſo they may appeal clearly as to that, after the next ſeſſions. Vide Forteſcue, p. 327.

Hilary, 13 Geo. The King v. Reed.

The defendant being a diſſenting miniſter, was rated on ſtat. 43 Eliz. as occupier of a meeting-houſe; but the order was quaſhed. Vide Forteſcue, p. 306.

Hilary, 13 Geo. Between the Inhabitants of Paulſbury and the Inhabitants of Woodon, or Woodend, in Com. Northampton.

On a ſpecial order of ſeſſions, the caſe was as follows: A man, with his wife and child, were ſettled in Paulſbury at his death; after which the wife removed to a copyhold of her own in Woodon, and carried the child, being fourteen years old, with her, where it lived many years. And now the queſtion was, where the child was ſettled? And the juſtices adjudged, that it had gained no ſettlement with the mother, and therefore ſent it back to the father's ſettlement in Paulſbury.

And on conſideration the court quaſhed the order, ſaying, it had been adjudged that a child was ſettled with the mother in the caſe of the Pariſh of St. George v. the Pariſh of St. Catherine, Michaelmas, 1 Geo. But it was there ſaid, if it had been an entire thing, they ſhould have doubted, whether a ſettlement, gained under the head of the family, could be diveſted by a derivative one from the inferior. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 746. Raym. vol. 2. p. 1473.

A perſon was retained as a weekly ſervant to a captain in 1690, before the ſtatute for retaining a year. and ſerving for a year. They quartered in Wincheſter, and the ſervant continued with the ſaid captain two months, and lodged in the ſame inn; but the order did not ſay he continued in the ſame ſervice, or as his ſervant; for he muſt continue as his ſervant for forty days; it was agreed that there was no need of notice in the caſe of a ſervant; and the order was quaſhed. Vide Forteſcue, p. 328. Stra. vol. 1. p. 746.

Michaelmas, 13 Geo. The King v. Benoier.

The court was moved to quaſh an order, made at the quarter-ſeſſions at Hereford, whereby the father-in-law was ordered to maintain his daughter-in-law: it was urged, that he was not, by law, obliged to maintain her, and the caſe of The King v. Mundy, Trinity, 5 Geo. was cited, where an order was made by the juſtices on a ſon-in-law to maintain his mother-in-law, which order was quaſhed. Accordingly a rule was made to ſhew cauſe why this order ſhould not be quaſhed; and in Hilary term following the rule was made abſolute, no cauſe being ſhewn to the contrary. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 1454.

On a writ of certiorari, two orders of juſtices for removing T. P. and C. his wife from the pariſh of Aſhenden cum Pollicut to Aynhoe, had been confirmed on an appeal at the quarter ſeſſions held for the county of Bucks, were removed into this court; and the facts ſpecially ſtated were theſe, viz.

That one T. E. about fourteen years ſince, was hired for a year to one A. W. at Aynhoe, and ſerved him the ſame year, and received his wages, and afterwards at Michaelmas 1725 went to T. P. at Biceſter in the county of Oxford to be hired, who told him that he would not hire him then, for that he expected a man-ſervant in three weeks; but if he the ſaid T. E. would ſupply the place of ſuch man-ſervant till he came, that he the ſaid T. P. would pay him for his time: whereon the ſaid T. E. entered into the ſervice of the ſaid T. P.

and lived there till near Chriſtmas following, and then was hired to him, and ſerved him at Biceſter till Michaelmas then following; and then at Michaelmas 1726 he was hired at Biceſter aforeſaid for a year to his ſaid maſter P. and ſtayed in his ſervice till the Midſummer following, and no longer.

It was argued, that the order ought to be quaſhed, T. E. appearing to be ſettled at Biceſter, becauſe though the ſtatute requires a hiring for a year and a year's ſervice, it does not require the hiring and ſervice to be under the ſame contract. And the caſe of the Inhabitants of Brightwell v. the Inhabitants of Weſthanning, was relied on as a caſe in point.

And the court, on the authority of that caſe, held, that theſe hirings and ſervice did make a ſettlement; for he was hired for a year, and ſerved a year: wherefore the orders were quaſhed. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 1511.

Eaſter, 8 Geo. 2. The Inhabitants of Cheſham in Bucks v. The Pariſh of Stepney in Middleſex.

The court was moved to quaſh an order for removing one J. his wife and children, from C. to S.

It was objected that the juſtices ſtile themſelves in the order, juſtices for the county aforeſaid, which, as was urged, was quite uncertain, for both Middleſex and Bucks had been mentioned in the preceding part of the order, ſo that it does not appear whether they are juſtices of Bucks, which they ought to be, but is quite uncertain.

2dly. That the judgment of the order is not direct, but only by way of recital, whereas complaint has been made to us, juſtices of the peace for the county aforeſaid, and we do adjudge, &c.

Lord Hardwicke. As to the ſecond objection, though the ſtile of the order is a little incorrect, yet we ſhould not be too ſtrict in ſuch caſes, and the word adjudge being here, it is ſufficient. But as to the firſt objection, I think it is intirely uncertain to which county the word aforeſaid refers; if to the county laſt before mentioned, that is, Middleſex, and they have no juriſdiction, for the power is only given to the juſtices for the place whence the perſon is removed; and this court can intend nothing in this caſe, but muſt take the order as it appears; and it not appearing to be by the juſtices for Bucks, it is a bad order. Therefore the rule was made abſolute to quaſh the order. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. p. 100.

Eaſter, 8 Geo 2. The Pariſh of Whaddington v. The Pariſh of Tedford, in Lincolnſhire.

On a ſpecial order of ſeſſions it was ſtated, that the pauper contracted for the purchaſe of a houſe in Whaddington for 39 l. and paid 9 l. out of his own money, and the remaining 30 l. was by his order paid by another perſon, to whom the premiſes were mortgaged for it: that the pauper had lived upon it four years, when the mortgage was foreclosed, and he turned out; and the queſtion being, whether he had gained a ſettlement hereby? the ſeſſions adjudged that this was a fraudulent purchaſe, and conſequently no ſettlement was gained thereby.

Per curiam. The order muſt be quaſhed. The purchaſe-money, by ſtat. 9 Geo. 1. c. 7. need only be 30 l. and the advancing the money by another makes no alteration. And the fact being ſpecially ſtated, we can judge as well as the ſeſſions, whether it be fraudulent or not. The circumſtance of his continuing four years ouſts all preſumption of fraud. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1014.

A complaint in writing was exhibited to the quarter ſeſſions of Cardigan againſt T. Lloyd, clerk of the peace of that county, containing ſeveral charges of miſbehaviour, which, if true, were a ſufficient cauſe to remove him from that office. The ſeſſions received the complaint, and ordered the defendant a copy, and time to make his defence. And on the day appointed, reciting the complaint and notice, “on due examination thereof openly this day in court, and of the ſeveral matters and charges therein contained, and herein before partly ſpecified, alledged, and charged againſt the defendant, and on full hearing and examination of ſeveral witneſſes, and other due proofs, touching the ſeveral charges againſt the defendant in the ſaid articles contained, openly this day in court, in the preſence and hearing of the defendant, and of his council, who now attended in this court on his behalf, and made a defence for him; and on hearing what is alledged and inſiſted on by the defendant and his council in his defence, the court adjudged him guilty of ſeveral of the articles, and removed him from his office, purſuant to ſtatute.”

A certiorari was brought to remove the complaint into this court. It was objected, that this being a conviction in a ſummary way before juſtices of peace, and without a jury; and ſtat. 1 W. & M. c. 21. requiring the removal to be on due proof of the miſdemeanor complained of; the evidence in this caſe ought to be ſet out, that this court may ſee whether there was due proof; and not truſt the juſtices, who may have deprived the defendant of his freehold on leſs evidence than they ought to have done, or perhaps on that which is no evidence in point of law.

Lord Hardwicke. It is fully ſettled, that in convictions the evidence muſt be ſet out; and if this was to be conſidered as a conviction, it therefore would be bad. But we are of opinion, it is to be conſidered as an order. In the three caſes which have been on the act, the certioraries were to remove them as orders, and they are in Engliſh, which could not be, if they were convictions. Bains's caſe was before all the judges, and they treated it as an order. And though it is ſaid, here is a puniſhment that follows, viz. the loſs of the office, yet the ſame may be ſaid of moſt of the acts of juſtices, where very ſevere penalties often follow. The caſes of orders of baſtardy are very ſtrong, which are grounded on much the ſame words in ſtat. 18 Eliz. c. 3. as in ſtat. 1 W. & M. c. 21. And as to the caſes of ſetting out evidence on demurrers; it is abſolutely neceſſary to have it on record, and the ſuperior courts are judges of the fact as well as the law; which on a certiorari they are not. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 996.

A man and four children were ſent to Heptonſtall as the place of their laſt ſettlement. It was excepted, that the ages of the children were not ſet out.

Per curiam. That is only neceſſary where they are ſent out in conſequence of the father's ſettlement, but here is an expreſs adjudication of their actual ſettlement: ſo the order was confirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 1047.

Michaelmas, 9 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Oulton.

On a certiorari to remove an order of ſeſſions, which had confirmed an order made by two juſtices for the removal of three poor children; the order was returned, which recited the order of the two juſtices, and that there was an appeal, It is ordered that the ſaid order be confirmed: they likewiſe returned, that council had applied to the juſtices to ſtate the fact ſpecially in the order, which they refuſed, whereon the council humbly delivered in their bill of exceptions, which ſays the return is hereto ſubjoined, the effect of which is, that it was proved the father of the children hired a farm in the pariſh of Oulton of 100 l. per annum, and the children were born there in lawful marriage, and that his wife had a copyhold eſtate in her own right in the pariſh of Burnham Overy, and after the father's death the children dwelt three months with the mother there, and then the eſtate was ſold; and therefore they think the juſtices ought to have adjudged the children to be ſettled at Burnham Overy.

But the court would not grant this motion, becauſe no exceptions were made to the order itſelf, for that allegation of what was the fact proved, is not part of the juſtice's order, but only the allegation of the council. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. p. 169.

It was held, that though the complaint of a pauper's ſettling may be made to one juſtice, yet the examination ought to be by two; and ſuch juſtices are to ſign the order of removal. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1092.

Eaſter, 13 Geo. 2. The Pariſh of Hasfield v. The Pariſh of Furley, in Glouceſterſhire.

On a ſpecial order of ſeſſions, relating to the ſettlement of a boy of eight years, and a girl of ſix years of age, who had been removed by two juſtices from Furley to Hasfield, it was ſtated, that the mother of theſe children had an eſtate of 4 l. per annum in Furley, where ſhe and her huſband lived, and had theſe children; that ſhe dying, the huſband became tenant by the curteſy, and whilſt ſuch, he took 30 l. per annum in Hasfield, and lived one year there with his two children, and then died; that the children being found with their grand-mother at Furley, were both removed to Hasfield; which order the ſeſſions confirmed.

The court confirmed the orders as to the girl, but quaſhed them as to the boy. For as to the boy, he was tenant in fee of the 4 l. per annum; and though it was not ſtated, that he was actually on that ſpot, yet it was enough that he had ſuch an eſtate in the pariſh, from which he could not be removed. But as to the daughter, it was otherwiſe; ſhe could demand no maintenance out of her brother's eſtate; and it was never yet determined, that children ſhould go to a grandmother for nurture: ſhe may indeed be charged to contribute to their relief in the pariſh where they are ſettled. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1131.

On a ſpecial order of ſeſſions it was ſtated, that the pauper took a farm of 10 l. per annum in Kirton, which had been let at that rent for ſix years laſt paſt, but before only at 7 l. per annum; and he alſo took a bye-tack of 20 s. a year in Kirton, and his family lived ten months there; that when he firſt took to theſe tenements he was not of ability to ſtock them; and being told by the former tenant, that 10 l. per annum was too much, he anſwered he did not regard the dearneſs, for as it was 10 l. a year it would gain him a ſettlement, and put an end to a diſpute between two towns; but deſired the former tenant to take no notice of this to any body. The ſeſſions determined this to be no ſettlement in Kirton. But the order being removed, it was quaſhed; for the court ſaid, that they could not hold this to be fraudulent, it not being ſo adjudged; and evidence of fraud is not ſufficient; and as to the value, they muſt take it to be according to the rent, unleſs the contrary was ſtated; for as it is a removal of a man from his farm, it ſhould be ſhewn to be under value. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1156.

On a ſpecial order it was ſtated, that the pauper was bound to a certificate-man in Tenterden, and after living with him there two years, was by him aſſigned over to a pariſhioner of Lidd, with whom he inhabited and ſerved for the remainder of the ſeven years. And the queſtion aroſe on ſtat. 12 Ann. c. 18. which ſays, "the apprentice of a certificate-man ſhall gain no "ſettlement;" whether the aſſignment could give him one? And the court were all of opinion, he had gained a ſettlement in Lidd; for the act had not made the binding void, but has only taken away one of the conſequences of ſuch binding for the ſake of the certificated pariſh. It never intended to meddle with the caſe of a legal pariſhioner's apprentice, and when once there is an aſſignment to ſuch a one, it is the ſame as if it had been an original binding: the true conſtruction of the ſtatute is, that in reſpect to the certificated-pariſh, ſuch binding and inhabitation ſhall give no ſettlement. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1147.

Hilary, 15 Geo. 2. The Pariſh of St. Nicholas in Harwich v. The Pariſh of Woolverſtone in Suffolk.

The pauper came into Harwich with a certificate from Woolverſtone, addreſſed to the pariſh of Harwich near Dover-Court, and delivered it to a pariſhioner, who did not appear to be an officer of the pariſh. The ſeſſions were of opinion, he had not taken 10 l. per annum in Harwich, and was therefore not ſettled there; but as there was a miſtake of the name of the pariſh in the addreſs of the certificate, they held Woolverſtone could not be obliged to receive the pauper. But upon debate it was ruled they were; for it is not to be conſidered as a certificate to any particular pariſh, but as a general acknowledgment of his being a pariſhioner of Woolverſtone, and is concluſive againſt them to all the world; and the delivery of it to an officer is not neceſſary. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1163.

A certificate-man has a ſon born in the pariſh to which he was certified, who, when ſixteen years old, hires himſelf as a ſervant to a button-maker in the ſame pariſh, and ſerves a year. And upon conſidering the words of ſtat. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 11. which declares, "That no perſon or perſons, who come in "by certificate, ſhall be adjudged to gain a ſettlement "by any act whatſoever, except he takes 10*l. per* "annum, or executes an annual office."

The court held, that the ſon of the certificate-man was equally within it, and that therefore the hiring and ſervice in this caſe gave him no ſettlement. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1165.

A certificate-man purchaſed a houſe for 42 l. lived in it many years, then ſold it, and becoming chargeable, was ſent back. It was inſiſted, that ſtat. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 11. ſaying, "A certificate-man ſhall gain "a ſettlement by no act whatſoever, unleſs the tak"ing 10 l. per ann. or ſerving an annual office:" this man, notwithſtanding the purchaſe, might be ſent back; and it was ſaid to differ from the caſe of Burclear v. Eaſtwoodhay, Eaſter, 5 Geo. 1. where the ſurrender of a copyhold to the certificate-man's wife was held to gain him a ſettlement; becauſe there it was not his own act, (as this purchaſe is) but it came to him by operation of law. The court did not think this a ſufficient diſtinction, and ſaid, A purchaſe was in its nature an excepted caſe; and his ſelling it afterwards made no alteration, as was held, Trinity, 12 Geo. 2. between Saint Neots and Saint Clear.

This alſo, as to a purchaſe by a certificate-man, was held the laſt term, in the caſe of the pariſh of Stansfield. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1193.

A man and his wife were removed from Nympsfield to Woodcheſter, and there was no appeal. They afterwards returned to Nympsfield, and there had three children, who were now ſent from Nympsfield to Woodcheſter, together with the father. And on appeal, as to the children, it was offered to be given in evidence that the man had a former wife, and conſequently the children born at Nympsfield were to be conſidered as baſtards ſettled there. The ſeſſions refuſed to let Woodcheſter go into this evidence, being of opinion, that Woodcheſter was concluded by the firſt order unappealed from, and that it made no difference that the children were born afterwards.

The court, on debate, confirmed both orders; for the marriages being eſtabliſhed by the firſt order, the ſettlement of the children, which is derivative, follows of courſe, and can no way be impeached, but by entering into the merits of the firſt order, which has been acquieſced in; and no doctrine is more eſtabliſhed than that an order unappealed from, is concluſive. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1172.

It was ſtated in a ſpecial order, that a certificate-man having notice that he was appointed borſholder, never took the oath of office, but once executed a warrant of a juſtice directed to the borſholder: and this the ſeſſions determined to be gaining a ſettlement within ſtat. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 11.

Per curiam. The order muſt be quaſhed, for the words of the act are, "being legally placed in ſuch "office;" that is, being the officer both of the fact and of the right, which this man was not, the order ſtating negatively that he was not legally placed therein, which can only be by an appointment, and ſwearing in. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1199.

Maidſtone certificated Richard Burden and Mary his wife, who came therewith into Hedcome, and had four children. And on his becoming actually chargeable, they were all ſent back to Maidſtone by an order of two juſtices of the peace.

On appeal to the ſeſſions it was ſtated, that the man in 1715 lawfully intermarried with Mary Lee, who then appeared in court, and by whom he had ſeveral children, who were all maintained at Maidſtone as his wife and children. That in 1730 he (in fact) married Mary Broomhall, who was the woman that removed with him to Hedcome, and is the ſame that is now ſent back to Maidſtone; but the ſeſſions conſidering they were both called Mary, and that Maidſtone actually maintains Mary the real wife, and all her children; were of opinion the others were not to be ſent back to Maidſtone; and therefore confirmed the order of the two juſtices as to the man, and quaſhed it as to the woman, and the children of the ſecond marriage.

And now on debate in this court it was held, that the two juſtices of the peace had done right in ſending them all back to Maidſtone, for the certificate is concluſive to Maidſtone: and on the fact ſtated it does ſufficiently appear what Mary it was that was meant by the certificate: and that this caſe did not differ from that of New Windſor v. White Waltham; nor did it alter the caſe, that Maidſtone had the real wife and children to maintain alſo: they therefore confirmed the order of ſeſſions as to the man, quaſhed it as to the reſt, and confirmed the order of the two juſtices of the peace in the whole. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1233.

A perſon was removed by an order of two juſtices of the peace from Diſeworth to Oſgathorpe, which order, on appeal, was diſcharged. He was by a ſecond order ſent from Diſeworth to Oſgathorpe, as a certificate-man, and upon an appeal it was ſtated, that the firſt removal was before he became chargeable, and the ſecond after he became ſo; and the ſeſſions were of opinion, that the firſt determination was not final between the pariſhes, and therefore confirmed the ſecond order of removal.

And it was moved to quaſh theſe two laſt orders, on the authority of Salk. 492. 524, which ſays, A reverſal is final between the parties.

Per curiam. So it would be, if the ſpecial matter did not appear; a certificated perſon cannot be ſent back, until he is actually a charge; a removal before is premature. The conſequence of which only is, that he muſt be ſuffered to remain till he does become chargeable, but not to make a premature removal final for ever. The laſt orders muſt be confirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1256.

Hilary, 30 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Chidingfold.

On a motion to quaſh an original order of two juſtices, made for the removal of one R. G. his wife and three children, from W. in Hants to C. in Surry, and alſo the order of ſeſſions confirming ſuch order;

The council for quaſhing theſe orders only ſtated the queſtion, viz. "Whether the tenant's paying the "land-tax (which was allowed him again by his "landlord) amounts to ſuch a notice as ſhall gain the "tenant a ſettlement?"

On coming to ſhew cauſe, the council who was to ſhew cauſe againſt quaſhing the two orders, acknowlowledged that he could not ſupport them, as the point had been already fully ſettled.

On which the court made the rule abſolute for quaſhing the two orders. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 415.

Eaſter, 30 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Alton.

On a motion made to quaſh two orders, viz. One made by two juſtices to remove A. C. the wife of R. C. jun. and her four children, from Elvetham to Alton, in Hants; the other made at ſeſſions confirming the order of the juſtices.

Caſe R. C's. Father and mother came by certificate from A. to E. where R. C. jun. was born ſubſequent to the certificate. R. C. jun. became a hired ſervant to one Sir H. C. at E. (where Sir H. C. reſided) and ſerved in the whole ten years. The laſt forty days of the ſecond year's ſervice was at Scarborough. Without ever quitting his ſervice, he applied to his maſter at the end of the ſecond year to continue for another year, which was agreed to by his maſter, after they returned to E. and he ſerved him the third year at advanced wages in E. and continued with him ſeven years after in E. after which he married and had thoſe children.

Adjudged, That the wife and children were properly removed by the juſtices to the ſettlement of the father, and that if the father ſhould hereafter come to E. he may be removed by another order to A. which gave the certificate, as his proper ſettlement. It was held, that a ſervant may gain a ſettlement in a place where his maſter has none, or where he never reſides himſelf. In this caſe the ſervant gained no ſettlement at S. his maſter being there only a ſojourner, and no inhabitant. What paſſed between him and his maſter at S. was not a completion of the original contract between them, it was only an adjournment of the contract, and the re-hiring was at E. ſo that the whole was but a continuance of the original ſervice firſt begun under the certificate from A. The court therefore affirmed the two orders. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 418.

On a motion made for a rule to ſhew cauſe why the order of ſeſſions ſhould not be quaſhed, and the original order affirmed.

Caſe, M. B. a pauper, was bound apprentice by a pariſh indenture, and before the expiration of her time, her maſter having no work for her, permitted her to get another place, where ſhe ſerved upwards of forty days, and then returned to her maſter, where ſhe only ſerved eight days before her indenture expired; and the queſtion was, whether ſhe had not loſt her original ſettlement by ſuch new ſervice?

Adjudged, That ſhe was not ſettled in the laſt maſter's pariſh where ſhe had ſerved forty days, for ſuch ſervice was under the indenture of apprenticeſhip, which was never diſcharged.

Per curiam. Let the order of ſeſſions be quaſhed, and the order of the two juſtices be affirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 416.

Eaſter, 30 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Bentley.

On a motion to quaſh two orders, viz. one an order of two juſtices for removing J. P. his wife and ſon, from Baxterley to Bentley in com. Warwick; the other an order of ſeſſions confirming ſuch order.

Caſe. J. P. was hired, and ſerved for a year in Bentley, and before the (then) laſt general quarter ſeſſions, he was removed by proper order from Baxterley to Stourbridge, as the place of his laſt legal ſettlement: which order of removal was quaſhed on an appeal by the ſaid (then) general quarter ſeſſions. Since the ſaid laſt ſeſſions, the pauper being removed from Baxterley aforeſaid to Bentley; Bentley appealed, and offered to prove a ſettlement in Stourbridge, by a hiring and ſervice for a year in Stourbridge, before the ſaid laſt ſeſſions, but ſubſequent to the ſaid hiring and ſervice in Bentley, but the ſeſſions refuſed to go into it, being of opinion that the determination was final and concluſive.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides,

Adjudged, That an order of confirmation (on an appeal to the ſeſſions) is concluſive, and binds all the world: but that an order of diſcharge or reverſal is only final between the contending pariſhes, and no third perſon is bound or affected thereby.

Per curiam. Let both orders be quaſhed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 425.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions made for quaſhing an order of two juſtices for the removing J. H. and T. his wife, and J. and J. their children, from the pariſh of Uffculme to that of St. Sidwell in Exeter.

Caſe. J. H. the pauper, purchaſed a tenement in St. Sidwell's: for which he gave 8 l. in money, and a note for 4 l. more; amounting in all to 12 l. H. lived in the ſaid tenement with his family; and was in the year 1746 rated to the land-tax in manner following; to wit, "occupier, late widow Hooper's, now J. H.'s "tenement, 12 l." and for the year 1747, in the following manner: "occupier, late widow Hooper's te"nement, now J. H.'s tenement, 12 l." The ſaid J. H. was in 1746 rated to the poor's rate as follows: "occupier of the late James Hooper's tenement, three"fourth per week:" and the ſame for 1747. The ſaid J. H. did after ſuch rating live in the ſaid pariſh of St. Sidwell for about one year; and did, during his reſidence there, pay the ſaid rates, both to the land-tax and the poor, according to the rates aforeſaid; and then ſold the ſaid tenement, and went with his family into the ſaid pariſh of Uffculme: from whence he was removed into the pariſh of St. Sidwell.

The ſeſſions being of opinion that the ſaid J. H. did not gain a ſetttlement in St. Sidwell's by being rated as aforeſaid, the conſideration of the ſaid purchaſe being under 30 l. did therefore vacate the ſaid order of the juſtices.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, on ſhewing cauſe on this rule, the court gave their opinion.

Lord Mansfield. We are all clearly of opinion that ſtat. 9 Geo. 1. againſt fraudulent purchaſers of leſs value than 30 l. bona fide paid, only means to put a negative on a perſon's gaining a ſettlement, by making a ſmall purchaſe, with a fraudulent intention to gain a ſettlement thereby, in the pariſh where ſuch purchaſe is made; and that it does not affect any other method of ſettlement.

It is but reaſonable that perſons who have been rated, and have paid towards the public taxes and levies of a pariſh, ſhould receive aſſiſtance from that pariſh, when they become neceſſitous themſelves.

Per curiam. Let the order of ſeſſions be quaſhed, and the order of the twa juſtices be affirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 430.

On a motion to quaſh two orders, viz. one of twa juſtices, for removing M. B. a ſingle woman, from Biddeford to Great Torrington; the other, an order of ſeſſions confirming ſuch order.

Caſe. H. B. his wife and two daughters, viz. M. and E. came into Biddeford by certificate from Lancraſs, directed to Biddeford, and inhabited there ſome years; and that M. the pauper was then bound apprentice by the officers of the pariſh of Lancraſs, by the allowance of two juſtices of the peace, to Thomas May, for an eſtate in Lancraſs; and lived in Great Torrington an apprentice for ſeven years, under the ſaid indenture. That after the apprenticeſhip expired, the ſaid M. hired herſelf a ſervant for a year, with Solomon Lyon in Biddeford, and lived with him there for ſuch year, and for eleven months after.

The ſeſſions were of opinion, "That the ſaid M. "coming at firſt into the ſaid pariſh of Biddeford, un"der the ſaid certificate as aforeſaid, did not gain a "ſettlement there, by the ſubſequent ſervice as "aforeſaid in that pariſh," and confirmed the ſaid order.

The council, who was to have ſhewn cauſe, candidly acknowledging, that he had looked into the caſes, and was ſatisfied that theſe orders could not be ſupported.

Per curiam. Let the rule to quaſh theſe orders be made abſolute. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 428.

Trinity, 30 & 31 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Milwich.

On a motion to quaſh two orders, viz. one of two juſtices, for removing T. T. and M. his wife, and A. T. J. W. H. and M. their children, from the Vill of Creyton in the county of Stafford to Milwich in the ſame county. The other, an order of ſeſſions confirming the order of the juſtices.

Caſe. T. was hired by M. B. of Milwich for eleven months, for 4 l. 10 s. It was agreed between them, "That T. ſhould give Mr. B. a month's ſervice in, "beyond the eleven months." T. ſerved Mr. B. the eleven months, in Milwich; and alſo all the given-in month, except the laſt three days: and as to thoſe three days, T. could not ſay where he ſerved them, or went away without ſerving them; but he received the whole 4 l. 10 s. wages.

The ſeſſions confirmed the order; being of opinion, "that this was a hiring for a year, and a ſervice for "a year."

On this motion the council took two exceptions, viz.

1ſt, That this is not a good hiring for a year, within ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. cap. 11. being only for eleven months.

2dly, That this is not a good ſervice for a year; becauſe three days are wanting at the end of it.

The court were extremely clear, 1ſt, That this agremeent (taking all together) is an evident contract "to ſerve for a year;" notwithſtanding the expreſſion, they ſaid, the real queſtion was no more than, "whether eleven months and one month made twelve months." There are no particular technical words neceſſary to make a ſerving for a year. The ſubſtance of this agreement is "to ſerve twelve months "for 4 l. 13 s." Every contract to ſerve, is a contract to ſerve for a year, unleſs there be ſomething to explain it otherwiſe; here there is nothing of that ſort.

2dly, That as to the ſervant's going away three days before the end of the year, the fact does not ſupport the objection; for it does not appear that he did go away before the end of the year. It is only ſtated, "that he "could not ſay whether he ſerved thoſe three days, or "went away without ſerving them." It is poſitively ſtated, "that he received the whole 4 l. 10 s. wages;" which at leaſt ſeems to imply the maſter's conſent or permiſſion.

Per curiam. Let both orders be affirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 433.

Two juſtices removed S. G. and four children, (one of them nine years of age, and the other three under ſeven) from A. R. to White Rooding; which order of the juſtices was quaſhed by the ſeſſions on an appeal.

The caſe was, W. G. the huſband, being legally ſettled at W. R. went from thence and left his wife and children. On which the wife and children went and lived for forty days, without her huſband, in a copyhold tenement of her huſband's own at A. R. But legal notice "to depart" was given her, within the forty days by A. R. which ſhe not complying with, two juſtices made this order for removing her, as being likely to become chargeable, from A R. to W. R. which they adjudged to be the laſt legal ſettlement of her huſband. The ſeſſions, conceiving that the wife, though without her huſband, could not be removed from her huſband's own eſtate, quaſhed the order.

And now this court was moved to quaſh the order of ſeſſions, and to affirm the original order; on which a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on this rule, the court affirmed the order of ſeſſions, and quaſhed the order of the two juſtices.

The court were unanimous and clear, that the two juſtices had no power to remove her from her huſband's own property, on her being only likely to become chargeable to the pariſh where it lay.

Per curiam. Let the order of ſeſſions be affirmed, and the order of the two juſtices be quaſhed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 414.

Hilary, 31 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Biſhop's-Hatfield.

On a motion to quaſh an order of two juſtices made for the removal of J. A. Ann his wife, and E. M. and A. their children, from Saundridge to Biſhop's Hatfield in com. Hertford; and alſo an order of ſeſſions confirming ſuch order, being founded on a miſtaken judgment.

Caſe. J. A. was hired to one P. a pariſhioner of Saundridge, at 5 l. for one year, to wit, from Michaelmas 1752 to Michaelmas 1753, with liberty to let himſelf for the harveſt month to any other perſon. That the ſaid J. A. ſerved the ſaid P. till the ſaid harveſt month; and a little before the harveſt month, without the knowledge of the ſaid P. hired himſelf for the harveſt month to one T. of the ſame pariſh: but went, with the knowledge of the ſaid P. and worked with the ſaid T. for the harveſt month, and received wages for the ſame. In the harveſt month the ſaid A. brewed for the ſaid P. and afterwards ſerved the ſaid P. for the remainder of the year. And the ſaid A. lodged in the ſaid P.'s houſe in the ſaid pariſh of Saundridge during the whole year; and at the end thereof the ſaid A. received the ſaid 5 l. for his year's wages. Whereon the ſeſſions adjudged the ſaid J. A. under the ſaid hiring and ſervice with the ſaid P. in the ſaid pariſh of Saundridge, did not gain any ſettlement in the ſaid pariſh; and therefore they confirmed the order of the two juſtices, and diſallowed the appeal.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, on ſhewing cauſe on this rule, the court gave their opinion.

Lord Mansfield. It is in effect only a hiring for eleven months; and the harveſt month is the principal month of the year. It is ſafeſt to keep to the ſtatute. If we allow this, we ſhall not know where to ſtop.

Per curiam. Let the rule to ſhew cauſe be diſcharged, and let the two orders be affirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 439.

Hilary, 31 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Mayfield.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt quaſhing an order of ſeſſions, made for diſcharging an order of two juſtices, made for the removal of R. F. and M. his wife from Mayfield to Horſted-caines, both in the county of Suſſex.

Adjudged, That an order of ſeſſions made on an appeal is not obliged to ſtate the caſe ſpecially; and where their expreſſion in ſuch order is not abſolutely clear and explicit, they ſhall be intended to have done right; and that being the caſe here, the rule was diſcharged, and the order of ſeſſions affirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 453.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions made for the reverſal of an order of two juſtices made to remove M. H. widow, and her four children, from Cold Aſhton to Woodcheſter in the county of Glouceſter.

Caſe. In July 1725, D. H. and M. his wife, and W. H. their ſon, went from Woodcheſter to Cold Aſhton, with a certificate from Woodcheſter, directed to Cold Aſhton, acknowledging "that they the ſaid D. H. and "M. his wife, and W. H. the ſon, and ſuch other "children as they the ſaid D. H. and M. his wife "ſhould have afterwards born in Old Aſhton, were inhabitants legally ſettled in Woodcheſter."

That D. H. and M. his wife, and W. H. their ſon, lived in the pariſh of Cold Aſhton under the ſaid certificate, from July 1725 to about Chriſtmas 1728, at which time W. F. the father of M. wife of W. H. died inteſtate, leaving M. his daughter, and five other children; he was at the time of his death poſſeſſed or intitled to a tenement, and two acres and a half of land, of the yearly value of 6 l. 17 s. in Cold Aſhton, for the remainder of a term of ninety nine years, determinable on the death of himſelf and of the ſaid M. his daughter, the wife of the ſaid D. H.

That on the death of the ſaid W. F. the ſaid D. H. and M. his wife, and the ſaid W. H. their ſon, (he being then five years old) entered on the ſaid premiſes; and the ſaid D. H. and his wife have lived in and occupied the ſame ever ſince.

There being a cuſtom in the hundred of Pucklechurch, in which the ſaid pariſh of Old Aſhton lies, "for the "occupiers of ſmall tenements within the ſaid hun"dred, to ſerve the office of tythingman for half of a "year only at a time." The ſaid D. H. about twenty-"five years ago ſerved the office of tythingman for the ſaid pariſh of Cold Aſhton for half a year only; and about five years ago ſerved the ſame office for the ſame pariſh for another half year only.

That no adminiſtration of the ſaid goods or perſonal effects of the ſaid W. F. was ever granted to, or taken out by the ſaid D. H. and M. his wife, or either of them, or any other perſon.

That the ſaid W. H. lived with the ſaid D. H. and M. his wife in the ſaid tenement till about eight or nine years ago; when he married the above named M. (his now wife) by whom he had iſſue C. G. W. and T. H. their ſaid children.

That after the marriage of the ſaid W. H. the father of the pauper children, with the ſaid M. his wife, they lived in the ſaid pariſh of Cold Aſhton ſeparate and apart from the ſaid D. H. and M. his wife, his parents, till the death of the ſaid W. which happened about a year and an half ago.

The ſaid M. the widow of the ſaid W. H. and her four children, after his death, become actually chargeable to the ſaid pariſh of Cold Aſhton. They were, by the order of two juſtices, removed from Cold Aſhton to Woodcheſter; they the ſaid W. H. or his father, or children, not having gained a ſettlement, after the giving of the ſaid certificate, except as aforeſaid.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on ſhewing cauſe to this rule, the court gave their opinion.

Lord Mansfield. This cauſe ſeems to turn on two queſtions:

1ſt. Whether D. H. the father of W. gained a ſettlement himſelf in Cold Aſhton, to which place he is agreed to have come originally as a certificate-man.

2dly. Whether W. the ſon of the ſaid D. H gained a derivative ſettlement there from his father.

As to the firſt queſtion, D. H. had been twenty-nine years and a half in poſſeſſion of the premiſes, at the date of the order; the queſtion is, whether he is within ſtat, 9 & 10 W. 3. cap. 11. which mentions only two methods, whereby certificate perſons can gain ſettlements in pariſhes, to which they come with certificates, viz. taking a leaſe of a tenement of 10 l. per annum, or executing an annual office.

An eſtate of a man's own, from which he cannot be removed, has been, by conſtruction, (and a very reaſonable one too) holden to be within the ſtatute: for it would be a very hard thing to remove a man from his own eſtate, and the rule holds as well in the caſe of a certificate perſon as in any other caſe, "that no "man ought to be removed from his own property "and eſtate." The principle of this determination is, becauſe a property of a man's own is a ſtronger caſe than hiring another perſon's of 10 l. per annum value.

The true queſtion is, "whether D. H. acquired "ſuch a right, that he became irremoveable, or not?"

He had acquired a poſitive right by twenty years poſſeſſion; which is much more than a mere negative right or a bar. This was ſuch a poſitive right as would have ſufficed to ſupport an action. He might have brought an ejectment on a twenty years poſſeſſion. Therefore it is diſtinguiſhable from the caſe of a bar, (a mere negative right) or a limitation: for it does not merely bar the remedy; but it gives a right on which he may recover in ejectment. As to the ſecond queſtion, The children of all parents muſt have the ſettlement of the father till they acquire another for themſelves. Here the ſon is not ſtated to have acquired one of his own. Therefore he had ſuch as he derived from his father. And his father had gained one in Cold Aſhton. And there is no ground here to ſay that the ſon muſt neceſſarily be taken to have left his family before the time that the father acquired a full and comple ſettlement in Cold Aſhton for himſelf. Therefore I think the ſeſſion's order, which fixes the paupers on Cold Aſhton, ought to be affirmed.

Per curiam. Let the order of the ſeſſions be affirmed, and let the order of the two juſtices be quaſhed. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 444.

Eaſter, 31 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Caverſwall.

On a motion to quaſh two orders, viz. one made by two juſtices for removing S. B. M. his wife, and five children from Trentham to Caverſwall, in the county of Stafford. The other, an order of ſeſſions confirming the order of the juſtices.

Caſe. S. B. the pauper was hired for a year, and ſerved a year in Caverſwall. He was afterwards hired for a year to E. B. of Trentham, at 5 l. wages, and ſerved him till within three weeks of the end of the year: on ſome diſpute ariſing between him and his maſter, he was, with his own conſent, diſcharged from his ſervice, and received all his wages, except what was deducted for the three weeks. On his leaving his ſervice he went to London, and was abſent about a fortnight. On his return to the country, at Mrs. B.'s requeſt, (his maſter being then from home) he went again into their ſervice; and within a week after the expiration of the firſt year, his ſaid maſter hired him again for another year; and he ſerved him, in Trentham, for about ſix months of the ſecond year, and then left him.

The ſeſſions being of opinion, "That as the pauper "had abſolutely quitted his ſervice before the firſt year "was expired, the ſubſequent ſervice, under the ſecond hiring, though with the ſame maſter, could not "be taken in aid ſo as to make up a year's ſervice, "and give a ſettlement within the meaning of ſtat. "8 & 9 W. 3." confirmed the order of removal from Trentham to Caverſwall.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, on ſhewing cauſe on this rule, the court gave their opinion:

Lord Mansfield ſaid, the determinations on theſe poor laws ought to be according to plain common ſenſe, and with the leaſt ſubtlety poſſible.

A hiring for a year was neceſſary, under ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 11. ſect. 7. a ſervice for a year was added by ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 30. ſect. 4.

Where the maſter gives leave, it is a continuance in the ſame ſervice: it has not been required that the hiring for the whole year ſhould be ſtrictly reckoned from the firſt moment of the ſervice; but it ſhall be conſidered as ſufficient, that there were both a hiring for a year, and a ſervice for a year.

Here was a chaſm of a fortnight or three weeks. And the firſt contract was abſolutely diſſolved, and ſo continued for a fortnight or three weeks; therefore this laſt ſervice cannot be connected with the former part of the year. For if a chaſm of a fortnight or three weeks be not a diſcontinuance of the ſervice, it will be hard to ſay what is. Therefore I hold, in this caſe, there was no ſettlement gained in Trentham.

Per curiam. Let both orders be affirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 461.

On a motion to quaſh two orders, viz. one an order of two juſtices for removing J. M. H. his wife, and five children, from Cirenceſter to Painſwick, both in the county of Glouceſter. The other an order of ſeſſions confirming the order.

Caſe. On the 13th day of September 1737, J. M. the pauper was bound apprentice by indenture, to one H. P. of Painſwick, taylor, for ſeven years, and lived with him, as his apprentice, in the ſaid pariſh of Painſwick, for three years and upwards; and then, the ſaid P. failing, the ſaid J. M. left him, and never returned to him again. That in the year 1753, the ſaid J. M. took a houſe lying in the ſaid pariſh of Cirenceſter, of one T. C. for a year, at the yearly rent of 32 s. and 6 s. and agreed to pay the land-tax and poor's taxes, and all the other taxes, for the ſaid houſe, for the ſaid year.

That the poor's rate of the ſaid pariſh of Cirenceſter being produced in court at the ſaid trial of the ſaid appeal, it appeared, from them, to the court, that the poor's taxes for the ſaid houſe, during the year the ſaid J. M. rented the ſame, were rated or charged in the manner following, viz. "T. C. or tenant."

That the ſaid J. M. occupied the ſaid houſe the ſaid year, for which he took the ſame, and more, and paid the ſaid year's rent and the land-tax, and poor's rate, and all other parochial taxes for the ſaid houſe, during the whole time that he ſo as aforeſaid occupied the ſame houſe; and had ſeveral receipts given to him, in his own name, by the overſeers of the poor of the pariſh of Cirenceſter, for the ſeveral payments by him to them made to the poor's rates of the ſame pariſh; one only of which receipts was produced and read in court at the ſaid trial: but that the ſaid J. M. did not know whether his name was or was not inſerted in the ſaid rates.

The ſaid T. C. during the whole time of the ſaid J. M.'s ſo occupying the ſaid houſe as aforeſaid, lived five miles diſtant from the ſaid pariſh of Cirenceſter.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on this rule, the court gave their opinion.

Three Judges (Lord Manſfield being abſent) were clear about this matter, that the pauper was ſufficiently rated to gain him a ſettlement in Cirenceſter.

Per curiam. Let both orders be quaſhed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 465.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt quaſhing two orders, viz. an original order of two juſtices made for taxing, rating, and aſſeſſing, the inhabitants of the tything of Milland, in and part of the pariſh of St. Peter's Cheeſehill, in the ſame county; and the order of ſeſſions confirming it.

The queſtion before the court was, whether it was "ſufficiently ſtated, that both theſe places, (viz. Milland and St. Peter's) lie within the ſame hundred:" which is a circumſtance eſſentially neceſſary to be aſcertained, in order to give the two juſtices any juriſdiction in the preſent caſe.

After hearing the arguments of the council for and againſt the rule, the court thought it beſt to ſend it back to the ſeſſions, in order to have the matter better ſtated and explained.

On the matter being brought before the court again, the council for the orders prayed the opinion of the court, and the council againſt them candidly owning, that as the facts were now ſtated, he could not contend but that it does appear (ſubſtantially) to be a hundred, though the diviſion was called by another name.

The court diſcharged the rule to ſhew cauſe, and affirmed the two orders, Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 577.

Hilary, 32 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Weſtbury.

On a motion to quaſh two orders, viz. one an order of two juſtices for removing W. S. and S. his wife from St. Cuthbert in Wells to Weſtbury, both in the county of Somerſet. The other an order of the ſeſſions confirming the order of the juſtices.

Caſe. W. S. the pauper, being ſettled in St. Cuthbert's in Wells, was bound an apprentice on the 4th Dec. 1753, to J. C. who then, and for ſeveral years before, reſided in Weſtbury, but whoſe legal ſettlement was at Harptree, a neighbouring pariſh; and accordingly entered into the ſervice of the ſaid J. C. on the ſaid 4th December. The ſaid J. C. having been before applied to by the pariſh officers of Weſtbury, to obtain a certificate from Harptree, (which he then promiſed to do) did afterwards, on the 26th of the ſame month, obtain a certificate from Harptree, owning him to be their inhabitant legally ſettled; which certificate was, the ſame day, delivered to the overſeers of Weſtbury.

W. S. the pauper, ſerved the ſaid J. C. under the ſaid indenture, from the ſaid 4th December for three years, and reſided all that time with the ſaid J. C. in Weſtbury, and then married the ſaid S.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on this rule, the court gave their opinion:

Adjudged, That in this caſe an apprentice to a certificate-man does not gain a ſettlement, where the maſter (being certificated at the time ſuch apprentice was bound) obtains and delivers a certificate, before the apprentice has ſerved him forty days; for by ſtat. 12 Ann. cap. 18. this is deemed a condition precedent to the apprentice's gaining a ſettlement, "That he muſt have been bound to and ſerved for forty days a maſter who did not either come into or reſide in the pariſh by licence of a certificate." Therefore the court quaſhed both the orders. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 470.

Eaſter, 32 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Shenſton.

On a motion to quaſh two orders, viz. one an order of two juſtices for removing J. L. and A. his wife, from the pariſh of Gratwich to Shenſton, both in the county of Stafford. The other an order of ſeſſions, confirming ſuch order of the juſtices.

Caſe. The ſaid J. L. the pauper, having gained a ſettlement at Shenſton, by a year's hearing and ſervice, afterwards, about fifteen years ago, took a houſe in the pariſh of Gratwich, at 30*s.* a year, which he has enjoyed ever ſince, till removed by this order; and five years ago took two acres of land in the pariſh of King's Bromley in the county of Stafford, for the growing of potatoes, from Candlemas to Michaelmas, for 9*l.* and at the ſame time, and from the ſame perſon took, in the aforeſaid pariſh, half an acre of land, at 40*s.* for the like term; and paid his rent for all the ſaid premiſes, which were of the aforeſaid value.

The pauper entered on and enjoyed the land during the ſaid term; and the latter part of the time, to wit between Midſummer and Michaelmas, lodged above forty days in the pariſh of King's Bromley, where the lands lay for the convenience of digging up and diſpoſing of his potatoes.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on this rule, the court gave their opinion:

Lord Manſfield. This matter ſtands on a ſingle queſtion, "Whether this man's taking above 10*l.* a year in the manner ſtated, is a ſettlement?"

Stat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. and the certificate act of 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 11. ought to be conſidered together, being in part material. There being no determination to the contrary, I have no doubt but that this is a ſettlement, on the acts here ſtated.

Per curiam. Let the rule be made abſolute for quaſhing both the orders. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 474.

Eaſter, 32 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Nether-Heyford.

On a motion to quaſh two orders, viz. an order of two juſtices for removing J. G. and his wife, from Kiſlingbury to Nether-Heyford, both in the county of Northampton; the other an order of ſeſſions confirming the order of the ſaid juſtices.

Caſe. The pauper's laſt ſervice for a year was at a farm-houſe, called Dirt-houſe, which the pauper ſometimes ſaid was in the pariſh of Nether-Heyford, and at other times that it was in another pariſh (named in the order of ſeſſions;) but they ſtated that it laid in one or the other of the ſaid two pariſhes.

This matter by conſent was ſent back to the ſeſſions, to ſtate to the court which pariſh the ſaid Dirt-houſe ſtands in, and on the return thereof it was moved to file the new order of ſeſſions, which was granted.

After hearing the arguments of council on both ſides on ſhewing cauſe, the court gave their opinion:

Lord Manſfield. This caſe turns on this ſingle queſtion, "Whether his abſence of five weeks was a diſſolution of the contract?" If he had his miſtreſs's leave, it was not. If he had it not, it was. And we are all of opinion, that it was only an abſence with leave; for it appears that both parties conſidered the contract between them as ſubſiſting and not diſſolved. He paid her the whole that he had earned in the five weeks that he was abſent, that is, he voluntarily deducted it from the wages ſhe laid down to him, conſidering himſelf as her ſervant during that time; for otherwiſe the deduction could not have been a deduction of the particular ſum earned by him, but a deduction in proportion of his whole year's wages to the time of his abſence. And he looked on himſelf as liable to be called back within the five weeks. Therefore it was only a leave to be abſent for the whole time, or for part of the time, as ſhe ſhould call him back, ſooner or later. And as ſhe did not call him back ſooner, it was a leave for the whole five weeks. We are, upon the whole circumſtances of the caſe ſpecially ſtated, of opinion, "that the contract was not diſſolved."

Per curiam. Let the rule be made abſolute, and let both orders be quaſhed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 479.

On a motion to quaſh two orders, viz. One an order of two juſtices, for removing J. P. W. from Corfe Caſtle in the county of Dorſet to Weyhill in the county of Hants; the other, an order of ſeſſions, confirming the order of the ſaid juſtices.

Caſe. T. W. deceaſed, being ſettled in Corfe Caſtle about 1711, had iſſue the pauper, who continued there with his father, till he was eight years of age; at which time, his father being under misfortunes, R. P. Eſq; who then lived in the pariſh of Worth Matraverſe, in the county of Dorſet, took the ſaid pauper into his family, out of charity, and gave him his meat, drink, lodging, and clothes, while with him, which was about two years in Worth Matraverſe aforeſaid, and afterwards four years more in the pariſh of Weyhill, to which pariſh the ſaid P. and his family removed.

There was no contract between the parties, in relation to the pauper's ſervice, as to wages or other gratuity to be paid him.

While he continued with the ſaid P. he was employed in running on errands, or whatever elſe he was bid by the ſaid P. or his ſervants. That no wages were ever paid or given him. And that, in the pauper's apprehenſion, he was, during all the ſaid time aforeſaid, at liberty to quit ſuch ſervice, or to be turned off by the ſaid P. The pauper quitted the ſaid P. and the ſaid pariſh of Weyhill, after reſiding there as aforeſaid, and has done no act to gain a ſettlement ſince, except as aforeſaid.

The ſeſſions were of opinion, "that at this diſtance "of time, a hiring for a year, according to the ſta-"tute, between the ſaid P. and the pauper's father, "ought to be preſumed." So they adjudged the ſettlement of the pauper was in the pariſh of Weyhill, and confirmed the order of the two juſtices accordingly.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, the court gave their opinion.

The court ſaid they were clear this was no hiring at all; no contract: but that the pauper was taken out of charity; when he came to the age of fourteen years, and was capable of doing more ſervice, then he left the ſaid P. They ſaid, where there is a hiring ſtated, the court will preſume it to have been a regular one, unleſs the reverſe appears.

Per curiam. Let the rule be made abſolute, and both the orders be quaſhed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 491.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions, made for diſcharging an order of two juſtices, made for removing of E. M. ſpinſter from Chriſtchurch to St. Matthew's Bethnal Green, both in the county of Middleſex.

Caſe. E. M. on the 24th of Auguſt, 1757, was hired by one R. G. of Chriſtchurch for a year, and continued in ſuch ſervice from the ſaid 24th of Auguſt till the 7th of Auguſt then next following, when ſhe was taken with fits, and rendered incapable of ſervice. Her maſter being taken ill, and diſturbed by her fits, her miſtreſs deſired the ſaid E. M.'s ſiſter to take the ſaid E. M. to one Mr. L.'s in the ſaid pariſh of St. Matthew's Bethnal Green, and to requeſt Mrs. L. to receive her into their houſe, that ſhe might be there under the care of her ſiſter; but if the ſaid Mrs. L. refuſed to admit her, ſhe was then to bring her back to her maſter's houſe. Mr. L. received her, and ſhe reſided there about five days, and then was taken into the hoſpital. The day after E. M. came to Mr. L.'s, he went to her maſter's houſe to fetch away her clothes, and her miſtreſs gave her 2 s. which, with what ſhe had received before, made up her whole year's wages. No words of diſcharge paſſed between the ſaid E. M. and her miſtreſs. The ſaid E. M. looked on herſelf as then diſcharged from the ſaid ſervice, but believed, that had ſhe recovered, her maſter would have taken her again into his ſervice.

The ſaid E. M. continued under this infirmity till after the year, from the time of hiring, was expired, and never returned again into her ſaid ſervice. On the 17th of Auguſt, 1758, her maſter hired another ſervant in her ſtead.

The appellants admit, that the ſaid E. M. was legally ſettled in St. Matthew's, unleſs a ſubſequent ſettlement was gained by her in Chriſtchurch, under the afore-mentioned circumſtances.

The ſeſſions, on conſideration of the matter, allowed of the appeal, and vacated the juſtices order; and further ordered, that the ſaid E. M. ſhould be removed from St. Matthew's Bethnal Green to Chriſtchurch, and required the pariſh of Chriſtchurch to receive the ſaid E. M. and provide for her, till they could free themſelves from ſuch burthen by due courſe of law.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on this rule, the court gave their opinion:

Lord Mansfield This muſt appear a very clear caſe to any perſon of common ſenſe and underſtanding. It is certainly a fair bona fide ſervice for a year, without any fraud on either ſide, either of the maſter or of the ſervant. If the maſter gives his ſervant leave to go on any other ſervice, or to be abſent for a ſhort time, and pays him the whole wages, this is a fair bona fide ſervice. If the ſervant is taken ill, by the act of God, it is a condition incident to humanity, and is implied in all contracts. Therefore the maſter is bound to provide for and take care of the ſervant ſo taken ill in his ſervice, and cannot deduct wages in proportion to the continuance of the ſervant's ſickneſs.

I ſee no difference between ſuch an accident of ſickneſs happening in the middle or the end of the year: it is equally the act of Providence, and not the fault of the ſervant.

Per curiam. Let the order of ſeſſions be confirmed, and the order of the two juſtices be quaſhed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 494.

Eaſter, 33 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Berwick St. John.

On a motion to quaſh two orders, viz. one of two juſtices for the removal of B. B. M. his wife and two children from Hanley in the county of Dorſet to Berwick St. John's in the county of Wilts; the other an order of ſeſſions confirming ſuch order.

Caſe. In September 1756, B. B. being then an unmarried man, and legally ſettled in Hanley, happening to meet Mr. S. J. then head keeper of Ruſhmore-Lodge, (one of the lodges of Cranborne-Chaſe,) who reſided there, which lies within the pariſh of Berwick St. John's aforeſaid, and had then lately parted with one E. H. who had been for many years one of his ſervants or under-keepers, at the wages of 3 l. a year, and a keeper's livery, beſides meat, drink, and lodging. The ſaid Mr. J. addreſſed the ſaid B. B. in theſe words: "Do you like the life of a keeper?" which he anſwered in the affirmative. The ſaid Mr. J. further ſaid, "Then go into Ned H.'s place; you ſhall "want no encouragement; and I'll give you a ſuit of "clothes immediately." The ſaid B. B. readily agreed thereto; and, without further converſation, went directly into the ſaid ſervice, and remained there for the ſpace of three years, living during that time with his maſter at Ruſhmore-Lodge, within the pariſh of Berwick St. John's aforeſaid.

Soon after entering into the ſaid ſervice, he was furniſhed with a keeper's livery; was, while he lived there, provided with meat, drink, and lodging, and at the end of the three years was paid 9 l. for his ſervice. When the converſation firſt paſſed between the ſaid B. B. and Mr. J. B. B. did not know on what terms the ſaid H. had ſerved the ſaid Mr. J. The ſaid B. B.'s ſervice being agreeable, the queſtion, "whether or no he was at liberty to quit it?" never occurred to him; but that in his apprehenſion, if it had been diſagreeable, he ſhould have conſidered himſelf at liberty to have quitted it, as nothing to the contrary had been agreed between them. The ſaid B. B. thought he ought to be paid the ſame wages H.

had; but did not conſider himſelf as having a legal title to wages, ſince there had been no mention of any between them. The ſaid B. B. after leaving the ſaid ſervice, married the ſaid M. his now wife, and had iſſue by her three children, mentioned in the order, and has done no act to gain a ſettlement but as aforeſaid. Therefore the ſeſſions were of opinion, "that "the ſettlement was in the pariſh of Berwick St. "John's," and confirmed the order of the juſtices.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on this rule, the court gave their opinion.

Lord Mansfield. This man ſerved three years, and received three years wages: it is objected, "that he "was never hired at all."

It is admitted, "that if he was hired at all, it "would, by law, be a hiring for a year." And on the diſcourſe, ſtated in the order, between the ſaid B. B. and Mr. J. it is a clear hiring; for H. was a hired ſervant. Therefore the juſtices have done right.

Three of the judges concurred with the Chief Juſtices.

On a motion to quaſh two orders, viz. one made by two juſtices for removing A. B. widow of J. B. from St. Margaret's, Weſtminſter, to Fulham; the other an order of ſeſſions confirming the order of the ſaid juſtices.

Caſe. J. B. deceaſed, late huſband to A. being ſettled at Fulham fourteen years ago, afterwards took a meſſuage in St. Margaret's, Weſtminſter, at 6*l.* 10*s.* a year, which he occupied for ſeveral years; and during ſuch occupation he the ſaid J. B. was poſſeſſed, and taxed by the aſſeſſors of the land-tax there, in proportion to his rent, for the land-tax due in reſpect of the ſaid premiſes, and paid the ſame to the collector of the land-tax in the ſaid pariſh of St. Margaret's: afterwards he was allowed the land-tax ſo paid as aforeſaid by his landlord on ſettling with him for the rent of the ſaid houſe. The ſaid J. B. never gained any ſettlement in any pariſh ſince. A. his widow, and her four children, by him, are become poor; and neither the ſaid A. or either of the ſaid children, have gained any ſettlement in their own right. The ſeſſions therefore ratified and confirmed the original order, and diſmiſſed the appeal.

After hearing the arguments of the council on the rule to ſhew cauſe,

The court, on the ground of this being a ſettled point, that the parties had gained no ſettlement by ſuch occupation, made the rule abſolute, and quaſhed both the orders. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 488.

On a motion to quaſh two orders, viz. one, an order of two juſtices for removing E. Y. the younger, R. his wife, and M. his child, from Chilham to Preſton, near Feverſham, both in the county of Kent; the other an order of ſeſſions confirming the order of the ſaid juſtices.

Caſe. E. Y. the younger being legally ſettled at Preſton, and not being then a widower, on the 25th day of January, without the conſent of his father, who was then living, was married by licence in the pariſh church of Tenham to R. D. (who was ſettled in the ſaid pariſh of Tenham, and who is removed to Preſton by the ſaid order, as the wife of the ſaid pauper) the ſaid E. Y. being then an infant of twenty years old; and that afterwards the ſaid R. was brought to bed in the pariſh of Chilham of the ſaid M. removed by the order: whereon they adjudged and ordered, that the ſaid order ſo made by the two juſtices be, in all points, confirmed.

The council who moved to quaſh the order took exception to the part of them, which relates to the woman and child: for that the marriage was abſolutely void, by the expreſs words of ſtat. 26 Geo. 2. cap. 23. as the pauper not being a widower, and being under age, was married by licence, without the conſent of his father, (who was then living.)

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on ſhewing cauſe, the court gave their opinion.

Lord Mansfield. The marriage-act is made againſt both; and the marriage is declared "abſolutely null "and void to all intents and purpoſes whatſoever."

The other judges on the bench concurred with the Chief Juſtice in opinion.

Per curiam. Let the orders as to the man be confirmed, but as to the woman and child let them be quaſhed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 486.

Michaelmas, 33 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of St. Matthew, Bethnal Green.

On a motion made to quaſh an order of ſeſſions, made for diſcharging an order of two juſtices, made for removing M. C. widow, and her three children, from the pariſh of St. Matthew Bethnal Green to the precinct of St. Katherine.

Caſe. C. the pauper, was born in St. Matthew's Bethnal Green, of a father ſettled in St. Leonard's Shoreditch, became wife of A. C. born in St. Matthew's Bethnal Green, but ſon of a foreigner who had no ſettlement at all, and of a mother ſtated to have been born in St. Katherine's; the children are the iſſue of that marriage. The queſtion was, "Whether M. and "her children are ſettled in St. Katherine's, or not?"

The objection taken to the order of ſeſſions, by the council who moved to quaſh the ſame, was, "That "the ſettlement of the anceſtor ſhall here take place of "the ſettlement by birth:" and in arguing the matter, treated the ſame as a derivative ſettlement.

After hearing the council for and againſt the rule, the court gave their opinion.

Lord Mansfield. There is no difference between an acquired and a derivative ſettlement. The father's ſettlement is the ſettlement of the children. The father here, was the ſon of a foreigner, who never gained any ſettlement, and of Eliz. Taylor, who was born in St. Katherine's.

On this order, as ſtated, it muſt be taken, that St. Katherine's, where E. T. was born, was the place of her ſettlement; conſequently, A. C. her ſon, was legally ſettled there.

Per curiam. Let the order of ſeſſions be quaſhed, and the original order affirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 482.

Eaſter, 2 Geo. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of St. Devereux.

On a motion to quaſh two orders, viz. one of two juſtices for the removal of S. M. from Much Dewchurch in the county of Hereford to St. Devereux in the ſame county: the other an order of ſeſſions confirming the order of the ſaid juſtices.

Caſe. S. M. was, before her ſuppoſed marriage with J. M. hereafter named, ſettled in St Devereux, and the ſaid J. M. was and is, legally ſettled in Langaran in the ſaid county; and was not in the pariſh of St. Devereux at the time of the order. One J. B. proved on oath, "that he and one W. J. were pre"ſent on the 7th day of February 1758, when S. and "J. M. were married in the pariſh of St. Devereux, "by bans." The entry of ſuch marriage in the pariſh-regiſter was made as follows: "1758, J. M. and J. "S. were married by bans." But ſuch entry was not ſigned by the miniſter, parties, or witneſſes, and therefore the ſeſſions were of opinion, "that ſuch marriage "was not legally proved;" and confirmed the order.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on ſhewing cauſe, the court gave their opinion.

Lord Mansfield. It was not incumbent on the perſons married to prove, "that bans were publiſhed;" nor does the entry directed to be made affect the validity of the marriage

Per curiam. Let the rule be made abſolute for quaſhing both orders. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 506.

Trinity, 2 Geo. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of Stockland.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions made for quaſhing an order of two juſtices made for the removal of J. M. and M. his wife, and ſix children, from Stockland in the county of Devon, to the pariſh of Chardland in the county of Somerſet, and to affirm the original order.

Caſe. The ſettlement of the paupers appeared to depend on the queſtion, "whether J. and E. the father "and mother of the ſaid J. M. were to be conſidered "as huſband and wife at the time of his birth."

The ſeſſions were of opinion, "that the ſaid J. M. "and E. M. are ſufficiently proved to have been law- "fully married at the time of the birth of their ſaid "ſon; and that the ſettlement of the ſaid paupers is in "the pariſh of Stockland."

Lord Mansfield ſeemed to think that thirty years cohabitation as man and wife was ſufficient proof to the juſtices to found an order of removal on. However, a rule to ſhew cauſe was granted.

On the laſt day of term the council for the motion gave up his objection, and by conſent the order of ſeſſions was affirmed, and the recognizance was diſcharged. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 508.

Michaelmas, 4 Geo. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of Titchfield.

On ſhewing cauſe why an order of ſeſſions, made for quaſhing an original order of two juſtices for removing of P. W. A. his wife, and two children, from Titchfield to Milford, both in the county of Hants, ſhould not be quaſhed; and why the ſaid original order ſhould not be affirmed.

The council in ſupport of the order of ſeſſions urged, that it appeared from times and dates, that P. W. muſt have been a married man when he bound himſelf apprentice; and as ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. requires celibacy in a hired ſervant in one clauſe, the ſubſequent clauſe concerning apprentices muſt be conſtrued alſo to require them to be unmarried.

That W. the pauper, was ſettled in Bewley by inhabiting forty days with his maſter's conſent. And the delivering up the indentures was not a ſufficient diſcharge of the apprentice without cancelling them.

The council againſt the order of ſeſſions argued, that ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. does not require this circumſtance of celibacy in an apprentice, though it does in a hired ſervant. Sect. 7. of this ſtatute relating to hired ſervants, ſays, "if any unmarried perſon." Sect. 8. ſays, relating to apprentices, "if any perſon:" ſo that the ſtatute itſelf makes an eſſential difference between the two caſes. There is no difference between the indenture's being given up, and its being cancelled. They amount to the ſame thing.

The court agreeing in opinion with the council againſt the order of ſeſſions, the order of ſeſſions was quaſhed, and the original order affirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 511.

Michaelmas, 4 Geo. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of St. Peter's in Dorcheſter.

On a motion to quaſh two orders, viz. one an order of two juſtices for the removal of J. M. C. his wife, and two children, from the pariſh of the Holy Trinity in the borough of Dorcheſter, to that of St. Peter's in the ſame borough: the other an order of ſeſſions, confirming the order of the two juſtices.

Caſe. J. M. was born in the pariſh of the Holy Trinity; but his father's ſettlement was in St. Peter's. Soon after his birth his father died, and his mother marrying again to one E. O. an inhabitant of the pariſh of the Holy Trinity, the pauper her ſon removed with his mother to the houſe of his ſtep-father, and reſided there till the age of ſixteen; during all which time he was employed by his ſtep-mother in his trade of a button-maker; who had the benefit of his labour without any other recompence than maintenance and pocket-money, as the ſtep-father thought fit.

About the age of ſixteen the ſaid J. M. inſiſted on a larger allowance for his labour, and the ſtep-father refuſing the ſame, he left him and went to Briſtol. After continuing there ſome time, he returned to the pariſh of the Holy Trinity, where he and his ſtep-father came to an agreement, by which the ſon was to live with him in his houſe, and to work as heretofore at his trade, and be paid at the rate of one penny per groſs for the buttons he ſhould make, deducting at the rate of 5 s. a week for his meat, drink, waſhing, and lodging. There was no other hiring or agreement between the parties.

On this agreement the ſaid J. M. lived and worked with his ſtep-father in the pariſh of the Holy Trinity four or five years, and received wages, and paid for his maintenance at the rate aforeſaid.

The ſtep-father was examined as a witneſs, and declared he thought himſelf at liberty to have turned the ſaid J. M. off, or the ſaid J. M. to have left him at any time, if either party had been ſo inclined, there being nothing in the agreement between them to the contrary. The ſaid J. M. had done no other act to gain a ſettlement: and his wife and children had no other ſettlement than what they derived from him. On theſe facts, the ſeſſions were opinion, "that his ſettle- "ment is in the pariſh of St. Peter's;" and they confirmed the order.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on this motion, the court gave their opinion.

Lord Mansfield. This is the caſe of a workman hired to work by the piece. Indeed, hiring in general and indefinitely gives a preſumption of a hiring for a year, where the nature of the ſervice and ſubſequent facts concur to render it probable that it was ſo intended: but the nature of the preſent ſervice is quite otherwiſe. In this caſe it is very clear, that there was no hiring for a year either expreſs or implied. Therefore the rule muſt be diſcharged.

Per curiam. Let the original order, and order of ſeſſions, be confirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 513.

Eaſter, 5 Geo. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of Burton-Bradſtock.

On a motion to quaſh two orders, viz. one an order of two juſtices, made for the removal of J. C. and C. his wife, from Bothenhampton in the county of Dorſet to Burton-Bradſtock in the ſame county. The other an order of ſeſſions, confirming the order of the ſaid juſtices.

Caſe. J. C. being ſettled at Beamiſter, in the county of Dorſet, was on the 28th March 1754, bound apprentice to J. M. of Bridport, in the county of Dorſet, then owner of a ſhip, called The John and Samuel, to ſerve him as an apprentice, and to learn navigation and the art of a ſailor, for the term of ſeven years. The ſaid J. C. did, immediately after executing the indenture of apprenticeſhip, enter on board the ſaid ſhip, and did there ſerve the ſaid J. M. for the ſaid term, as his apprentice.

The ſaid ſhip, during all the time of his apprenticeſhip, was employed in a coaſting-trade, from a place called Bridport-Harbour, in the county of Dorſet, to many other ports and places; during all which time Bridport-Harbour was conſidered by the captain and ſailors as the proper home of the ſaid ſhip, and to which ſhe returned at the end of every voyage, and always took her departure from thence when ſhe made a voyage.

While the ſaid J. C. was in his apprenticeſhip, the ſhip was many times in Bridport-Harbour, viz. for a fortnight, a month, and ſometimes two months at a time; but never in any other harbour, port, or place, for more than a month at a time.

On the 7th December, 1760, the ſaid ſhip arrived in Bridport-Harbour, and remained there till the 22d January, 1761, being more than forty days; during which time the ſaid J. C. reſided, lodged, and ſerved the ſaid J. M. his maſter, as his apprentice, on board the ſaid ſhip, to take care of his maſter's goods and effects therein. The ſaid ſhip was never in any other harbour, port, or place, forty days together after that time.

On the 11th March, 1761, the ſaid ſhip again returned to Bridport-Harbour, and remained there till after the 25th day of the ſame month, on which day the ſaid J. C.'s apprenticeſhip expired; during which time, the ſaid J. C. reſided, lodged, and ſerved the ſaid J. M. as his apprentice, on board the ſaid ſhip, to take care of his goods and effects as aforeſaid.

Since the apprenticeſhip expired, the ſaid J. C. married C. his preſent wife, and has gained no ſettlement, ſave as aforeſaid.

On theſe facts the ſeſſions adjudged the ſaid J. C. ſettled in the pariſh of Burton-Bradſtock, and confirmed the order of removal.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on this rule, the court gave their opinion.

Lord Mansfield. Lying in a pariſh is the ſame, whether it be on board a ſhip, or on land. Caſual reſidences, or accidental inhabitants, are out of the queſtion in the preſent caſe. The ſervice was bona fide, without any pretence of colluſion, performed in the pariſh of Burton-Bradſtock. Therefore there ſeems to be no material difference between this caſe, and the ordinary caſes of ſetttlements in pariſhes by apprenticeſhip.

Wilmot, Yates, and Aſton, Juſtices, gave their opinions at large, and concurred with the Chief Juſtice.

Per curiam. Let the rule be diſcharged, and the orders affirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 531.

Hilary, 6 Geo. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of Silcheſter.

On a motion to quaſh two orders, viz. one an order of two juſtices made for the removal of J. M. a ſingle woman, from Enborn in Yorkſhire to Silcheſter in Hants: the other an order of ſeſſions confirming the order of the ſaid juſtices.

Caſe. In July 1764, J. M. the pauper, together with one G. W. was ſent by an order of removal under the hands and ſeals of two juſtices, from the pariſh of Newbury to that of Enborn, by the names of G. W. and J. his wife: and there was no appeal from the ſaid order to the next, or any other ſeſſions: afterwards the ſaid pariſh of Enborn finding that J. was not the wife of G. W. removed her, by an original order, by the name of J. M. ſingle woman, from the ſaid pariſh of Enborn to the pariſh of Silcheſter, under an order of two juſtices. From which order the pariſh of Silcheſter appealed. And on hearing the appeal, it was proved, "that the ſaid J. never "was married to the ſaid G. W." therefore the ſeſſions affirmed the order of the two juſtices.

The council, who was to have ſupported the orders, acknowledged it to have been fully ſettled, "that an "order of removal to a pariſh, confirmed without appeal by ſuch pariſh, concludes that pariſh againſt "all the world."

The court were ſo clear of the ſame opinion, that without hearing the council on the other ſide, they made the rule abſolute for quaſhing both orders. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 551.

Caſe. R. S. the huſband was hired for a year by W. P. at King's Weſton, at the wages of 5 l. per year and, under this contract, he ſerved the ſaid W. P. in King's Weſton, till within ten days of the end of the year, when the ſaid R. S. declaring to his maſter, "that he "wiſhed not to be ſettled in King's Weſton," aſked his leave to viſit his relations: to which his maſter agreed. After the year was expired, the ſaid R. S. returned to his maſter, and then hired himſelf to his ſaid maſter as a day-labourer, and continued with him three months. After R. S. returned, his maſter and he made up their accounts; and he allowed him for the time he had been abſent in the preceeding year out of his daily wages.

On ſhewing cauſe, the court held the ſaid R. S. to be ſettled in King's Weſton, and conſidered the leave and conſent of his maſter as fraudulent, and a mere evaſion of the ſettlement. Therefore they affirmed the order of ſeſſions, and quaſhed the order of the two juſtices. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 565.

Outlawry.

—— 1 W. & M. The King v. Tippin.

A perſon was outlawed on an information for ſeducing a young gentleman to marry a young woman of a lewd character, and fined 5000 l. And it was moved in behalf of the defendant, that he could not be fined on the outlawry, becauſe in miſdemeanor the outlawry does not enure as a conviction for the offence, as it does in caſes of treaſon and felony; but as a conviction of the contempt for not anſwering, which contempt is puniſhed by the forfeiture of his goods and chattels; and if he might be fined now, he muſt be fined again on the principal judgment. And the firſt was held to be irregular, for the outlawry in theſe caſes is not a conviction. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 494.

Michaelmas, 5 W. & M. The Attorney General v. Baden.

A. owed money to B. on a judgment, and to C. on bond; A. was outlawed at the ſuit of the obligee, and his lands ſeized on the outlawry; and the queſtion was, whether the conuſee of the judgment could extend theſe lands? And it was held that the outlawry ſhould be preferred, and that the King's hands ſhould not be amoved, unleſs the conuſee could ſhew covin and practice between the obligor and obligee. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 495.

Michaelmas, 6 W. & M. Green v. Mooer.

The caſe was this: the declaration was in Trinity term; the defendant imparles till Michaelmas term. In the vacation the plaintiff was outlawed, and then in Michaelmas term the defendant pleads the outlawry in bar, bar, but does not ſay the outlawry was ſince the laſt continuance, for it appears to be ſo here.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The plea is good enough.

Eyre, Juſtice. Since the record does appear, why ſhould it not be pleaded?

Per curiam. Let it go over till the next term; becauſe it being a juſt action, you may in the mean time reverſe the outlawry, and then may plead ſince the laſt continuance. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 11.

Trinity, 7 W. 3. The King v. Hornby.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a man be outlawed in this court, and the party's goods are ſeiſed into the King's hands, and then the outlawry is reverſed, there can be no reſtitution; becauſe this court cannot ſend a writ to the treaſurer of the Exchequer, and the court of Exchequer have no record before them to iſſue out a warrant for a reſtitution: ſo if an attainder be reverſed, the meſne profits taken into the Exchequer cannot be reſtored for the ſame reaſon; and alſo for that the King cannot have made a diſſeiſor, and the ſtatute gives a remedy only as to parliament. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 61.

Michaelmas, 7 W. & M. The King v. Hill.

It was argued, that though the ſtatute of recuſancy ſays, that all outlawries for recuſancy ſhall not be removed for want of form, yet in Serjeant Trinder's wife's caſe, 1 W. & M. it was adjudged in this court that it ſhould, that the ſtatute might be made ſenſe: but an indictment or information for recuſancy ſhall not be quaſhed for form; but yet on traverſe of the fact, and bail given, the outlawry ſhall be reverſed for form: to which the court agreed.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. On the reverſal of an outlawry in an information for ſending children beyond ſea to be bred papiſts, the defendant muſt plead inſtantly. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 141.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Arthur's Caſe. Error.

Arthur was outlawed for felony on five indictments, and afterwards came in, and was brought to the bar, and being aſked what he had to ſay, why judgment ſhould not be given, he produced five writs of error.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If there be no lands, the Attorney General may confeſs error, and then he ſhall plead preſently, and be tried on the indictments; if there be lands, there muſt be a ſcire facias againſt the Lords, mediate and immediate, to ſhew cauſe why he ſhould not have reſtitution. But if it be ſuggeſted on the roll that he has no lands, and the Attorney General confeſſes it, there needs no ſci. fa. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 495. Raym. vol. 1. p. 154.

Michaelmas, 9 W. 3. The King v. Harriſon and Duke.

The defendants were convicted and outlawed on informations of perjury, and the writ of exigent was filed; and it was moved that the court would pronounce judgment on the defendants, as the proſecutor could go no further; but the court ſaid they never knew any judgment given for a corporal puniſhment, even in the caſe of an outlawry, in the abſence of the party: when a man is outlawed for felony, there is never any award of execution againſt him till he is brought to the bar; and ſince in this caſe a corporal puniſhment would be part of the ſentence, they could not do it; and, on ſearch, no ſuch precedent could be found. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 156.

One H. was outlawed in two actions, one was for 10*l*, the other for 40*s*. and on reverſing the outlawry, the court took ſpecial bail for the firſt, and an appearance for the other, on ſtat. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18.

Note. The firſt recognizance was took purſuant to ſtat. 31 Eliz. c. 3. and now by ſtat. 4 & 5 W. & M. a perſon outlawed, except for treaſon, or felony, need not appear in perſon to reverſe it, but by attorney. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 496.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Matthews v. Erbo.

The court was moved to ſet aſide an execution on an outlawry againſt the defendant, on an affidavit that the defendant was an alien merchant, and lived beyond the ſea, and was reſiding there during all the time that the plaintiff proceeded to outlaw him. But it was denied by the whole court, becauſe by this means any perſon may contract debts, and then go beyond ſea, and ſo he will be out of the reach of the law. But the defendant may bring error, and reverſe the outlawry, if he pleaſes. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 349.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Anonymous.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. I never liked the exception for the county in an outlawry, though it has been done before I was born; but ſure the firſt that obtained it had good luck. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 337.

Eaſter, 12 W. 3. Lady Frankland v. Shanim.

In an action of debt on a bond, it was pleaded in bar, that in a former action on that bond, the defendant had pleaded the late ſtatute of the King, laying taxes on bonds for ſecurity of money, and that none ſhould recover ſuch debts if they had not taxed the ſame, and that on that plea the plaintiff was barred.

It was objected, that the ſtatute was only a temporary law, and now expired, and therefore the impediment being removed, the plaintiff ſhould recover; it was compared to the caſe of excommengement pleaded, where the judgment is, that the plaint remain without a day, until, &c. which is but a temporary plea, by which the parties are put out of court, but may be brought in by a re-ſummons, or re-attachment; but where the outlawry is pleaded in abatement after a pardon or reverſal thereof, the party muſt begin de novo.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Here the defendant had a good plea, when the firſt action commenced, and time ſhall not wear it out; and he obſerved, that Co. Lit. 128. b. and 135. b. is to be underſtood on this diſtinction, when the cauſe of action accrues to the plaintiff at a time at which he is under the diſability of outlawry; there the plea of outlawry in abatement ſhall quite overthrow the writ, and after removal thereof, he muſt begin de novo; but where the diſability of outlawry is only a temporary diſability, which does not abate the writ, but is only until, &c. and after removal thereof, he may re-continue the action by re-ſummons, &c. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 400.

Trinity, 12 W. 3. Hill v. Wilks.

In this caſe, it appearing to the court plainly, that W. had got H. outlawed when he was viſible, and to his knowledge eaſily might be ſerved with a proceſs; therefore he was ordered to reverſe it at his own charges. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 413.

Trinity, 12 W. 3. Wilbraham v. Doyley, or Doley. Error.

The court was moved to ſtop a writ of error out of Chancery, for refuſing an outlawry in the County Palatine of Cheſter, and 4 Inſt. 214. was urged, where Coke holds, that in a writ of error to Cheſter, a day ſhould be given for ſo long a time as that three county-courts might be held before the return of the writ into the King's Bench, which is four months; by which time the juſtices, or lieutenants within the ſame county, might redreſs the error, if they would.

On the other ſide it was urged, that though there was ſuch an antient uſage, yet now ſtat. 32 Hen. 8. c. 43. has taken away the antient courſe, and enacted, that the adminiſtration of juſtice uſed heretofore fore to be had at eight ſhire days, ſhould be hereafter executed by the Juſtice of Cheſter at two times in the year only, viz. at the ſeſſions next after Eaſter, and at the other ſeſſions next after Michaelmas, (which, by ſtat. 33 Hen 8. c. 13. is made moveable at the pleaſure of the juſtice, ſo as proclamation be made of the time (fifteen days before) in like manner as is practiſed in the County Palatine of Lancaſter. And by that ſtatute it is made impracticable in point of time; for if it ſhould be executed now, it would delay the parties at leaſt two years, inſtead of the four months delay before.

2dly, This cuſtom, if it now remained, extends only to caſes of judgments given by the judges by reaſon of the tenure, to ſave their fine; and therefore it does not extend to a fine, nor conſequently to this caſe, becauſe the judgment that he be outlawed is given to the coroners.

3dly, Before ſtat. 33 Hen. 8. c. 13. there were no outlawries in Cheſter, the electing of coroners in the ſame county being firſt appointed by the ſaid ſtatute, and therefore the cuſtom could not extend to judgments of outlawry.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, agreed in all the points, and ſaid, that there was no colour for the motion; and ſaid farther, that there was no Chief Juſtice of Cheſter before the time of Queen Elizabeth, there being but one juſtice before.

See the account of this cuſtom at large in Dyer. 345. 320-1. from whence Coke tranſcribes it in 4 Inſt. 212. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 591. Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 545.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. Wilbraham v. Doyley. Error.

On a writ of error to reverſe an outlawry in Cheſter, the defendant pleaded that no bail was put in before the allowance of the writ of error; according to ſtatute 31 Eliz. cap. 3. for error in reverſing outlawries.

Per curiam. This is no plea; for it is well enough, if bail be put in at any time before the reverſal. The error here was the want of the words, for the country. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 605.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. Anonymous.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. By an outlawry, a leaſe for years is forfeited before any ſeizure, and therefore if it be ſold after the outlawry, and before ſeizure, the King ſhall avoid the ſale; but if a perſon outlawed ſells an eſtate in fee before ſeizure, the ſale is good, and the King ſhall not have the pernancy of the profits; but if the ſale be after ſeizure, the ſale ſhall hold, but the King ſhall have the pernancy of the profit: but even in caſe of a leaſe, there ought to be an office found for the King, *Cro. An outlawry for high treaſon was reverſed, on the exception, that it did not appear where the firſt court was held. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 542.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Morgan v. Tomkins.

If there be an outlawry on an indictment, and that is afterwards ſet aſide, the judgment ſtands good and open to proceed upon; but if judgment be on an indictment by nil dicit, or any other judgment by the court, and that be reverſed, all is ſet at large, and there is an end of the indictment. And it has been held, in Keiling's time, that if a forcible entry were traverſed, yet there ſhould not be a reſtitution, in the caſe of The King v. Carle. But the contrary has been held ſince, and before; and that there is no way to prevent reſtitution, but by a certiorari, or pleading that the party had poſſeſſion for three years before, on ſtat. 39 Eliz.. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 116.

Eaſter, 4 Ann. Symmons v. Bingee and Cook.

The defendant Bingee being a feme, it was now moved on her behalf, that on filing common bail ſhe might have liberty to reverſe the outlawry.

Per curiam. The writ of error to reverſe the outlawry muſt be brought in the name of both the parties that are outlawed; and if one only appears, the other may be ſummoned and ſevered, and then the outlawry may be reverſed for the benefit of him who appears only. Before it can be reverſed for want of proclamations, the party outlawed muſt give bail to appear, and to anſwer in another action.

If the party outlawed comes in gratis on the return of the exigent, alias, or pluries, he may be admitted, by motion to reverſe the outlawry, for any other cauſe but want of proclamations, without putting in bail. If he comes in by a cepi corpus, then he ſhall not be admitted to reverſe the outlawry, without appearing in perſon, as in ſuch caſe he was obliged to do at common law; or putting in bail with the ſheriff for his appearance on the return of the cepi corpus, and on doing what the court ſhall order. Appearing by attorney is an indulgence given by ſtat. 4 & 5 W. & M. and the bail is to be ſpecial or common, according to the nature of the caſe, in this, as in other caſes. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 496.

Eaſter, 7 Ann. The Queen v. Lord Griffin.

Lord Griffin being brought up by habeas corpus into court upon his outlawry, deſired council to take exceptions to the ſaid outlawry.

Powell, Juſtice, (Holt, Chief Juſtice, being abſent) denied it; and ſaid, that though the ſtatute gives council in high treaſon at the trial, yet none is to be allowed after an outlawry, except the priſoner ſhew ſome particular error, on which the court may aſſign him council; but the court is his council, and will do him juſtice; and on that, execution was ordered to be awarded by rule of court: the ſolicitor-general then then moved, that ſome time might be pronounced, which he ſaid the Lord Chief Juſtice Holt told him was moſt proper. But the court ſaid, the practice had been otherwiſe; and directed that a rule ſhould be that they do execution generally. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 168.

Eaſter, 7 Ann. The Queen v. Cope. Error.

A writ of error was brought to reverſe an outlawry; the error for which it was reverſed was, becauſe it did not appear where the county court was held. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 173.

Michaelmas, 12 Ann. The Queen v. Stafford. Error.

Stafford had been outlawed for high treaſon, and had obtained from the crown a writ of error to reverſe this outlawry: and the Attorney-General had orders to confeſs in court the error aſſigned, which was an error in fact, viz.

That he was outlawed by a wrong addition; which the Attorney-General did accordingly; the court was therefore prayed, that the outlawry might be reverſed.

Parker, Chief Juſtice, was of opinion, that though in outlawry for treaſon there is no need of warning the Lords, of whom the lands are held by a ſcire facias, before the outlawry be reverſed, as muſt be done in caſe of felony, and outlawry for treaſon, as to the ter-tenants; for in caſe of treaſon, where the forfeiture is to the crown, the crown may grant theſe lands to others, who ought to be heard what they can ſay for themſelves before they loſe their lands.

He thought therefore there ſhould have been a ſcire facias to the ter-tenants, and grounded his opinion on a caſe in Hen. 4. where there was a ſcire facias to the ter-tenant; and though this was an outlawry for felony, yet the King's being immediate Lord, made it all one as if it had been an outlawry for treaſon.

And the entry, in caſe of felony, as may be ſeen in Cook's Entries 318. mentions the ſuing out of a ſcire facias as a thing of abſolute neceſſity, without which the judge could not reverſe the outlawry.

But upon ſearching into precedents, it was found, that in fact, in outlawries for treaſon, there uſed to be no ſcire facias; and the precedents being ſo, and it being a ſuppoſition, not of neceſſity, that the crown ſhould grant theſe lands, and then ouſt the patentees, by ſuffering a writ of error to be brought, the outlawry was reverſed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 188.

Hilary, 3 Geo. The Queen v. Simpſon.

In this caſe, which ſee fully ſtated in page 84 of this work,

Parker, Chief Juſtice obſerved, in the firſt caſe of outlawry for treaſon or felony, the law interprets the abſence of the party as a ſufficient evidence of his guilt; and without requiring further proof or ſatisfaction, the law accounts him guilty of the fact; corruption of blood and forfeiture of the eſtate enſues.

In real actions, the ſecond default is final and concluſive; and the court, without regarding the merits of the cauſe, will give judgment that he ſhall loſe his land.

Outlawry in leſſer crimes, or in perſonal actions, does not, as in the firſt caſe, in judgment of law, occaſion the party to be looked upon as guilty of the fact; or as in the ſecond caſe, occaſion a judgment for the King in demand, but yet is in its conſequences more penal and fatal than if it did.

For a reſtraint of the liberty of the party, if he can be found, the profits of the land, while the outlawry remains in force, and all his goods and chattels forfeited to the King, together with an excluſion from the benefit and protection of the law, follow on it. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 379.

Hilary, 8 Geo. The King v. The Marquis of Powis.

On a writ of error to reverſe an outlawry for high treaſon, the error aſſigned was, that the proceſs of outlawry againſt the Marquis was directed to the ſheriff of London, when he the Marquis lived in the pariſh of St. Giles's, in the county of Middleſex, which is an error in fact; for the proceſs of capias muſt be always directed to the ſheriff of the county were the party lives, and for this reaſon the outlawry was reverſed, on the confeſſion of the Attorney-General. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 27.

The priſoner being brought up on the 25th November, 1727, and the outlawry againſt him being read, he was called upon to know what he had to ſay why execution ſhould not be awarded; upon which he pleaded ore tenus, his being beyond ſea at the time of the outlawry pronounced; and the Attorney-General inſtantly replied ore tenus, that he was then within the realm, and traverſed that he was beyond ſea according to his plea, and offered an iſſue upon it; the defendant thereupon ſaid, that he joined iſſue; and the jury came inſtantly to the bar, and were ſworn. And then the council for the defendant (for it was urged he was to have council, as to fact and law both, in this collateral iſſue, though not on the indictment itſelf, the offence as to the coin being excepted out of the ſtatute of W. 3.) opened the iſſue, and ſeveral witneſſes were examined to prove him beyond ſea; and after the King's council had been heard, and had examined their witneſſes, the priſoner's council replied; and afterwards the evidence was ſummed up, and the jury found the iſſue for the defendant.

Upon bringing in the verdict, the defendant was immediately arraigned, and pleaded not guilty. And he was ordered to be tried at the bar the next term. On the firſt day of which, the Attorney General moved the court to appoint a day for trial; but the defendant not being at the bar, the court would make no rule, it being a capital caſe. And he was the next day brought to the bar, and then the time for trial was fixed; and upon the evidence the defendant was acquitted. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 824.

J. S. was outlawed on meſne proceſs at the ſuit of the plaintiff, and taken by a capias utlegatum, but ſuffered to eſcape by the defendant; whereon the plaintiff brought an action on the caſe qui tam for the ſaid eſcape; and whether the action lay, was the point before the court.

It was inſiſted for the defendant, that where the outlawry is on meſne proceſs, the party outlawed is in cuſtody merely at the ſuit of the King, and that the plaintiff has no intereſt in his body but where the outlawry is after judgment; the party is in execution for the plaintiff; Cro. Eliz. 606, 707. By the outlawry on meſne proceſs, the plaintiff is at the end of his ſuit; he cannot declare againſt the defendant, he muſt bring a new original by ſtat. 13 H. 4. 1. nor is the nature of the debt changed by the outlawry; all which the court admitted, and therefore the defendant's council would inſiſt that the plaintiff could have no loſs by the eſcape.

He then excepted to the declaration, viz. that the exigent was awarded in a foreign county; and then by ſtat. 6 H. 8. cap. 4. proclamation ſhould have been made in the county in which the defendant then was, and that not being done, the outlawry is utterly void by the expreſs proviſion of the ſtatute, and the ſheriff ſhall not be charged when the proceſs is void.

To this the Chief Juſtice ſaid, that the ſtatute is to be underſtood that the outlawry muſt be avoided by plea.

The council on the other ſide, to maintain the action, cited Cro. Eliz. 652. 2 Cro. 360. 1 Lutw. 122. Moor. 834. 2 Bulſt. 236. 1 Ro. Rep. 47. that it is enough there may be a poſſibility of damage to the plaintiff, and that the party outlawed cannot have his outlawry reverſed without ſecurity firſt given to appear to a new original; and therefore the plaintiff is delayed in the recovery of his debt, which is a damage: and the court being of this opinion, gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Fitz-Gibbons, p. 265.

Trinity, 6 Geo. 2. Ducket v. Martin. Error.

Pending error on an outlawry on meſne proceſs, the defendant in error moved to quaſh the writ, becauſe no bail was given.

Per curiam. That is never done till the outlawry is reverſed, and then we take bail to appear to an original to be brought within two terms. And ſo it was done in this caſe. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 951.

Hilary, 16 Geo. 2. Serecold v. Hampſon, Bart. Error.

The defendant was outlawed in a perſonal action, without any affidavit made of the plaintiff's demand; and having brought error, he aſſigned his being beyond ſea at the time of the outlawry, for which the court made no difficulty to reverſe it. But then the queſtion was, upon what terms they ſhould do it; the plaintiff inſiſting on ſpecial bail, and having now made a proper affidavit; and the defendant inſiſting to file common bail only.

The court, upon conſidering the words of ſtat. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18. ſect. 3. which impowers the outlaw to appear by attorney, (as he did here) and ſays, "It ſhall be reverſed without bail in all caſes, but "where ſpecial bail ſhould be ordered by the court," declared they were of opinion, they had a diſcretionary power to require it, or not; and that the want of an affidavit before was no objection, becauſe that is only requiſite to warrant an arreſt, and here was one in time for the new action that muſt be brought. And though ſtat. 31 Eliz. c. 3. ſect. 3. is the only act that expreſsly requires bail, it is not to be inferred from thence, that in other caſes it ought not to be inſiſted on; for that act makes a new error, and the bail upon it is abſolutely to pay the condemnation-mony. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1178.

Per curiam. There ought to be ſpecial bail. It would be very unreaſonable that the defendant ſhould gain an advantage by ſtanding out till proceſs of outlawry. He certainly ought not to be in a better caſe then, than if he had appeared at firſt. In debt on bond in the grand ſeſſions of Wales, the plaintiff omitted in his declaration to make a profert, &c. Holt, Chief Juſtice. Eaſter, 2 Ann. Green v. Walter. Error.

On debt on bond, the defendant craved oyer of the condition, which was, that if the defendant ſhould anſwer the determination of the law, touching ſuch a ſhip and goods; and in caſe the law ſhould adjudge the ſaid ſhip and goods to be a prize, or otherwiſe forfeited, if then the defendant ſhould deliver the ſaid ſhip and goods to the plaintiff, that then, &c. The defendant pleaded, that the law did not adjudge the ſaid ſhip and goods to be a prize, or otherwiſe forfeited. The plaintiff replied, that his ſhip and goods were condemned in the Admiralty of England to be a prize, and aſſigns a breach that the defendant had not delivered the ſaid ſhip and goods, and this he is ready to verify, and at the end of his plea makes a profert in curia of the ſentence under the great ſeal of the Admiralty. The defendant craves oyer of the ſentence, and the exemplification of the ſentence was ſet out in theſe words, to which the defendant demurs: This action was brought in the Common Pleas in Ireland, and judgment was there given for the plaintiff on error brought, that judgment was affirmed in the King's Bench in Ireland, on which judgment error was now brought here.

The exceptions taken to the replication were, that by making a profert of the ſentence, the plaintiff had deprived the defendant of taking iſſue upon the ſentence, and when he comes on oyer demanded to ſet out the ſentence, he pleads only an exemplification of it, which is not pleadable; but if it were, does not prove the plaintiff's replication, being variant in many particulars from the ſhip and goods mentioned in the condition of the bond, and ſo does not prove the law has made any determination as to them; and beſides, it does not appear in the ſentence that the capture ever was upon the high ſea, and conſequently the Admiralty had no juriſdiction; and then alſo there is no legal determination: and that the breach was not well aſſigned.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. By pleading that the law has made no determination, the defendant has confeſſed, that he has not re-delivered them, and therefore the plaintiff need not aſſign a breach; and it is not like the caſe of an award, which is a ſingle caſe, and ſtands by itſelf.

As to the profert, the defendant needed not have made it, becauſe it is no deed, but only a judicial determination in a court, not of record; and though he did make a profert, he needed not have ſet it out: and notwithſtanding the profert, the defendant might have traverſed the ſentence, and then the query is, whether this impertinent matter will hurt, or leſſen the ſtrength of a good and ſubſtantial replication? for this is not the ſentence, though it be called ſo, but mere idle impertinent matter, which ſhall never hurt a good replication, well averred.

The judgment of affirmance in the King's Bench in Ireland was affirmed as to the affirmance, and reverſed as to the coſts, niſi. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 891.

Per curiam. 1ſt, The defendant ſhould have ſet forth the indenture himſelf, being a party to it, and ſhould have pleaded performance to all the covenants therein.

2dly, The plaintiff was not obliged to give oyer of the indenture, and though he did, yet being what he need not do, the ſetting it forth is not at his peril, as where he is obliged to ſet it forth; nor is he concluded to ſay, that there is more contained in the indenture, but at liberty, as well as if the defendant himſelf had ſet it forth; and the court held, that as the defendant was bound to ſet it forth, ſo he was bound to ſupply this omiſſion, and make his plea complete; and for this judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 498.

The plaintiff declared in covenant, making a profert of the counter-part executed by the defendant, and aſſigned the breach of non-payment of rent. The defendant demanded oyer, and on ſearch the plaintiff could not find it; and on an affidavit of his inability, to give oyer, applied to the court to diſpenſe with it, the defendant having the original leaſe, and therefore not put to any inconvenience. But the court, on conſideration, declared they could not do it; the plaintiff was bound to make a profert, or elſe his declaration might be demurred to; the defendant is by law entitled to oyer, and the denial of it would be error. They ſaid, this does not depend on any particular rule of court, but on the general right of the law, which the court cannot diſpenſe with, 1 Mod. 266. It was the plaintiff's fault to bring the action, before he had the deed, or a proper diſcovery; and this is not like the caſe of a defendant, whoſe deed is in the plaintiff's hands, where the court will grant imparlances from time to time until it is produced. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1186.

In debt on bond the defendant craved oyer, which the plaintiff was not able to give him, the bond being in the hands of Mr. Strickland, a gentleman of the bar, who had refuſed to produce it, and enable the plaintiff to force the defendant to plead. And the court being moved againſt Mr. Strickland, his excuſe was, that the bond was left with him to wait the event of a ſuit ſtill depending.

Per curiam. That is a matter the defendant may avail himſelf of by plea, and we will not determine it on motion, there muſt be a rule on Mr. Strickland to give oyer of the bond, and produce it at the trial, if required by the plaintiff. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1198.

Michaelmas, 19 Geo. 2. The Weavers Company, qui tam, v. Forreſt, and four others, on ſeparate Actions.

The weavers company brought actions, as common informers, for the penalties in ſtat. 7 Geo. 2. c. 7. for ſelling printed callico, and ſet out their charter to ſhew they had power to ſue, and be ſued, with a profert. The defendants demanded oyer, and had a copy of the charter delivered to them, after which they put in the general iſſue of no debt, taking no notice of the oyer. The plaintiffs made up the iſſue, and inſerted the prayer and oyer at the head of the pleas, and demanded to be paid for it; on which the court was moved to expunge it; for though the defendants had a right to ſee whether the plaintiffs may ſue, yet they are not bound to inſert the oyer, but may plead to the merits.

On the other ſide it was inſiſted, that the demand and giving oyer is the act of the court, whoſe acts either party has a right to record. And Carthew. 301. Raym. 969. 1055. 1 Saund. 306. Lutw. 680. 1 Vent. 37. 2 Mod. 189. Cro. Jac. 679. Co. Litt. 260. were cited.

But the court held, that if the plaintiffs would avail themſelves of the letters patent being ſet out at large, they ought to do it by praying them to be enrolled at the head of their replication, and ought not to do it at the defendants expence; and therefore the court ordered the oyer to be expunged. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1241.

Michaelmas, 4 W. & M. Rudd v. Foſter.

In replevin for taking of a gelding, the defendant juſtified by virtue of ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. for money due on the poor tax.

The parties being at iſſue, it was tried at the bar, and the queſtion was, whether the vill of Stratton was in the pariſh of Biggleſwade in Bedfordſhire, or not?

The poor's rate was admitted.

And the evidence to prove it to be in that pariſh was, that there were but two churchwardens, and two overſeers of the poor, and that marriages, burials, and chriſtenings, and all other parochial rites, were done at Biggleſwade.

On the other ſide, to prove that Stratton was a reputed pariſh by itſelf at the time of making this ſtatute, this evidence was given, viz.

In the reign of Ed. 3. there was a public chapel there, where the people went to hear maſs, and that divine ſervice was read in that chapel at the time of making of this ſtatute.

Then it was proved, that a rate was made there in the year 1654, and that formerly they had diſtinct conſtables, and repaired their own highways till the year 1634, and then the difference between them was ſettled by the judges in their circuit.

And the council would have compared this to the caſe between the pariſhes of Totteridge and Hatfield, which was a ſpecial verdict on this ſtatute. The plaintiff lived in Totteridge, and had no lands in Hatfield, but had lands where he lived, he was rated to the poor of Hatfield, but becauſe at the time of making the ſtatute, Totteridge was a reputed pariſh, and had diſtinct conſtables, churchwardens, and overſeers of the poor, and made their own rates and aſſeſſments, which were levied by their own officers; for this reaſon it was held to be a diſtinct pariſh from Hatfield.

But Stratton was not ſo much as a pariſh in reputation at the time of making of the act, and ſo not like that caſe; for all that was proved was, that they had made rates ſince the ſtatute, and had a chapel before; but making rates will not make it a pariſh, without all other parochial rights; and therefore it was held to be a vill in the pariſh of Biggleſwade. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 2 Ann. The Caſe of the Pariſh of St. Andrew's.

An order of two juſtices for one's taking on him the office of overſeer of the poor, being removed, ſeveral exceptions were taken againſt it. 1ſt. That it did not appear that the party was an inhabitant, or a houſe-keeper, and you will not intend him to be either, for it is not like the caſe in Hob. 312. where a man ſhall be intended to be in his ſenſes, or a witneſs of credit, till the contrary appears. And the way was for the pariſh to preſent theſe officers to the juſtices, to be by them confirmed.

The ſecond exception was, the order appointed him overſeer of the poor in that part of the pariſh which lies in Middleſex, (for the pariſh of St. Andrew extends both in London and Middleſex); and for this the caſe of the houſe of Correction for Blackheath was relied on. And the court ſeemed to think the appointment ought to have been for the whole pariſh, but afterwards they might have ordered him to Middleſex only, within ſuch a diviſion. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 77.

Trinity, 3 Ann. Britton v. Standiſh.

Standiſh, the parſon of H. libelled againſt Britton, for not coming to his pariſh church on Sundays, and for not receiving the ſacrament at Eaſter: the plaintiff ſuggeſted for a prohibition, that the bounds of pariſhes and the conſtructions of ſtatutes belonged to the juriſdiction of the temporal courts, &c. The queſtion was, whether a pariſhioner is bound by law to come to his own pariſh church, or whether he is excuſed if he goes to ſome other church, as it appeared the plaintiff did? It was inſiſted againſt the prohibition, that by ſtat. 1 Eliz. every pariſhioner is obliged to come to his pariſh church, which ſtatute is ſtill in force, and not altered by any ſubſequent act, but only by the act of toleration in reſpect to diſſenters; on the other ſide it was admitted, that the words of ſtat. 1 Eliz. are, that every pariſhioner ſhall repair to his pariſh church, but that thoſe words were corrected or explained by ſome ſubſequent ſtatutes; as for inſtance, by ſtat. 3 Jac. by which every pariſhioner is required to repair to his pariſh church, or to ſome other church; it is likewiſe corrected by the act of toleration.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Pariſhes were inſtituted for the eaſe and benefit of the people, and not of the parſon; and if every pariſhioner is obliged to go to his pariſh church, then the gentlemen of Gray's-Inn and Lincoln's-Inn muſt no longer repair to their reſpective chapels, but to their pariſh churches, otherwiſe they may be compelled ſo to do by eccleſiaſtical cenſures.

Powell, Juſtice. The ſpiritual courts have always exerciſed this juriſdiction, and after ſo long uſage, it ought not now to be queſtioned; and as for the gentlemen of Gray's-Inn and Lincoln's Inn, they have likewiſe uſed to repair to their chapels, and therefore may be exempted from coming to their pariſh church, and this by virtue of an uſage againſt an uſage: now the reaſon why pariſhioners muſt come to their pariſh church, is not (as has been obſerved) for the benefit of the parſon, or that he may have his offerings, but becauſe he having charged himſelf with the cure of their ſouls, may be enabled to take care of that charge.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, that if a man repaired to any other chapel, it would be a good excuſe for his not coming to his pariſh church, but then he muſt plead it; he likewiſe held, that if Britton the plaintiff in this prohibition was a profeſſed churchman, and his conſcience would permit him ſometimes to go to the meetings of diſſenters, that the act of toleration would not excuſe him for not coming to church, for that act was not made to give eaſe to ſuch people; ſo a rule was made for a prohibition, and that the plaintiff ſhould declare on it, that the matter might come judicially before the court. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 89.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Parker v. Clerk.

An action was brought in the ſpiritual court by a pariſh clerk againſt the churchwardens for ſo much money, by cuſtom due to him yearly, and leviable by them on the pariſhoners; and now a prohibition was moved for on ſuggeſtion of no ſuch cuſtom.

To which it was objected, that if there was no ſuch cuſtom, they ſhould have pleaded it below; and if without receiving that plea they would proceed, then would be the proper time for a prohibition, but now they came for a prohibition too late, viz. after ſentence.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. I know no caſe where a perſon comes too late for a prohibition after ſentence, but that of ſuing a parſon out of his dioceſe.

Per curiam. An action on the caſe will certainly lie againſt the churchwardens on ſuch a cuſtom; as for example, If a bailiff, or Reeve of a manor be bound by cuſtom to collect money, an action on the caſe will lie againſt him for not doing it, and for the money received as a debt, after it is received. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 253.

Michaelmas, 8 Ann. The Queen v. Dr. Wall.

In this caſe Holt ſaid, that if a pariſh prieſt puts in a clerk, he cannot turn him out at pleaſure; for he is then the clerk of the pariſh, and not the parſon's clerk only. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 1. p. 261.

Hilary, 5 Geo. Batten v. Barwick.

At a court of delegates, held at Serjeant's Inn, Fleet-ſtreet, it was adjudged, that where the cuſtom in chuſing churchwardens cannot take place, they muſt reſort to the canon, under which the plaintiff being duly elected, a decree was awarded for him, with 60 l. coſts. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 145.

Eaſter, 8 Geo. The King v. The Inhabitants of Rufford.

On a mandamus, directed to the juſtices of the peace of the county of Nottingham, reciting, that within the vill of Rufford, there are divers ſubſtantial freeholders able to contribute to the maintenance of the poor, and that there are no churchwardens or overſeers to make a rate, and that there are poor unprovided for, therefore it commands them to appoint overſeers.

They returned, that the vill of Rufford is part of no pariſh, but time out of mind has been extra-parochial, without church, chapel, or parochial rights, and that there never have been any overſeers of poor, and for that cauſe they cannot appoint.

And there having been only an obiter opinion of the court, in the caſe of Dolting v. Brewcomblodge, Hilary, 11 Ann. that overſeers of the poor might be appointed in an extra-parochial place, the court directed an argument, that the point might be ſolemnly determined.

And after argument and conſideration of all the ſtatutes relating to the poor, the court were of opinion, that the powers given by ſtat. 43 Eliz. to be executed in pariſhes, were, by ſtat. 13 & 14 Car 2. c. 12. extended to all townſhips, and villages, whether parochial, or extra-parochial, and conſequently overſeers might be appointed in this caſe; for which purpoſe a peremptory mandamus was awarded. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 251.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. The King v. Simpſon.

A Mandamus was directed to the Archdeacon of Colcheſter, to ſwear Rodney Fane into the office of churchwarden He returned, that before the coming of the writ, he received an inhibition from the Biſhop of London, with a ſignification that he had taken upon himſelf to act in the premiſes.

Per curiam. The return is ill. It does not appear that the town of Colcheſter is within the dioceſe of the biſhop who inhibits; beſides, the archdeacon is but a miniſterial officer, and is obliged to do the act, whether it be of any validity or not. On which a peremptory mandamus was granted. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 611.

Hilary, 12 Geo. Anonymous.

It was moved for a mandamus to be directed to the churchwardens of St. Botolph, Biſhopſgate, commanding them to call a veſtry in Eaſter week, for the election of churchwardens; but the court refuſed it, ſaying, There was no inſtance of ſuch a mandamus, and they could not take notice who had a right to call the veſtry, and conſequently did not know to whom it ſhould be directed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 687.

Michaelmas, 13 Geo. Caſtle v. Richardſon.

On a libel in the eccleſiaſtical court, for not taking upon him the office of chapel-warden: the defendant pleads, that it is a donative, and thereupon moved for a prohibition. And on debate, the ſame was denied; the whole court being of opinion, that there was a difference as to the incumbent, yet as to the pariſh officers there was none; for they are the officers of the pariſh, and not of the patron of the donative. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 715.

In 1725, during the time Prudence and Bond were churchwardens of St. Matthews, in Ipſwich, a rate was made for the repairs of the church; and the appellant Dent, not paying his ſhare, the churchwardens, after their year was out, cited Dent to compel a payment; and he appearing, inſiſted to be diſmiſſed, for that the ſuit was not begun in their time. But the judge decreeing him to anſwer, he appealed to the Arches; when the judge pronounced againſt the decree to anſwer, before there was a conteſtation of ſuit, but retained the cauſe. From thence Dent appealed to the Delegates. And on a hearing, 17th December, 1729, before the Biſhops of Norwich and Carliſle, Chief Juſtice Raymond, Baron Carter, Sir Henry Penrice, and other Doctors of civil law, it was determined, that Dent ſhould be diſmiſſed; and that Prudence and Bond, who can ſue only in a politic capacity, could not inſtitute any ſuit after that capacity was gone. It was agreed, that if the ſuit had been begun within the year, they might have proceeded in it after their year was out, it being of neceſſity to prevent people from delays, in order to wear out the year. So is 1 Danv. Abr. 788. Cro. Eliz. 145. 179. 1 Leon. 177. and Dr. Prideaux's Directions to Churchwardens, 60, 61. But in regard this ſuit was not commenced till the year was out, and no precedents were ſhewn to warrant it, the appellant was diſmiſſed. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 852.

Hilary, 4 Geo. 2. Newcomb v. Higgs.

The pariſh clerk of the pariſh of A. where the uſage is, that the pariſh clerk is, and always has been, choſe by the parſon, and not by the pariſh. The preſent clerk, the plaintiff, was cited in order to a deprivation in the ſpiritual court for drunkenneſs in church, at the time of divine ſervice, and for lewdneſs and other crimes of that ſort, which rendered him unfit for the exerciſe of the ſaid office. It was moved for a prohibition to the ſaid ſuit, upon this ſuggeſtion, viz. that the above crimes are properly puniſhable by indictment, and not cognizable in the ſpiritual court; and further, that the ſpiritual court cannot determine that the party is guilty of crimes, triable by the courſe of the common law, before he is convicted of thoſe crimes at law: to which point were cited March 174. Hob. 288, 289. 2 Cro. 430. 431.

Lord Raymond. We have had caſes where the queſtion has been, whether an officer for life might be removed before conviction at law of the crimes charged againſt him.

Hereupon the council in the principal caſe put the court in mind of the caſe of the corporation of Carliſle, where this diſtinction was taken: viz. where the crime was againſt the duty of the party's office, as extortion in a judicial officer, he might be proceeded againſt to a deprivation or removal, before conviction of ſuch crime in a due courſe of law; otherwiſe not: which difference was agreed to by the court, and the motion was denied as to the deprivation, that matter having been ſolemnly ſettled in the caſe of Townſend v. Thorpe. Vide Fitzgibbons, p. 189.

Eaſter, 7 Geo. 2. Wainwright v. Bagſhaw.

The churchwardens were cited into the Biſhop's court of Litchfield to account; they pleaded that they had accounted at the veſtry according to law, which was rejected; and a prohibition granted; for the Ordinary is not to take the account, he can only give a judgment that he accounts, and to what purpoſe ſhould they be ſent back to thoſe who have taken their account already. The ſame rule was made in the Exchequer, Eaſter, 2 Geo. 2. between Haughton and others, churchwardens of St. Alban, Woodſtreet, and Kenrick and others; and in the caſe of the churchwardens of Hammerſmith, Michaelmas, 1 Geo. 2. Nutkin v. Robinſon; and vide Lutw. 1028, and Prideaux to Churchwardens, 103. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 974.

An order made at ſeſſions relating to accounts of overſeers of the poor, was moved to be quaſhed, becauſe it did not appear that the accounts had been before two juſtices, one of whom was of the quorum, and they cannot come irregularly to the ſeſſions, and for which Salk. 533 was cited. On the other ſide it was ſaid, that it appeared there was an allowance, for the appeal is ſaid to be againſt the diſburſements and the allowance thereof, which the court will preſume was regular, and being in general is not like the caſe in Salk. which was ſaid to be by two juſtices, without the words, one of whom.

Per curiam. It does not follow, that this was an allowance by two juſtices, for the pariſh might do it; and therefore for want of juriſdiction this order muſt be quaſhed. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 983.

On a mandamus to the juſtices, for levying 30 l. 17 s. 11 d. being the balance of the laſt overſeers of the poor's accounts in their hands, they return; that it is true there was ſuch a balance, but that the veſtry had ordered them to retain it, and employ an attorney to ſue for ſome charity-money, and get it laid out for the benefit of the poor; that one Young was ſo employed, and the balance exhauſted in fees; and that the overſeers had engaged to pay Young, and for that cauſe they had refuſed to grant the warrant.

Per curiam. There muſt go a peremptory mandamus; for ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. ſays, the balance ſhall be paid over to the new overſeers, under a penalty, and it is not in the power of the veſtry to diſpenſe with the ſtatute. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 992.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. 2. The Pariſh of Stoke-Prior v. The Inhabitants of the Manor of Grafton.

A poor perſon was removed to Grafton, and on appeal it was ſtated to be an extra-parochial place, formerly a ſeat of the Earl of Shrewſbury, conſiſting of a capital meſſuage, and three lodges in the park, but ſince converted into five houſes and farms; and the ſeſſions adjudged it a vill, and that it ought to maintain its own poor. This was moved to be quaſhed, upon the authority of the caſe of Denham v. Dalham, Hilary, 8 Geo. 2. and a rule was made to ſhew cauſe.

Afterwards, on an affidavit of ſervice, the rule was made abſolute, this not appearing to have the reputation of a vill. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1071.

Trinity, 10 & 11 Geo. 2. Dawſon v. Wilkinſon.

On a motion for a prohibition after ſentence, in a ſuit in the court of the Archdeacon of ——— in which ſentence was given (upon a citation for the pariſhioners to allow the churchwardens accounts) that the ſucceeding churchwardens ſhould make a rate to reimburſe the former, for money by them expended for the pariſh, and not paid, becauſe the Eccleſiaſtical court has no power to decree ſuch a rate, 1 Roll. Rep. 73. Biſhop's caſe, and Wainwright v. Bagſhaw, Eaſter, 7 Geo. 2. where Lord Hardwicke ſaid, that the Ordinary's juriſdiction, in theſe caſes, extends only to compel the churchwardens to account before the pariſhioners, and no farther.

It was urged on the other ſide, that the Eccleſiaſtical court has juriſdiction as to the churchwardens accounts; it has power to do every thing incident to it, Yelv. 173. Starkey v. Barton and Gore. And it was likewiſe objected to this motion, that as this is for a prohibition after ſentence, the ſuggeſtion ought to be verified by affidavit.

Page, Juſtice. The eccleſiaſtical court has no power, but to decree an account, and then the account muſt be audited; but they have no power to order a rate to be made to reimburſe: ſo in Tawney's caſe. The churchwarden had diſburſed money out of his pocket, upon a ſudden emergency of a great ſickneſs in the town, and yet the court would not help him.

Probyn, Juſtice. As to the want of an affidavit in this caſe, it is not neceſſary, becauſe the want of a juriſdiction appears upon the face of the proceedings below: the churchwardens are always ſuppoſed to have raiſed money enough to pay themſelves, and therefore can in no caſe be ordered a reimburſement.

Per curiam. Let the rule for granting a prohibition be made abſolute. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 381.

A mandamus iſſued, teſted 1ſt June, to the juſtices of Ipſwich, to appoint overſeers of the poor; to which they returned, that they had, in obedience to ſuch writ, made an appointment; and that being removed by certiorari, appeared to bear date 13th June.

It was objected by Mr. Solicitor-General, in order to quaſh the Mandamus and appointment, that it appeared the month after Eaſter (which is the time given by the ſtatute to make the appointment in) was expired before the writ iſſued, Eaſter-day being the 22d April, and the court was bound to take notice of that, according to Salk. 626. and Hoyle v. Lord Cornwallis, Trinity, 6 Geo. The act deſigned the juſtices ſhould do it within a limited time, and therefore puts it in Eaſter-week, or within one month after Eaſter; now, if it may be done at any time, it will introduce great confuſion, and it will be many years before it comes round to the right time again. There can be no inconvenience in this, becauſe the churchwardens are overſeers; and there is a penalty upon the juſtices, which goes to their uſe. This is a part of the act, which was never yet thought to be directory only.

Chief Juſtice. The court muſt judicially take notice, that this is made without the month; but then the queſtion is, whether it is void or not? The adding a penalty is an argument, that it is not ſo; for it was foreſeen there would be inconveniencies if it was not done in time, and it might therefore be proper to enforce a ſpeedy execution of the power; and this was the conſtruction as to taking pledges on ſtat. Weſtm. 2. c. 2. 1 Roll. Abr. 259.

Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. being for the maintenance of the poor, muſt be conſtrued liberally; and ſo ſaid Pratt, Chief Juſtice, Trinity, 7 Geo. in the caſe of Rufford; and ſo it was, Trinity, 5 Geo. 2. in the caſe of Utoxeter; and though theſe were caſes on ſtat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. yet they muſt derive their authority from the former law. Here are no negative words, as in ſtat. 12 Car. 2. c. 25. ſect. 13. as to the price of wines, where the words and at no other time are added.

It is worthy of conſideration, that this is a thing which it is not in the power of the pariſh to procure; and is therefore a conſtruction of neceſſity. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1123.

Trinity, 13 Geo. 2. Adams v. Ruſh.

Per curiam. The Spiritual Court has no juriſdiction to ſettle a churchwarden's accounts. And a prohibition was granted after a ſentence allowing the accounts, and an appeal to the arches. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1133.

Michaelmas, 14 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Welbeck in Nottinghamſhire.

A mandamus ſuggeſts, that there are ſeveral houſeholders and farmers inhabiting and reſiding within the village of Welbeck, able to provide for the poor; and therefore commands the juſtices to appoint overſeers of the poor. To this it is anſwered, that Welbeck is extra-parochial, and is not, or ever was, reputed to be a village or townſhip, and therefore cannot appoint any perſons to be overſeers.

And on argument this was held to be a good return, for though it does not anſwer the ſuppoſal of the writ as to there being ſeveral ſubſtantial houſeholders and farmers, yet it anſwers the point in ſtat. 13 & 14. cap. 12. by ſaying it is no townſhip or village reputed as ſuch, and it is to ſuch places only that we can ſend a writ. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1143.

To a mandamus to ſwear in the plaintiff churchwarden of Heſton in Middleſex; the defendant returned, that he was not duly elected. And in the courſe of the trial the queſtion was, where the common right of chuſing churchwardens reſts? The plaintiff inſiſted it was in the pariſhioners at large as to both, and would therefore have left it on the defendant to ſhew a cuſtom, or right in the parſon, to name one; and cited Carth. 118. Noy 139. for that purpoſe; the defendant on the contrary inſiſted, that of common right it was in the parſon and pariſhioners, and therefore it lay on the plaintiff to prove a cuſtom in the pariſhioners to chuſe both; and cited Cro. Jac. 532. Cro. Car. 551. Noy 31. 1 Vent. 267. And of this opinion was the Chief Juſtice; who ſaid, that though there were ſome pleadings to the contrary, yet they never had been regarded. The plaintiff therefore went on to prove a cuſtom to chuſe both by the pariſhioners, but failed in it, it appearing, that though the parſon had generally left it to the pariſhioners, yet he had ſometimes interfered.

The Chief Juſtice likewiſe held, that a curate ſtood in the place of the parſon for the purpoſe of nominating one churchwarden; and cited 2 Vent. 41. that a curate may make a preſentment. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1246.

There were two ſets of overſeers appointed, and both quaſhed; one, becauſe the perſons appointed were deſcribed only as principal inhabitants, inſtead of purſuing the words of ſtat. 43 Eliz. cap. 2. which are ſubſtantial houſeholders; and the other, becauſe it only called them ſubſtantial houſeholders, without adding there or in the pariſh; and this too was not in the body of the appointment, as it ought to be. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1261.

The council who was to ſhew cauſe againſt the prohibition, finding the matter too ſtrong againſt him, declined giving the court further trouble; on which the rule for a prohibition was made abſolute. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 368.

On a motion to quaſh an order of two juſtices, appointing five overſeers for the pariſh of St. Chad, in Shrewsbury.

The objection was, that the juſtices have no power to exceed the number of four, which is founded on ſtat. 43 Eliz. cap. 2. ſect. 1. on which a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on this rule, the court gave their opinion:

Lord Mansfield, after reading the report, and anſwering the ſeveral objections ſtated by the council, ſaid, the appointment of more than four overſeers was not warranted by ſtat. 43 Eliz. on the true conſtruction of that ſtatute.

Per curiam. Let the rule be made abſolute for quaſhing the appointment and order. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 445.

On a ſpecial caſe before this court on an action of trover for taking cattle, the queſtion was, "whether

“ the diſtraining, taking, and tolling the cattle, which were the goods of William Veſey, in the hands of the plaintiff, his adminiſtrator, by virtue of a warrant of diſtreſs for the poor's rate, was lawful or not.”

Deniſon, Juſtice. I never apprehended that the goods of the perſon aſſeſſed to the rate could be charged in the lands of the repreſentative; and therefore (as at preſent adviſed) I ſhould think that this action will lie for taking them.

I agree that this is in the nature of an execution; but yet it is perſonal, and I do not know that it is a lien on the aſſets.

Wilmot, Juſtice, gave his opinion at large, and concurred with Mr. Juſtice Deniſon.

Hilary, 5 Geo. 3. Peart and another, v. Weſtgarth and another.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt a mandamus, “ to appoint four overſeers for the whole pariſh of Stanhope in the county palatine of Durham,” the queſtion was, whether the ſeveral diſtricts within it were one entire pariſh, townſhip, and village, within the intent and meaning of the ſeveral ſtatutes made for the relief of the poor; and for that purpoſe have had, and of right ought to have one joint appointment of overſeers of the poor, for the joint relief and maintenance of the poor in and throughout the pariſh? Or, whether the ſaid ſeveral diſtricts, being divided into ſix ſeparate conſtableries, conſtituted four diſtinct and ſeparate townſhips or villages, within the intent and meaning of ſtat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. cap. 12.

Lord Mansfield. The policy of ſtat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. was miſtaken; it went on a wrong principle. The diviſions ought rather to be enlarged than diminiſhed.

It ought to appear, “ that there was an inability in the pariſh to have the benefit of ſtat. 43 Eliz.” Now here, no ſuch inability appears, but quite the contrary, for a great number of years: ſo that there is no foundation for the diviſion.

The acquieſcence under it was on a falſe notion, “ that the ſeſſions had ſuch a power,” which they had not: and there is no inconvenience in ſetting right this wrong uſage, which has obtained for forty years. Here the foundation is wanting; therefore judgment muſt be for the plaintiffs.

Per curiam. Let judgment go for the plaintiffs. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1610.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt quaſhing an order made on Eaſter Wedneſday 1766, by two juſtices, appointing the defendants overſeers of the poor of St. Andrew's, Holborne above the bars, and St. George the Martyr.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on ſhewing cauſe on this rule, the court gave their opinion.

Lord Mansfield. The real objections, I take it for granted, are not before the court.

The only queſtion before us is, “ whether the order is good on the face of it or not.”

Now this order plainly means the overſeer's year: and that year is from Eaſter 1765 to Eaſter 1766. You would make it bad, by underſtanding it to mean the year of our Lord. But you cannot conſtrue this order to be a bad one, by underſtanding it ſo: for it manifeſtly means quite another ſort of year.

Per curiam. Let the rule be diſcharged, and the order affirmed. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1904.

Payment of Money.

Hilary, 7 W. 3. Burman v. Shepherd.

In an action of trover for bill of exchange for 100 l. to the damage of 150 l. the court was moved, that on bringing 50 l. into court it might be ſtruck out of the declaration.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. This practice in aſſumpſit has been brought in within a few years, and has been only allowed, becauſe payment goes to the iſſue; but in trover it goes only to the damages. It may be, that the plaintiff has good cauſe of action for part, and a probable cauſe for the reſidue; now, it would be hard to ſtrike out his certain clauſe, and put him to try his probable cauſe at the peril of coſts. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 90.

Michaelmas, 7 W. 3. St. Leger v. Pope.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Where foreign coin itſelf is demanded, the action is in the detinet; but if the value is demanded, it is in the debet and detinet; and the averment always is, that the defendant has neither tendered the foreign coin nor the value. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 81.

Trinity, 8 W. 3. Pawlet v. Heatfield.

In an action of covenant on three diſtinct covenants; ſeveral breaches were aſſigned; one was for non-payment of rent; the court was moved, that on bringing 10 l. into court, it might be ſtruck out of the declaration.

But the court refuſed to grant the motion, and ſaid, that when it appears that the plaintiff has a juſt cauſe of action for one thing, they will not put him to try the reſt at the peril of coſts. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 95.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Dixon v. Willoughs or Willows

On an action on the caſe on four ſeveral promiſes, there was a verdict for the plaintiff, and entire damages: it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that one of the promiſes was laid, viz. that whereas the defendant was indebted to him in 10 l. 10 s. for nine guineas, he promiſed to pay, &c. and did not ſay nine guineas to the value, &c. as he ought, the value being not aſcertained by proclamation.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. 1ſt. Any piece of money coined at the mint, is of value as it bears a proportion to other current money, and that without proclamation. The unit was the old piece, which was 20 s. In King James the firſt's time, the unit was by proclamation raiſed 16 d. which was the reaſon and occaſion of the coin of the guineas, and of their being 16 d. ſhort of the unit.

2dly. There are guineas of 40 s. a-piece, and ſo we will intend theſe were, and that the plaintiff was ſatiſfied the reſt.

Michaelmas, 9 W. 3. Giles v. Hart.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit and quantum meruit for goods ſold, wherein a requeſt was laid, both as to time and place; the defendant pleaded non aſſumpſit to all except 13 l. and as to that pleaded, that after the time of making the promiſes, viz. on the 22d day of April, which was before the time of the requeſt alledged, he tendered the ſaid 13 l. which the plaintiff then and there refuſed to receive; and that from that day he was always ready to pay the money, and bring it into court; whereon the plaintiff demurred; alledging, that ſuppoſing a tender might be pleaded in bar of an aſſumpſit, yet it is not good, without anſwering the ſpecial requeſt alledged, which is not done in this caſe.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. We are all of opinion that the defendant's plea is ill; for touts temps preſt, i. e. always ready, cannot be pleaded after imparlance: therefore the plaintiff muſt have judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 152.

Eaſter, 10 W. 3. Canter v. Shepheard.

On an action of trover and converſion for a goldſmith's note of 100 l. on the general iſſue pleaded, on evidence at the trial, the caſe appeared to be thus: Canter had a note for 100 l. of Shepheard, which Canter carried to Shepheard, and delivered it to him to receive the 100 l. At the ſame time one Mr. Dale brought 80 l. to Shepheard to pay to him. Shepheard prayed Canter to count the 80 l. and receive it as part of payment, while Shepheard counted 20 l. out of another bag. Canter counted 50 l. out of the 80 l. and drew a bag out of his pocket, and put the 50 l. into the bag, and laid the bag with the 50 l. in it on the counter by him, and proceeded to count the reſidue; during which J. S. took up the bag and ran away with it; upon which Canter ſuppoſing that this was not any payment to him, becauſe the money was not carried out of the ſhop, and becauſe it was liable to be counted again by Shepheard, refuſed to take the other 50 l. and brought trover for the note of 100 l. The matter appearing thus on the evidence, it was reſerved as a point by the Lord Chief Juſtice Holt, before whom the cauſe was tried; and it was moved and argued by council. After which all the judges were of opinion, that the plaintiff Canter ought to bear the loſs of 50 l. becauſe the putting the 50 l. into his own bag was an appropriation of the money to himſelf; and the defendant might have brought detinue for the 50 l. in the bag. And therefore the verdict was for the plaintiff for 50 l. only, and judgment accordingly. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 330.

Eaſter, 10 W. 3. Smith v. Johnſon.

On an action on the caſe for work done on a quantum meruit, and alſo an indebitatus aſſumpſit; a motion was made to bring ſo much money into court, and to ſtrike it out of the declaration.

The court granted it as to the indebitatus aſſumpſit, but refuſed it as to the quantum meruit; ſaying, that ſuch motions had been ſometimes obtained where a quantum meruit and indebitatus were joined together; yet regularly they ought not to be granted on a quantum meruit, for who can tell what a man deſerves till it be tried? *Vide Mod. Hilary, 13 W. 3. Anonymous.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. It will be hard to let money be brought into court on a quantum meruit, and thereby to put the plaintiff to carry his ſuit at the peril of coſts; but the way is, to confeſs the employing, and that he deſerved but ſo much, and to plead a tender thereof, for then the plaintiff may reply that he deſerved more, and ſo come to iſſue; but becauſe in moſt declarations there are quantum meruits, even in an indebitatus, there it may be brought in on the indebitatus count, and that will affect the other; which was accordingly done in the preſent caſe. *Vide Mod. The court was moved for leave to bring ſo much money into court, and to have it ſtruck out of the declaration.

Per curiam. The courſe now is, on bringing money into court to pay coſts ſo far, if the plaintiff will take it out; but if it be ſuch an action in which the defendant may plead a tender in bar of coſts, and that the plaintiff, to ouſt him of that benefit, would reply a ſpecial capias, teſted of a term antecedent to the principal; all this may be opened and ſettled on motion. *Vide Mod. Holt, Chief Juſtice. They muſt demand Engliſh money, and not foreign money, and are to value it according to the value it bears here in England; but if a man will bring an action for foreign money, it muſt be detinue. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 541.

Per curiam. 'Till bail is put in, the party is not in court, to move for leave to bring in principal, intereſt, and coſts.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. I never knew money to be brought into court, and ſtruck out of the declaration in an action of debt, though it has been done on a bond with a condition in an action of debt for rent, and in a mutuatus; and I have known it done in replevin, the diſtreſs being for rent. *Vide Mod. Trinity, 1 Ann. Burton v. Souter.

On an action of aſſumpſit on ſeveral promiſes, one count was on the cuſtom of merchants, wherein the plaintiff declared on a note ſubſcribed by the defendant, payable to the plaintiff, or order, &c. the defendant pleaded a tender, and brought the money into court. The plaintiff took the money out of court, and then, to have damages, traverſed the tender; and iſſue being joined on it, a verdict was found for the plaintiff, and a penny damage given. On which the court was moved in arreſt of judgment, 1ſt, That ſuch a note was not within the cuſtom of merchants; but that they ought to have declared on a mutuatus, and have given the note in evidence.

And of that opinion was the whole court.

2dly, It was argued, that the plaintiff could not proceed for damages, after he had accepted the money brought into court.

And of that opinion was Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſtrongly, as he had been in the caſe of Horn v. Lewin, Hilary, 12 W. 3.

But becauſe the poſtea was not in court, it was ſtaid until, &c. and afterwards it was ſtaid abſolutely, the plaintiff's council declaring he could not maintain it. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 774.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Le Sage v. Pere.

After judgment in an action of debt on a bond, the court will not make a rule on a plaintiff to take his principal, intereſt, and coſts; and they held, that in ſuch caſe, the plaintiff ought to have his full coſts out of the penalty. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 114.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Bennet v. Verdun.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit, for that the defendant being indebted to the plaintiff in 28 l. of Spaniſh money, promiſed to pay it, &c. On non aſſumpſit pleaded, a verdict was given for the plaintiff. On a motion in arreſt of judgment, it was argued, that the plaintiff ought to have ſaid to the value, &c. it being foreign coin; for the defendant cannot be indebted in foreign coin. And further, there is a verdict here, and therefore the whole court held it good. But afterwards judgment was arreſted, becauſe the plaintiff brought this action for money due to himſelf in his own right, and alſo for another ſum in another count, due to him as executor to J. S. which two actions cannot be joined. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 841.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Ireland's Caſe.

The court was moved for leave to bring the principal, intereſt, and coſts into court, and to be relieved againſt the penalty of a bond.

It was urged on the other ſide, that in this caſe they would not relieve in Chancery, unleſs the obligor would pay a debt barrable by the ſtatute of limitations, and inſiſted on the like benefit here, this being an equitable motion.

The court refuſed to hear of it, but made the common rule.

Note, The whole penalty muſt be brought into court, becauſe the intereſt and full coſts are to be taxed; and the remainder may be taken out immediately. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 101.

Trinity, 2 Ann. Anonymous.

On an action of debt on a bond conditioned to perform an award, which was, that the defendant ſhould pay to the plaintiff, or his aſſigns, and thereon the plaintiff ſhould ſign a releaſe to him of all actions and controverſies touching the premiſes; the defendant's council excepted, that the award was not mutual; for the 50 l. being awarded to be paid generally, and the releaſe, which was all the defendant was to have, being only of all actions touching the premiſes, that ſhould be taken only to relate to the 50 l. and not to the controverſies ſubmitted.

But the court were of opinion, that it ſhould be underſtood of the controverſies.

Second exception. It is not ſaid; the defendant did not pay to the plaintiff's aſſigns, which is naught.

The court held, that payment to the plaintiff's aſſigns had been payment to the plaintiff himſelf. Judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 898.

Trinity, 2 Ann. Herbert and others v. Burſtow. Error.

On a writ of error, brought on a judgment given in C. B. in aſſumpſit, where the plaintiff declared, that the defendant, in conſideration that the plaintiff ſold and delivered to the defendant ſo many pieces of hammered money, promiſed to pay, &c. On non aſſumpſit pleaded, a verdict, and judgment, was given for the plaintiff in the C. B.

It was urged for the plaintiff in error, that here was no conſideration; becauſe ſold and delivered implied no more than a bare giving a poſſeſſion of the pieces, &c. but not a transferring of the property.

But the court were of opinion, that it implied a transferring of the property.

The ſecond error aſſigned was, that after the entry of the poſtea, comes immediately, therefore it is conſidered, &c. and does not ſay where, nor by whom, ſo that it muſt be taken to be the judgment of the jury.

But the court ſaid, that this was the conſtant form of entries in the C. B. and the diſtinction is between judgments in ſuperior and inferior courts; in the laſt it muſt be ſaid by the ſame court, otherwiſe in the firſt. So the judgment was affirmed. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 895.

Eaſter, 3 Ann. Anonymous.

On an action brought in this court on a judgment for damages in the C. B. before the defendant pleaded, it was moved to bring ſo much money into court, and to have it ſtruck out of the declaration.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. No: you may plead a tender, and that you are ſtill ready.

Then the council informed the court, that the plaintiff below was now become a bankrupt; and no commiſſion being out, they durſt not tender him the money, but would bring it into court, to remain in truſt for thoſe who ſhould have the right.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. You are in the right to take care how you pay it voluntarily; but we cannot be truſtees for you. So the motion was denied. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 153.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit brought by the plaintiff as executor of C. P. deceaſed, for money received by the defendant owing to the teſtator for wages (he being a ſeaman) after the teſtator's death. On not guilty pleaded, it appeared on evidence at the trial, that before the will was found, adminiſtration, &c. was granted to A. P. a ſiſter of C. P. and that ſhe made a warrant of attorney to the defendant to receive this money, being 21 l. by virtue of which warrant he did receive it, and paid it to the ſaid A. before any notice given of this will. And by the direction of Chief Juſtice Holt, the plaintiff was nonſuited: for he ſaid, though all acts done by an adminiſtrator where there is a will are void, and ſuch an action in this caſe would lie againſt A. P. yet it is hard to make the defendant liable, having paid the money over before he knew of the will, to the ſaid A. P. the adminiſtrator. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1210.

Eaſter, 13 Ann. Timber v. Gardiner.

In an action on the caſe on ſeveral promiſes, the defendant pleaded, that he gave the plaintiff ſuch a quantity of, &c. who accepted it in full ſatisfaction of the ſaid promiſes; to which plea the plaintiff demurred, and the defendant joined in demurrer.

It was inſiſted for the plaintiff, that the defendant's plea was naught, becauſe it did not ſay that the defendant gave it in ſatisfaction.

Per curiam. If the defendant gave it with one intention, and the plaintiff accepted it with another, the intention of the donor muſt prevail; but the queſtion in this caſe is, whether the words, in full ſatisfaction, ſhall not as well relate to the verb give, as to the verb accept; eſpecially becauſe of the conjunction and, which ſeems to alter it from 5 Co. 117. Adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 224.

Trinity, 8 Geo. Abdelard v. ———

The caſe was as follows: a man by marriage-articles was to pay 50*l.* at 5 l. per annum, till the whole 50*l.* ſhould be paid; and in failure of payment of any 5 l. then he was to pay the whole.

The queſtion was, whether on failure of payment of one 5 l. an action could be maintained for what was then due?

It was agreed, that it could not till after the days of payment were paſt.

Beſides, the ſtatutes for amending the law gives the judges power, on payment of principal, intereſt, and coſts, to diſcharge a man after a judgment obtained againſt him for a penalty; and this ſhall be deemed an equitable penalty.

Per curiam. The power given to the court by the ſtatute is to ſtay proceedings on payment of all that is due; and in the principal caſe all the 50 l. is due, and no part of it is a penalty, but only the defendant, by the condition of theſe articles, had time for the payment of the money by parcels, as therein directed, the benefit of which condition is now loſt by his breach thereof: ſo the plaintiff had judgment. *Vide Mod. Eaſter, 10 Geo. Boſtock v. Boſtock.

A bond was dated in the year 1706, conditioned for the payment of a certain ſum of money; and in 1709, the ſum of 100 l. part of the money, was paid; and by an indorſement reciting that there was 31 l. intereſt then due, it was expreſſed to be paid in diſcharge of the principal. The queſtion was, whether the 31 l. intereſt then due ſhould be taken to be part of the 100 l. then paid: it was argued, that if it was to be ſo taken, ſo much of the intereſt is diſcharged, and by conſequence ſo much continues part of the principal ſtill, for which intereſt muſt be paid; whereas if the 31 l. intereſt was not diſcharged, no intereſt would grow due for it, becauſe it is originally paid.

The court ſeemed to incline, that the 100 l. then paid ſhould be in diſcharge of the intereſt then due, and for the reſidue in diſcharge of ſo much of the principal. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 24.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. Anonymous.

A motion was made to ſtay proceedings on a judgment, ſuggeſting that part of the money was paid, and that the defendant was willing to pay the reſt into court.

Per curiam. Where a debtor owes money to his creditor on ſeveral accounts, he may pay part, and apply it to any debt; but if the creditor denies that he received it in ſatisfaction for that debt, but on ſome other account, then he has his election to apply the payment to what debt he will; ſo where it appears that money is paid indefinitely, the creditor has his election to declare on what account he received it.

Therefore if the debtor in the principal caſe would have this payment applied to the judgment on equitable terms, he ſhould likewiſe pay or render all the money due to the plaintiff on ſimple contract; or otherwiſe as far as the penalty of the judgment covers ſuch debts; for this court will not compel a creditor by judgment to accept a leſs ſum than is due on the judgment, on the account of any former indefinite payments, when there are other accounts between the parties, unleſs the defendant conſent to bring all in that is due to the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 236.

Hilary, 11 Geo. Martin v. Pritchard. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in C. B. in an action of debt on a bond conditioned to pay 100 l. with intereſt, on the 5th day of December, &c. wherein the defendant pleaded, that after the making the bond, and before the day of ſuing out the original writ, to wit, on the 1ſt day of December, he paid the money, &c. The plaintiff replied, he did not pay in manner and form, &c. for that payment before the day was no good plea; to which the defendant demurred ſpecially, and the plaintiff joined in demurrer.

It was inſiſted that the replication was ill, having put in iſſue a day which was not material; and the caſe of Merril v. Joceline, 10 Mod. 147. was cited.

Per curiam. In the caſe of Merril v. Joceline, the defendant ſhould have pleaded paid to the day; but having pleaded a payment before the day, the point in iſſue only turned on that fact, which made the iſſue material only if found one way; therefore in that caſe the plaintiff ſhould have demurred.

In this caſe the day is intirely immaterial; this is a plea on ſtat. 4 & 5 Ann, c. 16. ſo that the queſtion is only, whether the principal and intereſt was paid before the original was ſued out. If an original be produced ſubſequent to the 1ſt day of December, the plea will be good; for the day is only form: ſo the judgment of the C. B. was affirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 345.

And after proof of many particulars, to induce a belief that in theſe loans no regard was had to the perſonal ſecurity; the court left it to the jury on this point, that where money is generally lent on a pledge, it will not deprive the lender of his remedy againſt the perſon; and that to diſcharge the perſon of the borrower, there muſt be a ſpecial agreement to ſtand to the pledge only: and the jury found for the defendant. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 919.

Trinity, 8 Geo. 2. Hudſon, Executor of Grove, v. Stalwood and others, Executors of Stalwood.

On an action of debt on a bond, whereby the defendant's teſtator, together with one Hicks, were jointly and ſeverally bound to the plaintiff's teſtator; the defendant pleaded, that Stalwood the teſtator, in his life-time, and the ſaid Hicks, paid off the bond: the plaintiff replied, that the ſaid Stalwood, and Hicks, did not pay it in manner and form, as pleaded; and thereon iſſue was joined, and a verdict was given for the plaintiff; and it appeared on evidence, that a ſmall part of the bond was paid by the ſaid Stalwood in his life-time, and the reſt paid off by Hicks, after Stalwood's death.

The court was moved for a new trial, and the queſtion thereon was, whether the evidence verified the defendant's plea? It was argued that it did ſo; for that Stalwood could not pay the money, but in his life-time; ſo that the words, in his life-time, muſt be thrown out, and then it is a plea of payment by Stalwood and Hicks.

But if they are to recover, that is not a material circumſtance; for the ſubſtance was, whether the principal and intereſt, due on the bond, was paid, or not; and therefore if A. and B. are bound, and B. only is ſued, and pleads payment, and the evidence is that the money was paid by A. that is evidence of B.'s plea.

Per curiam. No doubt of it.

Lord Hardwicke, who tried the cauſe, ſaid, it appeared that Hicks only entered into this bond as ſecurity for Stalwood, but took no counter-bond; ſo that this action was only brought to enable Hicks's executors to recover over; for if it had been only a ſingle queſtion between the plaintiff and defendant, whether the money was paid, or not, I ſhould be for extending the words of the plea as far as poſſible; but it appeared that this action was only to reimburſe the ſecurity, and Stalwood's executors had taken advantage of the act for the amendment of the law, and pleaded payment by the ſecurity to an action, wherein the ſecurity in effect was ſuing for his reimburſement, and that is a defect in the ſtatute; and then the queſtion was, whether the evidence did maintain the iſſue, viz. whether there was evidence of payment of the whole ſum by Stalwood, in his life-time, and Hicks.

The defendant might have pleaded to this action two ways, either according to the truth of the fact, that Stalwood paid part in his life-time, and Hicks the remainder after Stalwood's death, and ſo that the whole money was paid before the action was brought; or elſe, according to the operation of the law, that Hicks paid the whole; but he has taken another method; and I muſt confeſs, I think the words, in his life-time, are of no great conſequence; but ſuppoſing theſe words were not in the plea, the payment is ſtill pleaded as an entire fact, when it comes out not to be ſo; for the laſt payment was for Hicks, and for the executors of Stalwood; and therefore I think the plea ſhould not have any ſtrained conſtruction.

Page, Juſtice. Can any one ſay, that payment after Stalwood's death was payment by Hicks and Stalwood? For you ought to prove the payment, as you plead it; or ſuppoſe Hicks had paid the whole after Stalwood's death, would that have maintained the plea? and yet this is the ſame caſe.

So the rule was diſcharged. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 133.

Hilary, 12 Geo. 2. Archer v. Snatt.

The defendant purchaſed the equity of redemption, and had poſſeſſion of the eſtate: the leſſor of the plaintiff was a mortgagee, and had alſo lent money on a bond. And the court being moved to ſtay proceedings on payment of the mortgage-money, with intereſt and coſts, it was referred to the maſter. And the leſſor inſiſting to be paid the bond, before he would re-convey, the matter was ſpecially reported. And the court were of opinion, that this not being an application by an heir, but by the mortgagor, or his aſſignee of the equity of redemption, they could not be allowed the bond-debt to be brought in; but were to act in this caſe according to the rules of a court of equity, where a redemption is conſtantly decreed on payment of the mortgage-money only. And it was ſaid to have been ſo held in Hilary, 11 Geo. in this court, in the caſe of Wood on the demiſe of Cowhurſt v. Mortimer and others, and in 325 of Equity Caſes. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1107.

Trinity, 16 Geo. 2. Goddard v. Cox.

One Samuel Owen was indebted to the plaintiff for coals. He died, and made his wife executrix. She continued to deal with the plaintiff, and received coals on her own account; then ſhe married the defendant, who alſo received coals on his own account, and made ſeveral payments, generally on account. Theſe payments, if applied to the debt due from the executrix, and her debt whilſt a widow, cleared both theſe accounts, and the preſent action was brought againſt the defendant only for what was delivered in his time. And the queſtion was, who had the right of applying theſe payments, there being no direction from the defendant, who it was agreed had the firſt right?

Lee, Chief Juſtice held, that thereby it devolved to the plaintiff. And the defendant being by the marriage equally a debtor for what his wife received while ſole, as for what was after; the plaintiff might apply the money received to diſcharge the wife's own debt: but as to the demand againſt her as executrix, the validity of which depended on the queſtion of aſſets, and manner of adminiſtering them; he was of opinion, the plaintiff could not apply any of the money paid by the defendant to the diſcharge of that demand.

A caſe was mentioned to have been before the Chief Juſtice at Suffolk aſſizes, in 1730, Bloſs v. Cutting, where the defendant owed money on two bonds, and paid money on account, but gave no directions which he would have it applied to; and on a caſe reſerved, it was determined, that the plaintiff had the election. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1194.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt a rule why the defendants ſhould not have leave to bring 2670*l.* into court, on two of the aſſigned breaches only, and that the ſaid 2670 l. ſhould be ſtruck out of the declaration.

Lord Mansfield obſerved, that in motions of this kind, where the defendant applies to pay money into court, and to have the demand thereupon ſtruck out of the declaration, the law ariſes on the fact; and the true diſtinction is, "that where the ſum demanded is "a ſum certain, or capable of being aſcertained by mere "computation, without leaving any other ſort of diſ"cretion to be exerciſed by the jury, it is right and "reaſonable to admit the defendant to pay the money "into court, and have ſo much of the plaintiff's de"mand on him ſtruck out of the declaration; and "that if the plaintiff will not accept it, he ſhall pro"ceed at his peril." Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1120.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. 3. Fiſher v. Prince.

Adjudged, That ſtat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16. for paying money into court, ought to have a moſt liberal conſtruction; and that the courts of law and equity ought to exerciſe their own authority to extend the ſpirit and reaſon of it. The ſtatute meant, that in caſes of penalties, by way of ſecurity, the clear, final juſtice of the caſe ſhould be attained in the courts of law. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1363.

On an action of covenant, the plaintiff aſſigned a breach in non-payment of rent; the defendant pleads, that he paid it, and this he is ready to verify; and on a demurrer to this plea, it was adjudged ill, becauſe it was an affirmative to what went before, for that was a negative, viz. in non-payment of rent, and therefore the defendant ought to have concluded to the country, for otherwiſe, pleas would be infinite. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 209.

If a man be bound by recognizance to appear the firſt day of the term, and is charged upon his appearance with an information, in caſe the information be laid in Middleſex, the party has time to plead during all that term, ſo that it cannot come to trial in the term; but in caſe it be laid in any other county, the party ſhall have time to plead till the next term, for he is as much concerned to defend himſelf in thoſe caſes as in any civil action; and ſince the law allows him council, the law allows him time likewiſe to conſult with them; for not to allow the means of defence, is to take away the ſubjects defence; it is otherwiſe in capital offences: but note, in theſe caſes there is no council. Hilary, 3 & 4 W. & M. Parker v. Harris. Error.

On error brought on a judgment in the C. B. in an action of debt for rent, wherein the plaintiff declared upon two demiſes, viz. of one meſſuage, being in the Riſe of Hampſtead-hill, having it for ſeven years, paying 18 l. per annum; and upon another demiſe at will, paying after the rate of 18 l. per annum, during the continuance of that demiſe.

The defendant pleaded in bar, that at the time of the demiſe, the plaintiff was not poſſeſſed of the tenements, &c.

The plaintiff replied, that before the demiſes made by him to the defendant, Lord Wotton demiſed to the plaintiff a piece of land, with an old houſe and barn, being a parcel of the premiſes, for forty years, the ſaid Lord Wotton then and there having full power and title ſo to demiſe it, &c. by virtue whereof the plaintiff was poſſeſſed, and made a leaſe to the defendant in manner and form, &c.

To this replication the defendant demurred; and an exception was taken to it, that the plaintiff ought to ſet forth what eſtate the Lord Wotton had when he leaſed to the plaintiff, and that full power, right and title, was not ſufficient, without ſhewing what eſtate he had; and this ſeemed in the C. B. to be a good exception, it being upon a demurrer.

Then it was objected againſt the plea, that the defendant had ſet forth, that at the time of the demiſe, the plaintiff had no poſſeſſion of the tenements; it ſhould have been at the times, becauſe the plaintiff had declared upon two demiſes, and he might have a title when one part was let, though not when the other was demiſed; and this ſeemed to be a good exception to the bar, for that the defendant ought to have pleaded diſtinctly to each demiſe.

But then an exception was taken to the declaration, that there was no place laid for the premiſes demiſed; for in and on the riſe, &c. is only a deſcription of the ſituation; and of this opinion was the Chief Juſtice; but the other three judges held, that the venue ſhould come out of Hampſtead, which ſhall be taken for the vill, and that as well as if it had been ſaid at the riſe; and ſo judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Per curiam. The reſervation to the rate is not good, it being upon a leaſe at will, where the time of payment of the rent ſhould be very certain; for if the tenant holds over a day, he muſt pay the rent of the next quarter.

But Juſtice Dolben inclined, that it being uncertain how long the tenant would continue in poſſeſſion, he being only tenant at will, this reſervation may be good.

As to the other objections, it was held not to be material for the plaintiff in his replication to ſhew his title, or what eſtate he had in the houſe, upon the reaſons and authorities alledged at the bar.

And likewiſe the court concurred in opinion with the judges of the C. B. about the place whence the venue ſhould ariſe, which muſt be from Hampſtead, for if it had been near Hampſtead, then there could be no objection to it.

But becauſe the reſervation was held to be void, the judgment in the C. B. was reverſed in Michaelmas term following. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 76.

In ejectment, the defendant comes and ſays, that the land is ancient demeſne, without making any defence: to this there was a ſpecial demurrer.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The plaintiff might have refuſed the plea for want of a defence: but if he receives the plea he admits a defence. If a perſon pleads outlawry, he ought to plead it ſub pede ſigilli; and if he does not ſo plead it, the plaintiff may refuſe it: but if he accepts the plea, he ſhall not demur for that cauſe; for it is well enough if he allows it. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 217. *Mod. On a writ of error brought on a judgment given in the C. B. in a ſuit in replevin, wherein the defendant made conuſance, as bailiff to one N. M. &c.

Adjudged, That pleas muſt be framed according to the operation of the deeds on which they are grounded, and not according to the words of ſuch deeds: for example, if a deed is gave and agreed, ſuch words make a grant at common law, and therefore muſt be pleaded with an attornment. If a tenant for life of an eſtate grants the ſame to the perſon in reverſion, ſuch grant muſt be pleaded as a ſurrender: if one joint-tenant makes a feoffment to the other, ſuch feoffment will not be deemed good at common law, becauſe in this caſe they are jointly ſeiſed, therefore it muſt be pleaded as a confirmation. If one of them pleads that the other agreed, ſuch plea will not be deemed good, becauſe in that caſe a releaſe, and not a grant, is the proper conveyance. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 149.

Michaelmas, 4 W. & M. Gilman or Holman, v. Hoare.

In an action of debt for rent on an indenture of leaſe for forty years: the defendant pleaded that a year before the plaintiff made a leaſe for forty years to A. by virtue whereof A. entered and was poſſeſſed; and that though the defendant did afterwards enter, yet he was accountable to the ſaid A. On demurrer it was argued, that the ſecond leaſe was void for the firſt thirty-nine years, and ſo was the reſervation, and that here was no eſtoppel, becauſe the laſt of the forty years paſſed by the leaſe. Plow. 453, 422. 1 Inſt. 47. Where a tenant pour auter vie made a leaſe for years by indenture, and afterwards purchaſed the reverſion, and it was held that the leaſe ended by the death of ceſtui que vie, ſo is 3 Cro. 707.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The reaſon of the caſe in 1 Inſt. is, becauſe the tenant for life has a freehold, which is a greater eſtate, and the leaſe will need no eſtoppel, if the life endure: but in the principal caſe the leaſe muſt neceſſarily be void for thirty-nine years, unleſs made good by eſtoppel; and that a leaſe for years may operate and take effect as to part by eſtoppel, and as to the reſidue, by paſſing a real intereſt, is very plain from the common caſe of concurrent leaſes, which are all of them as to part good by eſtoppel, and a rent reſerved thereon. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 275.

The plaintiff replied, that the defendant was called and known as well by one name as by the other, and this he is ready to verify; and on a demurrer to this replication.

Per curiam. The defendant may well enough ſay, that he the ſaid Richard is called Richard Symonds, for he may own his chiſtian name, and plead a miſnomer to his ſurname.

But in this caſe all is diſcontinued by the plaintiff's replication, becauſe he averred his plea, when he ought to conclude to the country.

Where one affirmative comes in anſwer to another affirmative, in ſuch caſe it ought to be averred, and not conclude to the country; but it is otherwiſe where an affirmative comes in anſwer to a precedent negative; therefore in this caſe the defendant having added a traverſe to his plea, the plaintiff ought to have concluded his replication to iſſue, viz. to the country; for in his plea the traverſe is as a negative, and every general negative muſt conclude to the country: ſo that in this caſe the miſconcluſion of the replication has made a diſcontinuance. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 209.

On an action of debt brought for an eſcape, it was ſaid, that the priſoner was brought before Mr. Juſtice Gregory, and by him committed, it was objected, becauſe the plaintiff did not conclude, as appears by the record.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The eſcape is the giſt of the action, and the commitment is but the judgment to it, though it can be no eſcape without it; but the record is not the matter of the action, but the eſcape was; for then the plaintiff ought to have concluded as appears by the record, but here the omiſſion of it is but matter of form; for it ought to have been given in evidence on nil debet pleaded, which is the plea for the defendant in this caſe, becauſe the giſt of the action is grounded on matter of fact, and not on the record; for if it was, then the plaintiff could not plead nil debet to it, but only nul tiel record. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 8.

Michaelmas, 6 W. & M. Robinſon v. Smith.

In an action of treſpaſs for taking and impounding a cow, the defendant pleaded a juſtification, viz. that he was ſeized of ſeveral lands, parcel of the manor of Muſgrave, and particularly of a cloſe called Lowhill Meadow, parcel of the ſaid manor, to him and his heirs, deſcendible from anceſtor to heir, according to the cuſtom of the ſaid manor, and that the plaintiff's cow was in the ſaid cloſe doing damage, &c.

The court were of opinion, that where ſeiſin in fee is pleaded of a copyhold eſtate, by way of juſtifying of an offence, with which the defendant is charged, he muſt ſet out the commencement of his eſtate. And therefore the court gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 346.

Eaſter, 7 W. & M. Gibbons v. Pepper.

In an action of aſſault and battery, the defendant pleaded a juſtification, viz. that he was riding on a horſe in the highway, and that on a ſudden fright the horſe ſtarted and run on the plaintiff, who continued in the way after he was called to to go out, which was the ſame aſſault.

To the defendant's plea the plaintiff demurred, on which the defendant's council moved, that what the defendant had pleaded might be taken as a ſufficient juſtification for the aſſault and battery, for that it was no neglect in him, and that the miſchief done was inevitable.

Adjudged, That the defendant ſhould have pleaded the general iſſue; for if the horſe run away againſt his will, he would not have been found guilty; for in that caſe it ſhould not be deemed a battery in the rider. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 404.

In an action of debt on a bond brought againſt the defendant as executrix of her huſband, ſhe pleads that he died inteſtate, and that adminiſtration was committed to her, &c. wherefore ſhe prays judgment whether ſhe ought to be compelled to anſwer. The exception was, that the defendant did not traverſe without this, that ſhe adminiſtred as executrix.

Per curiam. This plea is better without a traverſe, for the defendant ſhews the plaintiff in what manner ſhe is chargeable; ſhe has confeſſed and avoided all the plea; has ſhewn that a rightful adminiſtration was committed: it is a foreign intendment that ſhe has adminiſtered any other way; and if ſhe has ſo done, you ſhould have come in and ſhewn it in your replication; but then, this concluſion is ill in abatement; every plea ſhould have its proper concluſion; this ſhould be, that the bill be quaſhed.

It is indeed a good plea to the juriſdiction of the court, but not in this caſe, and a reſpondeas ouſter was awarded. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 83.

Michaelmas, 7 W. 3. Smith v. Sharp.

Per curiam. There is a difference between doing a thing by a man and his aſſigns, and to them; if a thing be to be done by a man and his aſſigns, you muſt there alledge in the disjunctive, that it was neither done by him nor his aſſigns: but if a thing be to be done to a man and his aſſigns, you need not mention his aſſigns; for if he has aſſigned it over, it muſt be ſhewn of the other ſide. *Vide Mod. Hilary, 8 W. 3. Pierce v. Blake.

The defendant pleaded a falſe plea in abatement, viz. That the plaintiff was dead; and the court was moved, that the attorney might be compelled to ſwear it.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. We cannot compel him in any caſe to ſwear his plea, but where it is a foreign plea; but the attorney, if he puts in a falſe plea to delay juſtice, breaks his oath, and may be fined for deceiving the court.

Note, The court will not order a man to plead peremptorily till the rules be out. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 516.

Eaſter, 8 W. 3. Armitage v. Row.

On a motion made, that the plaintiff may file his original, and enter up the iſſue on record, for he has ſince arreſted the defendant three times for the ſame cauſe of action; and the defendant doubted whether he might plead in bar another action pending with a prout patet per recordum before it was entered.

Per curiam. He may; if they do not enter it, you may, without any motion in court, give a rule to enter it.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The altering the ancient method of the C. B. as to the imparlance-roll, and plea-roll, has cauſed great confuſion Formerly a declaration was entered on the roll the ſame day whereon the writ was returnable, with an imparlance over to the next term, which was called the imparlance-roll, and then the next term they entered their declaration over again, with another prout patet on another roll, which they called the plea-roll; but now the prothonotaries have thought fit to alter the courſe, making the plea-roll an original roll of the ſubſequent term, without another pout patet. There was a ſimilar caſe ſome time ago by writ of error, which was ſettled after great argument, viz. Moyler v. Hawkey, wherein there was an entry, with a continuance to the ſubſequent term, but no entry in the ſubſequent term, with another pout patet, or any relation to the precedent term, and yet we affirmed the judgment, becauſe of the new practice now introduced. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 91.

Eaſter, 8 W. 3. Pleddall v. Freak.

In an action of debt on a bond, brought againſt the defendant by the name of William Freak; the defendant pleaded his name was Walter; the plaintiff demurred, ſuppoſing that the defendant was eſtopped by the record, to ſay his name was Walter; but judgment was given, that he take nothing by his bill, for the plaintiff ſhould have pleaded it. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 152.

Trinity, 8 W. 3. Jones v. Bodinham.

In an action of treſpaſs for ſtealing of cattle, it was adjudged, that when iſſue is joined on an ill plea, and a verdict for the plaintiff, yet he ſhall have judgment; for the defendant ſhall not take advantage after a verdict of his ill pleading. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 225.

Trinity, 8 W. 3. Beſton v. Hayward.

In an action of treſpaſs for breaking his cloſe, and digging therein at B. the defendant juſtifies by a way, &c. The plaintiff replies, that the treſpaſs whereof he complains was not committed in the way which the defendant claims, but in another part of the cloſe, and this he is ready to verify, &c. and prays judgment and damages, &c. The defendant demurred, and his council took exception to this new aſſignment, becauſe it did not offer any other matter in bar, as the old precedents are, 2 Co. 6. &c.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The treſpaſs here being for breaking of the cloſe, and the new aſſignment being in the ſame cloſe, the plaintiff has pleaded better than if he had offerd other matter in bar. And therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 91.

Trinity, 8 W. 3. Birt v. Strode. Error.

On error of a judgment in C. B. in an action on the caſe, where the plaintiff declared, he was lawfully poſſeſſed of a tenement, and that he ought to have common of paſture in 1000 acres, in a place called, &c. for all commonable beaſts, levant and couchant on the tenement aforeſaid; that the defendant made conyburrows, whereby the plaintiff could not enjoy his common in ſo ample and beneficial a manner, &c. the defendant demurred.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, delivered the opinion of the court, that the judgment ought to be affirmed, and that the declaration was good, without ſetting out a title to the common, either by grant or preſcription.

1ſt, Becauſe the action is brought upon the poſſeſſion, and is founded on a wrong done upon the poſſeſſion, and not to the title.

2dly, It is not neceſſary that it appear whether the defendant be owner of the land, or not, and therefore no need of ſetting forth a title. But if it had appeared by pleading, that the defendant is owner of the land, there it is neceſſary to ſet out a title; but here it ſtands indifferent whether he be ſo, or a ſtranger; but when it comes on ſpecial pleading, as in treſpaſs, for taking and chacing his cattle; if the defendant juſtifies as in his freehold, and that he took them damage feaſant, there the plaintiff muſt ſet forth ſome title in his replication, in anſwer to that of the defendant in his bar: but in a declaration, where the defendant may be as well ſuppoſed a ſtranger as an owner, there no title is neceſſary to be ſhewn.

3dly, The matter is not traverſable, for all the right of the common muſt be given in evidence upon not guilty, or elſe the plaintiff cannot recover; and if ſo, it is to no purpoſe to ſet it forth in the declaration; and he ſaid, the caſe principally to be relied on is that of St. John v. Moody, Michaelmas, 27 Ch. 2. The judgment was affirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 97.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Teuxera Demater v. Hooper.

On an action on the caſe the defendant pleaded in abatement, that the plaintiff was an alien enemy, born at, &c. The plaintiff replied, that he was born at London, which he is ready to verify, &c. The defendant demurs, and exception was taken to the replication that the plaintiff ſhould have tendered an iſſue, and not have concluded with an averment; but not allowed.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If the defendant pleads in abatement, the plaintiff has his election either to reply and tender an iſſue, or to plead with he is ready to verify; and the defendant might have rejoined that the plaintiff was not born at London, and taken iſſue, if he pleaſed. But when a plea in bar is pleaded, if the plaintiff replies iſſuable matter, he ought to tender iſſue. Judgment for the plaintiff, that the defendant anſwer over. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 101.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Harris v. Pitt.

On debt on a bond: the condition thereof was, to free and keep harmleſs the plaintiff of and from all coſts and damages, which may ariſe by reaſon of a law-ſuit, &c. The defendant pleaded non damnificatus generally; and upon demurrer to the plea, the queſtion was, whether the plea was good or not.

Per curiam. It is a good plea, becauſe the condition was to ſave the plaintiff harmleſs from ſomething that was uncertain at the time of making thereof, viz. from the coſts and charges of the ſuit, that no coſts might be recovered againſt him; but if it had been to ſave harmleſs from a particular thing, then ſuch a negative plea generally would not have done, becauſe the defendant ought to ſhew how he indemnified the other. Whereon the council moved to have leave to diſcontinue the action. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 243.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Swinſted or Swinſtead v. Smith or Lyddall.

This caſe is reported in 1 Salk. by the name of Swinſtead v. Lydall. It was an action of treſpaſs for an aſſault, battery, and falſe impriſonment, and for keeping and detaining the plaintiff, until he paid the defendant 11 s. The defendant juſtified under an order of the court of conſcience, &c. by virtue whereof he took and impriſoned the plaintiff, and detained him till he paid 10 s. 4 d. &c. And on a demurrer to this plea it was objected, that it did not anſwer the declaration, for that was for detaining the plaintiff, until he paid 11 s. and the plea is, that he detained him, until he paid 10 s. 4 d. ſo where a man declares in an action of treſpaſs for taking eleven ſheep, it is no anſwer to juſtify the taking ten of them; ſo likewiſe if the plaintiff declares for falſely impriſoning him for three days, it is no anſwer to juſtify for two days: but on the other ſide it was argued, that the giſt of this action was for the falſe impriſonment, as in treſpaſs for taking his horſe, and immoderately riding him; the defendant juſtified the taking by the plaintiff's leave, but ſaid nothing to the riding; and on a demurrer that was adjudged a good plea, becauſe the giſt of the action was the taking the horſe, and the immoderate riding was only an aggravation of the treſpaſs, and this was Bringlo v. Morris's caſe, Hilary 27 & 28 Car. 2.

Holt, C. J. In the principal caſe, the until is only an aggravation, for the action was not brought for taking the 11 s. but for the falſe impriſonment, and detaining the plaintiff until, &c. as in treſpaſs for taking three ſheep, every ſheep is the cauſe of the action, viz. part of the cauſe, and ſo for impriſoning the plaintiff for three days, and therefore the taking every ſheep, and impriſoning for every part of the time muſt be anſwered; it is true, if the plaintiff had been to pay 10 s. 4 d. only, and that after it was paid, the defendant detained him till he had 8 d. more, that might have been material, but then the plaintiff ſhould have ſet forth this matter in a replication; ſo this was adjudged a good plea. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 408. Ibid. vol. 3. p. 219.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. James v. Fowks.

An action of aſſumpſit was brought againſt a feme, who pleaded coverture at the time of the promiſe; the plaintiff demurred, becauſe it amounted to the general iſſue.

Per curiam. Where it is matter of law that amounts to the general iſſue, it may be pleaded, and is no cauſe of demurrer; for matter of law in that caſe is matter of fact, which avoids the action, and ſo may be pleaded, or given in evidence, as the defendant pleaſes. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 101.

Before joinder in demurrer, the defendant may waive his ſpecial plea, and plead the general iſſue.

Per curiam. But if there be a rule to plead, ſo as to ſtand by it, and the defendant pleads a ſpecial plea, as he may, and the plaintiff demurs, the plaintiff ſhall not then waive, and plead the general iſſue. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 515.

Upon a habeas corpus returnable in Michaelmas term, if the declaration be delivered before the morrow of All Souls, the defendant muſt plead to try; but upon a cepi corpus he is only to plead to enter. So in Eaſter term, if the declaration be delivered before a month of Eaſter, the defendant on a habeas corpus muſt plead to try; upon a cepi corpus to enter only. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 515.

——— 9 W. 3. Yates v. Herlakender.

On an action of covenant brought againſt an apprentice, the breach aſſigned was, that the defendant left his maſter's ſervice at ſuch a time, and continued therefrom to ſuch a time; the defendant pleaded, that he did not depart from his ſervice, nor continue from it, as the plaintiff had alledged; to this plea the plaintiff demurred, becauſe the whole time being put in iſſue, the defendant ought to have pleaded, that he did not continue out of his ſervice for the time alledged in the declaration, nor for any part thereof.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, that in a general iſſue, as for cutting twenty trees, the defendant muſt plead that he did not cut the ſaid twenty trees, nor any of them; but it is otherwiſe in a collateral iſſue: as for inſtance, in an action of debt, on a bond conditioned not to commit waſte, and the breach aſſigned, that he did commit waſte in cutting twenty trees, it is ſufficient for the defendant to plead he did not cut twenty trees in manner and form as the plaintiff had alledged, for in ſuch caſe he is only to meet with his adverſary, but on the evidence, if it appear that he cut down one tree, the plaintiff ſhall have a verdict. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 209.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Though the defendant admits Charles the Firſt to have been ſeiſed of this advowſon in groſs by deſcent, and conſequently that Q. Elizabeth was ſeized in groſs of it during ſome time of her reign, yet he does not admit it at the preciſe time of the 14th February, in the 12th year of her reign; becauſe the alledging of the time and day when Queen Elizabeth was ſeiſed in groſs is ſurpluſage and immaterial; for it is ſufficient to alledge general ſeiſin in a quare impedit, in time of peace in the reign of ſuch a king. Then, though the defendant does not deny a thing, yet he admits by it only things materially alledged, but he does not admit things immaterially alledged. The time of the ſeiſing and preſentation is traverſable, and all the precedents never alledge the day of the ſeiſin or of the preſentation. Then, if it is ſo immaterial that one cannot deny it, the not denying it will not amount to an admittance. Beſides, nothing that is immaterial, though it be admitted, will amount to an eſtoppel.

Adjudged, On the above writ of quare impedit, that letters patent to a ſtranger may be pleaded without a profert in curia; and alſo that letters patent, enrolled in the ſame court, may be pleaded without a profert. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 296, 299.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit and quantum meruit for 20 l. the defendant pleaded, he ought not to be charged, becauſe he paid the money at the time, &c. and this he is ready to verify; the plaintiff demurred.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. 1ſt, This plea does not amount to the general iſſue, becauſe it admits the cauſe of action.

2dly, He ought not to be charged is no plea here, becauſe he allows the promiſe to be a good promiſe, but avoids it by matter of diſcharge ex poſt facto; in this caſe he ſhould have pleaded no action. But where the matter of the plea ſhews there never was a good cauſe of action, he ought not to be charged may be proper. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 516. Raym. vol. 1. p. 217.

Eaſter, 9 W. 3. Hallet or Holler, v. Burch or Buſh.

This caſe is reported in 1 Salk. by the name of Holler v. Buſh, and in 2 Salk, by the name of Hallet v. Burt; but the caſe was thus:

In treſpaſs for taking his cows, &c. the defendant pleads, and ſets forth a right by preſcription in the Biſhop of Saliſbury to grant replevins in ſuch a manor, and that the plaintiff took and impounded three cows of another, and that he (the defendant) by virtue of a replevin, as ſteward, took and drove them away, and traverſed that he was guilty otherwiſe, or in any other manner; and on demurrer to this plea it was objected, that it amounts to no more than the general iſſue; for the effect of it is, that thoſe were the cows of another perſon, and that the plaintiff took and impounded them: now by the impounding the plaintiff had neither title or poſſeſſion, and if ſo, he had no colour to bring an action of treſpaſs for taking them out of the pound, for in ſuch caſe treſpaſs will not lie, but parca fracta.

Per curiam. This plea amounts to no more than the general iſſue; wherever the defendant's plea leaves a cauſe of action in the plaintiff either expreſs or implied, but confeſſes and avoids it, the plea is good, and this confeſſion and avoidance is colour, without which the plea would amount but to the general iſſue: now in the principal caſe the defendant has ſet forth in his plea, that theſe were not the plaintiff's cows, but yet, that he took them and impounded them only, whereby they became in cuſtody of the law, and therefore there was no colour for him to bring an action of treſpaſs for taking them out; but if the defendant had pleaded took and detained, inſtead of impounded, the plea might have been good. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 272. Raym. vol. 1. p. 218.

On an action of debt brought againſt the defendant in cuſtody of the Marſhal, &c. on a bond made at Cheſter; the defendant pleaded he was, at the time of exhibiting the bill, an inhabitant, and notoriouſly converſant in the county palatine of Cheſter, viz. at Nampwich; which plea the plaintiff apprehending to be a foreign plea, ſigned his judgment, becauſe it was not ſworn to; and it was moved to ſet the judgment aſide, becauſe it was not a foreign plea; for pleas to the juriſdiction of the court are not ſuch; as pleas of antient demeſne, privilege, &c. and therefore are never ſworn to. But a foreign plea is when the defendant carries the action out of the county where the plaintiff had laid it; if the action be tranſitory, then, if the defendant carries it into another county, the plea is naught, except in ſpecial caſes; but if the action be local, the removing it into another county than that where the plaintiff had laid it, is properly a foreign plea; which is not done in this caſe; for here the action is laid in Cheſhire, and the defendant does not in his plea remove it from thence, which the court agreed to, and therefore the judgment was ſet aſide. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 123. Ibid. vol. 5. p. 335.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. When you plead outlawry in abatement, when you put in your plea in the office, you muſt have a capias, or ſome ſuch matter, as may make the outlawry appear, and not conclude only as appears by the record, as you do when you plead it in bar, and have time to bring in the record. *Vide Mod. Trinity, 9 W. 3. Leaves v. Bernard. Error.

On an action on the caſe on ſeveral promiſes, the defendant comes and defends the force and injury, when, &c. and prays a judgment of the count, and that the aforeſaid count may be quaſhed. The plaintiff joined in the demurrer, and had final judgment; the defendant brought a writ of error, alledging that final judgment ought not to have been, but only a reſpondeas ouſter awarded, this plea being only in abatement, and not in bar.

Per curiam. By the courſe of this court, whereſoever you commence by bill, praying judgment of the court is a plea in bar; and in that caſe, if you plead in abatement of the count, you muſt not pray judgment of the count, and that the count may be quaſhed; but you muſt pray judgment of the bill, and that the bill may be quaſhed. Judgment affirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 133. Ibid. vol. 5. p. 131.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit the defendant pleads in abatement, that the plaintiff is a popiſh recuſant convict, as appears by the record of the eſtreat of the Exchequer. The plaintiff demurs, and the firſt exception was, that in pleading the conviction, the defendant ſays, that a proclamation iſſued to ſummon the plaintiff to appear and render himſelf before or at the next ſeſſions; and then ſays, that the plaintiff did not render himſelf at the next ſeſſions, but does not ſay, that he did not render himſelf before.

Per curiam. For this reaſon the plea is ill.

Second exception. The defendant does not produce in court the record of the conviction, but only an exemplification of the eſtreat of the Exchequer.

Per curiam. That is ill alſo; for the eſtreat in the Exchequer is not a record, but only minutes, to make proceſs on it for the king: and therefore a reſpondeas ouſter was awarded. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 243.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. On an indebitatus aſſumpſit, the defendant comes and ſays, that he is an officer of the Exchequer, and pleads his priviledge. The plaintiff demurs, and among other exceptions taken was the following: that it is not ſaid, that the court ought not to have conuſance, in the beginning of the plea, but in the end of the plea. But it was not allowed.

Per curiam. The concluſion makes the plea. For if a man begins in bar, and concludes in abatement, it is a plea in abatement. Raſt. Entr. 178. 472-3. Old Book of Entr. 62. b. 128. Thompſ. Entr. 3. 4. And therefore judgment was given for the defendant. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 336.

On an action on the caſe brought on ſeveral promiſes, on an original, the defendant, without craving oyer of the writ, pleaded a variance between the writ and the count, ſhewing particularly wherein; whereupon the plaintiff demurred; for though the writ be in court, yet it is on a diſtinct roll from the count, and no advantage can be taken of it, without craving oyer; which the court agreed to, and a reſpondeas ouſter was awarded. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 189.

Eaſter, 10 W. 3. Silly v. Dally.

In replevin the defendant made conuſance as bailiff to J. T. and ſaid, that on the 31ſt July 1645, J. T. grandfather to J. T. aforeſaid, was poſſeſſed of and in one meſſuage, &c. for a certain term of fifty years, to be computed from the 31*ſt of July in that year*; and that he being ſo poſſeſſed, the ſaid 31ſt day of July, made a leaſe of the ſaid meſſuage for the term of 499 years, three quarters of a year, two months, and three weeks, to J. C. and R. C. their executors and adminiſtrators, rendering rent; that J. T. made his will, and J. N. his executor, and died; that J. N. made his will, and J. T. (to whom the defendant is bailiff) executor; and for rent arrear avows the taking of the cattle on the premiſes as a diſtreſs, &c. The plaintiff demurs; and his council argued, that the conuſance was ill, becauſe the commencement of this term is not ſhewn, viz. out of what eſtate it was derived; for when a particular eſtate is pleaded in a plea, avowry, or replication, the commencemenet of it ought to be ſhewn. Co. Lit. 303. b. &c.

Per curiam. An avowry differs from a declaration; for in debt for rent, &c. one plea will anſwer the whole declaration, viz. nil debet; but in avowry, no ſingle plea will go to the whole, for the avowry muſt be traverſed, but no traverſe can be taken to the poſſeſſion of the term. Beſides, it is an eſtabliſhed rule, that the commencement of all particular eſtates ought to be ſhewn in pleas, avowries, &c. But where the action is brought on privity of contract, there it is not material to ſhew the commencement. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 334. Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 190.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit for horſe-keeping, the defendant pleaded an action depending in the Sheriff of London*'s court* for the ſame cauſe, and held no plea; becauſe an action pending in an inferior court is no bar to an action, in a ſuperior court, for the ſame cauſe. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Hartfort v. Jones, &c.

On an action of trover for goods, the defendants plead, that they were in a ſhip, and that the ſhip took fire, and that they hazarded their lives to ſave them; and therefore they are ready to deliver the goods, if the plaintiff will pay them 4 l. for ſalvage, &c. The plaintiff demurred generally.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, that they might retain the goods until payment, as well as a taylor, an hoſtler, or a common carrier. And ſalvage is allowed by all nations, it being reaſonable that a man ſhall be rewarded, who hazards his life in the ſervice of another. And he ſaid, he never knew but one ſpecial plea good in trover, except a releaſe. And ſee Yelv. 198. a man may plead that ſpecially, which he might give in evidence upon not guilty, if he confeſſes and avoids the fact. For the reaſon why you may plead ſpecially is not the doubt in the law; but it is becauſe the matter of the plea cannot be given in evidence, on not guilty. But this cannot be good, though after a general demurrer, becauſe it does not confeſs a converſion.

A rule was made by conſent, that the defendant ſhould waive the ſpecial plea, and plead the general iſſue. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 393.

On an action on the caſe the defendant pleaded the act of compoſition.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, made this diſtinction; where the defendant's plea confeſſes the duty demanded by the plaintiff, and does not avoid it ſufficiently, if the iſſue be immaterial, and found for the plaintiff, he ſhall have judgment; but if the defendant's plea goes in diſcharge of the action, and iſſue is taken immaterially, and a verdict given for the plaintiff, a repleader ſhall be granted. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 390.

One Fielding arreſted the defendant in aſſumpſit and trover, who now moved that he might anſwer without putting in bail, becauſe he was a peer, viz. Earl of Buckingham, Viſcount Purbeck, and Baron of Stoke, and ſo was free from arreſt: that if he ſhould put in bail, it muſt be by the name whereby he is arreſted, which would eſtop him from claiming his peerage.

Per curiam. In all civil caſes the bail only enter into the recognizance, and not the party himſelf; and therefore it would be no eſtoppel to him: that they could not take notice of his peerage, otherwiſe than by plea, which could not be till he was in the cuſtody of the Marſhal; and therefore being by coercion, it would not prejudice him: ſo the court would order nothing, but let the law take its courſe.

Holt ſaid, if this had been a criminal caſe, they would diſpenſe with his joining in the recognizance to waive the eſtoppel; and that here they would make the plaintiff declare ſpeedily, and not allow the uſual time. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 217.

Hilary, 12 W. 3. Horne v. Lewin.

In replevin, the defendant avowed the diſtreſs taken for rent arrear; the plaintiff replied, of his own injury, abſque hoc, that any rent was in arrear: and on a ſpecial demurrer to this replication, becauſe it amounted to no more than the general iſſue, it was adjudged, that this was not a proper inducement to the traverſe, as if in treſpaſs the defendant ſhould plead, of his own injury, abſque hoc, that he is guilty, ſo that in the principal caſe the plaintiff ſhould have replied, nothing in arrear, and have concluded to the country, that had been the proper iſſue, for it is a negative to what was before affirmed. So of his own injury, abſque hoc, that there was ſuch a preſcription, is ill, and of his own injury, abſque hoc, that he is a bailiff, is ill; therefore the natural and proper replication to this avowry, had been nothing in arrear; it is as if it were the general iſſue, ſo that this replication of ſpecial matter, viz. of his own injury, amounts only to the general iſſue, and no other evidence can be given but what might as well have been given on the proper iſſue; beſides, this circumlocution muſt be ill, becauſe it prolongs the cauſe, by forcing the avowant to an unneceſſary rejoinder; and though it is only matter of form, becauſe it does not alter the evidence, yet on a ſpecial demurrer, and ſhewing it for cauſe, it is naught. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 274. Raym. vol. 1. page 639. Forteſcue, p. 233.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held in this caſe, to which the court agreed, that in treſpaſs, if the ſheriff or other principal officer juſtifies by virtue of a capias, or any returnable writ, he muſt ſhew that the writ was returned, but not if he juſtifies under a replevin or an alias replevin, for theſe are not returnable writs, but a pluries replevin is returnable; for the writ commands the ſheriff to replevy the goods, or ſignify the cauſe to us, therefore he muſt return the writ, otherwiſe this inconvenience might happen, viz. that if the defendant ſhould appear and be nonſuited, (for he is the firſt actor) the court would be at a loſs how to give judgment, whether pro retorn' habend'. or a capias in withernam, or a mere nonſuit. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 220. Raym. vol. 1. p. 632.

Eaſter, 12 W. 3. Paramour v. Johnſon.

On an aſſumpſit on ſeveral promiſes; the defendant pleaded that he paid ſuch a ſum in ſatisfaction of all promiſes, till ſuch a time, which the plaintiff received in ſatisfaction, without this, that he made any promiſe ſince. The plaintiff demurs, for that the plea amounted to the general iſſue.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. It is no true rule, that where the defendant may plead the general iſſue, and give the ſpecial matter in evidence, he ſhall not plead ſpecially. Wherever you may plead matter in law, which avoids the cauſe of action, you may plead generally, and give that matter in evidence, or you may plead it ſpecially; and upon all general iſſues you may give ſpecial matter in evidence. If you give colour, you may plead it, and give releaſe in evidence. Vide Byfield's caſe 10 Co. where, in treſpaſs for goods, the defendant confeſſes the taking, but ſays, he bought them in a market overt. But it is indulgence to give accord with ſatisfaction in evidence upon non aſſumpſit pleaded; but that has crept in, and now is ſettled. But here it appearing the ſums paid were leſs than thoſe declared upon, the plaintiff had judgment; the court holding, if it had been a collateral ſatisfaction, the plea had been good. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 376.

Eaſter, 12 W. 3. Aſhmead v. Ranger.

On an action of treſpaſs brought againſt the defendant for the breaking of his cloſe at B. and cutting and carrying away of —— oaks and aſhes, &c. The council for the defendant took exception to the replication, becauſe it is not otherwiſe than in bar, which ought to have been ſaid, ſince the plaintiff varies from the place in the defendant's plea.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, that was well enough, it being very well conſiſtent, for the place where, &c. may be a cloſe called Horn Cloſe, containing eight acres, and yet it may be parcel of a copyhold tenement, and twenty acres.

On the other ſide, an exception was taken to the defendant's plea, becauſe he had not given colour to the plaintiff.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If the plaintiff replies, the defect of the colour is waived; but upon a general demurrer, advantage might have been taken of it.

And the whole court were clearly of opinion, that judgment ought to be given for the plaintiff; becauſe it appears, that the plaintiff had not enough to repair without theſe trees. And therefore judgment could not be given for the defendant, without overthrowing the caſe of Haydon v. Smith. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 551. Forteſcue, p. 152.

Trinity, 12 W. 3. Medina v. Houghton.

On an action on the caſe, the plaintiff declared that the defendant being poſſeſſed of certain million lottery tickets, ſold them to the plaintiff, affirming them to be his own, whereas in truth they were the tickets of another man. The defendant pleaded, that he bought them bona fide before the ſale, and ſo ſold them bona fide, in which caſe, the plaintiff ought not to have his action; and prayed judgment of the declaration, and that the ſame might be quaſhed. The plaintiff demurred.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The plea is ill, and the action well lies.

The council inſiſted, that to pray judgment of the declaration is always in bar in this court; in abatement it is praying judgment of the bill, and that the bill may be quaſhed; and judgment that the bill be quaſhed cannot be given in this caſe, becauſe it is not prayed.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. That is true in demurrers, but not in pleas, becauſe there it is no action; for a man may plead in abatement of the declaration. It was held in this court in the caſe of Biſſe v. Harcourt, 3 Mod. 281. that if the defendant pleads matter of fact in abatement, which the plaintiff confeſſes and avoids, there in the concluſion of his plea he cannot pray damages, but muſt affirm his writ; but if he denies the fact, he may pray judgment of his damages; becauſe if the matter of fact be found for the plaintiff, he ſhall have final judgment. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 593.

On an action of treſpaſs, the defendant juſtified by a term for years, beginning it with a general poſſeſſion, &c. The plaintiff replied, and an immaterial iſſue was joined. And he cited 3 Keb. 664. Cox v. Milliſh, in point.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſeemed to be of a contrary opinion. And a day was given to hear council on both ſides; and afterwards at another day, upon conſideration, &c. of this, he delivered the opinon of the court to be, that now a repleader ought not to be granted before trial; becauſe by ſtat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. cap. 8. of jeofails, many defects are aided by verdict, and therefore granting of a repleader may be prejudicial to the plaintiff. ——— 1 Ann. Hatton v. Morſe.

There is a ſhort note of this caſe in 1 Salk. but the caſe was thus: in aſſumpſit, &c. the defendant pleaded, that true it is, he did promiſe, but that before the day of ſuing out the bill, he paid the money; and on a demurrer to this plea it was objected, that it amounted to the general iſſue.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. This does not amount to the general iſſue; for though payment may be given in evidence on non aſſumpſit pleaded, yet it was long before that obtained; it is like giving colour, for he ſays, there was a promiſe, but that he performed it: now there are many things which may be given in evidence on the general iſſue, and yet thoſe things may be pleaded ſpecially: as for inſtance, in an action of debt the defendant may plead a releaſe, or he may give it in evidence on nil debet pleaded, ſo in debt for rent on a demiſe, the defendant may plead an entry and eviction, before any rent became due, or he may give it in evidence on nil debet pleaded.

Note. There are two ſorts of colour, the one is expreſs, the other implied

Expreſs, as in treſpaſs quare clauſum fregit, the defendant in pleading makes a title under W. R. ſetting forth, that the plaintiff claims under a feoffment from the ſaid W. R. by which nothing paſſed, but that he entered by colour thereof: now here the defendant gave colour of action to the plaintiff, becauſe by the feoffment he was tenant at will, and entered, and by virtue of his poſſeſſion he may maintain an action againſt every one, but not againſt him who has a right; ſo likewiſe in treſpaſs quare clauſum fregit, if the defendant pleads that the plaintiff was ſeiſed, &c. and made a leaſe to him for years, there is no occaſion to give expreſs colour, becauſe the defendant allows that the plaintiff has the reverſion, which is colour enough. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 273. Raym. vol. 1. p. 551.

Hilary, 1 Ann. Courtney's Caſe. Error.

On an action of debt on a judgment in the C. B. pending a writ of error, that matter was pleaded in abatement of the judgment.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. It is hard a writ of error ſhould ſuperſede execution on a judgment, and not ſuperſede an action to be brought thereon; for if there be a judgment againſt a teſtator, who is alſo bound on a ſtatute, the executor may bring a writ of error, and pray the ſtatute, notwithſtanding the judgment be affirmed. Yelv. 29 Cro. Eliz. 822.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Though it be a new original, yet it is no collateral matter, but the judgment on which the writ of error is brought is the giſt of the action. And as to the caſe in the Exchequer Chamber, he ſaid he had ſpoke to Treby, Chief Juſtice, about it, and that he had informed him it had gone off on another matter, viz. that the concluſion of the plea was ill, for it was prays judgment if the party anſwered to the debt, till the judgment was affirmed, and not prays judgment of the bill or writ. And the caſe of the King v. Tuke was cited, where it had been held a good plea in abatement: but here the court gave no opinion. *Vide Mod. Eaſter, 1 Ann. Atwood v. Burr.

Adjudged, That in pleading the ſtatute of limitations, the party muſt plead the return, and not the purchaſe of the writ; for it is the return that gives the court cognizance of the ſuit. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 5.

Eaſter, 1 Ann. Vanhatton v. Morſe.

In an action brought by the plaintiff againſt the defendant for goods ſold him; the defendant pleaded payment. The plaintiff demurred ſpecially to the defendant's plea, and ſhewed for cauſe, that the plea amounted to the general iſſue; but not allowed.

Per curiam. This plea admits at one time a good cauſe of action in the plaintiff, and excuſes it by matter done after the fact, and therefore is an honeſt and good plea. Therefore let judgment go for the defendant. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 787.

Trinity, 1 Ann. Molloy v. Lork, or Johns v. Bromfield.

In an action of debt on bond, the defendant pleaded, that he delivered it as an eſcrow to one J. S. to be delivered to the plaintiff on conditions to be performed by the plaintiff, which were not performed; and this he is ready to verify. The plaintiff demurred ſpecially, and ſhewed for cauſe, that this plea ought to conclude to the country. And no perſon appearing for the defendant, the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 787.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. The Queen v. Dr. Thomas Watſon, Biſhop of St. David's.

The court refuſed to take notice of the defendant's plea in this caſe, becauſe he pleaded he was in cuſtody of the Marſhal of the Marſhalſea, when he was not in ſuch cuſtody; and alſo in his plea had omitted the uſual and cuſtomary concluſion. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 817.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Ode v. Norcliff.

It was pleaded in abatement, that the defendant was one of the clerks of the C. B. and ought not to be ſued out of that court without his conſent. The plaintiff replied, that he did not conſent, but laid the venue where the plea was, and therefore held bad. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 97.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Haywood v. Davis, and others.

On an action of treſpaſs againſt two, for taking a pail of water out of the defendant's well; the defendant pleaded in abatement that the other defendant and plaintiff were tenants in common of the well; the plaintiff replies, that he was ſolely ſeiſed, abſque hoc, that he was tenant in common with any, and concludes to the country. The council ſaid, where an abſque hoc takes in the whole matter of the plea, there he that takes a traverſe may conclude to the country: but where an abſque hoc is on a particular fact, which does not comprehend the whole plea, then he ſhould not conclude to the country, but aver. And it was agreed by all, that in the caſe of without ſuch cauſe, one may conclude to the country.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. In treſpaſs it is no plea in abatement for a defendant to ſay he was tenant in common with the plaintiff, becauſe he may give it in evidence on not guilty; but here the defendant that was a ſtranger pleads tenancy in common in the plaintiff with the defendant; and that he may well do. And when one pleads tenancy in common or joint-tenancy in abatement of the writ, and the plaintiff pleads in ſupport of his writ, he ſhall conclude to the country generally; for it is there an abſque hoc on a ſpecial occaſion to maintain his writ, and the abſque hoc there is merely put in for form: and is no more than that the other who is ſeiſed jointly, or ſeiſed in common with him, has nothing there. Dyer 333. Where you traverſe a ſpecial point, you muſt conclude with an averment, and not to the country: but this is not a traverſe of a ſpecial point. The court ordered the defendant to anſwer further. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 104.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Cliſton v. Swezeland.

The defendant pleaded his privilege as an attorney of the C. B. in abatement, without concluding to the record.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. He need not do it, but he may leave the plaintiff at liberty to reply, and deny his being a perſon privileged there, which the plaintiff cannot do if the defendant concludes to the record; and his not ſaying prout patet is no good cauſe of a general demurrer, and on the as appears by the record, there ſhall go a certiorari to certify the record, and if they produce one and ſhew they have privilege, the plaintiff is eſtopped. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 106.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Wood v. Sutton. Error.

On judgment brought againſt the defendant for an eſcape; and he brought a writ of error, and put in ſham-bail, and ſo on as often as it was excepted againſt. On affidavit of this, a rule was made peremptorily for his putting in good bail on ſuch a day, or elſe execution to iſſue.

Per curiam. Where there is a ſpecial iſſue tendered, and the other ſide joins in it, the book is ſent back to the defendant's attorney, and he has four days given, either to join in the iſſue, or to waive it, and give the general one; and after the four days, he ought to ſend the paper back without any demand of the attorney on the other ſide; and if he fails in it, the other may ſign judgment for want of joining in iſſue; but if the attorney will take back the books after the four days, and receive money for entering the iſſue, or making up the record, he ſhall not afterwards enter his judgment. *Vide Mod. See this caſe fully ſtated in page 385 of this work, under the head Eccleſiaſtical Matters, &c.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Watts v. Roſewell.

This caſe being again moved, and 1 Vent. 210. quoted as an authority in point, that the concluſion was bad; for that by the general concluſion he had waived the ſpecial matter of the plea: for it is a rule in pleading, that when a man pleads ſpecial matter, and concludes generally, he thereby waives the ſpecial matter. And it was agreed on both ſides, that here he might have pleaded general, agreeable to 1 Vent. 210. Keb. 140. was quoted to prove the contrary, but there being no judgment in the caſe in Keb. the plaintiff had judgment niſi, Holt, Chief Juſtice, being abſent. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Sheild v. Cliff.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Croſſe v. Bilſon.

In replevin for taking the plaintiff's mare, in a certain place called the King's Highway, the defendant acknowledged the caption damage faiſant, in a certain place called the Queen's Highway, as bailiff to Lord L. whoſe freehold in the place where, &c. without this, that he took the mare aforeſaid, in the place aforeſaid, called the King's Highway, as the plaintiff has declared againſt him, and this he is ready to verify; therefore he prays judgment and a return, &c. The plaintiff comes and ſays, that he ought not to acknowledge ſuch taking, &c. becauſe he ſays, ſays, that at the ſaid time that, &c. he took the mare aforeſaid, in the place aforeſaid, then called the King's Highway, in manner and form as the ſaid plaintiff has alledged; and prays that this may be enquired into by the country. To this replication the defendant demurs, and concludes wherefore he (as before) prays judgment, and that the aforeſaid count may be quaſhed. Final judgment was awarded for the plaintiff in C. B. which, on error brought, was affirmed here.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The whole point of the caſe, take it in the ſtrongeſt light, is after a plea in bar, and a replication, the defendant demurs to the replication, and concludes in abatement, and ſure then judgment final ought to be given; and the court agreed, that all the matter of conuſance in the plea was waived by the abſque hoc; and the conuſance in a different place from where the declaration lays the taking, is in truth matter only proper in abatement; but the concluſion turning it into an avowry, makes it a plain bar, as all avowries are, and final judgment is always given upon them, if they go for the avowant. They alſo agreed, that when matter in abatement is pleaded in bar, and concluded in bar, judgment final ought to be given. So where the commencement of a demurrer is in bar, though the concluſion be in abatement, 1 Lev. 312.

But it was objected, that the demurrer being ill concluded, viz. in abatement, and contrary to the bar, it was to be looked upon as if there were no concluſion at all, and it would be a diſcontinuance, and the judgment ought to be by nil dicit.

To which the court anſwered, that the concluſion to the demurrer was, wherefore he prays judgment (as before,) and that is well enough, and according to the concluſion of the plea in bar; and the ſubſequent words, and that the count may be quaſhed, being inconſiſtent, ſhall be rejected.

Per curiam. Let the judgment be affirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 101.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Anonymous.

Adjudged, That if a man pleads a matter in abatement, and concludes in bar, the judgment given ought to be final: this doctrine holds only in abatement, for the words prays judgment, without other words, do not make it a plea in bar. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1018.

Eaſter, 2 Ann. Green v. Waller.

In an action of debt on bond, it was held by Holt, Chief Juſtice, that the defendant, by pleading that the law has made no determination, confeſſes, that he has not re-delivered the things mentioned in the condition of the bond, and therefore the plaintiff need not aſſign a breach; and this caſe is not like the caſe of an award, which is a ſingle caſe, and ſtands by itſelf. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 892.

Held by Holt, Chief Juſtice, that in an action of debt on bond, the defendant may have ſeveral pleas in bar, viz. if the plaintiff ſues as executor, the defendant may plead the releaſe of the teſtator as to part, and for the reſidue the releaſe of the plaintiff; and ſo a man may plead as to part payment, and an acquittance, and then there being no anſwer to the reſidue, the plaintiff may take judgment by nil dicit for ſuch reſidue. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1122.

Trinity, 3 Ann. Buſhell v. Paſmore.

On an action of debt on a bond: the defendant pleads, that the bond was delivered as an eſcrow to a third perſon to be his deed to the plaintiff on his vacating a certain judgment, which was not done, and therefore it is not his deed, and of this he puts himſelf on the country, without adding, and the aforeſaid plaintiff does ſo likewiſe. The plaintiff replies, that it was delivered as an eſcrow to be delivered to him on his payment of 20 s. towards vacating the judgment, and iſſue thereupon; that is upon a traverſe of its being delivered as an eſcrow to become his deed on vacating the judgment; and on evidence it was ſworn to have been delivered as an eſcrow, to become the defendant's deed on the plaintiff's vacating the judgment.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, that there is no difference between delivering a deed as an eſcrow to become the party's deed on his doing ſuch a thing; and to be delivered to the party as his deed on his doing ſuch a thing; for in neither caſe it is his deed, till the ſecond delivery: and he ſaid, if a man delivers his writing as a deed to a ſtranger, to be delivered by him to a third perſon on his doing ſuch a thing, that is a deed from the beginning in truſt for the third perſon on a contingency; but on the ſaying in 5 Co. Periman's caſe, 84 b. he was content to have the matter found ſpecially, but the plaintiff was nonſuited on another point. And he ſaid, in all his time he never knew ſuch a plea as this; for all theſe ſpecial non eſt factums, in caſe of eſcrow and erazure, &c. are impertinent, for thereby the defendant brings all the proof on himſelf; whereas, if he had pleaded non eſt factum generally, he would turn the proof of whatever is neceſſary to make it his deed on the plaintiff; and it was agreed by the court, that the deed cannot be an eſcrow to the party himſelf. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Davenant v. Raſter. Error.

On a writ of error brought of a judgment in C. B. in debt on bond, and nil dicit pleaded for want of an original, the defendant pleaded a releaſe of errors. The plaintiff replied, that there was another judgment between the parties for the ſame ſum, and of the ſame term, and that the releaſe was of that judgment of which the writ of error was not brought, abſque hoc that it was of this now in queſtion.

To which the defendant demurs, and his council maintained the demurrer; becauſe by this traverſe the defendant is excluded from ſaying, that there is but one judgment, for it is only made an inducement to the traverſe.

Holt, Chief Juſtice made this diſtinction as to concluſions, that if a dilatory plea be pleaded, and the plaintiff takes iſſue on it, he may conclude with a prayer of judgment and damages, becauſe then final judgment ſhall be; but if a dilatory plea be pleaded, which the plaintiff does not deny, but confeſſes and avoids, he muſt conclude in maintenance of his writ; as if the defendant pleaded attainder in diſability of the plaintiff, and he replies a pardon; he muſt not conclude with a prayer of judgment and damages, but in maintenance of his writ. *Vide Mod. Eaſter, 4 Ann. Cockcroft v. Smith.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, if a man ſtrikes another, who does not immediately after reſent it, but takes his opportunity, and then ſome time after falls upon him and beats him; in this caſe ſon aſſault is no good plea: neither ought a man, in caſe of a ſmall aſſault, to give a violent or an unſuitable return; but, in ſuch caſe, plead what is neceſſary for a man's defence, and not who ſtruck firſt; though this, he ſaid, had been the common practice, but this he wiſhed was altered; for hitting a man a little blow with a little ſtick on the ſhoulder, is not a reaſon for him to draw a ſword and cut and hew the other, &c. In this caſe Cockcroft in the ſcuffle ran his finger towards Smith's eyes, who bit a joint off from the plaintiff's finger; and if this was a proper defence for the defendant to juſtify in an action of mayhem, was the queſtion. *Vide Mod. Eaſter, 4 Ann. Kemp v. Goodal.

In debt for rent on an indenture, if the defendant pleads nil habuit in tenementis, the plaintiff need not reply an eſtoppel, but may demur, becauſe the declaration is on the indenture, and the eſtoppel appears on the record; otherwiſe if he had declared quod cum dimiſiſſet. So is Speak's caſe, Hob. 206. The plaintiff declares on the levy, and therefore no eſtoppel, becauſe there no eſtoppel is pleaded, and relied on: but if he had declared on the return, as appears on the record, the defendant could not have pleaded payment; if he had, the plaintiff might have demurred without pleading the eſtoppel. Hilary, 8 Ann. Foſter v. Burdett. Error.

On a writ of error out of the C. B. the defendant in error ſues out a ſcire facias quare executionem non, &c. to which to which the plaintiff pleads a ſham plea in bar; and it was moved, that the plea might be rejected.

Powell, Juſtice. Though the plaintiff may plead falſe pleas in bar, ſuch pleas not being within the ſtatute for the amendment of the law, ſo as to compel the party to make oath of the truth of this; yet ſince this ſcire facias is only to compel the plaintiff to aſſign errors, the court will not ſuffer ſuch pleas, whereby the defendant is delayed of his execution; for if ſuch pleas are allowed, the court cannot make a rule to aſſign errors till the plea is determined. Therefore, if on two nihils or a ſcire faci returned, if the plaintiff does not come and aſſign errors, or plead a good plea to the ſcire facias, the court will give rules to aſſign errors, or non pros him on the writ of error.

This plea being rejected, at another day in this term the plaintiff aſſigned his errors, which appeared to be no error; and ſince it was only for delay, the council for the defendant moved that they might be rejected. But this motion was denied by the court. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 274.

Eaſter, 8 Ann. Sawyer v. Mawgridge.

On an action of debt on a bond, the defendant, according to the late act, pleads two pleas, viz. non eſt factum, and that he had ſatisfied himſelf by ſale. Iſſue thereon, and verdict for the plaintiff; and for the defendant, a motion was made in arreſt of judgment. On oyer of the bond or note, it was in theſe words, theſe are to authoriſe you J. S. to ſell ſo many of my goods as come to 9 l. to pay my debts, which I do hereby acknowledge to owe to you, &c.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, and Powell, Juſtice, held, that the action lay for theſe words; for the word oblige is not neceſſary to make a bond; for if one under hand and ſeal acknowledge himſelf indebted, it is enough to bind him. Therefore the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 218.

On an action of treſpaſs for taking cattle, the defendant pleads that he had poſſeſſion of the cloſe, and that he took them damage feaſant.

The queſtion was, whether in this caſe his poſſeſſion was ſufficient? Or whether the defendant ſhould have ſet forth his title?

For the plaintiff was cited Pell v. Garlick, 2 Lutw. 1492.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that he thought the title could not come in queſtion; for the action is brought only for taking his cattle; if he had claimed the land, the action ſhould have been for entering the land; but where the treſpaſs is only for a perſonal act, as beating or taking cattle, poſſeſſion is ſufficient: therefore judgment was given for the defendant. *Vide Mod. Per curiam. It is a good plea; for the diſtinction is, if a releaſe or other bar happen before iſſue, it may be pleaded, becauſe it is pending the writ; but if after iſſue joined, it is to be pleaded puis darrein continuance. Vide Forteſcue, p. 338.

The court was moved for leave to plead not guilty, and a juſtification for a way to an action of treſpaſs, but denied.

Per curiam. Though it be no univerſal rule, that where one plea admits the other, they ſhall not be pleaded; yet where it is an old bond, non eſt factum and ſolvit ad diem may be allowed; but here, if you allow it in one caſe, you muſt in all. Vide Forteſcue, p. 335.

Hilary, 11 Ann. Merril v. Joſſelyn. Error.

On a writ of error out of the court of C. B. where the action was in debt on a bond conditioned for payment of money on the 25th day of March; the defendant pleads payment on the 20th day; the plaintiff replies, that he did not pay it on the 20th. On this iſſue was joined, a verdict given for the plaintiff, and judgment accordingly; and on this error was brought.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. It is hard that the defendant ſhould take advantage of his own immaterial pleading; but we cannot help it. The caſe of Hill v. Manby in the court of C. B. is a caſe in point. Accordingly, the judgment was reverſed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. page 148.

A defendant may plead in bar or abatement to a ſci. fac. as well as to other actions. It is the concluſion, and not the matter of the plea, that makes the diſtinction between a plea in bar and abatement.

To a ſci. fa. the concluſion of a plea in bar is executio non, inſtead of actio non, as in other caſes. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 112.

Eaſter, 12 Annn. The Queen v. The Inhabitants of Gruelthorp.

On an action brought on ſtat. of Weſtminſter 2. cap. 46, an objection was taken to the defendant's plea, for this ſtatute not extending to every lord, but ſuch lord only as had right to approve, the defendants to ſhew the lord had no right to approve, pleaded a preſcription to common thus, that divers freeholders had a right to common, without confining their preſcription to any certain particular tenements. It was admitted by way of cuſtom this general way of pleading had been good, but not by way of preſcription. And to this opinion the court inclined. Adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 157.

Trinity, 12 Ann. Weltale v. Glover.

On an action of debt on a bond, a releaſe was pleaded; the plaintiff replied, that the releaſe was not by deed, and of this he put himſelf on the country.

The defendant demurs ſpecially, becauſe he ought not to have concluded, and of this he puts himſelf on the country, but, and this he prays may be inquired into by the country, on which there was a joinder in demurrer. It was argued for the plaintiff, that this way of pleading occaſioned no inconvenience or alteration of the law; and that the law does not always tie up men to certain forms, provided they uſe other words as proper.

When the plea is in the negative, as the plaintiff's replication here was, he put himſelf on, &c. and of this, &c. it is a more proper concluſion than, and this he prays, &c. for a negative is not to be proved: and the reaſon why moſt commonly the plaintiff concludes one way, and the defendant another, may perhaps be thus accounted for, that moſt of the general pleas being in the negative, it were ſomewhat abſurd for a man that concludes his plea in the negative, to deſire that his plea may be inquired of by the country.

His council confeſſed that the general courſe of entries were againſt him, and that Co. Lit. 126. ſays, it is ſo, but not that it muſt be ſo.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. The difference taken by the council between negative and affirmative pleas, ſeems to me very reaſonable; and I think it highly probable, that the original reaſon why the entry for the defendant has been, and of this he puts himſelf on, &c. and that for the plaintiff, and this he prays, &c. might be, that for the moſt part general iſſues are in the negative, and replications in the affirmative.

The queſtion is not which way the ſtream and current of precedents run, for that the council gives up, and he muſt do ſo, but whether it be a form ſo neceſſary that a ſmall variation (and that not in the ſenſe) from it will be erroneous, and on a ſpecial demurrer prevent the plaintiff's having his judgment. And not one authority has been cited to prove this. The court being of the ſame opinion, gave judgment for the plaintiff niſi. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 167.

In this caſe, which ſee fully ſtated in page 129 of this work, under the head Aſſignments, it was reſolved, that it is not enough to plead a tender and refuſal, unleſs the defendant pleads alſo, that he was always ready; for this is only an excuſe for non-payment. Vide Forteſcue, p. 145.

Eaſter, 13 Ann. Muſton v. Yateman.

This was an action of treſpaſs: the defendant pleads, that Sir Thomas Freke was ſeiſed of a place called Ten Acres, and demiſed the ſame to the defendant for 99 years; and that Sir Thomas Freke, and all thoſe whoſe eſtate he had, did, time out of mind, uſe ſuch a way, &c. The plaintiff replied, of his own injury abſque hoc, that the aforeſaid Sir Thomas Freke, and all thoſe whoſe eſtate he had, did, time out of mind, &c. On this iſſue was joined, and the jury found, that Sir Thomas Freke, and all thoſe whoſe eſtate he had, did, time out of mind, &c.

The court was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the juſtification was ill, becauſe it was ſeiſed generally, and the eſtate not ſet forth of which he was ſeiſed, whether life, tail, or fee; and that therefore, ſince every man's plea is to be taken in that ſenſe, that is moſt prejudicial to the pleader (becauſe in law a man is always preſumed to make the beſt of his own caſe) by the word ſeiſed, here muſt be intended a ſeiſin for life, which will not ſupport preſcription.

This objection was alſo turned another way, viz. that this plea was naught for the uncertainty; it might be a ſeiſin for life, tail, or in fee.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. The only queſtion is, whether the iſſue be a material iſſue? for if it be, then by the expreſs words of the act, all defects in pleading are cured by the verdict. Adjourned.

Eaſter, 2 Geo. Stone v. Taverner.

In an action of debt on a bond, on oyer thereof, the condition of the bond appeared to be, whereas Stone had lent Taverner the ſum of 1000 l. for the better ſecuring of which, Taverner had executed to Stone an indenture, purporting a deed of mortgage, &c. the condition of which obligation was ſuch, that if Taverner ſhall, from time to time, well and truly pay the intereſt that ſhall become due, according to the proviſoe in the indenture, until the principal be paid, then, &c. The defendant pleaded, that he had paid as much as became due; the plaintiff demurred.

It was argued, that the defendant pleaded ill, becauſe he had not ſhewn what was due, nor what he paid; ſo that no iſſue could be taken on it: ſtat. 20 H. 6. cap. 31. 2 Cro. 359. Halſey v. Carpenter.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. I am in doubt in this caſe, whether, though the defendant's plea be admitted bad, you can recover, without aſſigning a breach of the bond, as this caſe is circumſtanced.

The indenture need not be ſet forth. This is not a bond for the performance of the indenture, for that is in the nature of a deed of mortgage for a year, and is a ſecurity for the repayment of the principal ſum, with a year's intereſt; whereas the bond is a ſecurity, not for the principal, but the intereſt; nor for a year's intereſt only, but for the intereſt of 1000 l. until it be paid, which now appears to be nine years more than the deed. As for thoſe words in the condition of the bond, according to the proviſoe in the indenture, they muſt neceſſarily, and can relate only to the proportion of the intereſt.

The condition of the bond was to pay J. Stone, his executors, and adminiſtrators; in his plea the defendant ſays, that he paid to R. Stone the intereſt from time to time, &c. and does not ſhew, that J. Stone is dead, or that R. Stone is his executor.

However, judgment was given for the plaintiff niſi. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 329.

Hilary, 3 Geo. Hawkſhaw v. Rawlings.

On an action of debt on a bond; the defendant craved oyer of the bond, and it was read to him, &c. he prays alſo the hearing of the condition of the ſaid bond, and it was read to him in theſe words, viz. which appears to be for the defendant, and two other obligors, joined in the bond, to pay money at a future day, which being read, he pleads payment at the day by the two other obligors, and an acceptance by the plaintiff in ſatisfaction. The plaintiff proteſting that the two others did not pay, for his plea ſays he did not receive in ſatisfaction in manner and form; and thereon iſſue is joined, and a verdict for the plaintiff.

The court was moved that a repleader might be awarded, for that this is an immaterial iſſue, the payment, and not the receipt, being proper to be put in iſſue.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. Altho' payment by a ſtranger be not a legal diſcharge, yet acceptance in ſatisfaction is. Suppoſe a man owes me 100*l.* on bond, and another 100*l.* on another account, and he pays me 100*l.* I may apply it to which I will; and though he paid it in ſatisfaction of the bond, yet if I did not receive it as ſuch, it will be no diſcharge of the bond. And therefore in theſe caſes the acceptance is the clearer iſſue. There are two requiſites to work a diſcharge; 1. Payment, and, 2. Acceptance. And a traverſe of the acceptance, is an argumentative denial of the payment: ſo the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 23.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. Brett v. Minter, and others. Error.

This was a writ of error coram vobis, &c. and the error aſſigned was, that one of the defendants being an infant, appeared by attorney. The plaintiff pleads that he was of full age; to which the defendant demurred, and ſhewed for cauſe, that the plaintiff has ſhewn no place where the defendant was of age.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. Full age is not local, as the executing a releaſe; the place is no certainty of the fact, as it is in the caſe of a releaſe. What is perſonal attends the perſon every where; if he is of full age any where, he is ſo every where.

The qualities of the perſon are to be tried where the action is brought. Non-age muſt be pleaded to a releaſe where the releaſe is laid to be made. In this caſe, if there be any fault it is in the plaintiff in error, and the defendant had nothing to do but to follow him: ſo judgment was affirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 8.

Trinity, 6 Geo. Jernegan v. Harriſon.

On an action of debt on a bond, the defendant prays oyer of the condition, which appears to be for the payment of money on the 23d day of March, and then pleads payment on the 22d day of March, in the condition mentioned.

The plaintiff replies, that he did not pay the money either on the 22d or the 23d, or at any time after making the bond. And the defendant demurs for duplicity.

The council for the defendant would have argued againſt the replication.

Per curiam. You need not labour that, for it is certainly ill; but then ſo is their plea, and the declaration muſt ſtand; for if the plaintiff had gone to iſſue on the plea, the verdict muſt have been ſet aſide, as in the caſe of Merril v. Jocelyn.

As to this, the council for the defendant made a diſtinction between this and the common plea of payment before the day. He admitted it ought to have been pleaded by way of accord and ſatisfaction. 5 Co. 117. But as it was, he ſaid the plaintiff might have taken a ſafe iſſue, by, he has not payed in manner and form; ſo the payment is pleaded abſolutely, and the time introduced under a ſcilicet, i. e. to wit, and then in manner and form would not make it a parcel of the iſſue: but the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 317.

Michaelmas, 6 Geo. Gyſe v. Ellis.

On an action of covenant, for that the defendant, his heirs and aſſigns, ſhall every year, during the term, plant eight crab ſtocks; the breach aſſigned was, that the defendant ſuch a year neglected to do it.

It was objected, that the breach ſhould have been in the diſjunctive, that neither he nor his aſſigns did it. Plow 199. Cro. Eliz. 348. Bridg. 148. A. covenanted, that he, his executors, or adminiſtrators, would do ſuch an act, and the breach was, that the executor did not do it, without taking notice of the teſtator; and held ill. And the diſtinction is between doing a thing to a man and his aſſigns, and by a man and his aſſigns.

The council on the other ſide argued, that the action is againſt the original leſſee, ſo there can be no aſſignment intended: we knew nothing of any; if there be one, it lies in their privity, and therefore they ſhould defend themſelves by ſhewing one. The caſe in Cro. Eliz. is not a caſe in point, for there, the breach was in the conjunctive, inſtead of the diſjunctive, and that was the reaſon of its being held ill.

Per curiam. We muſt intend the eſtate continues in him, till the contrary appears; and therefore the declaration is well enough, being againſt the leſſee himſelf. Now, if the aſſignees have done it, the breach that the leſſee himſelf has not, is falſe. There is as much neceſſity to ſay an heir did not perform the covenant, when the action is againſt the anceſtor: wherefore the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 228.

Michaelmas, 6 Geo. South v. Jones.

The plaintiff declares, that he being occupier of certain lands in Downham, on the 20th day of Auguſt cut down his graſs, and divided it into cocks, and the ſame day gave notice to the defendant, who was rector, to come and carry away his tithes, which he has not done, whereby he loſt the uſe of that part of the land which was under the cocks, from the ſaid 20th day of Auguſt to the 10th of December following. The defendant pleads, that for all that time the cloſe where, &c. was ſurrounded with ditches; and that the ditches, ways, and paſſages, were ſo filled with water, that he could not carry off his tithes. The plaintiff replies, that the ditches, ways, and paſſages, were not ſo; and the defendant demurs.

It was argued for the defendant, that the declaration is ill, in demanding more damages than the plaintiff ought to go for; he demands from the time of mowing, whereas the parſon is not obliged to carry it away then, but it muſt lie till the pariſhioner has made it into hay. 1 Roll Abr. 643. x. 1 Roll Rep. 420, 172.

2. The replication is ill, in offering to put the whole time in iſſue, and though we plead to the whole, as we were obliged, yet the fault is in them.

3. The replication is in the copulative, ditches, ways, and paſſages, when it ſhould have been in the diſjunctive. 2 Saund. 205. 3 Keb. 162.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice. The declaration is ill, for it ſhould have been ſhewn when it was made into hay, and dated the wrong from thence: but the replication is well enough in the copulative, becauſe the plea is one intire matter of excuſe, and the defendant relies on the whole, and not on each particular's being impaſſable. The defendant pleaded nil debet to the bond, to which plea the plaintiff demurred.

Per curiam. Nil debet is no plea to a bond, but a writ to appear out of term is a void writ, and ſo is the condition of this bond; therefore here the plaintiff has no cauſe of action on his own ſhewing. Vide Forteſcue, p. 363.

Per curiam. The replication is good; for the words, for his plea ſays, will relate to Walter in the beginning of the replication, and the ſecond William is unneceſſary; the relative he refers to Walter too. Vide Forteſcue, p. 329. Stra. vol. 1. p. 228.

" juſtified for the whole time by virtue of a writ of " capias utlegatum, which is the ſame tranſgreſſion, cap-
" tion, impriſonment, and detention, &c." and then traverſed without this, that he is guilty at any time after the return of the writ. The defendant, who ſued out the writ, juſtified under it; and on a ſpecial demurrer to his plea, the plaintiff had judgment in the Common Pleas, becauſe the juſtification was under a writ taken out at ſuch a time, and the defendant did not conclude his plea with the words, as appears by the record, nor traverſe that he did impriſon the plaintiff at any other time; and now on a writ of error on that judgment, the error aſſigned was the want of a good original; it is true, there was an original, but it was not returned, and therefore it is void.

"The general errors were aſſigned; and alſo that no
" bill was filed, but on alledging diminution a bill was " returned, filed of another term; but no return to
" that bill was certified."

To which it was anſwered, that there are two ſorts of returns, one made on the roll, and the other by the ſheriff; now, though there was no return made by the ſheriff on this original, yet there being one filed on the roll, and certified from thence as returned, that is ſufficient to make it a good original.

As to the objection againſt the plea, that the defendant had juſtified under a writ, and did not conclude prout patet per recordum, and that he had not traverſed the impriſonment at any other time than on the writ ſued out at ſuch a time, it was argued, that if the action had been brought againſt the ſheriff, and he had juſtified under the writ, he muſt have concluded his plea with the words, prout patet per recordum, becauſe it would not have been a record, if he had not returned the writ; but though he never returned it, it is ſtill a good juſtification for the defendant in this action.

But it is not abſolutely neceſſary for a defendant to conclude his plea with the words, as appears by the record, becauſe a writ may be loſt.

As to the other objection, that the defendant did not traverſe the impriſonment at any other time, &c. that is only ſurpluſage; for if the juſtification is good, the traverſe would be wholly immaterial.

Per curiam. The original gives juriſdiction to this court, and by conſequence, if that is not returned, the court has no juriſdiction in this caſe, and the cauſe cannot properly be ſaid to be in court; but if the ſheriff never returned the writ, how could the defendant in this action plead prout patet per recordum; therefore his plea muſt be good without ſuch concluſion, and if his plea is good, then the traverſe would be immaterial. So the judgment in the Common Pleas was affirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 31.

Eaſter, 9 Geo. Macdonnel v. Welder. Error.

In replevin the defendant avows for rent, under a a leaſe, dated the 24th of June, To hold from the aforeſaid 24th day of June, &c. by virtue whereof the plaintiff entered the ſaid 24th of June.

On demurrer in C. B. it was objected, that the plaintiff was a diſſeiſor by entering the 24th, when the leaſe was not to commence till the next day, and conſequently the poſſeſſion was not under the leaſe, but by virtue of a tortious fee.

But after conſideration, judgment was given for the avowant; the court being of opinion, there was a great difference between this caſe, and an ejectment, where the plaintiff who claims a term, does at the ſame time ſhew he has gained a tortious fee; whereas here, whether the entry be tortius, or not, it cannot diſcharge the contract for the payment of rent. Cro. Eliz. 169. 2 Leon. 99. 1 Roll. Abr. 65. therefore the judgment was affirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 550.

Trinity, 9 Geo. Harriſon v. Green.

This was an action on the caſe brought againſt a common carrier for detaining the plaintiff's goods till they were ſpoiled.

On non aſſumpſit pleaded, the plaintiff had a verdict; and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the iſſue and plea were improper; for non aſſumpſit is no plea to an action founded on a tort.

Per curiam. This action is founded on the general cuſtom of the realm, and on that aſſumpſit which is implied by law on the carrier's receiving the goods; for by his receipt of the goods he implicitly undertakes to keep and deliver them ſafe: and non aſſumpſit is a proper plea, and the iſſue well. And by Pratt, Chief Juſtice, and Eyre, Juſtice, judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 178.

Trinity, 9 Geo. Grey v. Mendez.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit brought againſt the defendant by an aſſignee under a commiſſion of bankruptcy,

The defendant pleaded the ſtatute of limitations.

The plaintiff replied, that the aſſignment by the commiſſioners, &c. was made to him on ſuch a day, &c.

The defendant demurred to the replication, and it was argued for him that it was ill, becauſe the plaintiff did not ſet forth how the perſon became a bankrupt, viz, that he was indebted to any perſon, &c. and abſconded, or had done any other act of bankruptcy; but if he had ſet forth this matter, it does not appear by the pleadings that the defendant made any promiſe to the bankrupt himſelf within ſix years, or that the caſe of bankrupts was within the ſaving of the ſtatute of limitations, by which it is enacted, "That actions "in the caſe of ſlander muſt be commenced within two "years after the words are ſpoken, and all actions "of aſſault, battery, wounding, and falſe impriſonment, muſt be commenced within four years after "the cauſe of ſuit, and all other actions on the caſe, "actions for account, (other than ſuch as concern "merchandize) actions of debt, detinue, treſpaſs, "trover and replevin, muſt be brought within ſix years "after the cauſe of ſuch actions and ſuits accrued, "and not after."

But the right of action in the caſes aforeſaid is ſaved to infants, feme coverts, thoſe non compos mentis, and to perſons impriſoned or beyond ſea, ſo as they commence their ſuits within the times above limited reſpectively, after their imperfections are removed; but the right of bankrupts is not mentioned.

This was admitted by the council for the plaintiff, (the aſſignee) but they inſiſted that the right to this action was a new right veſted in him by act of parliament.

To which it was anſwered, and ſo reſolved by the court, that the ſtatute of bankruptcy transfers the right to the aſſignee, but it is no more than the old right which the bankrupt had before he had committed any act of bankruptcy, and therefore the aſſignee muſt take it in the ſame plight and condition as the bankrupt himſelf had it; and ſo it has been adjudged in the caſe of Maſon v. Plunkett, that the aſſignee was in the ſame condition (as to the right) with the bankrupt himſelf, and conſequently if he was barred by the ſtatute of limitations, ſo ſhall the aſſignee. 3 *W. Trinity, 9 Geo. Woolley v. Briſcoe.

On an action brought touching money in the funds the defendant pleaded, that the contract was not regiſtered before the 1ſt of November 1720, according to the form of the ſtatute in this caſe made and provided. The plaintiff replied, that it was regiſtered according to the form of the ſtatute, on which the parties are at iſſue, and it was found for the plaintiff.

It was moved in arreſt of judgment, that this was an immaterial iſſue, becauſe the act of parliament does not require ſuch regiſtry till the 1ſt of November 1721, and then the plea being only to the 1ſt of November 1720, on which the iſſue is joined, the jury could not find it to be regiſtered according to the directions of the ſtatute.

Per curiam. The time was impertinently mentioned in the plea; the iſſue is joined upon that part which is only material, viz. the regiſtry according to the form of the ſtatute, and therefore the reſt muſt be rejected as ſurpluſage; if not, then the replication is ill, and ſo is the plea; and then the declaration muſt ſtand, and the plaintiff have judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 554.

Michaelmas, 9 Geo. Barker v. Forreſt. Error.

And on demurrer, judgment in chief was entered for the plaintiff, but reverſed on error, becauſe being on demurrer, the moſt the plaintiff could have was a reſpondeas ouſter.

Per curiam. So there muſt be in this caſe, becauſe, though the replication is ill in concluding to the country, yet the plea is ill too, as coming after an imparlance, though it be a ſpecial one. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 532.

Michaelmas, 9 Geo. Warren v. Conſett. Error.

In an action of debt brought by the plaintiff in the court of C. B. who declared on an indenture by which he covenanted to transfer twenty-five ſhares, &c. and the defendant covenanted that he would receive and pay for his transfer, &c. and bound himſelf in the penalty of 2800 l. to perform the ſame, and for non-performance thereof this action was brought. The defendant pleaded no debt, to which plea the plaintiff demurred, and had judgment in that court for the inſufficiency of the plea, for that the plea of no debt is an ill plea to this action; and thereupon a writ of error was brought in this court, and it was argued that this judgment was erroneous.

Firſt, an objection was made to the form of the declaration, viz. that the plaintiff had not ſet forth that he had done all things neceſſary for him to do to entitle him to this action; for he ſhould have alledged, that he had offered to transfer the ſhares on a certain day, hour, and place, and that the defendant had refuſed to accept them; he only ſhews, that he was ready to transfer them in due manner, but does not ſay at what time or place; now where it is ſet forth as it ought to be at a certain time and place, and no perſon is there to receive it, the party muſt ſhew at what time of the day he was at the place, and how long he ſtayed there: though a refuſal is ſhewn, yet it is not ſhewn to be at that time.

Second objection. Becauſe no debt was adjudged no good plea, which is erroneous, it being certainly a very good plea; for wherever a matter of fact is mingled with a ſpecialty, or with a record, no debt is a good plea; as in debt before auditors, it is a good plea.

But on the other ſide it was argued to maintain this judgment, that no debt is no good plea in the caſe, and the chief reaſon was, becauſe of the ſolemnity of a deed; now here the debt ariſing merely on the deed, and not on any collateral matter, in ſuch caſe the defendant ſhould have denied the deed, and have pleaded ſome other deed to avoid it; for if he once owns the deed, it is then a good debt, and therefore the plea of no debt is no good plea to it; beſides, it is a plea which includes ſeveral iſſues, and for that reaſon it is ill.

It is no good plea to an action of annuity, nor to an action of debt on a bond brought by an adminiſtrator; it is true, it is a good plea to an action of debt brought for rent reſerved on a leaſe for years, but the reaſon is, becauſe the demiſe is the foundation of the action, and the deed is only an evidence of the demiſe, and ſo it is a good plea to an action of debt brought on penal ſtatutes, and to actions of debt brought on awards or to accounts before auditors; and the reaſon is, becauſe they are not the deeds of the parties, but here the deed of the party himſelf is the very lien, and not any thing in pais, and the giſt of the action is for payment of money.

It is no good plea to an action on a policy of inſurance, nor to any action on a bail bond, though there is ſomething to be done to charge the inſurers and the bail.

The court were divided in opinion, but afterwards the judgment was affirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 107.

But the judges held it well enough, this being an action of debt, and the ſurrender the only thing material; and that it differed from the caſe of treſpaſs, where every part of the declaration is deſcriptive. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 594.

Michaelmas, 10 Geo. Robinſon v. Green

The plaintiff declares againſt a carrier on the cuſtom of the realm, and ſets forth, that he (the plaintiff) required the defendant to carry the goods aforeſaid from the pariſh of St. Sepulchre's to Uttoxeter, and that the ſaid defendant then and there received the goods aforeſaid to carry, and afterwards loſt them.

The defendant pleaded non aſſumpſit, and after a verdict for the plaintiff it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that this action is founded on the tort in not delivering the goods, and therefore the proper plea would have been not guilty.

On the other ſide it was inſiſted, that though it is a tort, yet it ariſes from an agreement, and any general iſſue will be good that will bring the merits of the cauſe in queſtion. As not guilty in aſſumpſit. Cro. Eliz. 470. 1 Lev. 142. Sir T. Jones, 184. And it will certainly be aided after a verdict. 1 Sid. 340. 1 Saund. 103. Sir. W. Jones, 140. Cro. Car. 78.

Per curiam. It is well enough, the undertaking to carry is the giſt of the action; and as in aſſumpſit you may plead not guilty, as was done in the caſe of Coggs v. Bernard, Salk. 26. as appears by the record at the end of the book, p. 733. ſo in the caſe of a tort, founded on an agreement, non aſſumpſit will be ſufficient, becauſe it tries the merits as much as not guilty could have done. On an action on the caſe on a promiſſory note, the defendant pleads the delivery of twenty hogſheads of claret in ſatisfaction, and which he the aforeſaid, defendant (inſtead of the plaintiff) received in ſatisfaction.

On a general demurrer the plaintiff's council objected, that the averring the delivery of the wine to the plaintiff was not ſufficient, without ſhewing his acceptance of it; which was wanting in this caſe, by the defendant's name being put inſtead of the plaintiff's. And cited Salk. 629. and the caſe of Hawkſhaw v. Rawlings in this court, Hil. 3 Geo. in both which the court held, that the bare pleading he gave the thing in ſatisfaction, without ſhewing that the plaintiff received and accepted it as ſuch, would be inſufficient.

Hilary, 11 Geo. Martin v. Pritchard. Error.

On error of a judgment in C. B. brought in an action of debt on a bond, on oyer thereof, the condition appeared to be for the payment of 180 l. and intereſt on 5th December, 9 Geo. And the defendant pleads, that before purchaſing the original, to wit, on the 1ſt December, 9 Geo. he paid the principal and intereſt. The plaintiff replied, he did not pay in manner and form. And on demurrer, judgment is given for the plaintiff.

The council for the plaintiff in error objected, that the iſſue on payment before the day was immaterial, and cited the caſe of Merril v. Jocelyn, in this court, Trinity, 13 Ann. where, on the like iſſue, a verdict was found for the plaintiff, and the judgment reverſed.

But the court made a diſtinction between the two caſes. The preſent caſe being pleaded as a payment with intereſt, it muſt be taken as a plea on the act for amendment of the law, and then the day is not material, the only point upon that ſtatute being whether it was paid before bringing the action; wherefore the judgment was affirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 622. *Mod. The council on the other ſide would have had the court conſtrue the word cumque as moreover; but they ſaid it had been always taken only as a recital in theſe declarations. So the judgment was arreſted. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 621.

On a ſcire fieri inquiry againſt huſband and wife, as ſhe was executrix in her own right, brought by the plaintiff as executrix on a judgment recovered by her on a bond due to her teſtator. The defendants demurred, and ſhewed for cauſe, that it was not alledged in the ſcire fieri inquiry, that the teſtator of the plaintiff was dead. And the council for the defendant inſiſted, that though this might perhaps be well enough on a general demurrer, yet ſurely it was informal, and would be ill on a ſpecial demurrer, which was this caſe.

In treſpaſs, wherefore with force and arms he broke his cloſe, and entered, &c. and took away the plaintiff's hops, and deſtroyed his hop-poles, &c. the defendant, as to the force and arms, pleaded not guilty, and juſtified the entry; for that the place where the treſpaſs was ſuppoſed to be done was his (the defendant's) own ground, and that he entered and diſtrained the poles damage feaſant.

And upon a demurrer to this plea it was inſiſted for the plaintiff, that though the defendant might diſtrain the poles, yet he could not deſtroy them; and in this plea he made no anſwer to the deſtroying them as he ought.

Per curiam. No juſtification can be good for deſtroying a thing diſtrained, for all diſtreſſes ought to be ſafely kept; ſo the defendant having not anſwered that part of the declaration, judgment muſt be for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 330.

P.* was ſeiſed in fee of the demiſed premiſes, and by indenture between him and the defendant, he the ſame day demiſed to the defendant, to hold from Lady-day before for twelve years, at 18 l. per annum, payable quarterly; that the defendant covenanted to pay the rent, and entered and enjoyed the houſe to the Lady-day before bringing the action; that J. P. being ſeiſed of the reverſion, 22d and 23d November, 10 Geo. by indentures of leaſe and releaſe between him and the plaintiff, ſold the reverſion to the plaintiff, and his heirs, of which the defendant had notice; and then aſſigns the breach in non-payment of rent. The defendant proteſting that J. P. did not demiſe, for his plea ſays, that on the 19th Nov. 1706, the ſaid J. P. was ſeiſed in fee of the demiſed premiſes, and by leaſe and releaſe of the 19th and 20th November 1706, ſold the ſame to J. B. and his heirs; and traverſes, that at any time after the date of the laſt mentioned releaſe J. P. was ſeiſed in fee, as the plaintiff has alledged. To this plea the plaintiff demurred generally, and the defendant joined in demurrer. And after ſeveral arguments at the bar, theſe points were reſolved by the court:

1ſt, That the demiſe being by indenture, the defendant could not plead he had no property in the tenements; and indeed this point was not diſputed by the council on either ſide, but was taken for granted throughout the argument of the caſe.

2dly, That the defendant's plea was a ſpecial one, he had no property in the tenements, and was therefore no more to be received than a general one.

3dly, That this eſtoppel needed not to be replied to, but might be taken advantage of upon a demurrer; and that has been the uſual way of anſwering the plea of he had no property in the tenements, Salk. 277. and ſo is the general rule of pleading in Co. Lit. 303.

4thly, That though the plaintiff was an aſſignee, he might take advantage of the eſtoppel, for it runs with the land. Co. Lit. 152. 1 Roll. Abr. 868. l. 2. &c.

5thly, That this was ill on a general demurrer. And,

6thly, That if the plea did not amount to, he had nothing in the tenements, yet it would be ill on account of the generality of the traverſe, which ties up the plaintiff to prove the eſtate alledged in the declaration, when any other eſtate would do; even a diſſeiſin would do in this caſe, when it appears the tenant enjoyed under the leaſe, 2 Vent. 67. And it is no anſwer to ſay, that the defendant has traverſed in the words of the declaration; for unleſs it be materially alledged, he is not to follow it. And ſo it was determined in this court, in the caſe of Coleborne v. Stockdale. Therefore the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 817.

The defendant pleaded the privilege of C. B. and the plaintiff moved to ſet it aſide, he ſuing as an attorney of this court, on the foot of privilege, taking away privilege. But the court ſaid, that was a point of law which they would not determine on a motion, but put the plaintiff to demur to it. Vide Stra. vol. 2. page 837.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. 2. Enys v. Mohun.

In covenant, the plaintiff declares on a leaſe made to Coſier, which he lays to have come by aſſignment to the defendant. The defendant pleads that Coſier did not aſſign to him: and after iſſue joined, a repleader was awarded, it being an iſſue joined on what is not alledged in the declaration, for that does not ſay Croſier aſſigned to the defendant; but that it came by aſſignment, and there may be many meſne aſſignments; and the court held this to be an immaterial, but not barely an informal iſſue, becauſe the fact found does not determine the right. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 847.

The C. B. having laſt term determined, that non aſſumpſit, and non aſſumpſit infra ſex annos ſhould not be pleaded, becauſe the latter puts all in iſſue, and does not imply a promiſe within the ſix years; the matter was now ſolemnly debated in this court, the council having moved for leave to plead not guilty, and the ſtatute of limitations. The court granted it, becauſe thereby the defendant ſecured to himſelf a trial on the merits in all events, whereas if he was to reſt only on the non aſſumpſit infra ſex annos, it might come to a demurrer, or the iſſue of nul tiel record. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 889.

Eaſter, 4 Geo. 2. Cantillon v. Lord Montgomery.

To an action on ſeveral promiſſory notes and bills of exchange, the defendant pleaded the ſtatute of uſury; whereon iſſue was joined, and on the defendant's application a trial at bar was granted to be bad on a day appointed in this term: and now it was moved in behalf of the defendant, that he may have liberty to withdraw his ſaid plea, and plead the general iſſue, the ſame to be ſubſtituted in the place of the ſpecial plea; and to be as of the ſame term, that the trial at bar might not be deferred; and to obviate the objection, that the plaintiff would be hereby put to prove the declaration, which was confeſſed, and avoided by the ſpecial plea, it was offered on the part of the defendant, to admit that the ſaid notes and bills of exchange were ſigned by him.

But for the plaintiff it was inſiſted, that this would unavoidably put over the trial to Michaelmas term; for if the defendant ſhould prevail, the rule already made at his inſtance for the trial at bar is diſcharged of courſe; and then by the rules of the court, a ſecond rule cannot be made for a trial at bar between the ſame parties in the ſame term, nor could the matter be tried at bar next term; for by the practice of the court, a trial at bar is not allowed in an iſſuable term. Beſides, the defence will become at large from being confined to the point of uſury; and therefore the plaintiff cannot be prepared to anſwer all the evidence which poſſibly the defendant may make uſe of on the general iſſue; and if he be put to an inconvenience, the fault is to be imputed to him alone, becauſe he declined the general iſſue, when he might have pleaded it. And for theſe reaſons the court denied the motion. Vide Fitz-Gibbons, p. 267.

Eaſter, 4 Geo. 2. Marſhall v. Carter.

In this caſe it was held by Lord Raymond, that where the plea or demurrer is in abatement, if the replication or demurrer thereto be in bar, it is a diſcontinuance; and he ſaid he doubted whether the plea in abatement, though never ſo frivolous, may be otherwiſe anſwered than with a prayer to eſtabliſh the writ, and not for final judgment. Vide Fitz-Gibbons, p. 269.

Trinity, 4 Geo. 2. Baynham v. Matthews.

In an action on a promiſſory note, the defendant pleaded the ſtatute of uſury; to which the plaintiff replied, that the note was given for a juſt debt, abſque hoc that it was corruptly agreed in manner and form, &c. and concludes to the country. A demurrer thereon, and it was ſhewn for cauſe, that the replication ſhould have been concluded with an averment. And the council for the defendant argued, that the replication was ill, there being no new matter diſcloſed; and though there be a negative and affirmative as to one particular fact, yet the plaintiff may conclude with an averment. 1 Jones, 387. Lutw. 1435.

On the other ſide, Ent. 1305. 1 Inſt. 126. Raym. 98. were cited, that where there is a negative and affirmative, you muſt not conclude with an averment.

Per curiam. Generally ſpeaking it is ſo, and if the plaintiff here would have been contented to have replied in the common form, and not that it was corruptly agreed in manner and form, &c. without a traverſe, he would have been right in concluding to the country. But wherever you add a traverſe, there muſt be an averment. Raſt. 689. Lib. Placit. 156. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 871.

Michaelmas, 4 Geo. 2. Wright v. Penn.

Per curiam. It is no good plea; for this is no anſwer to the converſion to his own uſe, which he could not juſtify for damage feaſant. So judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Forteſcue, p. 381.

Michaelmas, 4 Geo. 2. Levat v. Reſhere

It was adjudged, that though it did not appear on the declaration to be the company's turn, for want of ſhewing that one Perinchief, who was in before the fire, died or reſigned; or that the other preſented was the ſame perſon; yet on the pleading over it was helped, for there are no negative words in the declaration; and ſince the ſtatutes of jeofails, there have been caſes that have gone as far as this. *Cro. Per curiam. The defendant may plead treble pleas, which was allowed in the preſent caſe on a South-Sea contract; 1ſt. That he was not poſſeſſed in his own right. 2dly. That the contract was not regiſtered. 3dly. No tender made before the ſuit brought. Vide Forteſcue, p. 337.

Trinity, 5 Geo. 2. Meard v. Philips.

On an action of debt for the penalty of articles relating to the building of Putney Bridge, the defendant pleaded that he owed nothing. The plaintiff demurred, and the defendant joined in demurrer. Afterwards he moved, that he might be at liberty to withdraw his plea, and plead double, viz. that he was not appointed by the commiſſioners, and that he did not agree with them to build the bridge. And it appearing the plaintiff had not been delayed, the court gave leave accordingly. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 906.

Trinity, 5 Geo. 2. Warren v. Ivie.

On an action of debt on a bond entered into by the defendant's wife while ſole, conditioned that ſhe ſhould within ten days after the plaintiff's return from his voyage marry him if requeſted. Michaelmas, 5 Geo. 2. Skinner v. Rebow.

On an action brought by the plaintiff as aſſignee of the effects of a bankrupt, he declared that the defendant was indebted to the bankrupt, and being ſo indebted, promiſed the plaintiff to pay. The defendant pleaded, that the cauſe of action did not accrue to the bankrupt within ſix years. And on demurrer it was held ill, becauſe the plea does not anſwer to the promiſe laid in the declaration, and precludes the plaintiff from proving any promiſe to himſelf. 6 Mod. 131, 309. Salk. 28. So the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 919.

It was pleaded by executors to an action on a promiſe, that the teſtator, at the time of the promiſe, was ready to pay, and that the executors, from the time of the teſtator's death, were ready to pay, and now are; and that the teſtator, in his life-time, on ſuch a day, tendered the money, but the plaintiff refuſed to receive it; this being pleaded after an imparlance had by the executors.

Per curiam. The plea is naught. Vide Forteſcue, p. 376.

5 & 6 Geo. 2. Cooper v. Young.

In an action of debt for rent, the defendant pleaded that one J. S. before the rent became due, entered and turned him out of poſſeſſion, and ſtill keeps him out, and that the ſaid J. S. being a ſtranger, was at the time of his entry, and now is, ſeiſed in fee.

Per curiam. This is no good plea; the defendant muſt ſhew a title of longer ſtanding, and he may be ſeiſed in fee by diſſeiſin; ſo the plea of having a legal title has been held naught. Vide Forteſcue, p. 360.

Eaſter, 6 Geo. 2. Baker v. Weſtbrooke.

It was refuſed to let the defendant plead non aſſumpſit, and a tender. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 949.

Hilary, 7 Geo. 2. Law v. Law.

On an action of debt on a bond conditioned for payment of money at a future day, the defendant pleaded payment at the day; and before the plaintiff replied, moved to withdraw his plea, and plead ſtat. 5 E. 6. c. 16. againſt the ſale of offices.

Per curiam. That is never done, but in order to plead the general iſſue, not to ſubſtitute one ſpecial plea in the room of another. So the motion was denied. Trinity, 5 Geo. in the caſe of Meard v. Phillips, where the general iſſue was waived, and leave given to plead double. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 960.

The defendant's council moved laſt term for time to plead till this term, for that the defendant, ever ſince he had been executor, had been ill of the palſy, that he was not able to ſpeak or write his name, ſo that he could not ſign a renunciation, or give any power to his attorney, and that it was an affair concerning trade, which no one knew but the defendant. The motion was granted, on condition that he would not confeſs any judgment, or give preference to any creditor to the prejudice of the plaintiff. This matter was again moved this term, for time to plead till Michaelmas term next, the defendant ſtill remaining under the ſame circumſtances.

Lord Hardwicke. This inconvenience, ariſing from the act of God, entitles the defendant to favour and compaſſion; but this muſt not be carried ſo far as to hinder the plaintiff from recovering his right, which may now be the caſe, as nothing is laid before the court to ſhew that there is any probability of the defendant's recovery. The court at length allowed the defendant further time to plead, on his conſenting to be bound in a rule to plead time enough to have the iſſue tried in Michaelmas term next. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. p. 52.

Michaelmas, 7 Geo. 2. Cowne v. Barry.

On an action of debt on a bond; the defendant pleaded payment before the day. And it being found for the plaintiff the court inclined to award a repleader, according to the caſe of Merril v. Jocelyn, Trinity, 13 Ann. But it being obſerved at another day, that the time of payment was only alledged under a ſcilicet, i. e. to wit, the court held it a good plea on the act for amendment of the law, as a payment before exhibiting the bill, and then the iſſue joined was material; wherefore the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 954.

It was moved that the defendant's wife might have leave to plead ſeparately from her huſband. The caſe was, the wife's eſtate was ſettled on her, which ſettlement was confirmed by a decree of the Houſe of Lords to be for her ſeparate maintenance; and her eſtate is only made liable to anſwer all actions brought againſt the huſband on her account. The council ſuggeſted, that this was a fictitious demand in the plaintiff, ſet up by connivance of the huſband, and that he will let judgment go by default, and ſo ſhare with the plaintiff in what ſhall be recovered.

Lord Hardwicke. We cannot allow you to ſever in pleading; your beſt way will be to plead in the manner of huſband and wife, and if the huſband ſhould diſavow, and that be contrary to the order of the Houſe of Lords, you will know how to enforce that order; but this court can do nothing in it. *Vide Caſes Temp. Trinity, 8 Geo. 2. Holt v. Mabberley.

In an action of debt on bond, the defendant's council moved for leave to plead double, viz. non eſt factum, and coverture in the plaintiff.

The defendant inſiſting on his diſcharge many years ago under a commiſſion of bankruptcy, and it being doubtful whether the clauſe that enabled bankrupts to plead generally was ſtill in force, his council moved, and had leave to plead it both ways, generally and ſpecially. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1000.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. 2. Prior v. Lord Ilay.

In this action the defendant pleaded a double plea, viz. non aſſumpſit, and non aſſumpſit infra ſex annos. The plaintiff replied to the ſecond plea, an original; the defendant rejoined nul tiel record; and judgment was for the plaintiff; before the trial of the iſſue of non aſſumpſit, the plaintiff makes out a writ of inquiry, and executes it, after which the iſſue of non aſſumpſit infra ſex annos was tried, on which the plaintiff was nonſuited. The plaintiff moved to ſet aſide his writ of inquiry on the firſt iſſue, becauſe he ſhould have waited the event of the ſecond iſſue of non aſſumpſit infra ſex annos.

Per curiam. The writ of inquiry was diſcharged; for if there be twenty iſſues, if one be for the defendant, the plaintiff cannot recover, for they are all to the whole matter in iſſue between the parties. And the plaintiff ſhould have ſtayed till the other iſſues were tried; ſo he was allowed no coſts. Vide Forteſcue, p. 338.

Trinity, 9 Geo. 2. Humphreys v. Churchman.

On an action of treſpaſs for breaking, &c. the plaintiff's ſtable, and cutting aſunder a beam, and throwing down the tiles of the roof; the defendant pleaded not guilty as to the force; and as to the reſidue of the treſpaſs, he juſtified as ſervant to Sir H. G. and pleads, that Sir H. G. was ſeiſed of a wall in his demeſne as of fee; and becauſe the beam was placed in the wall of the ſaid Sir H. G.'s freehold without his conſent, the defendant, as his ſervant, in order to remove the nuiſance, did enter the ſtable, and cut the beam as near the wall as he could, doing as little damage as he could, and thereby the tiles were thrown down. The plaintiff replies, and traverſes that the wall is not Sir H. G.'s whereon iſſue is taken, and he goes on proteſting that the wall is not his; he ſays, that the defendant of his own wrong did throw down the tiles for the cutting the beam as aforeſaid. The defendant rejoins, that the wall is Sir H. G.'s freehold, and as to the reſt of the replication he demurs, and ſhews for cauſe that the replication is a departure, and immaterial. And the plaintiff joins in demurrer.

Lord Hardwicke. In this caſe, if the defendant had taken iſſue on both parts of the replication, and there had been a verdict for the plaintiff on the firſt part, that it was not the defendant's freehold; and on the ſecond part a verdict for the defendant; the defendant notwithſtanding could never have judgment; for the finding it not his freehold would have cut up his whole defence, and that ſhews that the firſt traverſe went to the whole; this is not properly a departure, for that is when the defendant in his plea inſiſts on one matter, and then in his rejoinder inſiſts on a different matter; but here the party is in the ſame plea; in one part of it, inſiſting on what he does not in another part, which ſeems to me to be duplicity; if ſo, it ſhould have been ſhewn for cauſe of demurrer, and therefore cannot now be taken advantage of; but however, the traverſe is not to my ſatisfaction, for the plea alledges the breaking the tiles to have been in conſequence of cutting the beam, and the replication traverſes its being previous, which is not to the ſame point: if the rule in Yelv. is not too ſtrict, yet certainly the traverſe muſt be the ſame in effect and ſubſtance, which is not done here; I think the replication is ill in that reſpect, and would be ſo in the other, if that had been ſufficiently aſſigned for cauſe of demurrer.

On an action on the caſe on 2 ſtat. H. 4. c. 11. for ſuing the plaintiff in the Admiralty Court, in a caſe whereof that court has not juriſdiction; wherein the plaintiff declares, &c. to which the defendant pleaded in abatement, and on judgment of reſpondeas ouſter, he pleads in bar, that in Hilary term 8 Geo. 2. the plaintiff ſued the defendant by bill in this court, in a plea of treſpaſs and contempt, for proſecuting a plea in the court of Admiralty, after his Majeſty's prohibition to the contrary firſt directed and delivered, which he laid to his damage 100 l. To which bill the defendant appeared, and confeſſed the action, and proſecuting the plea after the prohibition delivered; and did acknowledge, that the plaintiff had ſuſtained damages by reaſon of the premiſes in that behalf unto two-pence, beſides coſts: whereon judgment was given, that the ſaid plaintiff ſhould recover againſt the ſaid defendant his damage aforeſaid, to the ſaid two-pence, by him the ſaid defendant in form aforeſaid acknowledged, and alſo his coſts, &c. all which proceedings in that ſuit are ſet out verbatim in the plea; and the plea avers, that the plaintiff, the defendant, and the ſuit in the Admiralty mentioned in the record pleaded, and the preſent plaintiff, defendant, and ſuit in the Admiralty mentioned in the proceedings in this action, are one and the ſame; and it avers farther, that the two-pence damages mentioned to be recovered in the ſaid record, were to be recovered in full ſatisfaction of all damages ſuſtained by the plaintiff, by reaſon of the ſuit in the Admiralty, beſides coſts; and that the ſaid judgment is in full force.

To which plea the plaintiff demurred, and ſhewed for cauſe, that the concluſion of the plea is wrong, in not verifying the plea by the record of the judgment therein pleaded; but that matter was not mentioned at the bar, the plea being adjudged to be bad in ſubſtance. The defendant pleaded not guilty likewiſe by leave of the court.

Lord Hardwicke. I cannot ſee how a recovery of damages in prohibition can be a bar for an action on the ſtatute for double damages, and the penalty of 10 l. I have always taken it, that the damages recovered on the attachment for a prohibition, were only from the time the prohibition was delivered: we muſt take it as if an original writ of prohibition had iſſued out of Chancery to the judge below, and the party had ſtill gone on proceeding, which is a contempt; and for that contempt and the damages, the ſtatute gives an action. The procedings on the attachment, are for carrying on the cauſe below, after the prohibition, which are the very words of the writ; and how can he on ſuch a ſuit recover damages incurred before the prohibition was granted? There are ſeveral caſes where a recovery in one action ſhall be a bar to another action of the ſame nature; but that is where the firſt recovery is a ſatisfaction for the very thing demanded by the ſecond action; ſo in an action of trover, the plaintiff recovers damages for the thing, and it is as a ſale of the thing to the defendant, which veſts the property in him; and therefore it is a bar to an action of treſpaſs for the ſame thing; but that is not this caſe, for the preſent action is not for what was recovered on the prohibition, but for a contempt, and a penalty to the King.

Per curiam. The plaintiff muſt have judgment. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. p. 317.

Trinity, 11 Geo. 2. Webb v. Turner.

The declaration was of Michaelmas term, for an aſſault on the 18th of October, and an impriſonment from thence for twenty-five weeks. And after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the action was brought too ſoon; and it appeared damages had been given for an impriſonment long after the action was depending. And 2 Saund. 169. Salk. 662. 5 Mod. 286. Cro. Jac. 618. 1 Ven. 103. Hob. 189. Carth. 383. 3 Lev. 246. were cited in ſupport of the objection.

But for the plaintiff it was argued, that the continuance in this caſe was laid under a ſcilicet, and therefore according to Allw. 22. Hardr. 4. and Hob. 171. 284. it will not vitiate what is properly laid in time; and that this differs from all the caſes where the time is affirmatively laid. Beſides, it is laid, that he did impriſon the plaintiff, and therefore reſpects a time paſt, and as to that only the evidence could be applied.

And of this opinion was the court; therefore the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1095.

To an action of debt on a bond for performance of covenants, the defendant pleaded that he owed nothing, to which there was a demurrer, and joinder in demurrer. And on the defendant conſenting to put the plaintiff into as good a condition as if he had pleaded right at firſt, the court permitted him to waive his firſt plea, and plead performance of covenants. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1181.

Hilary, 16 Geo. 2. Tomlin v. Purlis. Error.

On an action of debt brought in an inferior court at Rocheſter on a bond, the defendant pleaded dureſs of impriſonment; to which the plaintiff replied, that he was at large, and at his own diſpoſal, and executed the bond of his free-will; and not for fear of impriſonment; and concludes to the country; to this there was a demurrer, and judgment given for the plaintiff.

It was now objected on error, that it is not ſaid he was out of any priſon whatever, which is the antient way of pleading, and that at leaſt the replication ſhould have concluded with an averment.

Per curiam. This is ſuch an affirmative as implies a negative; like the caſe of pleading in a writ of right, where the demandant counts, that he has more right than the tenant, and the plea of the tenant is, that he has more right than the demandant. The antient rule of requiring an affirmative and negative has been long broke into, as in the common caſe of infancy, where formerly they not only replied full age, but alſo traverſed the infancy, which is not now required. Sir Thomas Jones 6. It is enough if the ſecond affirmative is ſo contrary to the firſt, that the firſt cannot in any degree be true. So the judgment was affirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1177.

Eaſter, 16 Geo. 2. Dewey v. Sepp.

The defendant obtained time to plead, on the terms of pleading an iſſuable plea, rejoining gratis, and taking ſhort notice of trial. The action was on a bond conditioned to ſurrender a copyhold at the requeſt and coſts of the plaintiff, and the plea was, that the plaintiff never requeſted; the plaintiff replied a requeſt, and made up the iſſue, with a rejoinder to the country, which the defendant ſtruck out, and demurred ſo near to the aſſizes, that the plaintiff expecting a trial, had the record made up, and actually tried the cauſe before he heard of the demurrer. And now on motion the court ſet aſide the verdict, for the conſtruction of theſe terms impoſed on the defendants, when they aſk time to plead, is not to oblige them at all events to join iſſue to the country; but only where the replication offers a fair iſſue, and affords no reaſonable cauſe of demurrer: now here the replication not ſhewing any tender of a ſurrender, does give ſuch a colour of objection, as will warrant what the defendant has done. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1185.

Trinity, 16 Geo. 2. Long v. Miller.

When the rules to plead ran for eight days, the courſe of the court was to allow the four firſt only for pleas in abatement; but as to pleas in chief, it was ſufficient if they came in at any time before judgment ſigned. In Trinity, 6 Geo. 2. the time for pleading was ſhortened to four days, but no proviſion made for any diſtinction between the two ſorts of pleas. In the preſent caſe, the rule was given the 7th of May, which expired the 11th, and (no judgment being ſigned) the defendant, on the 16th, put in a plea in abatement, notwithſtanding which the plaintiff ſigned his judgment.

Per curiam. He had a right ſo to do. Whilſt the eight day rule ſtood, the plaintiff was not obliged to regard a plea in abatement, that did not come in within the four days; but might ſign his judgment, as if there was no plea at all, Styles, Pr. Reg. 369. 1 Lill. 2. Now, when we ſhortened the general time of pleading, can it be imagined we intended to enlarge it as to dilatory pleas? They ſtill ſtand on the ſtrict rules of the court, and muſt come in within the four days, and cannot be received after as pleas in chief may. Vide Stra. vol. 2. page 1192.

Hilary, 18 Geo. 2. Wilkins v. Brown.

On an action of covenant brought by the plaintiff, as executrix of one Bullock; the defendant pleads, that there was another executor, who proved the will, adminiſtred, and is living; wherefore, as he is not joined, he prays the bill may be abated. The plaintiff replies, that the other executor named in the will is an infant of ſeven years of age, and never adminiſtred, and concludes with an averment; to which the defendant demurred generally; and on argument, the court held it an ill replication; the plea, they ſaid, contained full matter of abatement, if it was true; and the plaintiff ſhould therefore have joined iſſue upon it, and not gone over to a matter of infancy, which would have been properly under conſideration upon the iſſue: a probate granted to one under ſeventeen is not therefore void. And if the infant really was not joined in the probate the plaintiff ſhould have ſet it out on oyer, and have traverſed the never adminiſtering as executor. 1 Lev. 299. 1 Brownl. 101. and Smith v. Smith, in Yelv. and Sir *T. Eaſter, 18 Geo. 2. Sargent v. Reed.

In an action of treſpaſs for taking three buſhels of barley; the defendant pleads, that R. D. being ſeiſed in fee of the manor of Penzance, of which the pier or key was parcel, he and all thoſe whoſe eſtate he had, at their own coſts, had uſed, and ought to repair it, and had of right taken a reaſonable duty, called buſhelage, viz. three Wincheſter buſhels of barley, out of and for every ſhip's cargo of barley brought on the ſaid key to be exported in any ſhip; and that he by bargain and ſale for the conſiderations therein mentioned, ſold it to the corporation of Penzance, To hold to them and their ſucceſſors in fee-farm for ever, by virtue whereof they became, and yet are, ſeiſed of the premiſes in their demeſne as of fee; then he ſhews, that the plaintiff brought on the key a cargo of barley, conſiſting of 1200 Wincheſter buſhels, out of which he, as ſervant of the corporation, and by their command, took the three buſhels, as by law he might. The plaintiff, by his replication, denies the preſcription; and iſſue being joined, it went down to trial, and there was a verdict for the defendant.

It was now moved in arreſt of judgment, that the preſcription was unreaſonable and uncertain, the word cargo being too general; and three buſhels out of a ſmall parcel, as well as a large one, not being a reaſonable proportion: And 2 Lev. 96. Raym. 233. were cited.

To this it was anſwered, and reſolved by the court, that the word cargo, as referred to a ſhip, was very intelligible, and muſt mean the whole loading. It may as well be ſaid that the word ſhip is uncertain, one being much bigger than another; and there are many caſes where words as general have been allowed. 4 Mod. 319. Stil. 224. 358. 1 Vent. 114. 1 Sid. 98. Cro. Jac. 307. 1 Bulſt. 126. 2 Vent. 67. 78. 2 Sid. 174. Lutw. 1519. Hob. 85.

Another exception taken, was to the manner of ſetting out the title of the corporation, the bargain and ſale being only ſaid to be for the conſiderations therein mentioned, whereas it ought to appear to have been for money, or a valuable conſideration, according to 1 Lev. 170. Mo. 569. 1 Co. Mildmay's caſe. 3 Lev. 233.

The court ſeemed to think this way of pleading it would be ill on a demurrer, but was now cured; it not being a defective title, but a title defectively ſet out, according to Salk. 365. Wherefore the rule to ſhew cauſe was diſcharged. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1228.

Trinity, 18 Geo. 2. Webb. v. Holt.

The defendant pleading a ſham plea, the plaintiff obtained the common rule, that the defendant ſhould plead peremptorily on the morrow ſuch a plea as ſhould not be waived; and ſerved a copy of the rule on the defendant's attorney, who taking no notice of it, the plaintiff, after the day was out, ſigned judgment; which the court, on the maſter's report, held to be irregular, the firſt plea ſtanding, if the defendant did not lay hold of the opportunity given him of altering it, whereby the plaintiff has the benefit of his motion. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1234.

Michaelmas, 19 Geo. 2. Cary v. Holt

The plaintiff declared in treſpaſs on his poſſeſſion; the defendant makes title, and gives colour to the plaintiff; the plaintiff replies of his own proper injury, and traverſes the title ſet out by the defendant: and on demurrer, and on the authority of Goſlin v. Williams, Eaſter, 5 Geo. 1. the court held this a good replication; for it lays the defendant's title out of the caſe, and then it ſtands on the plaintiff's poſſeſſion, which is enough againſt a wrong doer, and the plaintiff need not reply a title. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1238.

The defendant, by leave of the court, pleaded non aſſumpſit,, and the ſtatute of limitations, and delivered it to the plaintiffs attorney, who made up the iſſue, and delivered it, with notice of trial, to the defendant's attorney, who paid for it. The plaintiff's attorney finding afterwards it ſhould have been made up with the clerk of the papers, went and paid him his fees for ſo doing, made up the record, and went to trial. Trinity, 21 Geo. 2. Symonds v. Parmenter.

On an aſſumpſit brought by original againſt two defendants, the plaintiff ſhewed that he had outlawed one of them, and the other pleaded in bar, that his partner, ſo outlawed, was beyond ſea at the time of the outlawry. On demurrer it was objected, that this could not be pleaded in bar; to which it was anſwered, that it could not be pleaded in abatement, becauſe the defendant could not give the plaintiff a better writ, and the court would take notice, that it was in the plaintiffs power to prevent its being a bar by diſcontinuing.

Per curiam. If this matter is ever to be pleaded, there will be an end of ſuing partners whilſt any one is abroad, which is often the caſe; therefore let the plaintiff have judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1269.

Hilary, 30 Geo. 2. Kilwick v. Maidman.

On a motion on behalf of the plaintiff to ſet aſide the defendant's plea, with coſts, as irregular; and for leave to ſign judgment,

The caſe was, the defendant had time to plead given him by a judge's order, viz. until two days before the Eſſoign-day of this preſent term, on the uſual terms, "of pleading iſſuably, &c." The order was not obtained till after the four day rule for pleading was expired. Before the term, and within the time allowed by the judge's order, the defendant pleaded a plea of tender; which plea was intituled (as it was allowed it might) as of the preceding term.

The defendant's council on ſhewing cauſe againſt ſetting aſide the plea, urged, that it was a fair, honeſt plea, in its own nature; and within time, not being after imparlance, but as a plea of the laſt term; and that it was an iſſuable plea, within the meaning of the judge's order. He ſaid, that a plea in abatement, (though ſtrictly iſſuable) would not be deemed ſo, as tending to delay the plaintiff.

The court concurred entirely, on the whole of this reaſoning, with the defendant's council, and denied the motion. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 59.

Eaſter, 30 Geo. 2. The King v. Roger Philips, Mayor of Carmarthen.

On a rule to ſhew cauſe, "why there ſhould not be " a new trial," on an inſinuation, " that the judge, " who tried the cauſe, had miſdirected the jury;" which miſdirection, as alledged, was as follows: " The judge had precluded the defendant from giving " any evidence to prove his ſwearing, as ſet forth in " the ninth iſſue joined (of which there were fourteen) " the judge apprehending, and directing the jury, " that it could be of no kind of ſervice to the defen- " dant to be admitted to prove an iſſue, which if " proved, or even admitted, could not at all tend to "make out his right; for that if this ſwearing, as under a charter-election, were to be admitted, yet ſtill it would not appear in any part of the record, that he was regularly ſworn under a mandamus election; which was the ſpecies of election under which the defendant claimed."

The council, on ſhewing cauſe, ſaid, that they were prepared to convince the court, "that the direction of the judge was right; and conſequently, that the verdict ought to ſtand."

Lord Manſfield. The direction of the judge was certainly right. Therefore, if you ſhould prevail in this application for a new trial, it could be of no ſervice: for as the record ſtands, the ſame direction muſt be given again.

On this, the court enlarged the rule to ſhew cauſe, with this addition, viz. "why the verdict ſhould not be ſet aſide, and a repleader awarded."

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides, on the rule being enlarged, the court gave their opinion.

Lord Manſfield. If this iſſue, on this ſwearing in, had ſtood alone, this had been an immaterial and void iſſue; as it tends to prove nothing, either for the crown, or for the defendant; and from which, no concluſion can be drawn, either way.

It appears alſo on the record, that this might have been ſo pleaded, as to have ſhewn whether he had, or had not a right; (if the queſtion had been confined to this ſingle iſſue) what is the rule of law then, as to ſuch an immaterial iſſue joined, and a verdict on it? It is, "that when the finding on it does not determine the right, the court ought to award a repleader, unleſs it appears from the whole record, that no manner of pleading the matter could have availed."

Suppoſing the ſwearing-in to be the only iſſue; is it not a queſtion totally inconcluſive, "whether he was, or was not, ſworn before theſe perſons? Does it at all conclude to the real queſtion? Is not this manifeſtly a ſlip? Does it not appear that this plea could have been mended? certainly it could; viz. by pleading the ſwearing in to have been agreeable to ſtat. 11 Geo. 1. c. 4. (which directs it to be done before the preſiding officer;) therefore the real juſtice of this caſe is, that this ſlip ſhould not be fatal for ever."

I agree, "that if it appeared on the whole record, that the defendant was not duly elected," it would be uſeleſs to grant a repleader; but if the reſt of the iſſues are only parts of, and dependant on the whole title, the ſame reaſon does not then hold. The way to do compleat juſtice, is to let in one ſide without prejudicing the other."

If a repleader was to be granted, (on a ſuppoſition of this being the only iſſue) it muſt be without coſts. As this was a miſtake of the defendant, (in which the proſecutor was not to blame) we ought to do the moſt complete juſtice in our power between both.

The Lord Chief Baron, who tried the cauſe, was right in his opinion, "that he could not admit proof different from the iſſue joined;" and alſo, "that this iſſue was connected with the others." If ſo, the verdicts were without evidence: and it was agreed, "that they were to be without prejudice." Therefore ſuch verdicts ought to be ſet aſide, as without evidence; and not to conclude againſt the defendant, which would be a prejudice. This ſeems to be the true way to come at juſtice, and what we ought to do if we can.

Deniſon, Juſtice. Formerly verdicts were not uſed to be ſet aſide; and then repleaders uſed frequently to be granted.

I think we may ſet aſide the whole verdict on one of the iſſues being void. And this is better than granting a repleader; on which a writ of error may be brought, and may long depend; which will be a much greater delay of juſtice.

Foſter, Juſtice. This caſe is an election under a mandamus on ſtat. 11 Geo. 1. in order to ſettle the peace of the borough. Here are twelve iſſues joined, all found for the King, and without evidence on any one of them; ſo that none of them have been yet really tried. It is agreed, "that in caſe of a ſingle iſſue, which does not determine the right, a repleader may be granted.

The ninth iſſue in this caſe falls directly within this rule. It is totally immaterial to the queſtion of right.

I think, as this caſe is circumſtanced, the agreement mentioned by the Lord Chief Baron, "that the verdicts were to be without prejudice in any future trial," may, without a ſtrain, be extended to any future litigation in the cauſe.

Lord Manſfield. I am now fully ſatisfied, by what my brothers have ſaid, that the whole verdict may be ſet aſide, on payment of coſts, and with liberty to amend the plea, but that muſt be on a particular motion. It accordingly was afterwards granted in this cauſe. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 292.

On an action of debt on a bond conditioned for payment on or before ſuch a day, the defendant, after praying oyer of the condition, pleaded payment at a day before the particular day ſpecified for payment of it. The plaintiff demurred to this plea, as offering an immaterial iſſue. The defendant joined in demurrer.

The court ſaid that the proper method, in caſes where the money is made payable "at or before ſuch a day," was to plead, as is done here, "that it was paid at ſuch a precedent day." And then, if the plaintiff diſputes the reality of any payment at all, he may reply, "that it was not paid at the particular day mentioned in the plea, "nor at any time before or after that day; and this will bring the point to the material and proper iſſue, "whether it has been ever paid at all or not." In conſequence of the foregoing reaſoning, it was held by the court, that the plaintiff in the preſent caſe ought to have replied, and not to have demurred. On which the plaintiff's council prayed a day or two's time to withdraw his demurrer, and reply to the defendant's plea; which was granted. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 944.

On an action on ſeveral promiſes, viz. indebitatus aſſumpſit for 40*l.* lent, 40*l.* had and received to the plaintiff's uſe, and 40*l.* laid out and expended for the plaintiff's uſe.

The defendant, by leave of the court, pleaded ſeveral pleas; one of which was a plea of ſet-off; namely, of a penalty of 200*l.* incurred by the non-performance of certain articles of agreement, relating to the ſale of a ſhip.

The plaintiff demurred, and ſhewed ſeveral cauſes of demurrer; one whereof was, “ that the penalty of “ articles of agreement (which ſounds in damages only, “ and is not a liquidated, certain debt or demand) can- “ not be ſet off.”

The defendant put in a joinder in demurrer.

On arguing this demurrer, the plaintiff's council urged, that this ſet-off is not within ſtat. 2 Geo. 2. cap. 22. For no penalty at all can be ſet off under that ſtatute; whereas the preſent caſe is not the penalty of even a bond conditioned for payment of money only, but a penalty of a bond conditioned for performance of articles; which penalty ſounds in damages; and damages cannot be ſet-off. It ought to be a certain demand; a penalty ſounded in damages was never meant or intended by this ſtatute.

Stat. 8 Geo. 2. cap. 24. is ſtill clearer, that fixes it to the ſum truly and juſtly due; even on bonds conditioned for payment of money only: which only proves, “ that the penalty of ſuch a bond as this is cannot be ſet “ off.”

Lord Mansfield ſtopt the defendant's council, and declared it to be moſt clearly a caſe not within the ſtatute; as it was for the whole penalty. He ſaid, it is moſt clearly unjuſt, and contrary to the intention of the ſtatutes, “ that the whole penalty ſhould be admitted “ to be pleaded by way of ſet-off, when perhaps a very “ ſmall ſum was really due for ſuch damages as the de- “ fendant had actually ſuſtained.” Therefore the court gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1024.

Trinity, 3 Geo. 3. Combe, Eſq; v. Pitt.

Held, that the defendant's plea in abatement, ſhewing, “ that another action was brought againſt the de- “ fendant, in the ſame term, by another perſon, for “ the ſame offence:” ought to have ſhewn, “ that “ the right of action was attached in ſome other per- “ ſon before the preſent plaintiff's action was com- “ menced.” Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1432.

Hilary, 5 Geo. 3. The King v. Grainger.

On a motion to ſet aſide the defendant's plea to an indictment, and that judgment might be entered againſt him by default, as the proſecutor had, by reaſon of his dilatory plea, loſt the benefit of a trial at the ſittings after term.

The objection taken was, “ that the plea is a dila- “ tory one; and yet is not verified by affidavit; nor is “ any probable matter ſhewn to the court to induce “ them to believe that the fact of it is true.”

The council for the motion grounded his objection on ſtat. 4 & 5 Ann, cap. 16. ſect. 11. which ſays, “ that “ no dilatory plea ſhall be received in any court of re- “ cord, unleſs the party offering ſuch plea do, by affi- “ davit, prove the truth thereof; or ſhew ſome pro- “ bable matter to the court to induce them to believe “ that the fact of ſuch dilatory plea is true.” On which a rule to ſhew cauſe was granted.

The defendant's council cited the ſeventh ſection of the foregoing ſtatute; and Mr. Juſtice Foſter's book, page 16. Charles Kinloch's Caſe, where there was no affidavit.

Lord Mansfield. That caſe was at bar: it is not like the preſent caſe; nor does ſect. 7. of the act extend to ſect. 11. It is uſual to annex affidavits to pleas of this ſort in the Crown Office; and I do not ſee why they ſhould not be annexed. Therefore the rule was made abſolute to ſet aſide the plea for want of an affidavit. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1617.

On a ſpecial caſe in ejectment, it was adjudged, that an infant, or they who ſtand in his place, cannot plead “ non eſt factum,” and give the infancy in evidence; but they muſt plead the infancy ſpecially, to avoid the deed; and that plea avoids it, by relation back to the delivery. The reaſon of this is, becauſe it has an operation from the delivery, and not becauſe it has the form of a deed.

The deed of a feme covert has the form; but ſhe may plead non eſt factum, becauſe it has no operation. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1805.

A child was born at Cunmer; the father, while the child was under ſeven years of age, removes to and gains a ſettlement in Milton, and this was held a ſettlement for the child; and it was ſaid by the court, that if a father be ſettled in a pariſh, and dies, and afterwards his wife dies in child-bed, the child ſhall be there ſettled. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Anonymous.

Trinity, 3 Ann. The Inhabitants of the Pariſh of Weſtbury, in the County of Wilts, v. The Inhabitants of Coſtham.

A poor woman with child was removed by order of two juſtices from Weſtbury to Coſtham, and before the ſeſſions ſhe was brought to bed there, and then the order was quaſhed.

Per curiam. The child is legally ſettled in the pariſh of Weſtbury, from whence the mother was illegally removed, for they ſhall not take advantage of their own wrong; and ſo it would have been if they had not known of the woman's being with child at the time of the wrongful removal. If a woman with child be travelling without fraud of the pariſh in which ſhe is ſettled, and in ſuch travel be delivered of her baſtard, it ſhall in that caſe be ſettled where it was born; otherwiſe, if there be fraud: and according to this doctrine was quoted the caſe of the pariſh of Bowham in Eſſex ſome years ago, 2 Bulſt. 349. *Vide Mod. Hilary, 4 Geo. The King v. Turner.

The defendant being aſſeſſed towards the poor's rate for his tithes as vicar, appealed to the ſeſſions, where he was abſolutely diſcharged.

Per curiam. As vicar he is chargeable by ſtat. 43 Eliz. and the ſeſſions has only power to moderate, but not to diſcharge. Therefore the order of ſeſſions was quaſhed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 77.

Trinity, 4 Geo. The King v. Skingle.

Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. charges lands, tenements, tithes, &c. to the poor's rate. By a private ſtatute for erecting workhouſes in Colcheſter, the poor are provided for in another manner, and the occupiers of lands and tenements are made chargeable; and after a rate an appeal is given to the ſeſſions.

The defendant was parſon, and rated for his tithes, and appealed; and becauſe the word tithes was not in the act of parliament, which the ſeſſions looked upon as an abſolute repeal of ſtat. 43 of Eliz. reſpecting Colcheſter, therefore they diſcharged him.

Per curiam. He ought not to be exempted but by expreſs words, he being liable before. Hilary, 5 Geo. The King v. The Inhabitants of Witham on the Hill.

Per curiam. It appearing to us, that he is likely to become chargeable, is ſufficient, without ſaying to the pariſh from whence removed; for it is not to give a juriſdiction, but only the reaſon of the judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 142.

Trinity, 5 Geo. The King v. Munden.

An order reciting that the defendant had a good fortune with his wife, and that her mother was poor, therefore he is ordered to provide for her; and in maintenance of the order, 1 Bulſt.——and 2 Bulſt. 345. and Styles 284. were cited.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice. On conſideration we are all of opinion, that the ſon-in-law is not bound either within the words or intent of the ſtatute, which provides only for natural parents. By the law of nature, a man was bound to take care of his own father and mother; but there being no temporal obligation to enforce that law of nature, it was found neceſſary to eſtabliſh it by act of parliament; and that can be extended no farther than the law of nature went before; and the law of nature does not reach to this caſe. As to the caſe in 1 Bulſt. it is plain the word not was left out only by miſtake; for the ſenſe of the clauſe leads you to read it, not obliged; and beſides, the judges were divided. The caſe indeed in 2 Bulſt. is an authority in point, as far as it will go; but that is no judicial authority, only a caſe at a judge's chambers. The ſame was alſo ſaid by the bye in the caſe of The Queen v. Fane, Eaſter, 10 Ann, but it never came judicially before the whole court till now. We are of opinion the order muſt be quaſhed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 190.

Eaſter, 7, or Trinity, 8 Geo. Noaks, or Nokes, v. Watts.

Per curiam. It is ſettled in the C. B. and we adjudge it ſo here, that a pauper ſhall not pay coſts for not going on to trial, as other plaintiffs do. But if the coſts are taxed, we will prevent his being vexatious, by obliging him to pay them, before he ſhall try the cauſe. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 420. Forteſcue, p. 319.

Hilary, 11, or Trinity, 11 Geo. Ancell, or Ayncell, v. Sloman.

The plaintiff being admitted in forma pauperis by this court, brought an action againſt the defendant, in which he was nonſuited, and was taken in execution for the coſts of this nonſuit, having an eſtate fallen to him ſince; and now it was moved that he ſhould be diſcharged, becauſe by the law he who ſues in forma pauperis ſhall pay no coſts, but ſhall ſuffer ſuch puniſhment as the court ſhall think fit.

The court were of opinion, that if the plaintiff was a pauper when the cauſe was tried, he ſhall not pay coſts, and the deſcent of the lands to him ſhall not have relation to that time; ſo a rule was made to diſcharge him. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 344. Forteſcue, p. 320.

Hilary, 4 Geo. 2. Buttler v. Inneys and wife

The plaintiff ſued as a pauper, and was nonſuited; after which he brought a ſecond action, and recovered. And council moved on behalf of the defendants, that the coſts in the firſt action might be deducted out of a recovery in the ſecond, but it was refuſed. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 891.

Michaelmas, 4 Geo. 2. Winter v. Slow.

On a motion to ſtay the proceedings as a pauper, till he paid coſts in a former action, wherein he was nonſuited: it appeared that the nonſuit was on a ſlip of the attorney's, and not upon the merits of the cauſe, which the defendant might have gone into notwithſtanding, if he would. The court thought this was not vexatious, and therefore refuſed to ſtay proceedings. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 878.

It was moved on the authority of Noaks v. Watts, that the plaintiff, who was a pauper, might be reſtrained from going on to trial till he paid coſts for his former nonſuits. But the court thought that caſe did not put it on a right foot, and that it was unneceſſary to make any rule about coſts, whilſt the admiſſion ſtood; and therefore ordered the plaintiff to ſhew cauſe why he ſhould not be diſpaupered. And on affidavit of ſervice, it was made it abſolute. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 983.

The defendants were indicted for a conſpiracy, and the queſtion was, whether they could be admitted to defend in forma pauperis. And on conſideration and ſearch of precedents, the court was of opinion they might: for though it is not within ſtat. 11 Hen. 7. cap. 12. which relates to civil ſuits, yet it might be reaſonable to do it on indictments at common law, where the proſecutor, who can have no coſts, is not prejudiced. And the inſtances offered ſhew it to be the courſe of this court. In the Exchequer indeed there was a proviſion by ſtat. 2 Geo. 2. cap. 28. for defendants in cuſtom-houſe cauſes, but that might be thought neceſſary, there being no ſuch practice there. A rule was made on the uſual affidavit, for the defendants being admitted in forma pauperis. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1041. Caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. p. 211, 253.

Michaelmas, 10 Geo. 2. The Pariſh of St. Nicholas, v. The Pariſh of St. Peter in Ipſwich.

In this caſe (which ſee fully ſtated in page 92 of this work, under the head Apprentice) it was ſaid by the court to be a vulgar error to think ſtat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. was the firſt act about ſettlements: for in Raſtal's ſtatutes it appears, that ſo long ago as 27 H. 8. c. 25. and in Edw. the 6th's time, there were laws to that purpoſe. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1067.

Trinity, 12 Geo. 2. The Caſe of the Pariſh of St. Peter and Paul in Marlborough.

Two juſtices, after reciting the inability of the pariſh of St. Mary the Virgin to maintain its own poor, ordered the churchwardens and overſeers of St. Peter and St. Paul to aſſeſs, raiſe and levy 60 l. for the maintenance of the poor of the other pariſh. And objection being made to their ordering ſuch a groſs ſum, the court held it well in that reſpect, according to 1 Vent. 350. Salk. 480. Comb. 309. But then the order was quaſhed, becauſe the juſtices had delegated their power of aſſeſſing and rating the pariſhioners to the churchwardens and overſeers; whereas by ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. the juſtices are to make the rate on all, or particular perſons. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1114.

Michaelmas, 13 Geo. 2. Brittain v. Greenville.

The defendant in ejectment obtained a trial at bar, on conſenting to pay bar coſts, and receiving niſi prius coſts. After this the leſſor was admitted in forma pauperis, and had a verdict againſt him. And now having brought a new ejectment, it was moved that the maſter might tax coſts, in order to ground a farther motion to ſtay his proceedings in the ſecond ejectment. But the court refuſed to make any rule, ſaying, every man had a right to a ſecond trial before ejectments were introduced, and might bring a writ of right after a verdict in aſſize. And they could not conſtrue the rule as a conſent on his part to pay coſts in all events, but only as terms put on the defendant. That the regular way when a pauper is vexatious was to diſpauper him; but they could not think he was ſo in the preſent caſe. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1121.

Eaſter, 31 Geo. 2. Baldwin and Wife v. Blackmore.

This was a caſe reſerved at the aſſizes, for the county of Lancaſter, in an action for an aſſault on, and falſe impriſonment of the plaintiff's wife.

On the trial of the cauſe, there was a verdict for the plaintiff, and 1 s. damages, ſubject to the opinion of the court on the two following queſtions, viz.

1ſt, Whether there ought not to have been a previous conviction of vagrancy?

2dly, Whether the wife could be convicted of vagrancy, or be liable to be ſent to the houſe of correction, for returning without a certificate, as ſhe only accompanied and reſided with her own huſband?

After hearing of the council on both ſides, and taking time to conſider of the caſe, the court gave their opinion.

Lord Mansfield. It was manifeſt that the defendant, who was a juſtice of the peace, had not acted intentionally wrong; and it is plain that the jury were of that opinion, as appears by their giving only 1*s*. damages: the court would gladly therefore have leaned towards excuſing this gentleman from ſuffering for what he had honeſtly, and without any bad intention done, if they could have found him juſtifiable by any legal excuſe.

There is one fatal objection to his proceeding, which we cannot get over, and which puts all other points out of the caſe; and that is, that the warrant of commitment is illegal.

The legality of the warrant depends on two acts of parliament, or at leaſt on one of them; for there are two acts of parliament, on one of the two this warrant muſt be founded, though it does not appear on which of the two the juſtice proceeded.

Theſe two ſtatutes are 13 & 14 Car. 2. cap. 12. (a law made before certificates under 8 & 9 W. 3. cap. 30. exiſted) and 17 Geo. 2. cap. 5. which relates to perſons returning, &c. without bringing ſuch a certificate.

This warrant is not within ſtat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. nor is the caſe itſelf within it. Theſe perſons did not go to any pariſh, carrying with them a certificate of their being inhabitants of their proper pariſh; nor is the commitment made "to the houſe of correction, "there to be puniſhed as a vagabond," nor "to a pub- "lic workhouſe, there to be employed in work and "labour," as the ſtatute directs. So that the warrant is not at all agreeable to the directions of that act, which ſpecifies the particular manner of ſending the offender to the houſe of correction, or to a public workhouſe, for it is only "to remain till diſcharged "by due courſe of law."

This warrant cannot be good on ſtat. 17 Geo. 2. cap. 5. becauſe, though this is indeed a commitment to the houſe of correction, yet it is "to remain there till "diſcharged by due courſe of law;" whereas, by this act, the power given to the juſtice is, "to commit "ſuch offenders to the houſe of correction, there to "be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding one "month." But this warrant is quite general; it is an indefinite commitment, not for a preciſe limited time, as the ſtatute expreſsly directs and requires.

This warrant of commitment is totally illegal, and conſequently the plaintiff is entitled to the damages that he has recovered.

Per curiam. Let the poſtea be delivered to the plaintiff. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 596.

Trinity, 33 & 34 Geo. 2. The King v. Pearſon.

On a motion to admit the defendant in forma pauperis on the uſual affidavit. It appearing to the court that this was on an attachment for a contempt, and not on a cauſe in court; and the defendant's council not being able to produce any precedent for ſo doing, the court denied the motion. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1039.

Hilary, 2 Geo. 3. The King v. Clarke and others.

On a motion to make a rule abſolute (on affidavit of the ſervice of ſuch rule) for admitting a proſecutor of an indictment to proſecute in forma pauperis.

The court (on being apprized that it was on behalf of a proſecutor) denied the motion; as it was founded only on the common petition and affidavit uſually produced by defendants in order to their obtaining ſuch a rule: they held, that proſecutors ought not to be admitted to proſecute in forma pauperis, unleſs ſome ſpecial ground was laid for the motion.

Wilmot, Juſtice, ſaid, that in civil caſes, plaintiffs were not admitted to ſue in forma pauperis, unleſs council certified, "that there was ſome foundation for "their ſuing." Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1308.

Hilary, 8 & 9 W. 3. The Caſe of the Sheriff of Eſſex.

The old ſheriff quitted the office without having delivered up the gaol to his ſucceſſor, and the juſtices of the peace pretending title to keep the cuſtody of it, excluded the new ſheriff. On which the court was moved on behalf of the new ſheriff; and the court held that the cuſtody of the gaol could not belong to any perſon but the new ſheriff; on which a rule was made that the old ſheriff ſhould deliver the cuſtody of the gaol to the new ſheriff, without taking any notice of the juſtices of peace. And becauſe the old ſheriff was out of poſſeſſion, the court ordered this rule to be ſerved on the gaoler, to the end that he ſhould permit the old ſheriff to make delivery of the gaol over accordingly.

Rokely, Juſtice. The county gaol is the priſon for the malefactors, and the ſheriff ought to keep them there; but priſoners for debt, &c. where an action lies againſt the ſheriff for their eſcape, may be kept where the ſheriff pleaſes. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 136.

Eaſter, 1 Ann. Anonymous.

IF a priſoner makes a negligent eſcape, and afterwards, on agreement between him and the plaintiff, at whoſe ſuit he is in execution, the plaintiff diſcharges him, the marſhal or gaoler cannot take him; for the re-taking of him, and rendering him to the county gaol upon the late ſtatute, is only ſhifting the gaol, and is founded upon the original proceſs, and only a continuation thereof.

Powell, Juſtice, put this caſe: ſuppoſe the marſhal ſuffers an eſcape, and then by virtue of the late act of parliament, by a judges warrant, the plaintiff retakes him, whether an action of eſcape lies againſt the marſhal? To which the court gave no anſwer. Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 3.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Foxworthy's Caſe.

Foxworthy being attainted of felony, was brought into this court, in order to plead a pardon granted him by the Queen, on condition that he ſhould go beyond ſea within a time limited, and there abide, &c. And after the allowance of the pardon his creditors moved the court, that they might have leave to charge him with civil actions, as in cuſtody of the Marſhal of the Marſhalſea, &c.

But the motion was denied by the court, becauſe it would defeat the effect of the Queen's pardon, by rendering Foxworthy incapable of performing the condition of going beyond ſea; and if he had not been pardoned, the attainder would have continued, and he would have been hanged: and there is no reaſon, why the pardon ſhould put the creditors in a better condition than they would have been without it, to the prejudice of the party for the benefit of whom it was granted. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 848.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Sutton's Caſe.

The court was moved on behalf of Sutton, the late marſhal of this court againſt Southerne, the preſent marſhal, who attended the court to reſtore Sutton to the poſſeſſion of the King's Bench priſon, out of which he pretended to have been turned by force, and it was inſiſted that the court might do it on motion, becauſe it was the priſon of this court, and ſo under the more immediate care of the court, who would protect it from all force and violence.

Per curiam. The court cannot hold plea of a forcible entry on motion, but Sutton muſt apply to the juſtices of peace of Surrey, who, on finding the force may reſtore him, or elſe he may indict the perſons who turned him out forcibly. So the motion was denied. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1005.

Trinity, 4 Ann. Gerrard v. Delaval.

In an action of debt on a bond of 200*l.* the defendant, without craving oyer of the bond or condition, pleaded that he was diſcharged by the act for the relief of poor priſoners, 2 & 3 of the Queen, cap. 15.

The Chief Juſtice took the exception, that the condition of the bond not appearing, the whole 200*l.* muſt be taken to be a debt, and conſequently the defendant is not within the ſtatute (though in truth the bond was only for the payment of 100*l.*) and for this reaſon judgment was given for the plaintiff by the whole court: for they could not take notice but that the whole 200*l.* was a juſt debt to the plaintiff.

The Chief Juſtice ſaid, there were three ſorts of diſcharges by this ſtatute. 1ſt, The original diſcharge by juſtices of peace at ſeſſions, out of actual cuſtody. 2dly, If a perſon ſo diſcharged was arreſted again, there was a ſecond diſcharge on common bail. 3dly, The body of the debtor was exempted from being liable to be taken in execution. But that the proviſoe extended to all theſe, that no perſon ſhould have any benefit of any of them, that was indebted above the ſum of 100*l.* principal money, and damages. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1196.

Eaſter, 5 Ann. The Queen v. Bellwood.

On an indictment the caſe was: a juſtice of peac had power to commit to ward, which is the word the ſtatute; the juſtice committed one to the the gaoler of the county.

Per curiam. The ſheriff, and conſequently his gaoler, is the proper officer; and if he let him go at large, it is ſuch an offence as is proper for an indictment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 79.

Michaelmas, 5 Ann. Turner v. Beale.

The plaintiff brought an action on the caſe againſt the defendant on an indebitatus aſſumpſit, for 100*l.* for goods ſold and delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant the firſt day of June 1705, on a quantum meruit, and an inſimul computaſſit; to the laſt promiſes, and to the whole ſum of 100*l.* in the firſt promiſe mentioned, beſides 37*l.* part thereof, the defendant pleaded non aſſumpſit, on which iſſue was joined. As to the 37*l.* he confeſſed the action, but in ſtay of execution as to his perſon, &c. he pleaded ſtat. 2 Ann. cap. 16, for inſolvent debtors, intitled, an act for the diſcharge out of priſon of ſuch inſolvent debtors as ſhall ſerve or procure a perſon to ſerve in her Majeſty's fleet or army. That he was in priſon on and before the 8th day of November 1702, for debt; that at the general quarter ſeſſions of the peace, on the 13th day of July 1704, he was diſcharged out of priſon. There was a demurrer, and joinder in demurrer.

The plaintiff's council took exceptions to the plea, becauſe the ſeveral facts required by the ſtatute to be done to intitle the juſtices of peace to a juriſdiction, were not averred to have been done; without which the juſtices had no power to make ſuch an order of diſcharge as is ſet forth in the plea, and therefore the defendant ought expreſsly and particularly to have ſhewn that he petitioned, that the creditor had been ſummoned, and that he liſted himſelf a ſoldier, &c. as the ſtatute has appointed.

The court were clear of opinion, that the plea was ill, even on a general demurrer, becauſe it did not appear to them, the neceſſary facts not being averred to intitle the juſtices of peace to a juriſdiction, that they had any juriſdiction in this caſe; and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

It was adjudged accordingly in Hilary 5 Ann. in this court, in the caſe of Woodrington v. Deverill, that it was naught on a general demurrer, and not aided by the ſtatute for the amendment of the law. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1262.

Hilary, 7 Geo. The King v. Buckland.

The court was moved to deprive one in cuſtody on an excommunicato capiendo of the benefit of the rules, but on conſideration, and ſearch for precedents, they refuſed to do it. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 413.

Michaelmas, 7 Ann. Anonymous.

A man being excommunicated for non-payment of coſts in a ſuit for tythes in a court chriſtian; the council moved to diſcharge him, he being in cuſtody on an excom' capiendo, becauſe he was liſted a ſoldier according to the act of parliament, which ſays, If any perſon being in cuſtody upon any proceſs, &c.

The court did not diſcharge him on this motion, but afterwards, it being moved again, Holt, C. J. ſaid, ſince the judges of C. B. are of opinion, that a man in execution ſhall be diſcharged, being liſted as as ſoldier; that a man in execution on an excom' capiendo, is within the ſame reaſon; and therefore by the court he was diſcharged. But he ſaid, he never was of opinion that this act ſhould extend farther than meſne proceſs, and not to perſons in execution. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 191.

Hilary, 8 Geo. Anonymous.

A priſoner taken on an eſcape-warrant, moved to ſuperſede it on producing a day rule for that day. But the court refuſed a ſuperſedeas, becauſe it appeared he went out early in the morning, and did not ſign the petition till he was taken up. Though Sir Thomas Tipping's caſe was urged, where he ſigned the petition in the morning, and went out before the court ſat, and they held that being entitled to a rule, that rule would protect him the whole day, and they could make no fraction of a day. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 503.

Michaelmas, 9 Geo. The King v. Layer.

The defendant being committed to the Tower for high-treaſon, in conſpiring the death of the King, and an indictment having been found againſt him at Rumford in Eſſex, before ſpecial commiſſioners of oyer and terminer, and being removed hither by certiorari, was afterwards brought up by habeas corpus to the bar; and being arraigned on the indictment, his council moved that his irons might be ſtruck off his legs, and inſtanced the caſes of Gordon, King, and others, where it had been ſo done before they pleaded; and argued, that he was not obliged to plead till his fetters were taken off; Cranbourn's caſe, 3 Inſt. 34, 35. Minor, c. 5. ſect. 1. Keil. 10. And that it was the opinion of the late Chief Juſtice Holt, that it ought to be ſo done; that this perſon was the firſt Tower priſoner that ever had irons on his legs; and that there never were no ſuch inſtruments there till now: and the priſoner himſelf moved, that the irons might be taken off before he pleaded, becauſe lying in his cloaths all night, and other inconveniencies occaſioned by thoſe irons, were ſo painful to him, that he being deprived of his reſt, had not the free uſe of his reaſon: that he hoped to have a fair trial as allowed by the law, without any undue ſeverities.

Per curiam. As for the irons to be taken from his legs, it is true it was done in thoſe caſes cited by his council, but it was where the priſoners had pleaded to their ſeveral indictments, and were to be tried on the ſame day; and that it would be to no purpoſe to inſiſt on this matter for ſo little a time as the priſoner had now to ſtand at the bar; and as for taking them off in the Tower, the court could make no order, becauſe, if they did, it might be an excuſe to his keeper if he (the priſoner) ſhould eſcape; therefore it muſt be left to his (the keeper's) diſcretion how to uſe his priſoners, eſpecially ſince he had already attempted to eſcape. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 83.

Michaelmas, 10 Geo. Groenhouſe v. Cleever.

The defendant being in cuſtody for want of bail, after the ſecond term moved for a ſuperſedeas, for want of the plaintiff's declaring, which was oppoſed by the council, becauſe, though no declaration had been delivered to the turnkey, according to ſtat. 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 21. yet there had been one left in the office in time, and this he ſaid would be enough to prevent the defendant's diſcharge, though he could not be obliged to plead to it, or let the plaintiff take a regular judgment.

And of this opinion was the ſecondary, who informed the court, that a ſuperſedeas is never granted till the clerk of the declarations has certified there is no declation againſt him in the office, which certificate would be uſeleſs, if the delivery of a declaration into the office be not ſufficient to prevent a diſcharge on common bail. But the court, on conſideration, granted a ſuperſedeas, taking the delivery of a declaration to which the defendant was not obliged to plead, and on which the plaintiff could not ſign a regular judgment, to be no delivery at all. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 474.

Eaſter, 11 Geo. John Mayne v. Daniel Harvey.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit, and quantum meruit, for goods ſold and diſcharged by the plaintiff to the defendant; the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff had no right to recover in this action, and then ſet out the act of parliament the ninth of the King, intitled, an act for the more effectual execution of juſtice in a pretended privileged place in the pariſh of St. George in the county of Surrey, commonly called the Mint, and then brought himſelf within the benefit of the ſaid act; and on demurrer this term, judgment was given for the plaintiff, becauſe this plea cannot be pleaded in bar of the action, but only in bar of the execution. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1383.

The priſon being in a ruinous condition, and the late rains having broke in, there was an order made for the proprietors to attend the court; and on their attendance, the court was moved to enlarge the rules of the priſon, ſo as to take in the Marſhalſea, that the priſoners might be removed thither. But the court would do nothing in it till there was an undertaking by rule of court to put the priſon in repair, which they ſaid the proprietors were obliged to do on pain of forfeiting their right. Whereon the proprietors ſubmitted to a rule, and the rules were enlarged accordingly. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 678.

Trinity, 3 & 4 Geo. 2. Coppin v. Gunner.

The defendant was convicted of an offence within the black act, viz. ſhooting at a perſon, &c. and ſentence of death pronounced againſt him. But Forteſcue, J. before whom he was tried, reprieved him, in order that a letter of the ſecretary of ſtate might be obtained for his tranſportation, according to ſtat. 4 Geo. 1. cap. 11.

The court was moved on behalf of the plaintiff, to whom the defendant was indebted, that he might have leave to ſerve the defendant in gaol with a copy of a latitat, to intitle the plaintiff to file common bail for him, if he did not cauſe an appearance to be entered, it being alledged that the defendant had an eſtate fallen to him, there being a proviſoe in ſtat. 9 Geo. 1. cap. 22. that offenders againſt that ſtatute ſhould not incur corruption of blood, nor a forfeiture of lands, tenements, goods, or chattles; and laſt term a rule was made for the gaoler, and the defendant to ſhew cauſe. And on hearing council this term, the rule was made abſolute, and leave given to the plaintiff to ſerve the defendant according to the motion; it being no prejudice to the gaoler, and there being no reaſon that the defendant ſhould not pay his debts, if the plaintiff could recover and find effects; he undertaking not to ſue out execution againſt the perſon of Gunner, and agreeing ſuch conſent ſhould be made a part of the rule. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1572.

The defendant being in cuſtody, the plaintiff obtained judgment; and inſtead of charging him in execution, whereby he would be entitled to his diſcharge on the Lords act, the plaintiff brought an action of debt on the judgment, and charged him in cuſtody. But on application to the court, when he had lain two terms after the judgment, the court diſcharged him on common bail, ſaying, It was a trick to deprive the defendant of the benefit of a merciful law. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 943.

Per curiam. It was adjudged, after being twice heard, that the defendants had not brought their caſe within the cuſtom. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 71.

He being a priſoner for debt in the King's Bench priſon in Southwark, applied to the quarter-ſeſſions for Surry to be diſcharged on the inſolvent debtors act; but being oppoſed by a 500 l. creditor, he was ordered to continue in cuſtody, and the creditor to pay him one penny per week; and at a ſubſequent ſeſſions, it was refuſed to increaſe the allowance.

On this he was removed by habeas corpus to the Fleet, and applied to the ſeſſions in London, where he was allowed to the extent of the act, viz. 3 s. 6 d. per week; and for non-payment thereof, he was at a ſubſequent ſeſſions abſolutely diſcharged. And all theſe orders being removed by certiorari, the court were of opinion, that the London orders ought to be quaſhed; for he was the proper ſubject of the Surry juriſdiction at the time of making their orders. And it is like the caſe of a ſecond removal of a pauper, when it appears there is a former order in force, and no variation of the circumſtances and merits of the caſe; beſides, if all the orders ſtand, the creditor is made to pay more than parliament has appointed by one penny. Wherefore the London orders were quaſhed. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1116.

Eaſter, 14 Geo. 2. Filkes v. Allen.

The defendant in Michaelmas term was ſurrendered in diſcharge of his bail; and afterwards, without giving any notice to the plaintiff, was removed to the Fleet.

The plaintiff, in Hilary term, charged him in execution as a priſoner in this court, and this term the defendant moved for a ſuperſedeas, becauſe the charge in the court where he was not a priſoner ſignifyed nothing, and ſo two terms were elapſed. The plaintiff inſiſted, that he was in no default, not having notice of his removal; and that theſe removals do not appear on the committitur book, when the charge in execution is to be made. But the court granted a ſuperſedeas; for the plaintiff, they ſaid, ſhould have demanded to ſee the priſoner, and if not produced, ſhould have known where to find him, and bring him back by habeas corpus, to charge him; and it would be putting difficulties on priſoners, to oblige them to give notice. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1153.

Michaelmas, 18 Geo. 2. Unwin v. Kirchoffe.

On a motion to ſuperſede the defendant, as not being charged in execution in two terms, the court held, that the committitur muſt be actually entered on record before the end of the ſecond term; and that there is no extenſion of the time to the continuance-day after term, nor was it ſufficient that there was an entry in the marſhal's book in time. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1215.

The court reſolved, "that defendants in qui tam actions are not at all included in the 13th clauſe of ſtat. 32 Geo. 2. cap. 28. for diſcharge of debtors in execution for ſums not exceeding 100 l. on exhibiting their petition, and aſſigning over all their eſtate and effects for the benefit of ſuch of their creditors as ſhall have charged them in execution:" and they accordingly diſcharged the rule. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1322.

Michaelmas, 6 Geo. 3. The Caſe of Peter Gander.

On a motion to diſcharge the ſaid Gander under the inſolvent act, the queſtion was, "whether a perſon was entitled to be diſcharged under ſtat. 1 Geo. 3. cap. 17. whoſe caſe was as follows:"

The ſaid Gander was not in the actual cuſtody of the gaoler on the day ſpecified in the act; but was in the cuſtody of an officer, in a ſpunging-houſe. He was not included in the firſt part of the goaler's liſt; but he was in the ſecond part.

The quarter ſeſſions for London had held him not to be entitled to his diſcharge, as an object of this ſtatute.

Lord Manſfield inclined, that the ſeſſions were in the right; as this was a poſitive law. And the juriſdiction is given to the quarter ſeſſions: ſo that there ſeems no way of coming at it, if they were wrong.

The Recorder candidly offered to come into any method that could be thought of, but Lord Manſfield ſaid nothing could be done in it Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1809.

On an action of treſpaſs, it was pleaded, that this court ought not to take conuſance of it, for that the defendant at the time of the ſuppoſed treſpaſs and bill exhibited was an inhabitant of the county palatine, where the treſpaſs was done; and prays judgment, if this court will take conuſance; to which there was a demurrer. In maintenance whereof it was ſaid, that the declaration was againſt him in cuſtody of the marſhal; that his being in cuſtody of the marſhal was not traverſeable no more than being the King's creditor in a writ of quo minus.

minus. Beſides, the defendant's not reſiding in the county palatine does not hinder his being an inhabitant of it; for a man may be an inhabitant in ſeveral places at once; and in all appeals and indictments of murder, the party is alledged to be an inhabitant in the place where the murder is committed.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. As to your caſe of a quo minus, it is traverſable, if the party comes in due time to do it. And if one be a priſoner here againſt whom one has a cauſe of action ariſing within the county palatine, ſo that his being a priſoner here hinders that perſon from proceeding againſt him below, ſure the cauſe's ariſing within the county palatine ſhall not hinder us from having conuſance of it here, but that is where he is firſt in cuſtody of the marſhal for cauſe, and another or the ſame party, has another cauſe of action ariſing againſt him in the county palatine; and if the truth were ſo, that the defendant was in cuſtody of the marſhal before for a cauſe ariſing within our juriſdiction, the defendant, inſtead of demurring, ought to ſhew it in ſupport of our juriſdiction. But any plea of privilege is good to a declaration againſt one in the cuſtody of the marſhal, tho' he was brought wrongfully there. As if an attorney of the C. B. be arreſted on a latitat, and is in cuſtody of the marſhal for want of bail, or ſuppoſe he puts in bail, it ſhall not hinder him of pleading his privilege, becauſe he cannot plead till he put in bail, if he be not in actual cuſtody; and if we give judgment, it muſt be for the defendant. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 13 W. 3. Hopkins v. Squibb.

And the council urged, that the plea was ill: 1ſt, Becauſe there was not any ſuch word as reſindentes; but it ought to be reſidentes, Raſt. entr. 473. 2dly, The cuſtom extends only to perſons continually attending, &c. and the averment is of an attendance perſonally, which is not within the cuſtom; but not allowed.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. It is enough to ſay, that the defendant was clerk of the nichels in the Exchequer, and his reſidence neceſſary there, and then to ſhew the writ; and the other is but recital, and not neceſſary; and therefore judgment was given for the defendant, that the plea ſhould be allowed. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 702.

The defendants having been committed to Newgate by order of the Houſe of Commons, were now brought into court by ſeveral writs of habeas corpus; and the cauſe of their commitment was returned to be a warrant ſigned Robert Harley, Speaker, requiring the keeper of Newgate to take into his cuſtody the ſeveral perſons, defendants, for having commenced and proſecuted an action at law againſt the conſtables of Ayleſbury, for refuſing their votes in the election of members of parliament, in contempt of the juriſdiction and open breach of the known privileges of the Houſe of Commons. The priſoner's council prayed that they might be diſcharged, for the ſeveral objections taken to their commitment, viz.

1ſt, Becauſe the warrant was not under ſeal, as it ought to be.

3dly, Becauſe they had done no unlawful act; for the proſecution of a ſuit is lawful, and no breach of the privilege of that houſe.

Powell, Powys, and Gould, Juſtices, held, 1ſt, That the commitment was well enough in form, becauſe it was according to the law and cuſtom of parliament.

2dly, That the Houſe of Commons were the proper judges of their own privileges; and this court was now eſtopped to ſay, that this was not a breach of the privileges of the Houſe of Commons, or that the Houſe of Commons had no ſuch privilege.

Holt, Chief Juſtice ſaid, that this was no breach of privilege of the Houſe of Commons; that the commencing and proſecution of an action did not neceſſarily imply a going farther than the bare filing and continuing of an original, which is no breach of privilege: he ſaid, the ſuing was no breach of privilege, nor can their judgment make it ſo, nor conclude this court from determining contrary; when the Houſe of Commons exceed their legal bounds and authority, their acts are wrongful, and cannot be juſtified, more than the acts of private men: that there was no queſtion but their authority is from the law, and as it is circumſcribed, ſo it may be exceeded: to ſay, they are judges of their own privileges and their own authority, and no body elſe, is to make their privileges to be as they would have them: if there be a wrongful impriſonment by the Houſe of Commons, what court ſhall deliver the party? Shall we ſay, there is no redreſs, and that we are not able to execute thoſe laws, upon which the liberty of the Queen's people ſubſiſts? To conclude, all courts are ſo far judges of their own privileges, and entruſted with a power to vindicate themſelves, that they may puniſh for contempts; but to make them, or any court, final judges of them, to the excluſion of others, is to introduce a ſtate of confuſion, by making every man judge in his own cauſe, and ſubverting all law. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 503. Raym. vol. 2. p. 1105.

Forteſcue, Juſtice. As to the plea that a man is clerk to one of the prothonotaries of *C. Michaelmas, 8 Geo. The Caſe of Lord Coningſby.

But the court rejected the motion, for if the plaintiff was not worth any thing, he could not be obliged ſo to do; and it would be unreaſonable that his peerage ſhould be a loſs to him, ſince every ſubject has a right by birth to ſue in the ſame King's courts, where no diſtinction is to be made of perſons. *Vide Mod. And after conſideration, the court ſet aſide the plea, being all of opinion, that ſuch clerks had no privilege at all, they not being ſworn as attornies are, nor ever acting as clerks in the prothonotary's office. And that it was not ſufficient for the prothonotary to enter their names in his book. Michaelmas, 13 Geo. Dawkins v. Berridge. Error.

He, this defendant, having* privilege of parliament; the plain- had judgment by default, on which the defendant brought a writ of error.

The plaintiff in error's council took this exception viz. that ſtat. 12 & 13 W. 3. c. 3. gives no power to the court of C. B. to proceed in ſuch caſes by bill.

But on conſidering the words of the ſtatute, the court were unanimouſly of opinion, that the plaintiff might proceed againſt the defendant in the court of C. B. by bill, notwithſtanding it was not the uſual proceſs of that court; the court obſerved there was a proviſoe in the ſtatute, "that it ſhould not ex"tend to give juriſdiction to any court to hold pleas
"in any real or mixed action, in any other manner
"than ſuch court might have done before the making
"of ſuch ſtatute;" which they ſaid implied, that in perſonal actions, ſuch as the preſent was, the plaintiff might, by virtue of the firſt clauſe in the ſtatute, proceed either by bill, or by original. Therefore the judgment was affirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 734.

Eaſter, 7 Geo. 2. Holiday and Pitt, and other Plaintiffs in ſeveral Suits againſt the ſame Defendant.

A motion was made in this court to diſcharge the defendant John Pitt, Eſq; out of cuſtody, becauſe he having been member for Camelford in Cornwall in the late parliament, was arreſted by ſeveral writs of capias out of the C. B. and latitats out of this court within three days after the prorogation, and two days, after the diſſolution of parliament, before the time of privilege, as he alledged, was out. He was likewiſe charged in cuſtody with ſeveral declarations. The defendant removed himſelf into this court by habeas corpus. (The return was produced in court to ſhew that he was a member, and an affidavit made that he continued ſitting till the end of the parliament.) The Judges of this court having conferred with the reſt of the Judges, it was ordered to be further argued.

Lord Hardwick, on the 27th of May, delivered in the the unanimous opinion of the eleven Judges, who were preſent at the arguments; which was, that the defendant was entitled to the privilege of parliament to his return; that it was not neceſſary in this caſe to determine to what time it was limited, or ſuppoſing it to be only for a convenient time, the defendant was arreſted within that convenient time, he having been taken within three days after the prorogation, and two days after the diſſolution of the parliament, and that conſequently his perſon ought to be diſcharged in a proper and legal manner, but that the remaining queſtion is, what is that proper and legal method, whether by writ of privilege, under the great ſeal on record, or whether it may be done by motion on affidavit? As to this point, the Judges were all of opinion, that a writ of privilege is a proper method to be taken for the diſcharge of the defendant's perſon; but there was a great doubt, and ſome variety of opinions amongſt them, whether the court would diſcharge him in the method now taken on motion or not, no caſe having been produced from the books, wherein any perſon entitled to the privilege of parliament was diſcharged after this manner. But it being a matter of conſequence, and the ſhort time between the arguments, and the laſt day of the term, being taken up in neceſſary buſineſs, the court was of opinion to enlarge the rule till next term, without prejudice to the defendant's bringing his writ of privilege; and if the defendant does not think fit to bring his writ of privilege in the mean time, but inſiſts on the method already taken, they will then give their opinion on the matter, after having given it the conſideration it will require, it being altogether a new proceeding.

The Judges afterwards gave their opinion for the defendant's being diſcharged on motion. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. p. 29.

Lord Mansfield. The privilege of foreign miniſters and their domeſtic ſervants depends on the law of nations: ſtat. 7 Ann. cap. 12. is declaratory of it. All that is new in this act, is the clauſe, ſect. 4. which gives a ſummary juriſdiction for the puniſhment of the infractors of this law. It is not to be expected that every particular act of the ſervice ſhould be particularly ſpecified; it is enough if an actual bona fide ſervice be proved, and if ſuch a ſervice be ſufficiently proved by affidavit, we muſt not, on bare ſuſpicion only, ſuppoſe it to have been merely colourable and colluſive.

As to the latter point, "of his being a trader;" his having been ſo in Ireland, (and even that ſeven years ago too) will not bring him within the exception of the fifth clauſe of this ſtatute, which provides, "that " no merchant or other trader whatſoever, within the
" deſcription of any of the ſtatutes againſt bankrupts," who has or ſhall put himſelf into the ſervice of any ſuch ambaſſador or public miniſter, "ſhall have or " take any manner of benefit by that act."

Hilary, 1 W. & M. Shotter v. Friend.

An executor being ſued for a legacy in the Spiritual Court, pleaded payment, and offered to prove it by one witneſs, which the judge refuſed, and gave judgment againſt him.

Per curiam. 1ſt. Where the Spiritual Court proceed in a matter merely ſpiritual, if they proceed in their own manner, though that is different from the common law, no prohibition lies; as in a probate of a will; there if they refuſe one witneſs, no prohibition lies. Noy 12. 2 Ro. 300.

2dly. When they have conuſance of the original matter, and an incident happens, which is of temporal conuſance, or triable by the common law, they ſhall try the incident, but muſt try it as the common law would: thus, in a ſuit for tithes, or for a legacy, if the defendant pleads a releaſe or payment, or in a ſuit to prove a will, if the defendant pleads a revocation, 1 Ro. Rep. 12. 2 Ro. Rep. 42. Yelv. 92. So in the caſe at bar, they ſhall try matter of payment or no payment, but then payment admits ſuch proof as the common law would, or otherwiſe they reject the cauſe themſelves, and ought to be prohibited.

3dly. A bare ſuggeſtion, that the defendant has but one witneſs, and that they take exceptions to his credit and reputation, is no cauſe of prohibition; for if they admit the proof of one witneſs, whether he be a creditable witneſs or not, they ſhall judge, and the party has no remedy but an appeal.

4thly. That it is not too late to come for a prohibition after ſentence; for the ſentence in this caſe is the grievance. Therefore a conſultation was denied. Vide Salk vol. 2. p. 547.

In a prohibition to a libel in the ſpiritual court for the tithes of a water corn-mill, a modus was ſuggeſted. The defendant confeſſed the modus as to part, but ſaid that there was an addition to the antient mill, viz. another pair of mill-ſtones, (your mill antiently had but one pair of ſtones, but of late had two pair) and ſo prayed that the prohibition might only go to the tithes of the antient mill. Michaelmas, 4 W. & M. Carter v. Firman.

On a motion for a prohibition, the plaintiff's caſe was as follows: Mr. C. was poſſeſſed of a houſe in Three-King Court Fenchurch-ſtreet, and the defendant had a houſe contiguous, there was a party-wall ſet between theſe houſes by the city ſurveyor, and both built twenty years ſince.

The council for the prohibition urged, that the city had no juriſdiction over this matter; for that theſe buildings were erected twenty years ſince, according to the rules preſcribed by ſtat. 19 Car. 2. cap. 8. and that the authority of the Court of Aldermen was limited to the builders of houſes on the foundations of thoſe which were deſtroyed by the fire, and did not extend to thoſe perſons who built on new foundations; and of this opinion was the court.

At another day this matter being ſtirred again, the court ordered that the plaintiff ſhould declare on a prohibition, and that the defendant might, if he ſaw cauſe, plead this cuſtom, whereby the court might be judicially appriſed of the matter. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 151.

On a motion for a prohibition, the caſe was as follows:

A man had a houſe, and a great farm of arable land in the pariſh of Kippax, where he dwelt, and he had five acres of plowed land, and forty acres of paſture, in the pariſh of Smillington, on which paſture he fed his cattle, which were employed in huſbandry in the pariſh of Kippax. The parſon of Smillington libelled for tithes for the agiſtment of cattle there.

The court would not grant a prohibition on the firſt motion, but gave the defendant leave to amend his ſuggeſtion, by adding, that he had arable land in Smillington, and did exerciſe huſbandry there; which was amended.

Afterwards in Michaelmas term it was moved again, and the court were of opinion, that if the cattle depaſtured were not for plowing land in the ſame pariſh where they are fed, he ſhall pay tithes, though they plow in another pariſh, and if he had more cattle than he employed for the plow in the ſame pariſh, he ought to pay tithes for them; but ordered the defendant to make an affidavit to aſcertain the fact. *Vide Mod. The court was moved for a prohibition to ſtay a ſuit in the biſhop's court, on ſuggeſtion that the party lived within a peculiar archdeaconry.

Per curiam. Where the archdeacon has a peculiar juriſdiction, he is totally exempt from the power of the biſhops, and the biſhops cannot enter there and hold a court; and in ſuch caſe, if the party who lives within the peculiar juriſdiction, be ſued in the biſhop's court, a prohibition ſhall be granted; for the ſtatute intends no ſuit ſhall be by ſurprize. But if the archdeacon is not a peculiar, then the biſhop and he have concurrent juriſdiction, and the party may commence a ſuit in the Archdeacon's court, or in the Biſhop's, and he has his election to chuſe which he pleaſes. And if he commence his ſuit in the Biſhop's court, no prohibition ſhall be granted; for if it ſhould, it would confine the Biſhop's court to determine nothing but appeals, and render it incapable of having any cauſes originally commenced there. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 123.

A probibition was moved for to the conſiſtory court of Landaff, where a libel was brought for fraudulently taking away a will that was proved with them, in order to cheat the legatees.

Gould, Juſtice. Here is a will properly lodged, and if any one fraudulently takes it away, what remedy have they? for an indictment, or information, will not reſtore them the will, and detinue will not lie for them, becauſe they have no intereſt in it.

Turton, Juſtice, was of the ſame opinion.

Holt, C. J. on the other ſide, it was ſaid, the prohibition is authority enough for them to go on, though the will be loſt; and the offence need not go unpuniſhed, for they may have an indictment or information; and this is not like caſes of beating in a church-yard, where the ſtatute gives them power, though it be puniſhable at common law; nor beating in the church itſelf, where they proceed for reformation of manners only, and no prohibition went. *Vide Mod. A mortuary was ſued for in the ſpiritual court of Cheſter, and a prohibition was moved for here, on ſuggeſtion that there was no cuſtom to pay a mortuary in that pariſh; and it was argued, that they may ſue for mortuaries in ſpiritual courts, if it be admitted there is any due; but the ſtatute de circumſpecte agatis makes no more proviſion for mortuaries than it does for tithes, or a modus of them, and in a ſuit for a modus the cuſtom may be traverſed, Hob. 247. If in a ſuit for a modus, the modus be admitted, they ſhall proceed, otherwiſe not. 3 Cro. 151. 2 Cro. 257. and 1 W. & M. Brown v. White, it was a controverted point; but then it was a more difficult point to obtain a prohibition than it is now: that ſtatute give coſts, and then the court would not grant a prohibition, without an oath of the truth of the ſuggeſtion. Keb. 835, 867. where it is admitted they may ſue for a mortuary, unleſs the cuſtom be denied. And the court was for granting the prohibition, it being a doubtful point, to have it ſettled; and that the being of coſts ſeemed to be a notable ingredient in the caſe; and the ſtat. 31 H. 8. provides they ſhall demand no more than they had by cuſtom, which, though it be reſtrictive of their juriſdiction, yet ſhews they have juriſdiction of mortuaries.

But the other ſide offering affidavits of uninterrupted uſage, Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that might be ſomething; for though there were a good ſuggeſtion made, yet, if it appeared to them to be merely for delay, they would not grant a prohibition, and that was the reaſon of the rule of requiring affidavits of the truth of the ſuggeſtion. *Vide Mod. The court was moved for a prohibition to the court of Chancery, on a writ of ſequeſtration out of that court, whereby lands were ſequeſtered; and ſuggeſted that the Chancery was only a court of equity, having only a juriſdiction over perſons in caſe of diſobedience to their decrees, and not otherwiſe; and he affirmed, that though it were called the High Court of Chancery, yet if it ſhould go againſt law, or exceed its juriſdiction, they were under controul of this court; for they, on habeas corpus, will deliver one illegally committed by them. And he ſaid, that at firſt theſe ſort of ſequeſtrations were only granted in caſe of perſonal duty concerning land; but they ought not to ſequeſter lands for a debt ariſing on a perſonal contract, not concerning the land ſequeſtred.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. You move for a ſtranger to the bill, and anſwer proceedings in Chancery; and therefore you muſt take your remedy at law: you don't ſay that you have brought treſpaſs againſt this ſequeſtrator, and they ſtop you by injunction out of Chancery. And no more was done in this matter. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 313.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Blank v. Newcomb.

A libel was brought in the ſpiritual court for not paying a pariſh-rate for the repairs of the church; and ſuggeſted for a prohibition that all pariſh rates were to be made by a majority of the pariſhioners; and that every rate, after it is collected, becomes void; and that this was not by a majority, &c. and that the ſuit was to pay this in purſuance of an old rate collected many years before.

As to the firſt it was urged, its not being by a majority of the pariſhioners was matter only proper for an appeal, and ſo is the inequality of the rate. 2 Bulſt. 289.

As to the ſecond, that this preſent rate had indeed reference to a former one which had been collected, but that was not to give any force or efficacy to the former, but only by way of direction of the latter, according to Sir Robert Lee's caſe.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The right courſe is for a ſpiritual court to give ſufficient notice to the pariſh to meet, and make a rate for reparation of the church, which if they do not do, they may be excommunicated; but the eccleſiaſtical court cannot make a rate, or appoint commiſſioners to do it; and here the ſuggeſtion recites an antient rate, which they ſay was to be a ſtanding order for all times to come; and that they have confirmed that rate, and that the libel is for want of a new payment according to it. Noy. 131. 126. in point for a prohibition in this caſe, and all that the ſpiritual court can do is, to make an order that the church be repaired, but not to aſſeſs a quantum for that purpoſe. And though in the ſpiritual court one omits in the libel that which makes againſt him, as here, that the rate was made by commiſſioners of the eccleſiaſtical court, yet they of the other ſide may ſuggeſt it; and here a prohibition was granted. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 327.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Anonymous.

On ſhewing cauſe why a prohibition ſhould not go to the ſpiritual court: the foundation of the libel was for a rate to repair the church, and there was a ſentence and an appeal on that; and now after all this they would have a prohibition, but they came too late.

In the time of the late King James 2. there was an act made for building this church, with power to raiſe a ſum not exceeding 50000 l. ſo that they ſuggeſt there was money enough raiſed by that act, and that this rate was illegally made; but your Lordſhip will not examine into that now. Therefore we hope, ſince here is nothing contrary to the act, for ought appears againſt law, we pray the rule may be diſcharged.

The council on the other ſide alledged, that they had procured a ſentence ex parte, but ſaid that this caſe turned on two points:

Firſt, The act of parliament, which preſcribes a particular manner of raiſing the monies, and therefore an application to the ſpiritual court was improper.

Secondly, It is a rate declared to be made by the veſtry, and no veſtry could be called till the church was finiſhed. Therefore we inſiſt that the ſtatute is not followed, which preſcribes a particular way of raiſing the money.

The Chief Juſtice concurred in this opinion; on which the council on the other ſide ſaid, their ſuit was for the repairing the church, and not for building it. And after hearing the further arguments of the council on both ſides, the court granted a prohibition, and ordered the plaintiff to declare thereon. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 5. p. 448.

Alſo on ſtat. 10 W. 3. in this court, it was ſaid by Holt, Chief Juſtice, that if a modus be pleaded in the Spiritual Court and admitted, no prohibition ſhall go; but if the queſtion be, whether a modus or no modus, a prohibition ſhall go, and ſo is the law, viz. wherever the matter which you ſuggeſt for a prohibition is foreign to the libel, you muſt plead it below, before you can have a prohibition; otherwiſe where the cauſe of prohibition appears on the face of the libel. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 551.

Trinity, 12 W. 3. Smith v. Wallet.

The ſequeſtrator of the tithes of a vicarage ſued the impropriator in the ſpiritual court for tithes on the endowment. On which the defendant moved for a prohibition, on a ſuggeſtion that it was not a vicarage, and that it ought to be tried at common law.

Adjudged by Holt, Chief Juſtice, that if the ſuggeſtion is good in point of law, this court will grant a prohibition; but if it appears to them notoriouſly otherwiſe, they will not. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 587.

Trinity, 12 W. 3. Jones v. Stone.

David Jones, the vicar of N. was libelled againſt in the Spiritual Court, for that by cuſtom time out of mind the vicars of N. had by themſelves, or others, ſaid and performed divine ſervice in the chapel of Chawbury, for which there was ſuch a recompence; and that he neglected. The defendant came for a prohibition, and without traverſing this cuſtom, ſuggeſted that all cuſtoms were triable at common law: and the council urged, that it was enough for a prohibition, that a cuſtom appeared to charge the vicar with a duty for which he was not liable of common right.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. A perſon may be bound to an eccleſiaſtical duty by cuſtom, and when he is bound by cuſtom, the Spiritual Court may puniſh him if he neglects that duty; the cuſtom might have a reaſonable commencement by compoſition in the Spiritual Court, and begin by an eccleſiaſtical act: and a bare preſcription only is not a ſufficient ground for a prohibition, unleſs it concerns a layman; whereas here it is an eccleſiaſtical right, an eccleſſaſtical perſon and an eccleſiaſtical duty, and the preſcription not denied; notwithſtanding 2 Inſt. 491. I never could get a prohibition to ſtay a ſuit in the Spiritual Court againſt a parſon for a penſion by preſcription. 1 Vent. 3, 120, 265. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 550. Raym. vol. 1. p. 578.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. Johnſon v. Oldham.

On a motion for a prohibition to the ſpiritual court to ſtay a ſuit there for a mortuary, on a ſuggeſtion of ſtat. 21 Hen. 8. cap. 6. that there was no cuſtom for the payment of the ſame.

Adjudged by Holt, Chief Juſtice, that a prohibition cannot be granted without a denying of the cuſtom in the ſpiritual court, which was not done in the preſent caſe: therefore the court denied the motion. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 609.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. Anonymous.

On a motion for a prohibition for libelling in the ſpiritual court for a pariſh rate, for mending and cleanſing the pariſh organ, the ſame was granted. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 416.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. Blaxton v. Henore.

The council urged, that if it appears on the face of the libel that the eccleſiaſtical court has no juriſdiction, they may be prohibited without ſuggeſtion.

But the court were of a different opinion, for the ſuggeſtion is a fundamental point, and is the declaration on the writ. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 435.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. Anonymous.

A woman was libelled againſt in the ſpiritual court for incontinency with a man ſince dead. Suggeſted for a prohibition that the man was her huſband: and now the ſpiritual court could not examine whether he had been her huſband or not, becauſe that would tend to baſtardize the children, and diſſolve the marriage after the death of the party.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If there was a marriage de facto, though illegal, yet they ſhall not libel to avoid it after the huſband's death; but if there was none, the death of the man ought not to protect her from a proſecution for her whoredom. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 419.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. Johnſon v. Ryſon.

A libel was brought in the ſpiritual court for a mortuary, alledged due by cuſtom; the ſuggeſtion ſet forth ſtat. 21 H. 8. c. 6. and that there was no cuſtom in that pariſh for payment of mortuaries.

Per curiam There is no colour for a prohibition, ſince you have not pleaded; for a mortuary is a thing within their juriſdiction; and if there were any room for a prohibition, it would be for want of a cuſtom; and then that ought to have been pleaded; and he compared it with a modus decimandi, for which there is no remedy but in the ſpiritual court; and the caſe in Cro. Car. Hind v. The Biſhop of Cheſter, is not like this, for the ſtatute excepts a mortuary, and a mortuary is a mere eccleſiaſtical right, for which there is no remedy but in the ſpiritual court; and though a writ of annuity may lie for a penſion by preſcription, and ſo recoverable at common law, yet it may be ſued for in the ſpiritual court againſt the opinion of Co. 2 Inſt. 491. which has been frequently exploded ſince: and the rule fora prohibition was diſcharged. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 416.

Michaelmas, 12 W. 3. Earle v. Paine.

One Paine, a cuſtom-houſe officer, exhibited an information of ſeizure of a hogſhead of wine belonging to Mr. Earle, and ſeized for not paying cuſtom. Earle neglected to come in and enter his claim in the Exchequer, but in the mean time brought an action of treſpaſs in this court againſt Paine. On motion, the barons ordered that the proceedings in this court ſhould be ſtayed, and the cauſe there removed into the Exchequer in the ſame ſtate it then ſtood. Earle was ſerved with the order, but notwithſtanding gave rules for pleading; whereon an attachment was iſſued by the Exchequer againſt him; on which he moved here for a prohibition to the Court of Exchequer. And a rule was made to hear council; on the argument ſeveral precedents were cited, one in 19 Hen. 7. Rol. 16. exactly like this. The court took time to conſider of the precedents, and in the mean time the matter was compounded. Reg. 187. 2 Inſt. 551. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 551.

Hilary, 13 W. 3. Johnſon v. Bewick.

A rule was made for a prohibition to be granted niſi, i. e. unleſs cauſe ſhewn, directed to the Conſiſtory Court of the Biſhop of Winton, to ſtay a ſuit againſt the plaintiff, for having ſpoken of the defendant the following ſcandalous words, "viz. Thou art a whore," and alſo for having ſaid to her huſband, "You have "married an old whore, and therefore have no children;" on ſuggeſtion of the cuſtom of London to cart whores, and that theſe words were ſpoken in London.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a prohibition was granted, it would encourage all the market people when they were in London to defame their neighbours without fear of puniſhment. Therefore the court diſcharged the rule. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 711.

Hilary, 13 W. 3. Fenwick v. Lady Groſvenor.

The plaintiff libelled againſt the defendant in the ſpiritual court for cohabitation, claiming a marriage with her; and a prohibition was moved for, on ſuggeſtion that the citation was to anſwer out of the dioceſe, it being to the eccleſiaſtical court of the peculiar of Weſtminſter, whereas ſhe lived in Cheſter; but it appearing by affidavit, that ſhe dwelled for a conſiderable time in the dioceſe of London, and even to the very day of the citation, which was ſerved on her juſt as ſhe was going away; the court would not grant a prohibition. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 610.

Hilary, 13 W. 3. Anonymous.

A perſon was libelled in the Spiritual Court by the huſband and wife, for calling the huſband cuckold: ruled by Holt, Chief Juſtice, that a prohibition ſhall go, becauſe they cannot both ſue in that court for that word. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 288.

And to this ſuit a prohibition was granted niſi; for he ſhall not be obliged to anſwer on his oath, what is to make him forfeit his place, but it ought to be proved againſt him. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 550.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. In caſes of prohibitions, where they were granted on a motion, the ancient courſe was, that the party prohibited ſued out a ſcire facias, quare conſultatio non debet concedi poſt prohibitionem, in which writ the ſuggeſtion was recited, and alſo a prohibition granted thereon, to the damage of the party.

Afterwards this practice was altered, and the courſe came to be thus, viz. on granting a prohibition to the plaintiff, the court bound him in a recognizance to proſecute an attachment of contempt againſt the defendant, for ſuing in the Spiritual Court after a prohibition granted, and then to declare on the prohibition; ſo that he who was the defendant in that court is now become actor or plaintiff in the court above. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 289.

Ruled, That where a thing incident in the Spiritual Court is of a temporal nature, they muſt try it in the ſame manner in that court, as it would have been tried at law, otherwiſe a procedendo will be granted; but if the matter incident is of a ſpiritual nature, or of a ſpiritual cognizance, they may try it according to their own law; as for inſtance, if they require two witneſſes to the proof of a revocation of a will, a prohibition will not be granted, becauſe ſuch proof is required at law; but if they require two witneſſes to prove a leaſe, a prohibition will be granted. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 288.

All prohibitions are to be granted on ſome ſuggeſtion, and not otherwiſe; which ſuggeſtions are to be brought into the office. But it has been doubted as to prohibitions to the Admiralty; for the court of Admiralty does not uſe to ſet forth the ſpecial matter whereon they give ſentence, but only to recite that they have heard both ſides, and ſo proceed to give judgment, and then pretend it is to late too move for a prohibition.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. It is never too late to move for a prohibition after ſentence in any caſe, but one, and that is to the eccleſiaſtical court, on ſtat. 23 Hen. 8. where the ſuit is out of the dioceſe; and the reaſon why a prohibition is denied in that caſe is, becauſe you have by pleading owned their juriſdiction. See Comberb, 234, 253, 448, 459, 463. Shower, 333, 396, 172. *Vide Mod. A libel was brought in the ſpiritual court, for that J. S. being the parſon of ſuch a church, did make himſelf drunk at the ſacrament, and that he was a whoremaſter; and upon ſuggeſtion, that they would proceed to a deprivation, and that the benefice was a donative. A prohibition was granted as to the ſuing in order to deprive, but not as to the other matter. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 31.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Partridge's Caſe.

A prohibition was prayed to the Spiritual Court to ſtay the probate of a will, which contained a deviſe of lands and ſeveral legacies, ſuggeſting that matter, and that the teſtator was non compos; and the Marquis of Wincheſter's caſe, 6 Co. 23. was relied on; but the court denied that caſe, and ſaid, that ſtat. H. 8. never intended to leſſen the juriſdiction of the eccleſiaſtical court as to the probate of wills. And to grant a prohibition might be inconvenient, for without probate the executor cannot ſue for debts, which by this means may be loſt, and the will unperformed. As for granting it as to the land, it would be vain, (2 Ro. 315. 1 Sid. 141. this was the practice heretofore) becauſe it is no evidence either pro or con in any court of law, but a proceeding before no judge; yet it is good as to the goods. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 553.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Galizard v. Rigault.

On an indictment for aſſaulting, beating, wounding, and endeavouring to raviſh the wife of one B. on which the party was convicted, and afterwards the huſband brought an action of treſpaſs for the ſame cauſe; and now the party being alſo libelled againſt in the Spiritual Court for the ſame fact, viz. for ſoliciting her chaſtity, moved for a prohibition againſt the proceedings in the Spiritual Court; and it was urged for the juriſdiction of the Spiritual Court, that they may puniſh for the ſolicitation and incontinence, and that this ſuit was pro ſalute animæ, the other for fine and damages.

Per curiam. A prohibition muſt be granted; for it being an attempt and ſolicitation to incontinence, coupled with force and violence, it does by reaſon of the force, which is temporal, become a temporal crime in the whole; as if one ſays, Thou art a whore and a thief, or thou keepeſt a bawdy-houſe, which are temporal matters, the party ſhall not proceed in the Spiritual Court; whereas, if it were only, Thou art a whore, a libel lies in the Spiritual Court. So if it be ſaid of a woman that ſhe is a bawd only, and not that ſhe keeps a bawdy-houſe.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If one commits adultery, and the huſband bring aſſault and battery, this ſhall not hinder the Spiritual Court, for it is a criminal proceeding there, and no indictment lies at common law for adultery. 1 Roll. Abr. 295. 2 Inſt. 488. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 552.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Harrow's Caſe.

A libel was brought in the ſpiritual court for ſubtraction of tithes for agiſtment of cattle: they pleaded below that they were inhabitants of that pariſh, and the other tithes were better for the agiſtment of cattle there; and this matter they alſo ſuggeſted for a prohibition, but in their declaration on the prohibition they alledged they were occupiers.

Per curiam. The declaration ought not to vary from the ſuggeſtion, and if you do not declare purſuant to the ſuggeſtion, a conſultation ought to go; for if you diſcontinue your prohibition, it ſhall go of courſe; and the reaſon why agiſted cattle ſhall not pay tithes, is becauſe the other tithes of the ſame pariſh are the better for the agiſtment there.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, if you have a houſe in one pariſh, and live there, you muſt not pay agiſtment for dry cattle; but if you be not a houſe-keeper there, you muſt pay this for agiſtment. And here the court would give them leave to diſcontinue paying coſts, and praying another prohibition. And if there be cattle of the plow agiſted in another pariſh, they muſt pay tithes there where they agiſt, becauſe they are not cattle of the plow there. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 113.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Wenmouth v. Collins.

The council moved to have a prohibition granted to the eccleſiaſtical court, to ſtay a ſuit there againſt the plaintiff for brawling in the belfrey, and ſtriking a man there, on ſuggeſtion of ſtat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. c 4. and that all ſtatutes are conſtruable by the common law, and that the plaintiff came there as mayor to ſuppreſs a riot.

The court denied a prohibition, becauſe this offence was conuſable in the eccleſiaſtical court before this ſtatute, by reaſon of the place; and that the ſtatute, tho' it provides a penalty, does not alter the juriſdiction. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 850.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Anonymous.

It was argued, that a prohibition lay for denying a copy of the libel to any eccleſiaſtical court: for the party ought to know whether the matter be within their juriſdiction, and how to anſwer it. 1 Ro. Rep. 337. Dighton's caſe, Mich. 2 Ann, in this court, and it was ſaid by Holt, C. J. that it was formerly held by all the judges of England, that when there was a proceeding officially in the eccleſiaſtical court they were not bound to give the party a copy of the articles; but the law is otherwiſe: for in ſuch caſe, if they refuſe to give a copy of the articles a prohibition ſhall go till it be given; and accordingly a prohibition was granted by the court. Eaſter 11 W. 3. in this court it was moved for a prohibition to the Admiralty for refuſing a copy of the libel; and it was denied by Holt, Chief Juſtice. Vide Salk. vol. 2. page 552.

Eaſter, 2 Ann. Brown v. Tanner.

A perſon was libelled in the Spiritual Court for brawling in the church-yard, and for telling the parſon, Thou art a pitiful drunken parſon, and a drunken puppy; and the court was moved for a prohibition on the authority of the caſe of Star v. Bucknell, where for the like words a prohibition was granted, and ſo in Haine's caſe; and the reaſon was, becauſe drunkenneſs is a temporal offence; it is true, the caſes before mentioned were of drunkeneſs in laymen, but if it is an offence in a layman, it ſhould be ſo in a clergyman; it is a crime which does not take its nature from the perſon who commits it, but from the law which is offended thereby; it is true, the canoniſts make every thing which is a ſin, and forbidden by the ten commandments, to be a ſpiritual offence, as murder, perjury, &c. but by the common law, whatever is taken notice of and puniſhable by the temporal laws, is a temporal offence; and what is not puniſhable by the temporal law, but by the ſpiritual law, in ſuch caſe, that law is a kind of ſupplanting the temporal law, and the offences ſo puniſhable are ſpiritual offences, as fornication, adultery, &c.

Now, as for drunkenneſs, it was always accounted a temporal offence, for it was indictable at common law; and alehouſes were formerly appointed in the leet, and before the 24th of Elizabeth, there was ſcarce ſuch a crime in England; it is true, a parſon may be deprived for drunkenneſs, and ſo he may for ſodomy, but yet he is not puniſhable for that offence in the Spiritual Court, becauſe it is a temporal offence; afterwards a prohibition was granted as to the words, but not as to the brawling in the church-yard. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 289.

There was a ſuit in the eccleſiaſtical court for theſe words, "You are known by the name of Bawdy Nell, "and do lie with another woman's huſband:" and the council moved for a prohibition, on a ſuggeſtion that the plaintiff below had brought an action at law for theſe words, grounded on the ſpecial damage ſhe had ſuſtained by the defendant's ſpeaking them. And he compared this to the caſe, where one calls a woman whore and thief. 2 Roll. 297. n. 25. in that caſe ſhe ſhall not have an action in the eccleſiaſtical court for theſe words, though ſhe might for the word whore, becauſe it being joined with the word thief, an action lies at common law for the words. Neither can the words be ſplit, and an action brought at law for the word thief, and a ſuit in the eccleſiaſtical court for the word whore. So here, though the words are properly ſuable for in the eccleſiaſtical court, yet a ſpecial damage attending the ſpeaking of them, by which means an action lies at common law, they therefore ſhall not proceed for the ſpeaking them in the eccleſiaſtical court; but the court denied to grant a prohibition. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1101.

On a modus ſuggeſted to pay every tenth day's milk, from April to November, ſkimmed, and then made into cheeſe, in lieu of all tithe of milk, a prohibition was granted to try the modus, and ſettle the matter; and on ſpeaking to the goodneſs of the modus, theſe caſes were cited. 3 Cro. 609. Mod. 909. Latch. 226. 1 Ro. 649. N. 17. 648, 649. At laſt cauſe was ſhewn, that the prohibition was teſted on the 29th day of November, and that ſix months, i. e. calendar months, (as they ought to be, Noy 30. Hob. 179. *Litt. And the council ſhewed for cauſe, that this fact was falſe, and that the plaintiff was not a diſſenter, nor had qualified himſelf as directed by the ſtatute, and therefore hoped the court would not allow the rule to ſtand, unleſs he had an affidavit of the fact, for by that means any perſon might come and ſuggeſt a falſe fact, and ouſt the ſpiritual court of their juriſdiction. Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, if A. called B. a ſon of a whore, he cannot libel in the ſpiritual court, but his mother may, becauſe in this caſe it is no ſpiritual defamation to the ſon, but it is to the mother. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 112.

A prohibition was moved for to the ſpiritual court for the following words, viz. That the ſaid Price "behaved himſelf proudly and inſolently, and that he "was an impudent, ignorant blockhead:" and that he alſo ſaid and declared, "that the advice and ex"hortations, and other ſpiritual directions of him the

" ſaid Price, from the pulpit, were not fit to be taken, " and that he was not fit to give the ſacrament." And that he the ſaid Clerk, ſpeaking to a third perſon, ſaid, " you would not receive the ſacrament from ſuch a " puppy as the ſaid Price was, was you to live ever " ſo long in this pariſh." On which a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained. On ſhewing cauſe the council urged, that theſe were not words of heat, but of deliberation, and highly touched him in his function; and cited the caſe of Crandon v. Walden, 3 Lev. 17.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that though theſe words did reflect on him in his profeſſion, yet ſeeing they do not charge him with any thing for which he is obnoxious to the ſpiritual court, therefore a prohibition was granted; and it was ordered to come before this court by declaration and demurrer. *Vide Mod. The ſpiritual court had proceeded againſt the defendant for theſe words ſpoken againſt the wife, viz. " You are a bawd."

On a motion for a prohibition, the defendant's council ſuggeſted that theſe words were ſpoken at Weſtminſter, and that the city of Weſtminſter is an ancient city, and that there is an ancient cuſtom within the ſaid city, that whores ſhould be puniſhed by impriſonment; on which a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

Per curiam. As to the cuſtom in Weſtminſter, it was obſerved, that this was only matter of ſuggeſtion in this court, without any affidavit to ſupport it, and never laid before the court by plea; beſides, there was nothing more pretended in the cuſtom than what was generally held all over England, viz. that ſuch ſort of perſons are generally ſent to the houſe of correction: therefore the rule was diſcharged. *Vide Mod. Eaſter, 4 Geo. Drake v. Taylor.

The vicar libelled in the ſpiritual court for tithes of turnips, and laid his title to them by preſcription and endowment.

The defendant pleaded that there was a rectory impropriate, and that time out of mind the rector has taken tithes of turnips. And laſt term the court was moved for a prohibition for defect of trial, and a rule was granted niſi, &c.

And now it was ſhewn for cauſe againſt the prohibition, that turnips are a late improvement in Norfolk, (where the matter aroſe,) 9 Roll. Abr. 310. And it was urged, that where the matter is originally of eccleſiaſtical conuſance, unconnected with a temporal matter, no prohibition lies. That the vicar was, at firſt ſight, entitled to nothing, unleſs he ſhews a right either by preſcription or endowment. Theſe endowments are of an eccleſiaſtical nature, and ſo is the extent of them.

On the other ſide it was urged, that both parties were not eccleſiaſtics, the libel being againſt a pariſhioner, and that it laid a cuſtom which is denied, and muſt be tried, and that cuſtoms had always been a ground for a prohibition.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice. Though both parties are not eccleſiaſtics, yet the thing in controverſy belongs either to one eccleſiaſtic or another; for either the rector is entitled to the tithes, or the vicar, and what matter is it to the pariſhioner who has them? for he can only pay them to one. This is properly a diſpute which belongs to the vicar on the endowment, and that evidence which will entitle him to a ſentence below, will not enable him to recover here. Therefore I am againſt a prohibition. To which Powys and Eyre, Juſtices, agreed, and the prohibition was denied. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 87.

On a libel in the ſpiritual court by the Archdeacon for procurations; the defendant, who was curate, ſuggeſted that they had never been paid, and that the church for which they were demanded was a rectory impropriate, without a vicarage endowed. And having obtained a rule to ſhew cauſe why a prohibition ſhould not go, the Archdeacon's council produced an affidavit that 6 s. 8 d. had been conſtantly paid every year, and cited Davis 6.

Per curiam. This is a mere eccleſiaſtical right, the ſuit is properly inſtituted before the Ordinary. It was never known that an action was brought for theſe procurations, nor in the caſe of tithes are there any inſtances before ſtat. Ed. 6.

In this caſe the demand is ſpiritual, and ſo are the perſons, who are bound by the canon law; which being the rule of theſe payments, we are of opinion the ſuit below is well inſtituted, and therefore there ought to be no prohibition. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 421.

Michaelmas, 7 Geo. Owen v. Hughes.

The court was moved to ſet aſide a rule for a prohibition to the ſpiritual court; the libel was for removing of the reading-deſk out of the ancient and uſual place, and the judge of the court was the perſon that read prayers, and the defendant not appearing, ſentence was againſt him by the court.

Per curiam. There can be no prohibition after ſentence, though it be not on the merits, for you might have appealed, and if he be judge in his own caſe, and appear ſo, yet in the law that is not allowed, ſo there might be an appeal to a ſuperior court, and they might give relief, and not like the caſe of an inferior court, where we are to judge; and the court ſaid there is no difference between ſentence by default and ſentence after a hearing; and therefore diſcharged the rule for a prohibition. Vide Forteſcue, p. 199.

In a prohibition, the caſe was, Dr. Cockman and Dr. Denniſon were candidates for the maſterſhip of the Univerſity College in Oxford; the firſt was declared maſter, but Dr. Denniſon and the diſſenting fellows, appealed to Dr. Shippon, the Vice-Chancellor, and others, as viſitors; and thereon it was ſuggeſted by Dr. Cockman in prohibition, that this college was founded by Alfred, anno 872. as by ſeveral inſcriptions in the ſaid college it does appear, and that the members thereof always commemorate that King in preaching, and other public acts; and that the Kings of England were always viſitors of that college, and that no other perſon had any viſitorial power there.

This cauſe was referred to the Attorney and Solicitor General, who were to report who was the founder of the college; and they reporting that it was too difficult for them to determine after ſo long a time who was the founder; and of greater difficulty to determine whether the Vice-Chancellor was viſitor; a rule was made, that the defendant ſhould ſhew cauſe why a prohibition ſhould not iſſue. *Vide Mod. Trinity, 11 Geo. Vaughan v. Evans.

The defendant brought a bill of foreclosure in the court of grand-ſeſſions for the county of Montgomery, againſt the plaintiff and others, to forecloſe the plaintiff of his equity of redemption, on a mortgage of lands that lay in that county. And laſt term a motion was made for a prohibition, on a ſuggeſtion that the plaintiff did not inhabit in the county, but lived in England, and that the defendant had ſued out proceſs, in order to get a ſequeſtration of the plaintiff's lands that lay in Montgomeryſhire. And after hearing council againſt the prohibition, the court made the rule for the prohibition abſolute, becauſe the ſuit is in nature of a ſuit in Chancery, and the proceſs is perſonal to ſummon the party, which cannot be ſerved in this caſe, the plaintiff living in England, out of the juriſdiction of the court of grand ſeſſions; and if he could not be ſerved with the proceſs, he could not be guilty of a contempt in not appearing on it, and then by conſequence no ſequeſtration ought to go againſt his lands, though they lay in that county. And this is the ſame caſe in effect as that in Comberb. 468. Trantor v. Duggan, in Lord Chief Juſtice Holt's time. And though it was objected that the court of Chancery of England had their proceſs ſerved beyond ſea, and brought parties into contempt, and this of the grand ſeſſions was an original juriſdiction; the court ſaid, this was not to be compared to the Chancery, (if they did proceed ſo) becauſe this juriſdiction, though it was an original one, yet it was a limited one, and confined to that county. Therefore the rule for the prohibition was made abſolute. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1408.

Pratt, C. J. There are two things in prohibition, 1ſt, Contempt of the crown and diſheriſon of it, in taking on them judicial powers where they have no right; 2d, It is a damage to the party, and a ſuit for this muſt be brought before a temporal court, and the party prays a prohibition; and whether the defendant proceeded, or not, after the prohibition, an attachment goes to bring him into court; if he has proceeded after the writ is delivered, that is a contempt; but ſtill it is a matter examinable, whether the court have or have not, a juriſdiction; if they have not, the court will finally prohibit, and give ſatisfaction to the party; the party is not to have damages if they have juriſdiction, but if they have none, they have acted againſt the prohibition of law, and done the party wrong. Vide Forteſcue, p. 345.

The court was moved for a prohibition to a ſuit in the conſiſtory court of Hereford, upon this ſuggeſtion, that the vicar of D. having libelled there for offerings, the defendant there pleaded payment of thoſe offerings; but now he ſuggeſts, that he had but one witneſs to prove the payment, and that according to law, and the uſage of the ſpiritual court, they pay no regard to the teſtimony of a ſingle witneſs in a matter of this nature.

Per curiam. You do not ſuggeſt that you offered to prove payment of thoſe offerings by one witneſs, and that they rejected ſuch proof? Now we are not bound to take notice, that by their law they will reject a ſingle witneſs, nor are you injured till they have actually done ſo. At this rate we ſhould deprive them of all juriſdiction; for poſſibly they may receive the evidence of your ſole witneſs, and give judgment againſt his teſtimoney on the credibility of the man; according to the caſe of Shorter v. Friend, 1 Show. 158. 172. The council on the other ſide ſaid, the ſpiritual court did right; for the plea is repugnant, the firſt part importing a diſcharge, of tithes, and the next part a compoſition for tithes; and ſo it muſt be intended they rejected the plea as informal, and not relevant; but not for the matter of it, if it had been well pleaded; and if ſo, they are not to be prohibited, for the temporal courts will not controul them in their forms of proceeding.

The court was moved for a prohibition to ſtay a ſuit in the conſiſtory court of London for tithes; the libel was for tithes due from the occupier of the land, and the ſuggeſtion here on the roll was, that this land belonged to the Abbot of Weſtminſter, and was held tythe-free, and came into the hands of the Crown, of whom the plaintiff held it as tenant at will: he admitted that he had not pleaded this matter below, but prayed a prohibition, becauſe the plea could not be tried there, and becauſe a traverſe that ſuch a plea was refuſed would be a bad traverſe, as was held in the Biſhop of Weſtminſter's caſe, 2 Co. 250. a. and therefore, it was urged, there was no occaſion to plead it below.

The rule of granting prohibitions before and after ſentence is this, that before ſentence you may have a prohibition on ſuggeſting a matter of fact, not appearing on the face of the proceedings below, but after ſentence you cannot overturn the proceedings by a bare averment of the fact; yet, if there be a want of juriſdiction appearing on the face of the libel, or any part of their proceedings, that is ſufficient ground for a prohibition after ſentence, whether the cauſe be in the eccleſiaſtical court or in the Admiralty court. *Vide Caſes Temp. On ſhewing cauſe againſt a prohibition, the court made the rule abſolute, with a direction that the plaintiff ſhould declare in prohibition: he tendered a declaration, but the defendant refuſed it, and applied to ſtay proceedings, as being willing to ſubmit. The other inſiſted he had a right to go on, and ſo obtain the coſts of the motion, which he could not otherwiſe have. But the court ſtayed the proceedings without coſts, ſaying the direction to declare was in favour of the defendant, who might waive it. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1149.

Hilary, 30 Geo. 2. The Maſter and Senior Fellows of John's College, Cambridge, v. Todington, Clerk.

A prohibition was moved for by the college, to be directed to the Biſhop of Ely, to prohibit him from proceeding on a monition iſſued by him againſt them, on Mr. T.'s application and appeal to him, as viſitor of the college; and the college had thereupon obtained a rule to ſhew cauſe why a prohibition ſhould not go; which rule to ſhew cauſe was made on a ſuggeſtion, "that the Biſhop was not viſitor of the college, as to "elections into fellowſhips and other offices;" and alſo, that "admitting him to be ſo, yet the preſent "matter (which related to a Southwell fellowſhip) "was not within his juriſdiction:" on which a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

Lord Mansfield. If the party who applies for a prohibition has a right to declare, though the court ſhould ſee no ground for the motion, a rule "to ſhew cauſe "why the prohibition ſhould not be granted," is to no purpoſe; and hearing council on the ſufficiency of that cauſe, is time miſpent.

When the matter ſeems doubtful to the court, on a queſtion of fact, or law, the plaintiff has leave to declare; that the parties may have the fact properly tried by a jury, or the law ſolemnly conſidered, as in a cauſe.

When the court is clearly of opinion that there is ſufficient ground for the prohibition, the defendant has a right to put the plaintiff to declare, that his juriſdiction may not be taken from him, in a ſummary way, where no writ of error will lie; but if the court be clearly of opinion that there is no ground for a prohibition, it ought to be denied, without putting the defendant to expence, and delaying, in the mean time, the exerciſe of what appears to them a lawful juriſdiction.

This denial is not concluſive to the plaintiff. If there is no juriſdiction, the ſentence will be a nullity; and on any attempt to execute or enforce it, the whole may be tried in an action. The plaintiff may alſo apply to any other court in Weſtminſter Hall for a prohibition, and take their opinion: therefore, in this caſe, the court diſcharged tbe rule for a prohibition. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 158.

Trinity, 30 & 31 Geo. 2. Tarrant v. Haxby.

On a motion for a prohibition to the conſiſtory court of York, to ſtay their proceedings againſt Tarrant, the preſent pariſh clerk of St. Oſith in York; which proceedings were there inſtituted at the inſtance of Haxby, the deprived pariſh clerk, for the reſtoration of the ſaid Haxby.

It was ſuggeſted that the ſaid Haxby was deprived by the parſon, and the whole pariſh, for druukenneſs during divine ſervice, and other miſdemeanors, whereon the parſon appointed Tarrant in his room, againſt whom Haxby libelled in the conſiſtory court of York, where there was a monition, and they were proceeding to reſtore the ſaid Haxby, on which a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

On coming to ſhew cauſe, the council againſt the prohibition gave the matter up, on which the court made the rule abſolute for a prohibition. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 368.

Michaelmas, 31 Geo. 2. Jenkins v. Whitehouſe and another.

Lord Mansfield. If the queſtion be, "whether the "wife had a power to make an appointment in the "nature of a will, and thereby to deprive the huſband "of any benefit which by law would devolve on him "in conſequence of her death?" that is a queſtion proper to be conſidered in this court; and if ſhe had no ſuch power, this court will grant a prohibition.

It ſeems right therefore to grant a rule "to ſhew "cauſe why there ſhould not be a prohibition;" and then the caſe will be better underſtood under all its circumſtances: on which the court granted a rule to ſhew cauſe, but the matter never came on again. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 431.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt a prohibition to ſtop the Prerogative Court of York from proceeding to grant a faculty for an organ in the church of Halifax.

Lord Mansfield ſaid, the ground on which the court went in this matter was, that a prohibition will not be material. Therefore the rule to ſhew cauſe was ordered to be diſcharged. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1689.

Eaſter, 6 Geo. 3. Chave v. Peter Calmel, Eſq.

On ſhewing cauſe againſt a prohibition to the eccleſiaſtical court of the Biſhop of Exeter to ſtay their proceeding in a cauſe inſtituted there for ſubduction of tithes, a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

The caſe was; P. Calmel, the impropriator, had employed one Finnimore as his agent, to collect and compound for tithes. The plaintiff in prohibition (Chave, the occupier) had agreed with Finnimore after the corn was cut and ready to be houſed, for 5 l. whereon he houſed his whole crop, without ſetting out the tithes. Chave's agreement with Finnimore was only by parol. The impropriator libelled in the eccleſiaſtical court againſt Chave for not ſetting out his tithes. The defendant below (Chave, the occupier) tendered the 5 l. and offered a plea, "that he had purchaſed the "tithes for 5 l." The eccleſiaſtical court rejected this plea.

The only queſtion was, "whether this was matter "of appeal or of prohibition."

The court were unanimous in the latter opinion, and they founded it on this rejection of the plea being an irreparable damage; and on an apprehenſion "that "the eccleſiaſtical court muſt have grounded their re-"jection on a ſuppoſed difference between their law "and ours;" that is to ſay, they took it for granted, that the eccleſiaſtical court were of opinion, agreeable to what is laid down by their favourite writer Dr. Gibſon, (who takes it from Noy 19. Spencer's caſe) "that an "agreement with the agent of a propriator will not "bind the proprietor;" whereas by our law, and in common ſenſe and common juſtice, a compoſition by the occupier with the agent of the proprietor does bind, and ought to bind, his principal. Therefore the rule for a prohibition was made abſolute. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1873.

Trinity, 6 Geo. 3. Catchſide, Widow and Adminiſtratrix, &c. v. Ovington.

On a motion for a prohibition to an eccleſiaſtical court, on behalf of Mrs. Catchſide, the adminiſtratrix, a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

The caſe was; Mrs. Catchſide, the widow and adminiſtratrix, was cited into an inferior eccleſiaſtical court, at the promotion of Ann Ovington, a creditor, "to exhibit an inventory." She brought one in, and the creditor objected to it. There was a decree for the creditor. The adminiſtratrix appealed to the ſuperior eccleſiaſtical court, who affirmed the decree of the inferior eccleſiaſtical court. The ſuggeſtion was, their want of juriſdiction.

The council, on ſhewing cauſe, objected, that the party now came too late, for that it was after ſentence; and therefore they could not be relieved here, unleſs they could ſhew that the ſpiritual court have determined contrary to law.

Lord Mansfield. It appears on the face of the proceedings, "that the ſpiritual court have no juriſdiction," therefore the rule muſt be made abſolute: which was ordered accordingly. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1922.

Hilary, 8 W. 3. Crockmere v. Wickins.

In an action brought in this court, the defendant pleaded another action depending between them in the ſame court, and for the ſame cauſe; the plaintiff replied nul tiel record, &c. Adjudged, that in this caſe the defendant may pray oyer of the record, and the court may order that it may be inſpected, and on ſuch oyer craved, an entry ſhall be made for the court to examine the record, and judgment ſhall be given on failure of the record; the defendant may likewiſe plead nul tiel record, and then alſo the entry and proceedings ſhall be as before mentioned; but he cannot rejoin, neither can he demur, for the record is perfect, and the pleading is at an end, and therefore a demurrer in this caſe was on a motion ruled to be irregular, and ſet aſide.

But if the action had been pleaded as depending in another court for the ſame cauſe, and the plaintiff replied nul tiel record, the defendant muſt have rejoined quod habetur aliquod tale recordum. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 295.

But if a man pleads a recovery by judgment in bar of an action, and the ſaid judgment is reverſed after the pleading of the plea, then the plea is ill, becauſe then it is no ſuch record from the beginning. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 274.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Moor v. The Bail of Garrett.

On ſcire facias againſt Bail, who pleaded, that there was no capias againſt the principal; the plaintiff replied, and ſet out a capias, as appears by the record. The defendant replied nul tiel record. The plaintiff ſurrejoined that there was ſuch a record, and prayed a day to bring it in, whereupon the defendant demurred.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. This way of pleading is out of the common courſe. There are two ways of pleading of a record, either by craving oyer of the record, and if it is not given, it is a failure; or he may plead nul tiel record, and then a day is given to bring it in; but this ſurrejoinder is a third way, and a new one; but it was adjudged well enough, and the plaintiff had judgment. *Vide Mod. Trinity, 1 Ann. The Queen v. Maſon.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. When a man is put out of poſſeſſion by virtue of an inquiſition returned for the Queen, and another comes and pleads his right, that is a diſtinct record from the inquiſition; and ſo if another comes and pleads his right, that is another diſtinct record; and if there be a demurrer to all, then it is determined there, or may be ſent into this court to be argued and determined; but if iſſue be joined in it, then the way is to award a ven. fac. out of Chancery, returnable at a day certain in this court; and the record is delivered hither by the hand of the Chancellor, &c. to be here at the day of the return of the ven. fac. but the inquiſition is never ſent hither; but the party comes in Chancery, and complains of his being aggrieved by the inquiſition, and prays he may be admitted to ſhew his right, and plead againſt the inquiſition, and that is a ſhewing of his right; and all the operation of the inquiſition is to make a title for the King, and the party comes in as plaintiff, and either traverſes it, or ſhews his right conſiſtent with it: and if he will traverſe it, he muſt ſhew title in himſelf. The caſe of Jefferſon v. Dawſon was part on demurrer, and part on iſſue; and if there be a miſpleader, and a repleader awarded, that muſt be in this court, where there is iſſue and demurrer, and if the party will not proceed on the demurrer, the court will give judgment on the demurrer; and though ſome books have a ſaying, that a record may be ſent out of Chancery hither, even on demurrer, I would fain ſee where it has been done. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 32.

Trinity, 2 Ann. Turner v. Barnaby.

In ejectment, the defendant being called to confeſs leaſe, entry, and ouſter, made default, and that default was recorded. Afterwards the plaintiff would have waived it, ſuppoſing the record of it to be in the breaſt of the court during the term.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. There is a diſtinction between an act of the court done on record, for that is in the breaſt of the court, and may be altered by them during the term, and an act of the party recorded by the court, as a nonſuit or default; for that a thing once recorded cannot be altered by the court; for that would be a means of introducing falſity in matter of fact into records. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 567.

Trinity, 2 Ann. Hambleton v. Lancaſhire.

A ſcire facias was brought againſt the bail in this court, on a recognizance, the defendant pleaded in abatement another ſcire facias depending in this court, and on the ſame judgment: the plaintiff replied nul tiel record, &c. the defendant making default at the day, judgment was given for the plaintiff: and now the defendant's council moved to reverſe the judgment, for that this procedure of the plaintiff's was irregular, and that he ought to have ſtaid for a rejoinder; and he argued, that this was contrary to all the precedents. But the plaintiff's council in reply urged, that the judgment was well given; and to prove it, cited Dyer 228. and Buck's caſe in this court, which he ſaid was a caſe in point.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Where the record pleaded is in the ſame court in which the action is brought, there nul tiel record is not ſo proper as to crave oyer of the record, and that not at a day to come, but inſtantly; but if the plaintiff replies nul tiel record, it is a traverſe of the defendant's plea, and then for the plaintiff to enter the proceeding on record, is the proper courſe, and more to the defendant's advantage than craving oyer, becauſe he has a day given him to bring in the record, and there can be no trial in this caſe, as where the record is in another court, and for that reaſon it is improper to rejoin quod habetur aliquod tale recordum, as it ought, where the record is in another court; for in ſuch caſe this court awards a certiorari to that court, and the iſſue is tried by their certificate, but we cannot award a certiorari to ourſelves; for it would be abſurd to certify ourſelves. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 295.

That after having recited ſeveral records, they did not conclude as appears by the record.

Powell, Juſtice. There is no need of ſaying as appears by the record, where it is only an indictment, as in this caſe, and not the principal point and giſt of the caſe: this is only to ſhew the court what ſort of neglecting his duty it was, and on what the neglect was founded; and where it is, the point of the caſe, nul tiel record might be pleaded, which here could not, becauſe it was his duty to return the juſtice's warrant, though they had made no legal record. Vide Forteſcue, p. 127.

Michaelmas, 6 Ann. Etherington v. Reynolds.

An indebitatus aſſumpſit, and inſimul computaſſet was brought againſt the defendant. She pleaded in abatement, that ſhe was a feme covert; the plaintiff replies, that he entered a plaint againſt her when ſole, in the Palace Court, which ſhe removed into this court by habeas corpus cum cauſa, and put in bail as a feme ſole, and the plaintiff delivered her a declaration agreeable to the plaint below; to which replication the defendant demurred.

The council for the defendant ſaid, that ſhe having removed herſelf up by a habeas corpus, and having put in bail to anſwer a declaration here, nothing of the proceeding below is removed, as in caſe of a certiorari or recordari in Surs v. Turner's caſe, Hilary 3 Ann; and the plaintiff ought to have declared againſt her, as ſhe was at the time of the declaration delivered, and not as a feme ſole, according to the plaint below.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If an indebitatus aſſumpſit be brought in an inferior court, and the defendant removes it up by hab. corp. and to the declaration above pleads non aſſumpſit infra ſex annos, the plaintiff may reply that a plaint was delivered in an inferior court within ſix years; but to this the plaintiff cannot reply that the defendant was ſole when the plaint was levied below.

The court was inclined to give judgment for the defendant, but as an indulgence on account of the equity of the cauſe, it was adjourned. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 142.

Hilary, 8 W. 3. Hallet v. Birt.

In an action of treſpaſs for taking, &c. The defendant juſtified that the place where, &c. was an hundred, and time out of mind had a conuſance of all actions, replevins, &c. grantable in or out of court, and that a replevin was granted to him by the bailiff out of court, by virtue, &c. It was queſtioned, whether a hundred court could preſcribe to hold plea of replevins, becauſe the county-court could not hold plea of them at common law, but were enabled by the ſtatute, which extends not to the hundred court?

Per curiam. Suppoſing they may grant them in court, yet they cannot preſcribe to grant them out of court. Vide Salk. 2. p. 58. Raym. vol. 1. 218.

Hilary, 9 W. 3. Morris v. Gelder, &c.

In a ſuit in replevin, the defendant avowed for rent-arrear, and ſo many hens for quit rent. A verdict was given for the avowant for the rent, and damages for the hens. And now the court was moved in arreſt of judgment, that it appeared on their own avowry that they had avowed for more hens than were due, and for this reaſon, as was urged, the avowry was ill.

On the other ſide it was moved for the avowants, that on releaſing the damages for the hens, they might have leave to enter judgment for the rent and coſts; and the caſe of Buis v. Newton, Trinity 28 Car. 2. Roll. 728. was cited.

And accordingly, the court gave leave to the avowant to enter his judgment as he deſired, niſi, &c. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 317.

Eaſter, 9 W. 3. Parker v. Meller.

In replevin, if the defendant has the poſſeſſion, it is a good bar againſt the plaintiff if he has no title, but he cannot give a return, unleſs he ſhew a property in the goods; and it is ſufficient if they were delivered to him, for otherwiſe the judgment muſt be, that the plaintiff take nothing by the bill, but no return. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 54. Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 122.

Hilary, 10 W. 3. Ward v. Everard, or Everets.

In a ſuit in replevin, the defendant made cognizance as bailiff to A. and B. and ſhewed that Sir R. C. was ſeiſed in fee of the place where, &c. and granted one annuity or yearly rent of 100 l. to A. B. C. D. and E. to be equally divided between them, to have and to receive to them and their reſpective aſſigns, 20 l. to each during their lives, and the life of the longeſt liver of them; and that if any one died, his ſhare ſhould be equally divided among the ſurvivors, and that A. and B. are the ſurvivors. The plaintiff pleaded in bar an act of parliament to make void all conveyances made by Sir R. C. before ſuch a time: and iſſue being joined, whether this grant was made before ſuch a time, viz. April 1630, was tried at bar, and found for the avowant; and it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that tenants in common could not joint in avowry, but muſt avow ſeverally. Litt. ſect. 317. And that the grantees were tenants in common, and not joint-tenants. The caſes cited on both ſides were, 2 Ro. Abr. 90. Sty. 211. 2 Cro. 656. 1 Inſt. 180. Dy. 351. 3 Cro. 25. 1 Saund. 282. 5 Co. 55.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The words, equally to be divided, cannot make a tenancy in common in a deed, though they may in a will; and the words, to have and receive 20 l. a-piece, are an explanation how the money on receipt is to be diſtributed, viz. ſo much to one, and ſo much to another; but do not ſever the grant nor the rent; for it is not ſeveral rents nor ſeveral grants, but one rent and one grant undivided. If they were tenants in common, then each of them muſt avow for the fifth part of 100 l. and not for 100 l. If one coparcener grants a rent of 10 l. for equality of partition to the other two, viz. 10 l. to one, and 10 l. to the other, they have but one rent, and the viz. is but explanatory. 1 Inſt. 169. b. which caſe is not to be diſtinguiſhed. If a man grants two acres to A. and B. to hold one acre to one, and the other acre to the other, the habendum is void and repugnant. Hob 172. And ſo here, where the grantor has granted one rent, it is repugnant to the very words of the grant to make it ſeveral grants of ſeveral rents. Therefore judgment was given for the avowant. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 360. 390. Raym. vol. 1. p. 422.

Eaſter, 10 W. 3. Challoner v. Clayton.

On a ſuit in replevin, the defendant avowed for rent, ſetting forth, that he was poſſeſſed of a houſe for ſeveral years yet to come, and being ſo poſſeſſed, he demiſed it to the plaintiff for one year, rendering rent, &c. The plaintiff replied, that the defendant had nothing in the tenements; the defendant rejoined that he had all, &c. and on demurrer to this rejoinder the court was moved to amend it, for that he could not make good his avowry, there being no title ſet forth: it is true, in an action of debt for rent reſerved on a leaſe, the defendant may plead he had nothing in the tenements, and the plaintiff in his replication may ſhew title, becauſe that, together with a demiſe, is a ſufficient allegation in a declaration; but in an avowry a title ſhould be ſhewn, and therefore it is not proper in a rejoinder. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 306. Mod Rep. vol. 12. p. 188.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Blake v. Weſt and French.

In a ſuit in replevin for three cows, the caption was laid in a place called Downfield. The defendant avowed, that the place where, &c. contained two acres called Marſh acre in Downfield, and two acres called Shetfield in Downfield, and that he was ſeiſed of them in fee, and took two cows, viz. one in Marſh-acre, and the other in Shetfield. And iſſue being joined thereon, a verdict was given for the avowant.

The court was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the iſſue was immaterial, becauſe the plaintiff had traverſed the taking in two places, which was, as was urged, a plea of priſel en auter lieu, but had not taken any notice of the damage feaſant; ſo that though the verdict is for the avowant, yet he had no title to have a turn, becauſe the damage feaſant was not found, &c. but not allowed.

Per curiam. It is admitted by the iſſue of the taking, viz. if they were taken there, that they were taken there damage feaſant. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 504.

In a ſuit in replevin for taking a horſe, the defendant avowed, that he was poſſeſſed of the cloſe, being the place where, &c. for a term of years yet to come, and being ſo poſſeſſed, the horſe was damage feaſant there, &c. the plaintiff replied, that the defendant was to keep up his fences round the ſaid cloſe, but that the ſame being down, and out of repair, the horſe eſcaped into the cloſe for want of good fences: on which they were at iſſue; and at the trial the plaintiff was nonſuited. And now it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that this avowry was ill, becauſe in all avowries for damage feaſant, the avowant muſt ſhew where the fee is, and how the particular eſtate is derived.

To which the court agreed, ſaying, on there being a demurrer to ſuch an avowry; but becauſe the plaintiff by his replication had waived that matter, and confeſſed and admitted a poſſeſſion in the avowant, that is ſufficient to juſtify a diſtreſs damage feaſant, and has cured this defect in the avowry. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 307.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. Anonymous.

A ſuit in replevin by plaint in an inferior court was removed hither by certiorari; and on the removal the plaintiff changed his declaration.

Per curiam. That cannot be, for whatever is below ought to be now here. And if one remove a replevin by recordari hither, and declares for leſs than he took, the defendant muſt avow for them, and alſo for what he has not declared on; and if he has a return, he ſhall have it for all. And if one replevies part of the goods taken, the other ſhall avow for them and the reſt alſo, and have a return, if his avowry go for him for all; and this certiorari removes the pledges below, ſo as a ſcire facias may go againſt them. And the entry here above, in this caſe of removal of a replevin by the plaintiff, ought not to be was ſummoned, as upon an original, but as of a cauſe removed. *Vide Mod. Eaſter, 3 Ann. Gilbert v. Parker and others.

In replevin for taking the plaintiff's cattle in ſuch a place. The defendant makes conuſance as ſervant to G. P. who was ſeiſed of the place where, &c. in fee, and juſtifies the taking damage feaſant. The plaintiff, in bar of the conuſance, alledges that he himſelf was ſeiſed in fee of a third part of a moiety of a fifth part of the place where, &c. and juſtifies putting in his cattle; without this, that the defendant's maſter was ſole ſeiſed thereof. To which there is a demurrer, of which the council aſſigned for reaſon, 1ſt. That the ſole ſeiſin here is not alledged, and therefore not traverſeable.

2dly. This plea confeſſes and avoids our title, and for that alſo it is not traverſable.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. You ſet out a ſeiſin in fee, and nothing more need be traverſed. And here he might have ſaid that J. S. was ſeiſed, and derive title under him, abſque hoc, that you were ſeiſed; or that he was tenant in common with you, abſque hoc, that you were ſeiſed in manner and form, and it had been well. 3 Cro. 795. Winch. 7. 2 Mod. 6. And if here he had replied, that J. S. was ſeiſed in fee, and make title under him, abſque hoc, that the defendant was ſeiſed in manner and form, and on iſſue the defendant was found ſeiſed of a moiety only, it would be againſt him, for he avowed as one ſole ſeiſed, when it ſhould be as tenant in common, there may be between coparceners, joint-tenants, and tenants in common, for the two firſt are ſeiſed per my and per tout, but the laſt have ſeveral ſeiſins; and here to introduce his traverſe, he muſt make himſelf ſome title, to enable him to controvert with the defendant. And there is no difference between avowry and juſtification, as was urged; for in both, if the party ſet forth a falſity, he is bound to maintain it. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff, niſi, &c. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 158.

Eaſter, 3 Ann. Leonard v. Stacy.

On an action of treſpaſs for entering the plaintiff's houſe, and taking away his goods; the defendant juſtified by virtue of a replevin out of the ſheriff's court of London, and a precept thereon to J. S. an officer, and the defendant came in aid of him.

The plaintiff replied, that before the taking away the goods he claimed a property in them, and gave notice thereof to the defendant; and the queſtion on the ſpecial verdict was, whether the taking after the claim of property, and notice thereof, did not make him a treſpaſſer from the beginning.

The court held, that he was a treſpaſſer from the beginning; for though the claimer ought to be the ſheriff, or officer, and that a claimer to a perſon that comes to give aſſiſtance be not enough to the making the execution illegal, if the officer does not deſiſt; yet if it be notified that he comes to aid that claim before the property is made, he at his peril ought to deſiſt. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 139.

Trinity, 3 Ann. Elmore v. Tucker.

In replevin, the defendant made conuſance as bailiff to J. S. for rent on a demiſe by the ſaid J. S. of the place where, &c. and pleaded in bar, &c. that J. S. whoſe fee it was, time out of mind uſed and ought to repair and maintain the fences between the place where, &c. and the plaintiff's land next adjoining, and through want of repair, the plaintiff's cattle eſcaped into the place where, &c. and were diſtrained for damage feaſant, and on demurrer, the council for the demurrer relied on 2 Saund. Pool v. Longville, as a caſe in point.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. I think it is hard to maintain that judgment, that when the plaintiff's inheritance is charged with the repairs, he ſhould take advantage of his own wrong in not repairing, by making the eſcaping cattle a diſtreſs for damage feaſant; and it is not like the caſe of lord and tenant there quoted, for the lord has nothing to do with the land, but the charge of repairs belongs to the tenants. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 189.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Anonymous.

In a ſuit in replevin the avowant ſaid, that he was poſſeſſed for years, and made an under-leaſe reſerving rent, &c. which rent being in arrear, he diſtrained. The plaintiff was nonſuited, and a return irrepleviſable awarded; and on the return of the writ of inquiry, the exception taken was, that the avowry was naught, for that the avowant pleaded a particular eſtate, without ſhewing who had the fee, and the commencement of the particular eſtate.

Adjudged, That though it was bad, yet being after a nonſuit, it was too late; for the interlocutary judgment is ſuch on which a writ of error lies, as in a judgment on a writ of dower. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 223.

In a ſuit in replevin in London, the defendant appeared on a writ of elongata; the plaintiff declared for taking guns in a certain place called the Minories in London; the defendant pleaded he did not take in manner and form, &c. At the trial the plaintiff proved the taking at Rotherhithe in Surrey; on which it was objected, that the plaintiff had not proved his iſſue, for that the place was material, and therefore part of the iſſue under the manner and form, &c.

The council for the plaintiff admitted, that it was traverſable; but inſiſted, that by not traverſing it particularly, the place was admitted, and could not be inſiſted on, on the plea of non cepit.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice, held, that where the plaintiff avows at a different place, in order to have a return, he muſt traverſe the place in the court, becauſe his avowry is inconſiſtent with it; but where he does not inſiſt on a return, he may plead he did not take, &c. and prove the taking to be at another place, for it is material. And on demurrer it was held to be an ill avowry, becauſe it was not averred that the defendant was guilty. And a diſtinction was taken between replevin and treſpaſs; that in treſpaſs the conviction is ſufficient to juſtify the officer, who is only to excuſe himſelf; whereas in replevin, the defendant is an actor, and makes title for a return of the goods. Carth. 73. Mo. 75. *Cro. For theſe reaſons the avowry was held ill, and the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 847.

Replevin Bonds.

Theſe bonds, called replevin bonds, are given to ſecure pledges of both ſorts, viz. pledges to make a return, and pledges to proſecute, and theſe bonds are now in lieu of pledges: here was a debt on a replevin bond brought by the ſheriff, and the condition was to appear at the next county court, and there to proſecute the action with effect, and to make a return of the goods and cattle, if a return ſhould be adjudged by law, and to indemnify the ſheriff for granting the replevin, and delivering the cattle.

The defendant pleaded, that the party did appear at the next county court, and proſecuted there, and no return was adjudged.

The plaintiff replied, that there was a recordari facias loqualem in this court, but the plaintiff did not proſecute but a return being adjudged, as the goods were not returned.

Per curiam. This plea is naught; for it is not enough to proſecute in the county court, but the party muſt follow it; and if a return be adjudged in any court, it is enough, for the condition is to go to the end of the cauſe. Nichols v. Newman, Eaſter, 3 Geo. 2. Carthew. 249. Chapman v. Butcher's caſe in point, but not mentioned in the caſe above; and it was held by the court to be a lawful bond, and ſuch is the uſual courſe now. Vide Forteſcue, p. 209.

An action of debt was brought in the C. B. on a replevin bond; the condition whereof was, to appear in the county court, and then and there to proſecute with effect; and breach aſſigned, that he did not proſecute with effect; the plaintiff replied, that the preſent defendant removed the cauſe by a recordari into the C. B. and was there nonſuited: the defendant demurred to the replication, and judgment was given for the plaintiff, and thereon a writ of error was brought into this court.

Page, Juſtice. I think the replication is well enough, for the bond is broken, for the plaintiff was thereby bound to proſecute that cauſe with effect, beſides, he was to indemnify the ſheriff, and the removal of the cauſe and nonſuit thereon is a damnification of the ſheriff, beſides, the words then and there relate to his appearing, and he is bound to proſecute with effect afterwards.

Lee, Juſtice. The then and there relates to ſo much of the proſecution as ſhould be in the county court, but does not reſtrain it. The judgment was affirmed. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. p. 137.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. In an action brought by an adminiſtrator, the defendant cannot bring money into court, becauſe the adminiſtrator is not by law to pay coſts; and Eaſter, 5 Ann. in this court, in Gregg's caſe, an action was brought by an executor for money due to his teſtator for law-buſineſs done by him, it was moved to bring ſo much money into court, but denied.

Covenant and breach for non-payment of rent, and not repairing, &c. it was moved to bring in ſo much for the rent; and as to the other breach, that the plaintiff might proceed as he thought fit.

Trevor, Juſtice. All the judges have agreed, (for he put the caſe to Holt, Chief Juſtice) that it is but reaſonable to allow it; that it does not differ from debt for rent; for though it be a covenant, yet it is a covenant for payment of a ſum certain. The ſame diſtinction was taken between covenant for a ſum certain, and choſe uncertain, by Holt, Chief Juſtice, Hilary, 9 W. 3. in this court, ſaying it did not differ from an indebitatus aſſumpſit; and Trinity, 12 W. 3. the ſame rule was made. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 596.

Michaelmas, 9 Ann. Elliot v. Callow.

The defendant brought money, viz. 10 l. into court, and had it ſtruck out of the declaration: afterwards the plaintiff ſuffered a nonſuit; and the queſtion was, whether he ſhould be allowed to take out this money?

Per curiam. He ſhall; for ſo much the defendant has admitted to be due, and ſo much he has actually paid him; and if the cauſe had gone on to trial, there muſt have been a verdict for the plaintiff as to ſo much; for this is admitted to be due, and paid down as the plaintiff's money; otherwiſe perhaps of money paid into court by way of tender. If a man pleads a tender & uncore priſt, and pays the money into court, and the plaintiff takes iſſue on the tender, and it is found againſt him, the defendant ſhall have the money. Sty. 388. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 597.

Michaelmas, 10 Ann. Harvey v. Wright.

There was this queſtion raiſed concerning underſtanding a rule of court: the rule was, "if a cauſe was "not proſecuted in four terms, neither party ſhould "revive proceſs without giving the other a term's notice." Now, whether notice at any time within the term, as e. g. the laſt day of the term, would ſatisfy the rule; or whether the rule does not require a whole term's notice?

The court, on time taken to conſult the reſt of the Judges, that all the courts might be uniform in this practice, delivered their opinion, that by a term's notice was meant, that a whole term ſhould intervene between notice and trial, ſo that either of the parties may have time and opportunity to apply to this court. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 40.

Eaſter, 4 Geo. Anonymous.

A writ was returnable on the 30th day of January, and the bail-bond aſſigned on the 4th day of February, between which and the 30th of January a Sunday intervened.

Per curiam. It is well aſſigned; for Sunday is to be reckoned as one of the four days, (there being no more allowed in actions laid in London or Middleſex.) And ſo it is in rules to plead, except the firſt and laſt day happen on a Sunday, with this difference, that if the rule be given on a Sunday it goes for nothing, but if it expires on a Sunday, the defendant has all the next day to plead in. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 86.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. Elwood v. Sir Godfrey Kneller.

On a reference to the maſter, he informed the court, that it was neceſſary one Mr. H. ſhould attend him: and on this the court was moved for a rule, which they were very tender of granting at all, but at laſt they made a rule that he ſhould ſhew cauſe why he ſhould not attend the maſter. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 477.

Trinity, 12 Geo. Braceby v. Dalton.

In an action on the caſe, the council moved on an affidavit, that the defendant did not know the plaintiff, that the attorney for the plaintiff might give an account who his client was, and where he lived. But the court refuſed it, ſaying, it had never been done but in a qui tam action. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 705.

Trinity, 9 Geo. 2. The King v. Badouin.

A rule was made for the defendant to ſhew cauſe why there ſhould not be an information againſt him. And on an affidavit of ſerving the wiſe at his houſe, the council moved to make it abſolute. It was urged, that perſonal ſervice was not neceſſary, and this was at firſt ſight a good ſervice. But the wiſe making affidavit that he was gone beyond ſea a week before the ſervice, the court held it not to be good, for leaving it at the houſe is only good on a ſuppoſition the party is there, whereas now the contrary appears. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1044.

Eaſter, 30 Geo. 2. The King v. Roger Philips, Mayor of Carmarthen.

Adjudged, That general rules are wiſely eſtabliſhed by courts, for obtaining juſtice with eaſe, certainty, and diſpatch; and the great end of them being, to do juſtice, the courts are bound to ſee that it be really attained. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 301.

Mishaelmas, 30 Geo. 2. A General Rule.

The court declared, that all enlarged rules to ſhew cauſe, which were made in the laſt term, ſhould be moved before the laſt week of the preſent term, unleſs leave for poſtponing them ſhould be particularly applied for, and granted: and this rule to prevail hereafter, in all future terms, in the ſame manner. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 9.

Scire Facias.

Trinity, 1 W. & M. Panton v. Hall.

A judgment in debt was recovered againſt A. and B. and a ſcire facias was awarded againſt the ter-tenants and the heirs of B. The ſheriff returned a ſcire feci as to the heir, and as to the reſt, returned ſeveral perſons in his baliwick warned. They appeared, and pleaded in abatement that no ſci. fac. had been awarded againſt A. The plaintiff replied, that he at ſuch a time ſued out a ſci. fac. againſt A. and ſet it forth. This replication was held naught on demurrer, for a ſci. fac. is a judicial writ, and muſt purſue the nature of the judgment; therefore, as the judgment is joint, ſo ought the ſci. fac. whereas here they are as ſeveral independent ſuits. 2 Roll. 276. 20 H. 7. 3 Cro. Car. 517.

2dly. The return is ill, for it ſhould not be that A. B. and C. are tenants of land in his bailiwick; but that A. B. and C. are tenants of all the lands in his bailiwick. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 598.

Eaſter, 3 W. & M. Dr. Needham's Caſe.

It was moved, that an execution on a ſcire facias on the goods of Dr. Needham might be ſet aſide, becauſe the writ was ſealed and delivered to the ſheriff after the defendant's death; and ſtat. 29 Car. 2. cap. 3. provides, that no writ of fieri facias, &c. ſhall bind the property of goods againſt whom ſuch writ is iſſued forth, but from the time that ſuch writ ſhall be delivered to the ſheriff; and ſo provides, that the writ ſhall not bind goods againſt the party, and not as in other caſes againſt the purchaſer only; and ſo the defendant's goods are not bound.

Per curiam. This clauſe is to be underſtood of the goods of a purchaſer, purchaſed by him before delivery of the writ; but as to the party, it ſhall bind as before from the teſte, as it was before the ſtatute. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 5.

Hilary, 6 W. & M. Tully's Caſe. Error.

Adjudged, That in error to reverſe a fine, though in ſtrictneſs of law a ſcire feci being returned againſt the conuſees, is ſufficient; yet for fear of purchaſors, and in favour of them, there ſhall be a ſcire facias againſt the ter-tenants. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 598.

Michaelmas, 6 W. & M. The King and Queen v. Armſtrong. Error.

A motion being made to reverſe an outlawry in treaſon, there being a writ of error brought, and the error aſſigned, viz. That it does not appear where the huſtings were held; for it is at a court of huſtings, &c. omitting the words for the city of London.

The court inclining to reverſe it for this error, one of the judges objected, that there ought to be a ſcire facias to the Lords, mediate and immediate, before the outlawry ſhould be reverſed.

To which it was anſwered, that it was not neceſſary in treaſon, becauſe the forfeitures do not belong to them, but to the King; whereon the outlawry was reverſed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 366.

Afterwards H. became a bankrupt, and the commiſſioners aſſigned the original judgment to the plaintiff, who now moved the court, that it might be entered to entitle him to the benefit of the judgment on the ſcire facias; which was ruled accordingly, without bringing a new ſcire facias. *Vide Mod. Per curiam. Two ſcire facias's ſhall not be taken out both together, for the future the ſecond ſhall not be taken out till the day of the return of the firſt.

In the C. B. they have but one ſci. fac. but then there muſt be fifteen days between the teſte and the return of the writ; and that returnable too on a common day, but each writ it returnable here in eight days on a day certain, ſo that leſs time is here neceſſary for both than in the *C. Eaſter, 9 W. 3. Guillam v. Hardiſty.

Per curiam. Where a ſcire facias is brought in this court on a judgment in an inferior court, it muſt appear in the writ itſelf, how the judgment came into this court, viz. whether by certiorari, or by writ of error, becauſe the execution is different; for if it came in by certiorari the ſci. fac. muſt ſet forth the limits of the inferior juriſdiction, and pray execution within thoſe particular limits, and alſo that the judgment came in by certiorari, but if it came in by writ of error, that muſt be ſhewn in the ſci. fac. itſelf likewiſe, and pray execution generally: and whereas the ſcire facias in the principal caſe recited the judgment in the inferior court, as by inſpection of the record it appears unto us, it was for that reaſon ill: for it ought to be as appears by the record, becauſe if the defendant ſhould plead nul tiel record, it muſt be tried by the record itſelf, and not by inſpection; ſo this ſcire facias was quaſhed. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 321.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. Proctor v. Johnſon. Error.

On a judgment in ejectment in C. B. a ſcire facias was brought againſt the caſual ejector, ſuggeſting, that ſince the judgment A. and B. had entered in the cuſtomary manner. And on demurrer, judgment was given that they have execution; and on this award of execution a writ of error was brought in this court, where the objection was, that a ſcire facias lay not on a judgment in ejectment; for at common law it lays only in real actions; and the ſtatute gives it only in perſonal. 2 Inſt. 469.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. 1ſt, At common law there was a ſcire facias on a judgment in real and mixed actions.

It lay on a judgment in aſſize, for the land was bound by the recovery, which was a good title, and there was no other way to execute the judgment on a change of parties, as there was in caſe of judgment for debt and damages, where an action of debt lay on the judgment.

2dly, The ſcire facias may either be general againſt all tertenants, or againſt the tertenants, naming them.

3dly, That ſtrangers may falſify, but thoſe that claim under the judgment are eſtopped, and bound by the judgment. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 600. Raym. vol. 1. p. 699.

Hilary, 1 Ann. Auſtin v. Criſby.

Executors brought a ſcire facias, teſted the 22d of October, returnable the 14th of November, and a ſecond ſcire facias, of the ſame teſte, returnable the 23d of November; ſo, by rule of court, the defendant had four days from the return of the ſecond ſcire facias to plead, which indeed was all that remained of the term: they did not plead; the plaintiff takes out a fieri facias returnable the ſame laſt day, to warrant a teſtatum.

Per curiam. It was well; for though the defendant has four days after the return of the ſecond ſcire facias to plead, yet that is a favour to him; when he does not plead, the judgment is of the day of the return of the ſecond ſcire facias, and he may very well take out a fieri facias afterwards, to warrant the teſtatum. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 138.

The defendants were convicted of deer-ſtealing, under ſtat. 5 Geo. 1. cap. 15. and the convictions being removed into this court by certiorari, were confirmed. After confirmation, and before execution awarded, the perſon who was, as well the informer as the owner of the deer, died, and his wife, as adminiſtratrix, ſuggeſted his death on the roll, on which ſhe ſued out a levari facias on the ſaid convictions, confirmed as aforeſaid, to levy the penalties, which were levied and diſtributed as the ſtatute directs.

On a motion that execution might be ſet aſide for irregularity, the following exceptions were taken:

1ſt, Becauſe a levari facias does not lie.

2dly, Becauſe the execution ought not to have been ſued out by the adminiſtratrix without a ſcire facias, &c.

The court held, that a levari facias would lie, but held that this execution was irregular; becauſe in no caſe, where the parties to the judgment are changed, ought execution to be ſued by any other without a ſcire facias. Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Adams v. The Tertenants of Savage.

An adminiſtrator brought a ſcire facias on a judgment recovered by his inteſtate againſt H. and the writ was general, againſt ſuch as were tenants of the land of H. at the time of the judgment. The ſheriff returned ſeveral tertenants warned; among the reſt one A. ſeiſed of a meſſuage and of a manor called D. The tenants appeared, and all joined in this plea, viz. That J. S. is ſeiſed of the freehold of the manor of D. and pray judgment of the writ, and that the ſame may be quaſhed.

Per curiam. The plea was held ill; and reſolved,

1ſt, That the tertenants cannot join in this plea, becauſe they are ſeverally returned, one for one part, and another for another.

2dly, This is pleading a non-tenure by implication as to the manor of D. Now in a ſcire facias on a judgment in debt, or any perſonal action, the defendant cannot plead non-tenure generally, becauſe it is contrary to the return of the ſheriff, but he may plead a a ſpecial non-tenure in ſuch caſe; and ſo the law is now, after long and great difficulty, ſettled. 3 Cro. 872. 8 E. 4, 19, 9 H. 5, 11. But in a ſcire facias for execution in a real action, the defendant may plead a general non-tenure; becauſe their freehold, which is much favoured in law, is in queſtion.

3dly, The tertenants in this caſe may plead, that there are other tertenants not named in the ſame county, and pray judgment if they ought to anſwer, until the others be ſummoned, but ought not to pray, that the writ be quaſhed; for the court ought never to abate the writ, but where the plaintiff can have a better writ; otherwiſe if the writ had been particular in naming the tenants. And they ſeemed to doubt whether the tertenants could plead other tertenants not warned in another county; and the Chief Juſtice cited Owen, 104. that a tenant for years may be a good tenant to plead in bar to a ſcire facias to a perſonal action where damages are recovered, but not in a real action. *Co. Hilary, 5 Ann. Colebeck v. Peck.

The plaintiff ſued out a ſcire facias againſt the defendant, as executor to J. S. on a judgment obtained by him againſt the teſtator, the defendant pleaded in abatement that the teſtator died before judgment, &c. The plaintiff replied, and ſet out ſtat. 17 Car. 2. c. 8. and that the teſtator died after a verdict obtained againſt him, and after the day of niſi prius, and before the day in bank. The defendant demurred, and his council inſiſted, that the plaintiff ought to have ſued out a ſpecial ſcire facias, and not a general one; for now the writ ſuppoſes a judgment againſt the teſtator in his life-time, and the replication ſhews it was entered after his death, though well entered by virtue of the ſtatute.

Per curiam. The writ is good, and could not be otherwiſe; for had it been ſpecial, there would have been a variance, the judgment being entered general; and a reſpondeat ulterius was awarded. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1280.

Trinity, 6 Ann. Prime v. Maſon.

A ſcire facias was ſued out, returnable on Monday in three weeks after the Holy Trinity, to which there was a demurrer.

Per curiam. It is a void writ; for there is no ſuch day, it being on a Sunday, and ſo is not a miſcontinuance to be helped by the ſtatute of jeofails: and it being a void writ, the court officially ought to take notice of it, being pleaded in bar, and ought to quaſh it, and ſo there is no writ in being. Vide Mod. Rep. v. 11. p. 120.

Hilary, 3 Geo. The King v. Eyre.

A ſcire facias was brought to repeal the grant of a market to the defendant, ſuggeſting that it was to the prejudice of the Duke of Rutland, who had a market within four miles.

On trial, it was found for the King; on the iſſue, whether the grant was to the prejudice of the Duke; and on a motion in arreſt of judgment, it was held to be a good iſſue, though the grant, and not the uſer, was found to be prejudicial.

Then it was objected, that the ſcire facias was brought in the late Queen's time, and by her demiſe the proceedings abated, this not being within ſtat. 1 Ed. 6. c. 7. or 1 Ann. c. 8. to which it was anſwered, and reſolved by the court, that this is an original writ, and therefore within the general words. Regiſt. 69. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 43.

Trinity, 4 Geo. Mulſo v. Shere.

A ſcire facias was brought by Mulſo againſt Shere, who was plaintiff in replevin, and three others, who were pledges in the ſuit brought by Shere on a diſtreſs for rent made by Mulſo.

It was objected, 1ſt, That a ſcire facias would not lie againſt a plaintiff in replevin, as here, the county court not being a court of record; but it would lie on a writ, becauſe it is a record.

2dly, That Shere, who was the principal, cannot be a pledge for himſelf.

3dly, That the pledges ought to have been ſued till the principal was found guilty, though here was an elongata returned.

4thly, That the writ of inquiry is of all and every the goods, and does not ſay what particularly.

5thly, That there was a diſcontinuance in a former ſuit.

Per curiam. The plaintiff muſt have judgment. There is no diſtinction between a ſcire facias, writ, or plaint; one may be bail with others for himſelf; the principal appears to be guilty of elongation; the writ of inquiry is reducible to a certainty, and diſcontinuance is nothing in this ſuit, unleſs it had been void, or a nullity; and the caſe of Dorrington v. Edwin, 3 Mod. 56. is in point. Vide Forteſcue, p. 330.

Eaſter, 8 Geo. Crowther v. Wheat.

A ſcire facias was brought againſt the bail, and their attorney demanded oyer of the writ, and ſaw many raſures and interlineations in it, and for that reaſon did not make any defence; but now moved the court, that all proceedings thereon might be quaſhed.

The court were of opinion, that this was no ground to quaſh the proceedings; for if any alteration was made in a thing immaterial after the ſealing of the writ, there is no harm done; and if in any thing material before the writ was ſealed, yet that will not vitiate it: ſo the court refuſed to quaſh it, or any proceedings thereon; but ſaid, if the motion had been made againſt the clerk who had made the eraſement, and it appeared to be done after the writ was ſealed, it is a miſdemeanor, and puniſhable. *Vide Mod. Hilary, 10 Geo. Andrews v. Harper.

In the C. B. there is but one ſcire facias againſt the bail, and on a nihil returned there is execution; but in this court the courſe is to have two ſcire facias's againſt the bail, viz. a ſcire facias and an alias ſcire facias; but both muſt not be ſued out together, as formerly; for the firſt muſt be duly returned before the alias ſcire facias is ſued out, which muſt bear teſte on the day of the return of the firſt, and there muſt be fifteen days incluſive between the teſte of the firſt and the return of the alias: now in the principal caſe the court was moved to ſet aſide a judgment obtained againſt the bail on two ſcire facias's brought againſt them, becauſe it did not appear that the judgment was had on the return of two nihils; and it was referred to the maſter to examine this matter. *Vide Mod. Eaſter, 12 Geo. Eden v. Wills. Error.

The court was moved to quaſh a ſcire facias quare executio non, &c. ſued out by the defendant in error, to make the plaintiff aſſign his errors, becauſe the original ſuit in the C. B. was by bill of privilege; it was urged, that the ſcire facias ought to be returnable at a day certain, but this was made returnable on a common return. And of that opinion was the court, becauſe a ſcire facias ought to be made returnable according to the nature of the original ſuit below in the C. B. and in Trinity 11 Ann, in the caſe of Vavaſor v. Parker, it was ſo adjudged in this court. On which they quaſhed the writ of error. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1417.

Trinity, 2 Geo. 2. Wharton v. Richardſon, Widow.

A ſcire facias was brought againſt the defendant as adminiſtratrix of her huſband, on a judgment againſt him for 1500 l. and after two nihils returned a ſcire fieri inquiry was taken out, and the defendant attended the execution of it, in order to lay the ſtate of the aſſets before the jury; but the plaintiff inſiſting that the award of execution on the former writs was in point of law an evidence of aſſets, a devaſtavit was found to 1117 l. 11 s. 1 d. in Hilary 8 Geo. 2. She appeared to the ſcire fieri inquiry, and pleaded that ſhe had fully adminiſtered, and traverſed the devaſtavit. And notice of trial being given and countermanded, and nothing further done in it, ſhe in Michaelmas 10 Geo. 2. moved to have the award of execution ſet aſide, and to be admitted to plead, it being to no purpoſe to expect relief on the trial of the traverſe; and cited Salk. 93. 264. to ſhew that where there has been no ſciri feci, and only two nihils, the court will relieve on motion, and not put the party to an audita querela, and the ſtate of the real aſſets was proved to be 130 l. which ſhe offered to deliver up, and to be examined on interrogatories, if the plaintiff was diſſatisfied with the account.

The court was greatly inclined to relieve her; but on conſideration of her long acquieſcence, and the ſeveral ſteps taken ſubſequent to the award of execution, they thought ſhe came too late, and for that reaſon only refuſed to interpoſe. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1075.

Trinity, 1 Geo. 3. Campbell, Eſq. v. Cumming and another.

A ſcire facias being brought againſt bail, the defendants pleaded thereto, “ that the principal died before “ the return of the capias ad ſatisfaciendum.” The return of the ca. ſa. being thereon ſet forth in the replication, it appeared to be returnable “ on Thurſday “ next after eight days from the day of the purification

" of the Virgin Mary." The defendant demurred generally to the replication.

The defendant's council inſiſted that the proceedings were irregular: for the word from is excluſive; and conſequently the writ is not returnable till in vacation time: and as this was a proceeding by bill, the ſcire facias muſt bear teſte on the day of the return of the ca. ſa. which therefore will be in vacation time too. He ſaid the writ ought to have been made returnable " on " Thurſday next after the octave, &c. and cited the caſe of Girdler v. White, in this court, in ſupport of his argument.

The plaintiff's council inſiſted, that the writ was right and regular, in ſtrict computation: and were it otherwiſe, yet, as this was an execution and not meſne proceſs, the writ of ca. ſa. would not be void, but only liable to be ſet aſide on motion, for irregularity; and cited the caſe of Shirley v. Wright, 1 Salk. 273. where it was holden, " that the ſheriff who had let his pri-" ſoner eſcape, ſhould not take advantage of a want " of a ſcire facias to ground the ca. ſa. on, which had iſſued after a year and a day.

The court were clearly of opinion with the plaintiff's council, and accordingly gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1187.

Trinity, 5 Geo. 3. Millar v. Yerraway. Error.

On ſhewing cauſe on behalf of the defendant in error againſt a rule which had been obtained by the plaintiff in error for the defendant in error to ſhew cauſe " why the writ of ſcire facias, on which the de-" fendant in the original action, being the preſent plain-" tiff in error, had been ſummoned, ſhould not be ſet " aſide for irregularity."

The court made this diſtinction between the writs of ſci. fac. in error, and writs of ſci. fac. againſt bail. It is not neceſſary in the former caſe, " that the ſci. fac. " ſhould lie in the office before the return," though it is neceſſary in the latter. And the rules that have been made for the ſcire facias lying four days in the office, relate only to writs of ſcire facias againſt bail. Therefore the court diſcharged the rule. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1723.

Settlement of Poor.

The Queen v. The Inhabitants of Pannington.

On ſtat. 12 Ann, for removing vagabond, a perſon found wandering, though no vagabond, may be ſent to the place of his laſt ſettlement, but it muſt be by two juſtices, and this being by one juſtice only, was for that reaſon quaſhed. Vide Forteſcue, p. 323.

The Caſe of the Inhabitants of St. Lawrence in Reading.

A perſon was elected into the office of warden for the borough of Reading, but exerciſed it in the pariſh.

Per curiam. It is a good ſettlement; for though it be not a pariſh office, yet, if it is a public annual office, as in this caſe, which is in the nature of a tithing-man, it gains a ſettlement; but in the caſe of a tax, it muſt be a particular tax. The office of a conſtable (though he be choſen by the leet) exerciſed in a pariſh, is a ſettlement; but if he be a deputy only, it is no ſettlement. A rate to the ſurveyor, where it is extended to the ward, is not good to make a ſettlement. Vide Forteſcue, p. 310.

The Caſe of the Inhabitants of Rudgwick, Chiddingfold, and Dunsfold.

This was an hiring for one half year, and after that a hiring for another half year.

Per curiam. It is no legal hiring within the ſtatute. If this be allowed, where are we to ſtop? they may hire day-labourers. It is not like the caſe of renting 5 l. a year, and 5 l. a year, that is, 10 l. per annum, which is good, for he is tenant to 10 l. a year; but hiring for half a year, and then hiring for another half year, are two ſeveral contracts, ſo not good; ſervice for a year muſt be on the ſame contract, and one ſervice for a year; but if there ſhould be a hiring for a year, except a day or two, it would be deemed fraudulent. Vide Forteſcue, p. 310.

The Queen v. The Inhabitants of Harrow and Edgware.

A perſon who had ſerved as a covenant ſervant in H. and afterwards was admitted to a copyhold on the waſte of 25 l. per annum for his life, in the pariſh of E.

Adjudged, That he was ſettled at E. and his children with him there, though ſome were born before admiſſion. If a man had never ſo ſmall a freehold, he cannot be removed; it is the ſame with a copyhold, if for life, and if he cannot be removed, he is ſettled; theſe are ſynonymous terms. Vide Forteſcue, p. 310.

The Inhabitants of Antony v. The Inhabitants of Cardenham in Cornwall.

A widower had a daughter, who was married into another pariſh, and there ſettled, he hired himſelf into a pariſh.

Per curiam. It is a good ſettlement, for it is within the meaning, though not the letter, of the ſtatute; if any unmarried perſon, not having a child, and he has none to the purpoſe intended by the ſtatute, i. e. that can be chargeable. Vide Forteſcue, p. 309.

Saliſbury Lent Aſſizes 1712. The Caſe of the Inhabitants of Wiſport and Bretford, Wilts.

A perſon five days after Michaelmas 1709, who was hired to B. from the ſaid five days after Michaelmas, to Michaelmas 1710, and then departed from his maſter's ſervice, and was paid his wages to that time; and on the next day after his departure he returned, and covenanted with the ſame maſter, to ſerve him there for another year; but a month or five weeks before the end of the laſt year, the ſervant departed from that ſervice, and entered on another, and the maſter deducted out of the laſt year's wages 8 s. for the month or five weeks that was wanting of the year.

This was held by Powis, J. who was judge of aſſize, to be no ſettlement, becauſe there was no hiring for an intire year, nor ſervice for a year in purſuance of the hiring. Vide Forteſcue, p. 311.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The birth of a legitimate child does not make a ſettlement, but the place of the laſt legal ſettlement of the father; a child born or dropped in a place where a perſon is a vagrant, gains no ſettlement there, but where the father was laſt legally ſettled. Vide Forteſcue, p. 313.

Michaelmas, 9 Ann. The Pariſh of St. Mary of Reading v. The Pariſh of St. Lawrence of Reading.

One Joſeph Marlow was firſt an inhabitant of St. Mary in Reading, afterwards came into the pariſh of St. Lawrence of Reading, and during his ſtay there was choſen warden for the borough; after which he removed to St. Mary's, and there became chargeable.

The queſtion was, whether his reſiding in the pariſh of St. Lawrence, and exerciſing the office of warden in that pariſh (though he did it in others too) was a ſettlement, by ſtat. 3 & 4 W. or no?

The next term the whole court adjudged it a ſettlement. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 15.

Hilary, 10 Ann. The Queen v. Doughton.

The caſe was this; a man ſettled in a pariſh removes into an extra parochial place, where he gains a ſettlement, then removes into another pariſh, and there becomes chargeable.

The queſtion was, what this laſt pariſh can do with him? Whether, by virtue of that act of parliament, that enables them to ſend ſuch a one to the laſt pariſh where he was legally ſettled, they may ſend him to the pariſh he lived in before ſuch time as he removed to the extra parochial place? for to ſend him to the extra parochial place they cannot, for want of officers to receive him.

Powell, Juſtice, took this to be a caſe omitted out of the ſtatute, and ſaid it was a matter that ought to be moved in parliament; theſe extra-parochial places being many in number, and of great extent. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 81.

Eaſter, 1 Geo. The Caſe of the Inhabitants of the Pariſh of Pepper-Harrow and Frencham.

A perſon was hired on the 3d of October, and from that time to Michaelmas next, and ſerved out the whole year, and was paid accordingly; at firſt the court ſeemed to think it was an apparent fraud, but afterwards held it to be no good hiring.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. Where ſhall we ſtop, if not where the act directs? He may be hired ſo, and we are not to preſume a fraud; the juſtices might have found it ſo; and he quoted a caſe where a perſon was hired ten days after Michaelmas, and held not well. Vide Forteſcue, p. 322.

Eaſter, 3 Geo. The King v. The Inhabitants of St. Olave's, Jury.

A. was bound to a cobler who kept a ſtall in one pariſh, lay in another, and the boy in a third, and the ſeſſions adjudged the ſettlement where the ſtall was, becauſe the ſervice was there.

Per curiam. The boy has gained no ſettlement in either of the three pariſhes, for the ſtall is not ſufficient to give him one, the maſter laying in another pariſh. Wherefore the judgment was quaſhed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 51.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. The Pariſh of the Holy Trinity v. The Pariſh of Shoreditch.

Parker, Chief Juſtice, delivered the reſolution of the court as follows:

This is an order for the removal of one F. from the pariſh of The Holy Trinity to Shoreditch, by which it appears that F. was bound an apprentice to one T. with an intent to ſerve G. which he did for three years, and it has been inſiſted, that he being bound to T. who lives in Trinity pariſh, his ſettlement is there, and not in Shoreditch, where the ſervice was.

But we are of opinion the juſtices have done right in ſending him to Shoreditch, where the ſervice actually was: it is the ſame thing as if T. had turned him over to G. in which caſe there would have been no queſtion but he had gained a ſettlement in G.'s pariſh. If the maſter removes out of one pariſh into another, the apprentice gains a ſettlement if he lives there forty days. The turning over an apprentice is like the aſſigning of any deed, in this caſe T. was only a truſtee. There is a great deal of difference between apprentices and other ſervants; for apprentices are not preſumed to become chargeable, becauſe the trade and myſtery they learn is their eſtate. Therefore the order muſt be confirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 10.

Hilary, 5 Geo. The Pariſh of Coombe v. The Pariſh of Weſtwoodhay.

In 1715, Michaelmas-day happening to be on a Thurſday, a man was hired on the Saturday following to ſerve from the ſaid Thurſday after Michaelmas day to Michaelmas-day following. All this was ſtated for the opinion of the court. And the firſt queſtion was, whether there was a complete hiring for a year? for if the word ſaid be rejected, then there wants a week; but if you keep it in, and refer it to Michaelmas-day, then, by rejecting the words after Michaelmas-day, it will ſtand as a hiring from one Michaelmas to another.

Eyre, Juſtice, thought it might well be ſo; but the reſt of the judges were againſt it; for it would be to make it nonſenſe in contracting to ſerve for a time paſt; whereas, if the word ſaid be rejected, the reſt is natural enough. The other queſtion was, whether (admiting the hiring to be complete) there was any ſervice for a year, in purſuance of it, as the ſtatute requires, the contract being made on the Saturday? And Eyre, Juſtice, ſaid, it might be intended he was then two days on trial, and ſo the ſervice would be ſufficient. But the reſt held, that ſuch a ſervice would ſignify nothing, for it is not in purſuance of any hiring; there muſt firſt be a hiring, and then a ſervice, and not vice verſa, a ſervice, and then a hiring. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 143.

A perſon was collector of the taxes for births and burials, which extended to ſeveral other pariſhes.

It was held, that he was ſettled in the pariſh where he lived, and within the words of ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. who ſhall on his own account execute any public annual office or charge in the pariſh during a year. Vide Forteſcue, p. 304. Stra. vol. 1. p. 411.

Trinity, 7 Geo. Between the Pariſhes of Eaſtwoodhay in the County of Hants and Weſtwoodhay in Berks.

On an appeal from an order of two juſtices for the removal of B. B. E. his wife, and T. their ſon, under ſeven years of age, from the pariſh of W. to the pariſh of E. the matter was ſtated ſpecially for the opinion of the court.

That forty years ſince the father of this B. B. was ſeiſed in fee of a freehold eſtate in the pariſh of Hampſtead Marſhall in the county of Berks, where he lived till the year 1697, and that this ſon was at that time eight years old; that in 1697 the father and all his family removed to Chevely, where he rented a tenement of 20 l. per annum for two years; that in 1699 he purchaſed a copyhold eſtate of 11 l. per annum in the pariſh of Weſtwoodhay, whither he removed with his ſon and ſervants, and ſerved churchwarden and other pariſh offices, and paid taxes till 1716, when he purchaſed a cottage of 1 l. 12 s. 6 d. per annum in Eaſtwoodhay, and went and lived on it till his death; but that Robert the ſon ſtaid behind in Weſtwoodhay, where he married a wife, and worked there ever ſince on his own account, and that he was thirty years of age. The ſeſſions confirmed the order of the two juſtices for his ſettlement at Eaſtwoodhay.

The court was moved to quaſh the order of ſeſſions, for that the ſettlement of Robert the ſon was either at Hampſtead Marſhall or at Weſtwoodhay.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice. The queſtion is not where this man and his family are ſettled, but whether there appears any ſettlement of him in Eaſtwoodhay. If he had gone there with his father as part of the family, poſſibly it might have been a ſettlement of him there, but by ſtaying behind he was divided from his father, and therefore there is no colour to make it a ſettlement in Eaſtwoodhay. I think his ſettlement is in Weſtwoodhay, which was the laſt place where he lived as part of his father's family. To which the court agreed, and the order was quaſhed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 438.

Trinity,

Trinity, 8 Geo. The King v. The Inhabitants of St. Peter, in the City of Oxford.

One M. N. having intruded herſelf into the pariſh of St. Peter, was, by an order of two juſtices, removed to Fawley-court, as the place of her laſt legal ſettlement. On an appeal to the ſeſſions, they ſtate the fact ſpecially, that ſhewas hired for a year into Chriſt-Church-college in Oxon, being an extra-parochial place, where ſhe ſerved part of the time; that during the year her miſtreſs went on a viſit to Fawley-court, where ſhe ſtaid three months, and took her ſervant with her, and afterwards they returned to Chriſt-Church; and, on the whole, the ſeſſions diſcharged the order for ſending her to Fawley-court.

And now, on debate, it was adjudged a ſettlement in Fawley-court; and conſequently the laſt order was quaſhed, and the order of two juſtices ſet up again. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 524. Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 50.

Trinity, 8 Geo. The Pariſh of Eaſtland v. The Pariſh of Weſthorſley.

The fact was ſtated ſpecially on an order of ſeſſions, that a ſervant was hired for a year, and the day before the year expired the maſter told him, that to prevent his gaining a ſettlement in that pariſh, he ſhould go away immediately, which the ſervant refuſed to do, inſiſting to ſerve out the year; whereon the maſter turned him out of doors. And the court held this to be ſuch a fraud in the maſter, as ſhould not prevent the ſettlement of the ſervant. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 526.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. The Caſe of the Inhabitants of Warminſter and Leiceſter.

A perſon, in King James the Second's time, was hired as a ſervant for a year, but ſerved three quarters of a year only; he was removed by two juſtices, ſuppoſing he ſhould give notice, it being before ſtat. 3 & 4 W. & M. which directs ſervice for a year.

Per curiam. It is a good ſettlement, though he did not ſerve out the year, and he need not give notice; for a ſervant and apprentice need not give notice, becauſe to no purpoſe; for if they did give notice, they could not be removed from their maſters. Vide Forteſcue. p. 326. Stra. vol. 1. p. 470.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. The Pariſh of Wookey v. The Pariſh of Hinton Blewet.

A perſon ſettled at Hinton Blewet had an eſtate deſcended to him in Wookey, whereon the juſtices ſent him thither as to the place of his laſt ſettlement.

Per curiam. The order was quaſhed; for it was no ſettlement, nor inhabitation, though if he ſhould go thither, he could not be removed: it may be a great injury to ſend him away from a good trade in Hinton Blewet to perhaps half an acre of land, wherein he has but a term. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 476.

Trinity, 9 Geo. The King v. The Inhabitants of Little Dean.

It was ſtated, that a man took a leaſe for ſeven years, and objected it might only be by parol, and then it is void for the whole, and there can be no ſettlement.

Per curiam. Then it ſhould have been ſtated to be by parol. We muſt take it to be by deed, otherwiſe it is no leaſe at all. Therefore the order was confirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 555.

Hilary, 9 Geo. The Pariſh of Burkeſcome v. The Pariſh of Sampford Peverell.

The ſeſſions on a ſpecial order adjudged that executing the office of tithing-man would not gain a ſettlement.

Per curiam. The order muſt be quaſhed, for this is an annual office in the pariſh, within the words and meaning of the ſtatute. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 544.

Michaelmas, 9 Geo. The Pariſh of St. John's in the Town v. The Pariſh of Amwell, in the County of Hertford.

By ſtat. 9 & 10 W. 3. c. 11 It is provided, that no certificate-man ſhall gain a ſettlement in the pariſh to which he comes with ſuch certificate, unleſs he takes a leaſe of 10 l. per annum, or ſhall execute ſome annual office in ſuch pariſh. In this caſe the certificate-man took a farm of 10 l. per annum, part of which was in St. John's, and part in Amwell; but the greateſt part, together with the houſe, being ſtated to lie in the pariſh that received the certificate, the court held it a ſettlement there. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 529.

It was ſtated, that an apprentice was bound in the pariſh of A. and lived there off and on for three quarters of a year. It was objected, that this was no ſettlement; ſince he might not inhabit forty days together.

Per curiam. That is not neceſſary. So the order for making it a ſettlement was confirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 579.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions, the caſe was thus:

An order of two juſtices was made for removing R. A. from the pariſh of Shipton Bechamp to Buckington. On an appeal, the ſeſſions confirmed the order; but ſtated the caſe ſpecially,—That R. A. was born at Shipton Bechamp, but bound an apprentice at twelve years of age to J. C. at Buckington, where he lived forty days; but the maſter becoming a bankrupt, R. A. hired himſelf as a ſervant for a year to J. G. in Buckington, and ſerved accordingly; during which ſervice the apprenticeſhip expired, when J. C. delivered up the indentures to J. G.

And it was inſiſted, that a hiring de facto ſhould gain a ſettlement, for a man, as well as a marriage de facto, would gain a dower for a woman.

To which it was anſwered, that this hiring could not gain any ſettlement, becauſe the indenture of apprenticeſhip was ſtill ſubſiſting, and could not be diſcharged but by ſome other deed, or by the ſeſſions; ſo that this was not a lawful hiring; and if ſo, then a ſervice for a year, in purſuance of ſuch an illegal hiring, cannot gain a ſettlement. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 235.

Trinity, 10 Geo. The King v. The Pariſhioners of Wilby.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſettlement made by two juſtices, and which was confirmed on an appeal to the ſeſſions, the caſe appeared to be thus, viz. One H. C. about thirty years laſt paſt, built a cottage in the pariſh of B. on the waſte of a manor belonging to the Earl of Pembroke, but without any licence or order ſo to do; and he enjoyed the ſame during his life, without any other right, and then died leaving iſſue Elizabeth his only daughter and heir, who intermarried with J. D. who, with his wife Elizabeth, being ſeiſed of this cottage, ſold it to J. W. for 30 l. and now the queſtion was, whether the marriage had gained a ſettlement of J. D. the huſband?

It was inſiſted that it had not, becauſe the father of Elizabeth the wife of this D. had no ſettlement there, for his entry was by diſſeiſin, which gains no ſettlement; and if the father had none, his daughter could not have any ſettlement there.

But the court were of another opinion, becauſe thirty years poſſeſſion is a good title againſt the Lord of the manor, by virtue of the ſtatute of limitations, if he ſhould bring an ejectment to recover the poſſeſſion.

Beſides, Elizabeth the wife of this D. and daughter and heir of H. C. was in poſſeſſion by deſcent, which is a good title againſt any eſcheat the Lord might have at common law; and therefore her huſband gained a ſettlement by this marriage. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 287.

See this caſe fully ſtated in page 137 of this work, under the head Attachment.

Eaſter, 11 Geo. The King v. The Inhabitants of St. Mary Maſfelton, alias White Chapel.

A poor man was hired for five years to work at a glaſs houſe in the pariſh of White Chapel, from ſix in the morning till eight at night, and lodged every night in the pariſh of White Chapel, only not in his maſter's houſe; this man was removed by an order of two juſtices from White Chapel to Ratcliffe, and on an appeal to the ſeſſions the order was quaſhed, the court being of opinion that he was ſettled in White Chapel. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 370.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. The King v. The Hamlet of Spitalfields.

The caſe on an order of removal, &c. was as follows: The huſband worked at a ſilk-throwſter's in the hamlet of Spitalfields for five years, but never lay where he worked, but at a lodging elſewhere; the juſtices of the peace being of opinion, that the huſband had gained a ſettlement by this means, did, after his death, by an order, remove his widow thither; which order was confirmed on an appeal. But both orders were quaſhed, becauſe the court was of opinion, that the huſband's working there gained no ſettlement. And ſo it was reſolved in the caſe of a cobler, who worked in a ſtall in the pariſh of St. Giles's, and had an apprentice who worked with him in that ſtall, and both lay in another pariſh; it was adjudged that the working in the ſtall did not gain a ſettlement, for that was in the pariſh where he lay; and that a man cannot be removed from his work, conſequently his working in a certain place ſhall not gain any ſettlement there. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 308.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. The King v. Edwards and others.

See this caſe fully ſtated in page 450 of this work, under the head Indictment.

Hilary, 12 Geo. The Pariſh of Kinver v. The Pariſh of Stone, in the County of Stafford.

On a ſpecial order of ſeſſions it was ſtated, that a poor perſon rented a coney-warren, and a cottage on it, at 10 l. per annum, which the juſtices were of opinion did not gain a ſettlement within ſtat. Car. 2.

Per curiam. A mill has been held to be a tenement within that ſtatute, and why not this? It is his ability to pay 10 l. per annum that is the foundation of the ſettlement, and whether he pays it for a houſe for habitation, or for a warren which brings him in a profit, is not material: the order of ſeſſions muſt be quaſhed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 678.

Hilary, 1 Geo. 2. Between the Pariſhes of Biſhops Hatfield and St. Peter's in St. Albans.

An order of two juſtices was made to remove a man, his wife and daughter, from Hatfield to St. Peter's. On appeal to the ſeſſions, it was ſtated, that on the 3d day of Auguſt 1725, H. L. was hired in St. Peter's by one Mr. A. (who had no ſettlement there) for one year, to ſerve as his huntſman. That Mr. A. had a dog-kennel in St. Peter's, where L. was dieted, and ſerved the year: but inaſmuch as A. himſelf had no ſettlement, they vacated the order that ſent him to St. Peter's.

Per curiam. The order of ſeſſions muſt be quaſhed, for this is exactly the caſe of a ſervant employed on the road to look after ſtage-horſes belonging to a perſon who lived elſewhere; and yet the ſettlement was adjudged to be where the ſervice was. Vide Stra. vol. 2. page 794.

Eaſter, 2 Geo. 2. The Pariſh of St. Michael Coſlany, in Norwich, v. The Pariſh of St. Matthews, in Ipſwich.

On an order of ſeſſions the caſe was ſpecially ſtated, on a removal of E. W. and A. his wife, and E. S. and A. their children, from St. Michael's to St. Matthew's; that E. W. the elder, the father of E. W. removed, was ſettled at Shipton Mallet, and afterwards removed to Bruton, where he continued twenty years, and had E. the ſon born there, whom he bred up in his own trade till nineteen years old, when he left his father and came to Norwich, and married and had theſe three children. That ſince the birth of the children, old E. the grandfather gained a ſettlement in Ipſwich, to which the two juſtices removed the family. But the ſeſſions being of opinion their ſettlement was not at Ipſwich, diſcharged the order.

Per curiam. The order of ſeſſions is right. For there is no colour to ſay the ſon and his family were ſettled at Ipſwich, where they never were; and this is exactly the ſame caſe as that of Eaſtwoodhay v. Weſtwoodhay. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 832.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. 2. Between the Pariſhes of Elſtead and Holliburne.

On an order of ſettlement it was ſpecially ſtated, that a man rented a houſe and land in Elſtead, for which he paid 9 l. 10 s. per annum, and that he rented 3 l. per annum of the ſame perſon, but that he lodged and lived in Elſtead. And on conſideration of the caſes of South Sydenham v. Lamerton, and St. John's in Hertford. v. The Pariſh of Amwell. This was held to be a ſettlement in the pariſh of Elſtead. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 849.

Eaſter, 4 Geo. 2. The Pariſh of Molſworth v. The Pariſh of Goring.

A poor man gained a ſettlement at Molſworth, and was afterwards hired by two partners of a boat at Goring, for a year, to ſerve in the ſaid boat, which plied between Goring and London for the year; and whether, by the ſaid ſervice, the party gained a ſettlement at Goring, was the queſtion.

Per curiam. This is not to be diſtinguiſhed from the caſe of a man taken on board a ſhip, in which he ſerves for a year; and then held, no ſettlement was gained thereby: and ſo it was holden in this caſe, in affirmance of an order of ſeſſions. Vide Fitzgibbons, p. 255.

Trinity, 4 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Minchinhampton.

Per curiam. Renting a piece of paſture ground of 10 l. per annum is a ſettlement, but not renting the paſture of a piece of ground. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 874.

Michaelmas, 4 Geo. 2. Between the Pariſhes of Hanmer in Com. Flint and Elſmere in Com. Salop.

On a ſpecial order of ſeſſions, the caſe ſtated was, that R. F. being unmarried, and having no child, was hired in Hanmer for a year, and ſerved the ſame: that afterwards in 1718 he was ſtill unmarried, and having no child, was hired in Elſmere in Salop, to ſerve from Lady-day to Chriſtmas following, which he did, and was then hired again for a year by the ſame maſter, and ſerved to the end of May. The ſeſſions adjudged it no ſettlement, and ſent him to Hanmer.

The court was moved to quaſh the order, there being in the whole a ſervice for a year in Elſmere, which, as was urged, was enough to ſatisfy the ſtatute. And the caſes of Overton v. Steventon, Hilary 10 W. 3. and The King v. The Inhabitants of Bughtwell in Berks, were cited.

And on the authority of the above caſes, the court held it a ſettlement in Elſmere, and quaſhed the order of ſeſſions. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 878.

Hilary, 5 Geo. 2. Between the Pariſhes of St. Margaret's Weſtminſter and St. Martin's Ludgate.

On a ſpecial order of ſeſſions it was ſtated, that a Fleet priſoner took a houſe of 25 l. per annum within the rules, and lived in it eight years, and paid all taxes; and it was held that he gained a ſettlement. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 924.

Trinity, 6 Geo. 2. Between the Pariſhes of Lidney and Stroud in Com. Glouceſter.

On a ſpecial order of ſeſſions it was ſtated, that a maid-ſervant was hired for a quarter of a year, and if ſhe and her maſter liked one another, ſhe was to continue a whole year, and have 3 l. for her wages; that ſhe ſtaid the year out, and received the 3 l. and this on debate was held to be a ſettlement. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 950.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. 2. Between the Pariſhes of St. George Hanover-Square and St. James Weſtminſter.

On an order of ſeſſions the caſe was ſtated ſpecially, that A. W. a pariſh girl, was bound by indenture an apprentice to G. W. in St. George's pariſh, where ſhe ſerved forty days; and her maſter afterwards let her out for hire to a perſon in Marybone, where ſhe reſided above forty days, but the maſter received her wages, and found her cloaths.

The ſeſſions held that the laſt ſervice gained her no ſettlement, and conſequently ſhe was ſettled at St. George's. But the court quaſhed the order, being of opinion there was no difference between the maſter's hiring her out, and her own act, and that it was like the caſe of a binding to A. and ſerving B. where it has been always held a ſettlement in B.'s pariſh. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1001.

It was held that payment to the poor does not give a ſettlement unleſs the party was rated; for rating is the act of the pariſh, and not the other: and the ſettlement ariſes from the pariſhes giving that evidence of their being ſatisfied of his ability. Vide Stra. vol. 2. page 1023.

Michaelmas, 9 Geo. 2. Between the Pariſhes of Seaford and Caſtle-Church.

On a ſpecial order of ſeſſions it was ſtated, that the pauper was hired for a year, which he ſerved till the laſt twelve days, when he went away without his maſter's leave, and ſtaid till after the year was up, when he returned for his cloaths, and was paid the whole year's wages. And on conſideration, that if they once allowed this abſence for twelve days at the end of the year, (which differed from an abſence in the middle of the year) they ſhould not know where to ſtop; it was determined that he had gained no ſettlement. Vide Stra. vol. 2. page 1022.

Trinity, 10 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Butley in Suffolk.

The queſtion in this caſe was, whether renting a windmill at 14 l. per annum gained a ſettlement; it having been determined that a water-mill did. Salk. 506. It was urged, that thoſe are always habitable, but the other are often not.

Per curiam. It is the ſame as if he had rented land of that value. And Hilary 8 Geo. The King v. St. Mary, Guildford, it was a mill generally, and held a ſettlement; and ſo it was in this caſe. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1077.

Hilary, 13 Geo. 2. Between the Pariſhes of Southwold and Yoxford in Suffolk.

On a ſpecial order of ſeſſions it was ſtated, that the pauper took an houſe at Southwold, at the rent of 10 l. per annum; the landlord agreeing to build a ſtable, warehouſe, &c. to it. That the real value was then but 6 l. 10 s. per annum, and the landlord never made the new erections; but if they had been made, it would have been worth 10 l. per annum; and the court held this to be no ſettlement. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1127.

Trinity, 13 Geo. 2. The Pariſh of King's Norton v. The Pariſh of Cambden, in Glouceſter.

One M. C. a pauper, was removed by two juſtices from King's Norton to Cambden. On an appeal, the ſeſſions reverſed the order, ſtating, that the pauper was hired for one year to one E. of Cambden, to ſpin yarn at 18 d. per ſtone, and that ſhe was to provide herſelf with victuals and lodging; that ſhe ſpun the whole year, and boarded and lodged at her maſter's, allowing 2 s. per week for the ſame: but on her examination ſhe ſaid, that ſhe thought herſelf at liberty to be abſent from the work as long as ſhe pleaſed, only that ſhe was not at liberty to work for any other maſter.

Per curiam. The ſeſſions have done wrong in adjudging this no ſettlement in Cambden, for in fact there was an hiring and a ſervice for a year to the maſter there; and what her apprehenſion was, or whether ſhe was paid by the year, or by the quantity of her work, was immaterial; therefore the order of ſeſſions was quaſhed, and the order of the two juſtices confirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1139.

Hilary, 15 Geo. 2. The Pariſh of Cotleigh v. The Pariſh Stockland.

An acre in Cotleigh, wherein A. had a leaſe for lives, was mortgaged to a pauper for 15 l. When the mortgager died there was two years intereſt due, and he alſo owed 18 l. 10 s. to the mortgagee by bond and ſimple contract; and it was agreed between the widow and the mortgagee, that he ſhould adminiſter and take all, but the houſehold-goods, which he did. And the ſeſſions having held, that his taking to this acre, and living on it eight years, did not gain a ſettlement under ſtat. 9 Geo. 1. c. 7. which requires a bona fide payment of 30 l.

The court now quaſhed the order, it being to all intents of law and equity the ſame as actual payment of the conſideration-money. Vide Stra. vol. 2. page 1162.

Eaſter, 15 Geo 2. The Pariſh of Laddock v. The Pariſh of Saint Ennſdore.

A perſon was hired for a year, and ſerved half a year, when the maſter died; the executor, who lived in another pariſh, requeſted the ſervant to ſerve the year out with him. She did ſo; and now, on the authority of the caſe of Ivinghoe, the court held it a ſettlement in the executor's pariſh; for the laſt ſervice is not to be conſidered as a new agreement, but a continuation of the firſt. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1164.

Hilary, 16 Geo. 2. The Pariſh of Atherton v. The Pariſh of Barton.

A perſon ſettled in Atherton hired himſelf into Barton for one year, at 4 l. wages, and either maſter or ſervant to be at liberty to determine the contract at the end of any quarter, on giving a month's notice. And it was ſtated, that he ſerved the year out; but at the time of the hiring the pauper declared, he made the agreement in that manner to prevent loſing his former ſettlement. And on this the ſeſſions held it to be no ſettlement in Barton.

But the court, on debate, quaſhed both the orders; for this is the common ſort of hiring for a year, with an intention to ſtay together, as in fact they did; and if this ſhould be determined not to be a ſettlement, it would overturn great numbers of ſettlements that ſubſiſt on ſuch hirings. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1182.

Eaſter, 17 Geo. 2. The Pariſh of Beccles v. The Pariſh of Leowſtoff, in Suffolk.

A pauper was hired to a blackſmith for a year, at 3 l. per annum, to be paid when the ſervant ſhould want it. During the year, the maſter gave him leave to work with another ſmith for three days, with another for a week, and with a third for a fortnight, and agreed the ſervant ſhould have the advantage of it; after which he returned and ſtaid out the year, and the maſter, by his conſent, deducted the proportion of the wages for the time he was away: and on this ſtate of the caſe the ſeſſions held that no ſettlement was gained, the firſt contract being diſſolved.

Per curiam. The order muſt be quaſhed; for this is not a diſſolution of the contract, but a licence to be abſent; and both parties conſidered it ſo, by continuing together to the end of the year: the accelerating the payment of the wages for the convenience of the ſervant, which is uſually without a particular agreement, makes no alteration. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1207.

Eaſter, 18 Geo. 2. The Pariſh of Sheepſhead, in Leiceſter, v. The Pariſh of Melborne, in Derbyſhire.

A perſon was certificated from Sheepſhead to Melborne, and ſtaid there ten years; during which time Lady Elizabeth Haſtings conveyed lands to truſtees for ſeveral charities out of the profits, and, among other things, the ſum of 10 l. per annum to the charity-ſchool at Melborne, to be paid to the vicar there for the time being. In the ſpecial order of ſeſſions it was ſtated, that the certificate-man officiated as ſchoolmaſter for ſeveral years, and received 10 l. per annum from the vicar: and this the ſeſſions held gained him a ſettlement at Melborne, where they declared he had a freehold eſtate.

Per curiam. The order muſt be quaſhed; for it does not appear how he came into this employment; and the legal right to receive the ſalary is in the vicar, who not caring to officiate himſelf, has therefore paid it over to this man as his deputy, which could not give any perſon a ſettlement, much leſs to a certificate-man. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1225.

Trinity, 18 Geo. 2. The Pariſh of St. Peter, in Sandwick, v. The Pariſh of Goolaſton, in Kent.

A ſervant was hired for a year, during which time he, with his maſter's leave, went to ſea on the herring-fiſhery, but hired another to do his work in the mean time: he returned at the end of three weeks, after the expiration of the year, ſettled with his maſter, and received his whole year's wages.

This the ſeſſions held was not a ſervice for a year; but the court, on the authority of the caſes of Iſlip, and Beecles v. Leoſtoff, held it a ſettlement, ſaying, he was to be conſidered all the time as in the ſervice of his maſter, and the perſon he had employed to do his work was his ſervant, and not the maſter's. Wherefore the order was quaſhed. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1232.

Michaelmas, 19 Geo. 2. The Pariſh of Croſcombe v. The Pariſh of St. Cuthbert, in Wells.

A ſervant was hired for, and ſerved a year, in Croſcombe. He continued to ſerve there, without any new agreement, for a quarter of a year, when the maſter removed into a houſe in St. Cuthbert's, where the ſervant continued for half a year, and then married. The queſtion was, whether this was a ſettlement in St. Cuthbert's, within the reaſon of thoſe caſes that have held the ſettlement to be gained where the laſt forty days ſervice was?

The court held it to be a ſettlement there; for it is ſtill a continuing in the ſame ſervice within the meaning of ſtat. 8 & 9 W. 3. c. 30. though there is no new agreement. And on the whole, there has been between this maſter and ſervant an hiring and ſervice for above a year. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1240.

On a motion to quaſh an order of two juſtices for removing J. W. and M. his wife, and three children, from Kniveton to Tiſſington, both in the county of Derby, a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

Caſe. J. W. being ſettled at Tiſſington, did on Lady-day 1749, take and enter on a farm at Kniveton, of the yearly value of 8 l. of one Mr. H. vicar of Kniveton, To hold from Lady-day 1749 to Lady-day 1750; and alſo at the ſame time, he, with one T. H. jointly took and entered on another farm in the ſame liberty, of one T. D. To hold from Lady-day 1749 to Lady-day 1750, of the yearly value of 3 l. 15 s. and at the ſame time of taking the ſaid farm of 3 l. 15 s. it was agreed between the ſaid J. W. and T. H. "that T. H. ſhould have and "take one half of the corn and hay, to be cut from the "ſaid farm of 3 l. 15 s. rent; and that the ſaid J. W. "after the ſaid T. H. had taken and carried away his "half part of the corn and hay, ſhould be poſſeſſed of "and occupy the whole farm of 3 l. 15 s. rent till "Lady-day following; paying to the ſaid T. H. 4 s. "for the ſaid H.'s ſhare of the ſaid farm." And that the ſaid T. H. did on or before the firſt day of October 1749, take and carry away one half of the ſaid hay and corn; and that the ſaid J. W. did thereupon immediately take and continue the poſſeſſion of the whole farm, till Lady day 1750.

After the rule to ſhew cauſe was made, the court made a ſubſequent order, whereby it was ordered, "that the orders returned with the certiorari in this "cauſe be ſent back to the ſeſſions," which was done accordingly, and the ſeſſions diſcharged the juſtices order of removal.

On the order of ſeſſions being returned into this court, the council on behalf of the pariſh of Kniveton moved to diſcharge the order of ſeſſions, and obtained a rule to ſhew cauſe.

The council took three exceptions to the order, viz.

1ſt. "That it did not appear that the pauper reſided "in Kniveton."

2dly. "That the juſtices at ſeſſions had no juriſdic-"tion to make this preſent order of diſcharge, becauſe "the former ſeſſions had not, on the original appeal, "adjourned ſuch appeal to a ſubſequent ſeſſions, but "to this court."

3dly. "That this caſe, as ſtated on the orders, ap-"peared to be a tenement, under the yearly value of "10 l. within the intent and meaning of ſtat. 13 & 14 "Car. 2. cap. 12."

The council for the pariſh of Tiſſington denied this, and alledged, "that it was above the yearly value of "10 l." which they endeavoured to prove thus;

1ſt, That W. the pauper, was liable (as being joint-tenant with H.) to anſwer for and pay the whole 3 l. 15 s. and, moreover, that he was ſole tenant of the farm, for and during the laſt half year.

2dly, It is really and properly a payment of 10 l. 1 s. 6 d. per ann. by W. the pauper, for he is to pay 8 l. per annum plus half 3 l. 15 s. (which is 1 l. 17 s. 6 d.) plus 4 s. for the laſt half year; which is, in all, 10 l. 1 s. 6 d.

The court unanimouſly held, "That this tene-"ment, thus rented by the pauper, in Kniveton, was "under the yearly value of 10 l."

The ſtatute fixes the yearly value at 10 l. and the value muſt be eſtimated by the rent; and always is taken to be according to the rent. And here, the rent is 8 l. per annum, and the half of 3 l. 15 s. which two rents together, do not amount to 10 l. He was to pay H. 4 s. for the advantage he was to have, after the crop was off; but an agreement of this ſort, between the two joint-tenants, cannot be conſidered as a rent.

Per curiam. Let the order of ſeſſions be quaſhed, and the order of the two juſtices be confirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 499.

Hilary, 4 Geo. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of Winterbourn.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions, made for quaſhing an original order of two juſtices, made for removing W. M. with eight children, from the pariſh of Winterbourn to the pariſh of St. Philip and Jacob, both in the county of Glouceſter, a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

Caſe. W. M. the pauper, about thirteen years before the making the order, took a houſe in the pariſh of St. Philip and Jacob, for one year, at the rent of 12 l. by the year; and dwelt in the ſaid houſe for half a year, and paid the half year's rent. That at a court-leet of the Lords of the Manor of Winterbourn and Hambrook in the ſaid county of Glouceſter, holden on the 13th of October 1761, R. B. Eſq; was preſented by the leet-jury to be conſtable for the year enſuing, for the tithing of Hambrook in the ſaid pariſh of Winterbourn, in reſpect of his eſtate in the ſaid tithing; but was never ſworn into, or took on him the ſaid office. That the ſaid R. B. having notice of the ſaid appointment, procured the pauper to ſerve the ſaid office of conſtable in his ſtead, in order to gain the pauper a ſettlement at Winterbourn. That the pauper was accordingly ſworn into the ſaid office, before a juſtice of peace of and for the ſaid county, and ſerved the ſame office for the whole year; during which time, he lived in the ſaid tithing of Hambrook, but never was preſented thereto at any court-leet as conſtable in his own right. That the cuſtom has been, time out of mind, to preſent all conſtables to ſerve for the ſaid tithing at the ſaid manor court-leet.

Per curiam. The caſe expreſsly ſtates, "That the "pauper never was preſented to the office at any court-"leet, as conſtable in his own right; and that the "cuſtom requires all conſtables to ſerve for the ſaid "tithing to be ſo preſented." Therefore the order of ſeſſions was diſcharged, and the original order of the juſtices was affirmed. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 520.

Hilary, 4 Geo. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of Salford.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions made for quaſhing an order of two juſtices made for the removing of P. W. the younger, and M. his wife, from the pariſh of Salford in the county of Oxford, to the hamlet of Over Norton in the pariſh of Chipping Norton, in the ſame county, a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

Caſe. P. W. the father of the pauper, being ſettled in Over Norton in the year 1726, for the conſideration of 92 l. purchaſed a tenement in the pariſh of Salford of one J. L. whoſe wife was ſeiſed of the inheritance in fee ſimple of the ſaid tenement, but never joined with her huſband in conveying it, nor had L. her huſband any eſtate in the ſaid tenement, but in right of his ſaid wife; and his ſaid wife ſurvived him, and died about ten years after him. L. the huſband, died thirty years ago, and P. W. the pauper's father, has lived in, and poſſeſſed uninterruptedly, the ſaid tenement ever ſince he ſo purchaſed it, and ſtill lives there: and his ſon, the pauper, was born there in or about the year 1730, and lived with his father as part of his family in the ſaid purchaſed tenement till within three years, when the ſaid pauper married, and left his father's family, and lived in a ſeparate tenement in Salford aforeſaid, but never gained any ſettlement but what he derived from his ſaid father.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on ſhewing cauſe on this rule, the court gave their opinion.

Lord Mansfield. We are of opinion that no ſettlement of the father was gained in Salford by the purchaſe, but only during the time of his inhabiting the purchaſed premiſes: ſo that the father's ſettlement was only temporary, and did not extinguiſh his ſettlement at Over Norton; and the only ſettlement which the ſon could derive from his father was at Over Norton: for there could be no derivative ſettlement from the father at Salford; the father himſelf having no ſettlement there, but being only irremovable from his own eſtate.

Per curiam. Let the order of ſeſſions be quaſhed, and the order of the two juſtices be affirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 516.

Eaſter, 4 Geo. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of Openſhaw.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions, confirming an order of two juſtices, made for the removal of J. B. Martha his wife, and five children, from Gorton to Openſhaw, both in the county of Lanceſton, a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

Caſe. J. B. the pauper, with his family, being legally ſettled in Openſhaw, took a houſe and two crofts in Gorton in 1758, from one J. O. at the rent of 3 l. 10 s. and the landlord was to pay all leys and taxes, except the window-tax, which was to be paid by the tenant. And accordingly he went with his family to reſide on, and occupied the tenement aforeſaid, until May-day 1762; during all which time, except as hereafter-mentioned, J. O. the landlord, paid all leys and taxes. But in the laſt year, O. having ſome diſputes with the overſeers concerning his leys for his other eſtates in Gorton, directed the overſeer to call on his tenant B. for a quarter of a year's poor-ley, and a church-ley, and tell him, "that his landlord ordered "him to pay it, and he would allow it out of his "rent." Whereon the overſeer accordingly aſked B. for a poor's-ley (being one ſhilling) and a church-ley (being one ſhilling and two-pence halfpenny) telling him what his landlord had ſaid; and he paid them both (amounting to two ſhillings and two-pence halfpenny) declaring, "he paid them for his landlord;" and the overſeers ſaid, "he accepted them accordingly:" but the landlord, not being aſked by the tenant to allow it, did not allow it out of the rent, till long after he left the eſtate, viz. 6th February 1763 (ſix days before the granting of the order for the removal of the pauper and his family from Gorton to Openſhaw) when he repaid the money.

The rate, or aſſeſſment for the relief of the poor of Gorton, was ſigned and allowed by three of the principal inhabitants, but was not ſigned by the overſeers, or allowed by the juſtices, or publiſhed in the church; but it was the rate by which the officer collected the poor-ley, and no other way made or gathered by, but in that method, during all the ſaid years. The church-ley was likewiſe ſtiled to be a church-ley on the land-owners, but was not ſigned by any of the inhabitants; but in both theſe aſſeſſments, the charge, in reſpect of this tenement, was as follows, viz. "Bowdens," as appears by the aſſeſſments, which appeared to be marked with a croſs, to denote the payment of the ſums charged in the manner ſet forth in theſe aſſeſſments, and that the pauper's name is Bowden, not Bowdens.

Lord Mansfield (without hearing the council for the townſhip of Openſhaw) ſaid, it was a clear caſe, tho' perhaps not ſo ſtrong as ſome others may have been.

This was the proper tax on the tenant; and he is aſſeſſed by name "Bowdens." The agreement between his landlord and him, "that the landlord ſhould "pay it," is nothing to the pariſh. So the court quaſhed both orders. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 522.

Hilary, 6 Geo. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of Staunton under Bardon.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions, made to confirm an order of two juſtices, made for removing of W. H. S. his wife, and their two children, from Uleſcroft to Staunton under Bardon, in the pariſh of Thornton, both in the county of Leiceſter, a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

Caſe. Some ſhort time before the 25th March 1763, T. O. took of J. P. a farm in Uleſcroft, conſiſting of a dwelling-houſe and ſeveral cloſes and lands, then at the yearly rent of 45 l. He entered on the ſame the ſaid 25th March, and occupied ſuch premiſes until about the middle of May following; during which time he ſtocked the ſame with cattle, and then gave up the poſſeſſion thereof, by conſent of parties, to the ſaid J. P. On ſuch giving up the poſſeſſion of the ſaid farm, M. P. took the poſſeſſion thereof, ſtocked it with cattle, and occupied the ſame till the 29th of May, when he let part of ſuch farm to the pauper W. H. until the Lady-day following, under payment of the rent or ſum of twenty-ſix guineas; H. to pay half the poor's levies, do half the repairs, have the manure then in the yard, and leave the ſame quantity at his quitting. H. entered on the part of the farm he took as aforeſaid, about the 1ſt or 2d day of June following; ſtocked the ſame, brought thither the following crop he was entitled to from the farm he before held at Staunton under Bardon; plowed part of the land, and ſowed it with turnips; held the whole premiſes let him as aforeſaid till Lady-day following; paid the twenty-ſix guineas, on a diſtreſs taken for it, and then quitted the ſame. His taking the farm at Uleſcroft appeared to be a bona fide taking, without fraud, or intention of gaining a ſettlement in the liberty of Uleſcroft.

The council who moved to quaſh the orders ſaid the only queſtion was, "whether W. H.'s living on a te-" nement of more than the value of 10 l. a year, (viz. " twenty-ſix guineas) for above forty days irremovable, " did thereby gain a ſettlement."

The council on moving to ſhew cauſe gave the matter up.

Per curiam. Let the rule be made abſolute to quaſh both orders. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 558.

Trinity, 6 Geo. 3. The King v. The Inhabitants of Ilmington.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions made for confirming an order of two juſtices made for removing E. E. widow, from Mickleton in the county of Glouceſter, to Ilmington in the county of Warwick, a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

Caſe T. E. being legally ſettled in Ilmington, about thirty-three years ago married the above named E. E. his wife, then E. S. ſpinſter; who had before, by indenture bearing date the 25th day of March 1724, purchaſed a leaſehold tenement, ſituate in the ſaid pariſh of Mickleton, for the ſum of 6 l. for the remainder of a term of one hundred years. The ſaid E. reſided in the ſaid tenement for about nine years before her intermarriage with the ſaid T. E. And after her intermarriage, the ſaid T. E. together with the ſaid E. his wife, the pauper, reſided in the ſaid tenement about ſixteen years; when the ſaid T. E. died, leaving the ſaid E. ſurviving him. The ſaid E. E. after her ſaid huſband's death, continued to reſide in the ſaid tenement till about Chriſtmas laſt, viz. 1765, when ſhe ſold and conveyed the ſame tenement to J. S. for the ſum of 6 l. and was afterwards removed from the ſaid pariſh of Mickleton to the ſaid pariſh of Ilmington.

The council for the pariſh of Ilmington owned it to be a new caſe, but ſaid it was within the reaſon of caſes heretofore determined.

In caſes of deſcent, a ſettlement is gained, though the original purchaſe be under 30 l. value. And there is as much reaſon why a ſettlement ſhould be gained in the preſent caſe.

There is no fraud in this tranſaction: and here is a reſidence of forty two years in the whole.

Stat. 13 & 14 Car. 2. cap. 12. is the firſt ſtatute that gives power to remove a perſon from their place of reſidence at all: and even after that ſtatute, till ſtat. 9 Geo. 1. cap. 7. forty days reſidence on a perſon's own property would gain a ſettlement.

This woman had an eſtate veſted in her, when E. married her; which, on the marriage, veſted in him. Here the huſband gained a ſettlement in Mickleton by forty days reſidence on his own eſtate; and his ſettlement communicated itſelf to the wife; therefore the wife ought not to have been removed from Mickleton; and conſequently, both theſe orders ought to be quaſhed. The court concurring in opinion, the rule was made abſolute for quaſhing both orders. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 586.

The plaintiff, as executor of Melliſh, brought an action on the caſe againſt the defendant for a falſe return; ſetting forth, that his teſtator, had recovered a judgment againſt one Smart for 140 l. and that he ſued out a teſtatum fieri facias againſt him, which he delivered to the defendant, who made execution, and delivered goods, &c. to the value of 101 l. and returned, that he had levied only 19 l. 19 s. which he was ready to pay; and that he had more goods in his poſſeſſion, to the value of 40 l. which remained for defect of buyers, whereas in truth he had levied more.

In debt on a bond, the condition on oyer was, that if the defendant did appear, &c. to anſwer the aforeſaid J. R. of a plea of treſpaſs, and alſo to his bill, &c. The defendant pleads ſtat. 23 H. 6. about ſheriffs bonds; the plaintiff demurs.

The council for the defendant in demurrer inſiſted, that the condition of the bond varied from the writ. The writ was, to anſwer the aforeſaid J. R. of a plea of treſpaſs, &c. and alſo to a bill of him the ſaid J. R. which words, of him the ſaid John, are omitted in the condition of the bond.

It was ſaid, that this ſtatute being made to prevent oppreſſion, was to be taken ſtrictly, and ſeveral caſes were cited to prove that the leaſt variation or addition to the condition of the bond, not warranted by the ſtatute, makes the whole bond void, as Michaelmas 37 Hen. 6. fol. 1. 10 Co. 100. b. Plow. com. 68. b. Hobart 13.

Parker, Chief Juſtice. The ſtatute only requires, that the ſheriff ſhould take a bond conditioned for the appearance of the party ſuch a day, at Weſtminſter; not ſaid even to anſwer the plaintiff.

The appearance mentioned is a perſonal appearance.

The words, And alſo to a bill, goes only to the matter of bail, whether common or ſpecial is to be required, and came in uſe after the ſtatute.

If the whole writ might be omitted, as certainly it may, ſince the ſtatute does not require it, then any part of it may be ſo likewiſe; nor does this bond vary from the form preſcribed by the ſtatute; if the party appears, he is bound to anſwer any bill that ſhall be filed againſt him. The bill in the condition of the bond cannot be intended of any other than the bill of the plaintiff.

The court being of the ſame opinion, judgment was given for the plaintiff niſi. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 327.

The plaintiff obtained judgment at law, and afterwards by a fieri facias directed to the ſheriff, he levied the debt on the goods of the defendant, who exhibited a bill in equity againſt the now plaintiff, ſuggeſting that there was more due to him from the plaintiff than he recovered; and ſo obtained an injunction to ſtay the money in the ſheriff's hands.

The plaintiff and his attorney being priſoners in the Fleet, moved the court againſt the ſheriff to return the writ of fieri facias, and that he might be amerced till he did; and now the court was moved on behalf of the ſheriff for directions what to do; for if he returned the writ he muſt pay the money, and then the Court of Chancery would commit him for not obeying their injunction; and if he did obey it, then this court would amerce him.

The court would not take any notice of the proceedings in Chancery, but ordered the ſheriff to return the writ, otherwiſe they would commit him; then the court being deſired to help the ſheriff to diſcover what attorney or ſolicitor carried on the proſecution againſt him; which was alſo refuſed, becauſe that would be only to enable the ſheriff to move the court of Chancery for an attachment: ſo he had no relief. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 315.

Anonymous.

On the 27th of February 1723, ſeveral judges met at the requeſt of Pratt, Chief Juſtice, concerning the death of one of the ſheriffs of London, viz. Sir Felix Feaſt, which happened juſt before the ſeſſions at the Old Bailey, and the judges not agreeing whether the under ſheriff could proceed by the late ſtatute, and it being a difficult queſtion, Pratt, Chief Juſtice, moved to have the ſeſſions adjourned, which was accordingly done till another ſheriff was choſen.

The Lord Chancellor ſeemed to think that one ſheriff might act in the caſe of the death of the other, as the chief clerk in this court had done, where a grant was to Ventris and Holt; Holt died, yet Ventris executed the office alone. Vide Forteſcue, p. 388.

Hayn v. Bigg.

A ſci. fac. was ſued out againſt the defendant as late ſheriff, on the ſtatute of Weſtminſter 2. for want of taking pledges in replevin.

The ſheriff pleaded that he took the goods, but did not ſay the ſame goods as in the declaration, and took ſufficient pledges, viz. the plaintiff and J. S. who entered into a bond, with condition to proſecute with effect, and make a return of the goods, but did not ſay the ſame goods as in the declaration. To which plea there was a demurrer.

Per curiam. The plaintiff muſt have judgment, becauſe the defendant has not pleaded to the ſame; for it appears the goods were different, and not the ſame as in the declaration, and they held that replevin bonds were good and legal both to proſecute and make return, and have been held ſo; and they alſo held, that one pledge with the plaintiff was ſufficient. Vide Forteſcue, p. 331.

Taxes and Rates.

Trinity, 6 W. & M. The Count of Arran v. Criſp.

The plaintiff made a leaſe to the defendant in 1675, reſerving ſuch a rent; and the defendant did covenant to pay the ſaid rent, clear of all taxes and aſſeſſments whatſoever, impoſed or to be impoſed, and gave bond for performance of covenants; and in an action of debt on this bond, after oyer, the defendant pleads conditions performed: the plaintiff replies the leaſe and covenants, and aſſigns for breach the defendant's not paying two years rent at Lady-day laſt; the defendant rejoins, and ſays, he paid ſo much in money, and ſo much in taxes, payable by the act of 4s. aid per pound, amounting in all to the rent due. The plaintiff demurs. The queſtion was, if this covenant did extend to charge the defendant with parliamentary taxes, becauſe the word parliament was not expreſſed in the covenant? and the whole court, except Chief Juſtice Holt, were clear of opinion it did.

But Holt ſaid, judgment ought to be for the plaintiff for a fault in pleading, though the law, as to the matter, be for the defendant; for the matter of his rejoinder, being by way of excuſe, ought to be ſet forth in the bar; as it is here ſet forth in the rejoinder, it is a departure; for whereas he before ſays he performed the condition, now he ſays he is not obliged to it. Wherefore the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 54.

Michaelmas, 7 Geo. The King v. The Juſtices of Dorcheſter.

A mandamus iſſued to the juſtices to ſign a poor's rate made by the churchwardens and overſeers. Before the return a motion was made to ſuperſede it, for ſeveral objections to the fairneſs of the rate; and that this would be ſpeedier and better for the poor than to reſerve the debate of them for a formal return.

Per curiam. The two juſtices are neceſſary to ſign the rate only by way of form; for it is the churchwardens and overſeers that have the power of making it; and whether it be a fair rate or not, is proper for the juriſdiction of the ſeſſions, and was never intended for our examination.

The ſuperſedeas being denied, the juſtices returned, that they would not allow the rate, it not being a juſt and proper rate: and the court having before given their opinion of this on the motion, they reſented this uſage ſo far, that they quaſhed the return, and ordered an attachment againſt the juſtices, who thereon ſubmitted and returned, that they allowed the rate. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 393.

Trinity, 8 Geo. The King v. The Inhabitants of Lambeth.

The perſon let his tithes to farm, the farmer agreed with the tenant of the land, that in conſideration of his paying ſo much he ſhould retain the tythes, and gather in the whole crop without dividing: and the queſtion was, which of the two were chargeable to the poor's rate, as occupier of the tithes? The ſeſſions diſcharged the leſſee of the parſon, and taxed the tenant of the land.

Per curiam. The order muſt be quaſhed. The farmer of the tithes is at the firſt inſtance liable to the poor's rate, and therefore unleſs he can throw that charge on another, the tax muſt be made on him. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 525.

Trinity, 11 Geo. The King v. The Inhabitants of Saint Leonard, Shoreditch.

On a ſpecial order for a ſcavenger's rate it was ſtated, that in the pariſh there were three diviſions, and this rate was made for one only, but that in this diviſion there were no churchwardens or overſeers reſiding, though the pariſh at large had ſuch officers. At the ſeſſions this rate was quaſhed, on account that there ought to have been a general rate for the whole pariſh: and now, on bringing all orders before the court, it was offered in ſupport of the firſt order, that ſtat. 2 & 3 W. & M. c. 8. had the word place as well as pariſh; and therefore a rate for the diviſion was good.

Per curiam. Whatever it might have been in caſe the churchwardens and overſeers had reſided in this diviſion, yet this being made for a place that had no ſuch officers, can never be maintained. The ſeſſions therefore did right to quaſh the rate, and the order of ſeſſions muſt be confirmed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 630.

An ejectment being brought on a re-entry for non-payment of rent, the defendant moved to ſtay the proceedings on payment of arrears and coſts. In the account before the maſter, a difficulty aroſe about the proportion of the land-tax to be allowed, as to which the caſe was: that the premiſes were let at 120 l. per annum, but by improvements were of more value; and ſince thoſe improvements were taxed at 150 l. per annum, the tenant would have deducted the whole land-tax. But the court held, that the landlord ought only to allow the proportion which 120 l. bears to 150 l. on the whole. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1191.

Hilary, 30 Geo. 2. The Royal Exchange Aſſurance v. Vaughan.

In an action of treſpaſs brought by the company; the queſtion (on a ſpecial verdict) was, "whether "this company are at all, or how far they are "liable, to be aſſeſſed to the land-tax?

On the firſt argument the court ſeemed, all of them, to ſee this matter pretty much in the ſame light: they made two queſtions, into which they divided the whole of this caſe, viz.

1ſt. Whether the original capital that was raiſed under the act of parliament of ſtat. 6 Geo. cap. 18. and was now become part of the fund of the preſent charter-corporation, was exempted from parliamentary taxes, by virtue of the exempting clauſe contained in ſtat. 6 Geo. cap. 17. which ſtatute related only to the original company for inſurance of ſhips, but did not extend to the preſent corporation eſtabliſhed by charter; which charter has extended their power, and enlarged their capital.

2dly. Whether this original capital was the perſonal eſtate of the company, and liable to be taxed as the company's perſonal eſtate, in their corporate capacity? Or whether the tax ought to have been laid on each individual member of the company, for his reſpective ſhare, in his own proper ward?

As to the firſt queſtion, the court were unanimous and clear, that the exemption under ſtat. 6 Geo. was confined to the original fund and company eſtabliſhed by that ſtatute; and could not be extended to the preſent corporation, which was founded on a ſubſequent charter of the crown, which neither did, nor could give any ſuch exemption.

As to the ſecond queſtion, it ſtood over for further argument and conſideration, when the court delivered their opinion.

Lord Mansfield. It is plain they are to be rated as a corporate body; and to rate the individuals would be almoſt impoſſible. The argument would prove too much, viz. that no corporation could be taxed.

On an action of treſpaſs for taking goods by way of diſtreſs, a ſpecial verdict was found for the plaintiff, ſubject to the opinion of the court on the following queſtion:

"Whether the plaintiffs, leſſees of certain lead "mines in the pariſh of Aldſtone in the county of "Cumberland, rendering as a rent certain part of the "lead ore gotten thereout, were liable, in reſpect of "the lead mines, to be rated to the relief of the poor?"

N. B. A certificate was procured to ſhew the uſage as to rating mines, which proved "that "it was not the uſage to tax lead mines."

Lord Mansfield. The words of ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. are "coal mines," not mentioning any other kind of mines, and that is equal to an exception or excluſion of all other mines.

The fact on certificate (though the certificates do not exactly concur in every particular) appears to be, "that lead mines are not rated throughout England; "and particularly in Derbyſhire, Somerſetſhire, and "Cornwal." I am now keeping clear of inhabitancy, which is no part of this caſe: for theſe perſons are not rated as inhabitants, but only as leſſees; therefore the poſtea muſt be delivered to the plaintiff.

In a ſuit in replevin for taking ſeveral cattle, the defendant avowed in his own right, for that W. R. was ſeized in fee of, &c. and granted a rent-charge to A. B. and C. and ten more, who granted to the defendant and to twelve more, and that four of the ſaid thirteen are ſince dead, and nine alive, of whom he is one, and that for one year's rent, due at ſuch a time, he diſtrained. On a demurrer to this plea it was objected, that the defendant ought not only to juſtify in his own right, but that he ought likewiſe to make conuſance as bailiff to the reſt, who were living.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. One joint-tenant may diſtrain, but he cannot avow ſolely; and therefore this avowry muſt abate, becauſe it is always on the right, and the right of this rent is in all of them; and therefore the court cannot adjudge the right of the writ of retorn' habend' to one alone; for which he, the defendant, ought to have made conuſance, as bailiff to the reſt; and this is like a repleader, where the defendant may avow again. Tenants in common may join or ſever in debt, but they muſt ſever in avowry, for the reaſon before-mentioned, viz. becauſe it goes to the reality; and therefore, if three tenants in common diſtrain thirty beaſts, one of them muſt avow for ten, the other for ten, and the third for ten more.

Per curiam. The huſband may diſtrain for rent due to his wife, and avow for it alone, becauſe the right of the rent due is in him alone. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 207. Raym. vol. 1. p. 499.

Trinity, 8 W. 3. Anonymous.

Per curiam. A feoffment was made to the uſe of the feoffor for life, remainder to W. R. by a will, yet the authorities which prove it to be ſo, do likewiſe prove, that it would be otherwiſe in a deed, as in this caſe. But not allowed.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. This is but one entire ſentence of limitation, the intent whereof is very plain, and the rule of law is only, that an eſtate of inheritance cannot paſs without words of inheritance; but there is no rule in law, that words of inheritance may not be abridged by ſubſequent words, as in the preſent caſe. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 337.

But the matter of the tenancy in common muſt be intended to be found on the inquiſition, otherwiſe it is not law. For if A. has land in which B. has common of paſture for ſheep, and A. is outlawed, and B.'s title is not found on the inquiſition, his cattle may be taken on a writ of levari facias, until he has pleaded his title in the Exchequer, and has it allowed; otherwiſe, if his title had been found on the inquiſition. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 308.

In this caſe, which ſee fully ſtated in page 443 of this work, under the head Evidence, it was urged, 1ſt, That the remainder to the iſſues females being in contingency, the firſt daughter that was born the remainder attached in her, and could not be diveſted by the birth of a ſecond; and then A. having ſuffered a recovery of the whole, her heir at law had a good title.

2dly, It was urged, that they were tenants in common, and ſo the plaintiff was barred of this action by the ſtatute of limitations, M. having been dead fifty years; for which Co. Lit. 188. a. was cited, where a tenant for life, remainder to the right heirs of J. S. and J. N. J. S. died firſt, and afterwards J. N. died, their heirs are tenants in common.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The eſtate is limited by way of uſe to the iſſues females, and iſſues females comprehend all iſſues females. Then the caſe is, tenant for life, remainder to all his iſſues females, &c. if the tenant for life has but one daughter, ſhe ſhall have the whole eſtate tail; if he has more daughters, they ſhall be joint-tenants for life, with ſeveral inheritances. If the contingent remainder veſts during the particular eſtate, or that inſtant that it determines, it is enough. The caſe in Co. Lit. of a feoffment to the uſe of himſelf for life, and of ſuch wife as he ſhould afterwards marry, and then he marries, he and his wife are joint-tenants; which caſe will rule this caſe in queſtion. For it is a joint claim by the ſame conveyance which makes joint-tenants, and not the time of the veſting. And he ſeemed to deny the caſe cited out of Co. Litt. 188. But as to the poſſeſſion of one tenant in common being the poſſeſſion of the other, he ſaid, that did not hold place againſt the ſtatute of limitations; and beſides, if one of them only takes the profits, it is an ouſting of the other. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 310.

Caſe. The father being ſeiſed of a copyhold of inheritance, ſurrendered the ſame to the uſe of his five children, equally to be divided, and to their heirs reſpectively, the queſtion was, whether they were joint-tenants, or tenants in common?

Gould and Turton, Juſtices, held, that they were tenants in common, becauſe the laſt diſtributive words, viz. and to their heirs reſpectively, ſhew, that it was the intent of the ſurrenderor, it ſhould be ſo, which, in the caſe of a copyhold and of an uſe ought to be purſued.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. They are joint-tenants; as to this eſtate being copyhold that is not to be regarded, for that will no more paſs by improper words than other eſtates, and this is not properly an uſe, for there is no ceſtui que uſe in this caſe, nor any ſtatute operation, but the ſurrenderees are in from the Lord of the Manor, and the ſurrender to the uſe of ſuch perſons ſhews only the intention of ſerving ſuch eſtates and limitations, ſo that this uſe is no more than a gift to five children, equally to be divided, and that this is a joint-tenancy, and not a tenancy in common; and for theſe reaſons following:

1ſt, Becauſe the words, equally to be divided, import no more than the precedent words implied, viz. that the children ſhould have all alike; which they cannot have if they are not joint-tenants.

2dly, The words, equally to be divided, does not make them tenants in common; becauſe, as tenants in common, they muſt be ſeiſed pro indiviſo, as to the poſſeſſion; whereas thoſe words, divide their tenancy and poſſeſſion, and whenever the eſtate comes to be divided, they ceaſe to be tenants in common; therefore it is abſurd to ſay, that theſe words create an eſtate in common.

Laſtly, A joint-tenancy is favoured in law; but if this was a tenancy in common, then the tenements and tenures would be multiplied; for here would be five copyhold eſtates, and five fines to the Lord of the Manor, inſtead of one before. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 206. Raym. vol. 1. p. 622.

Trinity, 1 Ann. Machil v. Clark.

A tenant in tail covenanted to ſtand ſeiſed to the uſe of himſelf for life, remainder to John his eldeſt ſon in tail, and afterwards ſuffered a common recovery with a ſingle voucher, wherein he was tenant to the præcipe. The firſt queſtion was, what operation the covenant had? for if it made any alteration in the eſtate-tail, the recovery did not bar; and if it did not, the recovery and ſingle voucher did bar.

The court held the recovery good, and affirmed the judgment. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 619. Raym. vol. 2. p. 778.

Eaſter, 2 Ann. Jacky v. Butler.

Two joint-partners being in trade, a judgment was entered againſt one of them; and on a fieri facias iſſuing, all the goods, being undivided, were taken in execution. The partner, againſt whom the judgment was not entered, appealed to this court for relief; when it was held, that the ſheriff could not ſell more than a moiety; for the property of the other moiety was not affected by the judgment, nor by the execution. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 871.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Clerk v. Withers.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Suppoſe a tenant in tail ſuffers a recovery, and dies, the iſſue may falſify this, though he ſhall not falſify the very point tried; but he ſhall ſay, that his anceſtor might have given ſuch and ſuch evidence in maintenance of his title, and omitted to do it; and if a writ of entry in the poſt be brought, and the iſſue is, whether J. S. died ſeiſed or not, and it is found againſt the tenant in tail, his iſſue after him ſhall not come and ſay, that he did not die ſeiſed; but he may come and ſay, that ſuch evidence might have been given in maintenance of the title. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 296.

Eaſter, 6 Ann. Tuckerman v. Jefferies.

A deviſe of all my eſtate to my two nieces, to be equally divided between them during their lives; and from and after their deceaſe, to the right heirs of one of them. The opinion of the court ſeemed to be, that this was a joint-tenancy, by reaſon of the danger of the contingent remainder, which otherwiſe muſt be loſt. Adjourned.

In Trinity term following, Holt, Chief Juſtice, delivered the opinion of the court, that this was a joint-tenancy, by reaſon of the contingent remainder. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 108.

Michaelmas, 7 Ann. Lord Oſſulſton's Caſe.

One F. being ſeiſed in fee, and having iſſue three ſons and a daughter, and having likewiſe one brother, deviſed his lands to his eldeſt ſon in tail-male, and ſo to the ſecond and third ſon, remainder to his own right heirs male for ever; the three ſons died without iſſue, and the queſtion was, whether the daughter, as heir general, or the brother of the teſtator, as heir male, ſhould have the lands?

Per curiam. None ſhall take by theſe words heirs male, but he who is heir male of the body of the teſtator, for no collateral heir male ſhall take by ſuch a limitation by way of remainder; for at common law, if land was given by a common conveyance to one and his heirs male, there the word male ſhall be rejected, for there was no ſuch thing as an heir male, without ſaying of whoſe body; and if by letters patent lands were limited to W. R. and his heirs male, it is void, though it is otherwiſe in a will; and the reaſon is, becauſe in a will the law ſupplies thoſe words, of his body, and that makes it a deviſe to him and the heirs male of his body, for heirs or heir male cannot be a name of purchaſe, but heirs males of his body may: therefore, if there is no ſuch thing in propriety of ſpeech as an heir male, without ſaying of whoſe body, for that reaſon heir male of his body, or heirs males of itſelf, where the law will ſupply theſe words, of his body, as it will in a deviſe, may be a good name of purchaſe; but yet the party who would take by ſuch a limitation muſt be ſuch a perſon as may be an heir by the common law, and would take by that name. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 336.

Waterman v. Soper.

It was ruled by Holt, Chief Juſtice, at the Lent aſſizes at Wincheſter, on a trial at niſi prius 1697-8, 1ſt, That if A. plants a tree on the extremeſt limits of his land, and the tree growing extends its root into the land of B. next adjoining, A. and B. are tenants in common of this tree; but if all the root grows in the land of A. though the boughs over-ſhadow the land of B. yet the branches follow the root, and the property of the whole is in A.

2dly, Two tenants in common of a tree, and one cuts down the whole tree; though the other cannot have an action for the tree, yet he may have an action for the ſpecial damage by this cutting; as where one tenant in common deſtroys a whole flight of pigeons, &c. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 737.

Anonymous.

The eſſential difference between tenants in common and joint-tenants is, that tenants in common hold their lands either by ſeveral titles, or ſeveral rights, but joint-tenants hold them by one title, and one right; but there is no difference between them as to the poſſeſſion, and the manner of taking the profits. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 208.

Tenants in common were not compellable at common law, before the ſtatute, to make partition, no more than joint-tenants; and by Holt, Chief Juſtice, in ſuing out a writ of Partition, the party never ſhews whether he is a tenant in common or joint-tenant. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 208.

Michaelmas, 1 Geo. 3. Goodtitle on the Demiſe of Bridges and others v. The Duke of Chandos.

On a motion for a new trial on a verdict in ejectment for the plaintiff.

Lord Mansfield. It is now fully ſettled and eſtabliſhed, that a tenant in tail may, if he pleaſes, either turn his eſtate tail into a fee, or alienate it for his own benefit, by duly ſuffering a common recovery.

He muſt have a ſufficient eſtate and power, to qualify him to ſuffer ſuch recovery.

He muſt either be the tenant in tail in poſſeſſion, or he muſt have the concurrence of the freeholder, who claims under the ſame ſettlement.

This principle is adhered to by ſtat. 14 Geo. 2. c. 20.

The tenant for life, whoſe conſent is neceſſary to the tenant in tail in remainder, to enable him to cut off the entail, is not the leſſee of the land under a beneficial leaſe; but the original tenant for life claiming under the family ſettlement, and having a life eſtate ſettled on him prior (in order of ſucceſſion) to the other's remainder in tail. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1072.

Michaelmas, 5 Geo. 3. Swann v. Broome.

Adjudged, That though common recoveries are now conſidered as common aſſurances, yet they muſt be conducted and compleated according to certain ceremonies and ſolemnities, which bear analogy to the proceedings in real actions; and the want of ſuch neceſſary ceremonies and ſolemnities invalidates a common recovery, as much as the want of a third witneſs invalidates a will of lands.

A judgment relates to the eſſoign-day of the term, unleſs any thing appears on the record to the contrary, ſhewing, "that the judgment cannot have that relation."

If a tenant in tail was alive when the judgment was given, or may be ſuppoſed to have been given, ſuch judgment is good; if not, then it is a bad judgment, becauſe given after the death of the tenant in tail. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1596

Trial, &c.

Trinity, 3 W. & M. Chew v. Briggs.

A trial was had in Middleſex on a traverſe in Surry, and this was moved in arreſt of judgment; and Holt, Chief Juſtice, was of opinion to ſtay judgment, for that a wrong county is not remedied by the ſtatute, but only a wrong venue in a right county; the words of ſtat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. cap. 8. enact, "that no judgment after verdict ſhall be arreſted or reverſed, for that there was no right venue, ſo the cauſe be tried by a jury of the proper place or county where the action was laid. Theſe words are reſtrictive. Dolbin and Gregory, Juſtices, were of a different opinion.

And Sir John Jackſon's caſe was cited; the court ſaid that was proved to be by fraud; and ſince that, in Hale's time, a new trial had been granted, the verdict being obtained by fraud; but this verdict being only againſt evidence, but no fraud, a new trial was denied. A new trial was granted in the caſe of The Queen v. Coke, the acquittal being by ſurpriſe on the proſecutor for want of notice, it being brought on by the defendant. *Vide Mod. A new trial was moved for on affidavit, that the jury took an act of common council out with them, and that printed libels were ſpread againſt the defendant; and it was denied: for as to the firſt it differs from Lady Ive's caſe, where they took a map of one ſide, which was evidence on neither ſide: and ſo deemed an act of neither ſide, tho' evidence on both; but admitted to be irregular.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a jury eat at their own charge, it is fineable, but that verdict ſhall ſtand; otherwiſe if at the charge of one of the parties, and the verdict is found for him. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 645.

Eaſter, 9 W. 3. The King v. Bear.

On an indictment for a libel, the defendant was acquitted; the court was moved for a new trial, but it was denied: and the court ſaid, that antiently it was never done in criminal caſes where defendants had been acquitted; latterly, where a verdict has been obtained by fraud or practice, as ſtealing away witneſſes, &c. it has been done, but never yet was done merely on the reaſon that the verdict was againſt evidence. And afterwards in Michaelmas 10 W. 3. Holt, Chief Juſtice ſaid, in indictments for perjury we never do it, becauſe the verdict is againſt evidence; but if you prove a trick, as no notice, &c. it is otherwiſe. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 646.

The defendant was found guilty of perjury at a trial at bar, and now a motion was made for a new trial.

1ſt. Becauſe the verdict was againſt evidence.

2dly. Becauſe it was againſt the opinion of the jury who gave it.

The court held, that when a cauſe is tried at bar a new writ is never granted, for the ſingle reaſon, that the jury went againſt evidence. It is true, it was granted in my Lord Fitzwalter's caſe, for there was a miſbehaviour in the jury in flinging dice to decide whether they ſhould find for the plaintiff or defendant, which would alter the trial by verdict of twelve to a trial by lot; ſo likewiſe for exceſſive damages for words, as for calling the plaintiff traitor, and the jury giving 500 l. damages. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Wits v. Polehampton.

The court was moved for a new trial, becauſe the defendant having pleaded a compoſition, had forgot to carry down witneſſes to prove the ſubſcriber's hands; and the motion was denied, becauſe the debt was juſt.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, remembered where an action of debt on a bond was brought againſt an heir, who pleaded riens per deſcent, but the verdict went againſt him by omitting to bring the ſettlement to the trial; and the court being moved thereon, refuſed to grant a new trial, becauſe it was a juſt debt. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 647.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Anonymous.

In an action of covenant to pay a certain ſum, viz. 100 l. and a grant that on default it ſhould be lawful for the covenantee to enter and take the profits; the defendant pleaded entry and prizal del profits in bar, and judgment was for the plaintiff on demurrer, and on the writ of inquiry the jury gave damages: and on motion a new writ of inquiry was awarded; for debt might have been brought on this covenant: and this is not like an iſſue where the jury are to give no more damages than are proved; but here the jury are to give the whole, unleſs the defendant proves ſomething in mitigation, which was not done in this caſe; therefore the common rule holds, viz. that no new trial, or new writ of inquiry, ſhall be for too ſmall damages, yet there being a contrivance in this caſe, it differs. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 647.

Per curiam. Becauſe the plaintiff had damages againſt two.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid the jury ought not to be allowed to ſever the damages; and that in an action againſt twelve, and two of them make default, and the reſt acquitted againſt evidence; yet there ought to be no new trial, becauſe there were coſts once recovered. If treſpaſs be brought againſt two, and one of them makes default, and the other is found guilty, and damages be againſt him; and then the other comes in, and a declaration is againſt him, with a ſimul cum, and damages againſt him too, being found guilty, and the two poſteas are returned, here the plaintiff may chuſe the largeſt damages given, but then he ſhould have entered a non pros againſt theſe two; though even ſo, I durſt not warrant granting him a new trial. *Vide Mod. Rokeby, Juſtice, was for granting it on the caſe in Style, but the reſt of the court were againſt it.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The reaſon of granting new trials on verdicts againſt evidence at the aſſizes is, becauſe they are ſubordinate trials appointed by ſtat. Weſt. 2. c. 30.

c. 30. and there have been new trials antiently, as appears from this: that it is a good challenge to the juror, 'that he has been a juror before in the ſame cauſe; but we muſt not make ourſelve abſolue judges of law and fact too; and there never was a new trial after a trial at bar in ejectment, but in caſe of ill practice; for the plaintiff may bring a new ejectment: on this a new trial at bar was denied in Sir Richard Temple's caſe, where the jury found a point of law on the ſtatute of bankrupts, againſt the opinion of the court. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 648.

Note. In Trinity 4 Ann, in this court, between the truſtees of my Lady Sandwich and my Lord Sandwich, though the eſtate was 3000 l. per annum, a new trial at bar was denied, becauſe the title of the leſſor of the plaintiff being from the defendant himſelf, there would be nothing to do but to prove the executing of a conveyance. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 648.

On an indictment for murder the culprits fled, but afterwards returned and ſurrendered themſelves.

Hol, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, the trial ought to go on, not out of favour, but of right; for, by the law of the land, malefactors ought to be brought to puniſhment in convenient time for public example; and it is five months ſince the fact was committed, and it was almoſt in the face of the court; and ſure five months is convenient time: then, as to their flight, that ought not to be made an ingredient, for they incurred the penalty of the law for that already, viz. The forfeiture of goods and chattels in caſe of conviction. And as to the point of notice, the proſecutor ought to have been in court at the return of non eſt inventus, to take out a new proceſs, and to have notice of ſurrender; and the not doing whereof argues his laches: 3 H. 7. a ſtatute for ſpeedy trying of murderers, which is not in favour of offenders, but to bring them to juſtice; and there has been a neglect in the proſecutor even ſince notice given, for that was on the tenth inſt. and this is now the twenty-fourth: then it was moved they ſhould be bailed; and he ſaid, ſince trial is put off for default in them, there is no room for bail without ſome ſpecial cauſe; and he ordered it to be made a rule of court, that the witneſſes be bound over to appear againſt the priſoners the next term. *Vide Mod. Hilary, 12 W. 3. Anonymous.

Per curiam. If there be evidence on both ſides, and a verdict againſt the ſtrength of evidence, if ſuch trial be not peremptory, there ought not to be a new trial. General cauſes of new trials are want of due notice: practice or miſdemeanor in the jury in either party, or their agents; the abſence of ſome material witneſs, which they could not then have; verdict againſt evidence, exceſſive damages, &c.

Note, In many caſes, on granting of a new trial, the former verdict ought to ſtand as a ſecurity, for otherwiſe the party, againſt whom it paſſed, might ſpirit away the evidence, on whoſe teſtimony it was obtained, and ſo without any corroboration of his right, deprive him of the benefit of his verdict. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 439.

Per curiam. If a new trial be granted for irregularity, there ſhall be no coſts paid for it; but if a defence be made, it may help the irregularity. If a new trial be on the merits of the cauſe, there muſt be coſts. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 370.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. In a caſe between the Earl of Peterborough and Sadler his farmer, a trial being concerning the value of improvements made by Sadler, a jury of farmers having given 200 l. damages, which was thought exceſſive, and therefore a new trial was granted, and a jury of gentlemen ordered, who only gave 40 l. whereon a new trial now was moved for, for Sadler, becauſe of the ſmallneſs of the damages; and Holt ſaid, that one muſt not always conclude, becauſe the court grants a new trial, that they are ſatisfied that the firſt verdict was bad; but it is often becauſe the thing may require a re-examination: and a new trial was granted. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 347.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. A bill of exceptions is no ſuperſedeas of a judgment; but the way is to bring a writ of error, and aſſign the exceptions for error. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 609.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. The King v. Ward.

The defendant was indicted for barretry, in which caſe he ought to have a copy of the articles to be inſiſted on againſt him at trial before-hand, that he may have an opportunity of preparing a defence. And here a notice left with the defendant's ſervant was adjudged ill; and a trial, without due notice, ought not to ſtand. And when there is a rule to give a copy of articles, and that is not done, the proſecutor ought not to be admitted at the trial to give any evidence, and then the defendant is of courſe acquitted. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 516.

Michaelmas, 13 W. 3. The King v. Young.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. To try the defendant in this court there muſt be a venire facias returnable at the common day, and fifteen days between the teſte and return of it; and though the record of the outlawry, and all proceedings againſt him, be in this court, yet by ſtat. 6 H. 8. c. 6. we may ſend them down to the Old Baily; but we could not ſend them a record of an indictment before that ſtatute: and ſuch caſes have been ſometimes tried at niſi prius. And he quoted the caſe of one Turner, in Lord Hales's time, who was brought hither from the Old Baily to reverſe an outlawry; and the court were clear for ſending him back, if the proſecutor had not deſired he ſhould be tried here. And in all caſes whatſoever, where the indictment happens to come hither, though it be not by a certiorari, we may in our diſcretion ſend it back: and ſo it was ruled here. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 562.

In an action for words a rule was, for the ſheriff to return a ſpecial jury; who, notwithſtanding the rule had been ſerved on him, returned only a common jury; after trial, this was moved by the defendant for a new trial, which was denied, becauſe he had made a defence; for ſince, if the verdict had gone for him, he would have had the advantage of it, it is fit he ſhould ſubmit to it now it is gone againſt him; otherwiſe, if he had not made a defence. *Vide Mod. Ford v. Tilly.

An inquiry found four voluntary eſcapes, for which Ford, warden of the Fleet, forfeited his office: iſſues hereupon were tried in this court at bar. One eſcape was proved by a witneſs, who was aſked if he was never burnt in the hand for ſtealing a tankard? he anſwered, No. A new trial was moved for on producing the record of the conviction, and the court denied the motion, 1ſt, Becauſe it was a trial at bar. 2dly, It is no reaſon for a new trial that you for the defendant came not prepared; and the Chief Juſtice ſaid, Soam's caſe was a hard caſe. 3 Keb. 365, 369. 2 Lev. 114. And afterwards, 4 Ann. in this court, Cockcroft v. Smith. That the party's evidence was not ready, was held no reaſon for a new trial, though at niſi prius; and a new trial was denied. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 853.

In an action of covenant, after a verdict for the plaintiff, the defendant moved for a new trial, ſuggeſting that he was an alien, and that the ſheriff had returned twelve of the jury, but that there was not an alien amongſt them.

Per curiam. The defendant ſhall never have a trial per medietatem linguæ, without prayer; and if it is granted, and the ſheriff returns none but denizens, the defendant ought to challenge them before the trial; and if the challenge is not allowed, then to inſiſt on a bill of exceptions; but the ſuggeſtion now made by this defendant is againſt the record; and if it is true, he may have an action againſt the ſheriff for a falſe return. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 362.

Hilary, 1 Ann. Fenwick v. Lady Groſvenor.

In ejectment after a trial at bar, a new trial was moved for, on affidavits that ſeveral witneſſes abſented themſelves in Holland, by reaſon of a report ſpread abroad there, that one of the defendant's witneſſes was confined by impriſonment; but it was denied, becauſe it did not appear that the plaintiff did ſpread it, or occaſioned the ſpreading of it: the court was diſſatisfied with the verdict, but cited Croſs's caſe for a falſe return of a mandamus tried at bar, and by conſent of all ſides, one point was to be found ſpecially; yet the jury found a general verdict, and the court would not grant a new trial. It has never been done here but on iſſues out of Chancery, which being only to ſatisfy the conſcience of the Chancellor, are not of ſtrict right. So a new trial was denied. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 650.

Eaſter, 1 Ann. Anonymous.

Where a trial is had on a view, this court will not eaſily be induced to grant a new one: for the view is ſuppoſed to govern the jury more than the evidence at the trial; and therefore in ſuch caſes, there ought to be ſome great irregularity in the jury to obtain a new trial. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 1.

Eaſter, 1 Ann. Anonymous.

When a trial has been twice had on the ſame iſſue, and both verdicts agree, it would be unreaſonable to grant a new trial: but if a ſheriff returns a jury contrary to the rule of the court, or commits any ſuch irregularity to the prejudice of either party, it may be a good cauſe to ſet aſide the verdict, &c. but when no material cauſe can be ſhewn, this court will always have too great an eſteem for a verdict, to grant a new trial. And yet, when any unfortunate accident happens, or ſome ſudden impediment, as ſickneſs, &c. to a witneſs, and a trial is had, and a verdict is given for the plaintiff, which might have been given for the defendant had that witneſs been produced; in ſuch caſes this court will grant a new trial, on paying coſts of the former trial. *Vide Mod. In order to a new trial, an affidavit was read, that one of the witneſſes had declared that he had got a guinea to ſtifle the truth.

Gould, Juſtice. An affidavit of him who had the guinea were ſomething, but his ſaying ſo is nothing. A witneſs laying a wager in the cauſe is no hinderance to his being a witneſs, for the other has intereſt in his evidence which he cannot deprive him of. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. p. 31.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Tomkins v. Hill.

It was agreed by the court, that if any judge of niſi prius allows or over-rules evidence, which he ought not to have done, on application to the court they will grant a new trial; for all writs of niſi prius are under the controul of the court out of which they iſſue. *Vide Mod. Holt, Chief Juſtice. A new trial ſhall be granted if the judge of niſi prius miſdirect the jury, becauſe thoſe trials are ſubject to the inſpection of the court. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 649.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Clerk v. Udall.

On a trial at niſi prius the jury gave exceſſive damages, and for this cauſe a new trial was granted. The ſecond jury gave the ſame damages again, and a ſecond new trial was moved for, and denied, becauſe there ought to be an end of things; but ſeveral caſes were cited, which the Chief Juſtice allowed, that where on the ſecond trial the jury have doubled the damages, a third trial had been granted. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 649.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. The Caſe of the Mayor and Aldermen of Briſtol.

It was held by the court, that a new trial cannot be granted in an inferior court; for they are not like trials by niſi prius, which are ſubordinate on writs iſſuing out of this court, over which the court have authority and inſpection; but this was a new trial after the firſt, which the court blamed. Vide Salk. vol. 2. page 650.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Hill v. Hill.

In an action brought in an inferior court, viz. in the court at Briſtol, the plaintiff had a verdict, and coſts were taxed; and after a ſecond ſcire facias againſt the bail, the judge of that court granted a new trial, and thereupon this court being moved, made a rule for the judge of the inferior court, to ſhew cauſe why an attachment ſhould not be granted againſt him.

Per curiam. Though a new trial ought to be allowed, if immediately obtained, yet it is a miſdemeanor in a judge to grant a new trial after the party has reſted ſo long under a former trial; and it may be a queſtion whether any court can grant a new trial to be had before themſelves; there cannot be a new trial at bar as there may at niſi prius; for in the laſt caſe it is but reaſonable, that the court ſhould judge how the judge of niſi prius has executed his authority. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 363.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Aſhwin v. Corbill.

Michaelmas, 2 Ann. Lazier v. Dyer.

It came to be a queſtion, whether the ſuing out of a venire or diſtringas after the expiration of four terms, was a proceeding within the term; becauſe it bears teſte the laſt day of the term, and has relation to the term? And the court held it was not; for though it be legally a proceeding of the term, yet it is not ſo in fact.

Note. Where it is an iſſue out of Chancery, notice of trial to the ſolicitor in that court is good; for as to this, they are but as one court. Vide Salk. vol. 2. page 651.

Trinity, 3 Ann. Way v. Yally.

The leſſor brought an action of debt for rent againſt his leſſee, upon a demiſe at London, of lands in Jamaica. The defendant pleaded to the juriſdiction of the court, that the matter ought to be tried in Jamaica; and it was urged that the leſſor cannot bring an action of debt here againſt the aſſignee of a term of lands in Ireland, and that if entry and ouſter were pleaded, it could not be tried here; and in this caſe the right of the plaintiff and defendant depends on foreign laws which cannot be given in evidence here.

Per curiam. Where an action is local, it muſt be laid accordingly; therefore if the leſſor declares on the privity of eſtate, and that lies in Ireland, the action muſt be brought there, for the eſtate is local; therefore ſuch leſſor cannot maintain an action of debt here againſt an aſſignee of a term in Ireland; for the action is founded on a privity of eſtate; otherwiſe where it is founded on a privity of contract, which is tranſitory; as debt for rent by the leſſor againſt the leſſee; for that may be maintained where the land lies not. Here it is by the leſſor againſt the leſſee on the privity of contract; and if a foreign iſſue, which is local, ſhould happen, it may be tried where the action is laid; for that purpoſe there may be a ſuggeſtion entered on the roll, that ſuch a place in ſuch a county is next adjacent; and it may be tried here by a jury from that place, according to the laws of that country; and upon nil debet pleaded, you may give the laws of that country in evidence. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 651.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. The Queen v. The Inhabitants of the County of Wilts.

On debate on a motion for a new trial, where the iſſue was, whether the county of Wilts at large, or the town of E. within the county, were obliged to repair the bridge of L in that county; an order of ſeſſion, formerly made on the inhabitants of L. to repair it, being offered in evidence for the county at the former trial, and rejected for this reaſon, that the juſtices of the peace have no juriſdiction over highways, but on a preſentment, and none had been to warrant this order.

Per curiam. It is a good cauſe to grant a new trial, that the judge who tried the cauſe over-ruled good evidence, or admitted that which was no evidence; though the other party has a remedy by a bill of exceptions.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If it be not obeyed, an attachment may go againſt the inhabitants of the whole county. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 307.

Trinity, 4 Ann. Scawen v. Garrett.

Michaelmas, 4 Ann. Highmore v. Walker.

In a cauſe to be tried at the ſittings, the defendant entered a ne recipiatur; and the queſtion was, whether the plaintiff could go on at the next ſittings without a new notice? It was agreed, that if a ne recipiatur had been entered, there muſt have been two days notice. The clerks, on the principal queſtion, thought no notice neceſſary; their reaſon was, becauſe the defendant himſelf had hindered the plaintiff's proceeding, and therefore ought at his peril to attend the next ſittings.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, that the notice fell to the ground with the trial: on which a rule was made, that where a ne recipiatur was entered, the plaintiff ſhall give notice the ſame ſittings, and before they are over, that he will proceed to trial the next ſittings: and it was ſaid, that if a cauſe be not entered two days before the ſittings, the defendant may enter a ne recipiatur. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 653.

Eaſter, 5 Ann. Dunkly v. Wade.

In an action on the caſe for negligently keeping his fire, a verdict was found for the plaintiff, and a new trial granted.

Michaelmas, 5 Ann. The Caſe of Sir Charles Berrington and others.

In an action of treſpaſs and falſe impriſonment againſt ſeveral defendants, the plaintiff had a verdict; and afterwards the court was moved for a new trial, becauſe as to one of the defendants, the verdict was againſt evidence.

Per curiam. This cannot be done, for the court cannot ſet aſide the verdict as to ſome, and not as to others; and to grant a new trial as to all would be a prejudice to thoſe who are duly acquitted. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 362.

Michaelmas, 6 Ann. Davis v. Daveril.

Hilary, 7 Ann. Fowbert v. Ekins.

In this cauſe the court was moved for a new trial, becauſe the poſtea was eaten by rats; but the court denied it, for there was part of it remained, and particularly the coſts and damages, written with the party's own hand. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 206.

Hilary, 12 Ann. The Queen v. The Corporation of Helſton, in Cornwall.

The queſtion in this caſe was, if on a trial a point of law be ſtarted by the judge, and the council do not take it up, but inſiſt on other facts, which are found againſt them; whereas, had the council inſiſted on the matter of law ſtirred by the judge, the verdict muſt have been given for them; whether this is a ſufficient cauſe to move for a new trial?

The whole court agreed that there could not be a new trial granted; and that though a verdict ſhould leave a party without remedy, yet if the council does not inſiſt, but expreſly waive it, that then there ought not to be a new trial. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 202.

Hilary, 2 Geo. 2. Anonymous.

On a motion for a new trial on behalf of the defendant, he having made a miſtake on the trial of the iſſue, in a point of evidence, which would have encountered the evidence given againſt him; and the miſtake was diſcovered ſince the trial. But the court diſallowed the motion; for if a new trial ſhould be granted on ſuch a pretence as this, the defendant might lie by; and if, on the evidence given, a verdict ſhould be againſt him, he might bring a new point to ſet aſide the trial, which may happen in all caſes. Vide Forteſcue, p. 40.

Michaelmas, 2 Geo. 2. The King v. Robert Hales.

The council moved for a trial at bar on an information filed for forgery; but it not being carried on at the expence of the crown, but of a private proſecutor, the court held that he muſt make out the uſual requiſites to bring it to the bar. So the motion was denied. And at another day, the council moved on an authority from the King to proſecute, and it was granted as of right to the King in his own cauſe. And in Hilary term following it was tried, and the defendant was convicted. And in Trinity term following being called down to judgment, he produced a pardon, which was allowed; and being only for a miſdemeanor, he was not put to the bar, nor did he plead it on his knees. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 816.

Eaſter, 4 Geo. 2. Seymour, Bart. qui tam v. Day.

The action was brought for the penalty in killing a hare, not being qualified. And the jury found for the defendant, contrary to the direction of the judge. But the court refuſed a new trial, ſaying it had never been carried ſo far on a penal action. Vide Stra. vol. 2. page 899.

Trinity, 5 & 6 Geo. 2. The King v. Lowfield.

An indictment for perjury being removed by certiorari, the defendant made up the record, and carried it down to the ſittings with a diſtringas. and Mr. Attorney's warrant for a tales. There being a ſpecial jury, eleven only appeared; and the council for the proſecutor would not pray tales, though the warrant was given them, and the council for the defendant not praying one, the cauſe was made, to remain for default of jurors. And on motion for coſts, for not going on to trial, the court held the defendant ſhould pay none, he having done all that was neceſſary to put the proſecutor in a capacity to try the cauſe if he would. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 937.

Eaſter, 7 Geo. 2. The King v. Gibſon.

The defendant was convicted of forgery, and would have moved for a new trial without appearing in court, inſiſting that this differed from a motion in arreſt of judgment. But the court held there was no difference; for the verdict fixes ſuch a preſumption of guilt, that the court will be ſure of him before they intimate any opinion; and even when the verdict was brought in, would have committed him, had he ſtaid in court. And the Chief Juſtice mentioned the caſes of The Queen v. Ridpath, Eaſter, 12 Ann. and The King v. Lant and Wombwell, for perjury, where the diſtinction now taken was over-ruled. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 969.

Eaſter, 7 Geo. 2. King v. Poole.

On a motion for a new trial on an information in the nature of a quo warranto againſt the defendant to ſhew cauſe by what authority he acted as Mayor of Liverpool, for that the verdict was found on the matter of law againſt the direction of the Judge: the Judge at laſt ordered the jury to find it ſpecially, but they brought in a general verdict.

Reſolved by the court, that the certificate of the Judge reſpecting the matter of fact as it appeared before him at the trial is concluſive, nor can any affidavit be received againſt it, for that would be to try the matter again on affidavit. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. page 23.

Trinity, 7 Geo. 2. The King v. Jeffs.

He was indicted for barratry; and after ſome ſtrong proof, the proſecutor could not go on for want of a copy of ſeveral proceſſes. Whereon it was inſiſted to withdraw a juror, as it was done in laſt term, on an indictment againſt the ſcavengers of St. Giles's, for not paying money according to a juſtice's order; and the parties not being prepared, the King's council conſented to withdraw a juror.

Lord Hardwicke at firſt ſeemed inclined to it; but on conſideration held, that there was a difference between that caſe, which may be compared to caſes of a civil nature, and this, where the puniſhment may be infamous, as the pillory; and for that reaſon it has never been done in perjury or forgery. And therefore he refuſed it in this caſe. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 984.

Eaſter, 8 Geo. 2. Jennings v. Warne.

On a motion to ſet aſide a verdict, becauſe after the jurors were retired, one of them came out from the reſt and received a bundle of papers from the attorney for the plaintiff, and carried the ſame to the reſt of the jury.

Lord Hardwicke. This matter will depend on whether theſe papers were delivered to the jury by conſent of both parties, for if that appeared, it would prevent the parties alledging any thing againſt it; but as no ſuch conſent appears here, the verdict muſt be ſet aſide. *Vide Caſes Temp. Michaelmas, 8 Geo. 2. The King v. Bell.

The court held, that all new trials were diſcretionary: though Holt, Chief Juſtice, entertained a notion of their being ancienter than the caſe in Stile's, from the challenge we meet with in old books, that the juror had before given a verdict in the ſame cauſe; yet it does not from thence follow, that the court granted a new trial on the evidence; for it might appear to be a miſtake on the record, or there might be other reaſons to award a venire facias de novo. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 995.

Trinity, 9 Geo. 2. Barker v. Sir Wolſon Dixie.

In a caſe for a malicious proſecution of an indictment for felony, the jury found for the plaintiff, and gave 5 s. damages; and on a motion for a new trial, on account of the ſmallneſs of damages, the court held, that there could be no new trial on that account, for this was not a falſe verdict, as finding for the defendant would be, and would ſubject them to an attaint; whereas, they having found rightly for the plaintiff, no attaint would lie: and new trials came in the room only of attaints, as a more expeditious and eaſy remedy. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1051.

Michaelmas, 10 Geo. 2. Dobſon v. Taylor.

This cauſe was tried by proviſoe, and the plaintiff was nonſuited, but that nonſuit was ſet aſide for want of a rule being given in the office. And this was agreed to be the old practice, but generally diſcontinued. Stiles's and Lilly's Regiſters were cited, and the nonſuit ſet aſide. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1055.

Hilary, 11 Geo. 2. French qui tam v. Wiltſhire.

After a verdict for the plaintiff for 500 l. penalty for keeping a Pharo-table, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the venire was addreſſed to the body of the county, whereas actions on penal ſtatutes are excepted in the act or amendment of the law, but the court held, that ſince the jury-act, 3 Geo. 2. c. 25. the ſheriff could return no other than the general panel, and therefore the proviſoe was virtually repealed: or, if not, yet ſtat. 5 Geo. c. 13. had cured this either as a defect in form or ſubſtance. And actions of debt are not within the proviſoe in the laſt mentioned act. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1085.

Michaelmas, 11 Geo. 2. Hamilton v. Style, and Wilkes v. Eames.

On conſideration of the jury act, 3 Geo. 2. c. 25, ſec. 16, which ſays, that the party applying for a ſpecial jury ſhall be at the coſts of ſtriking the ſame; the court held, that if the verdict goes on that ſide which moved ed for the ſpecial jury, the extraordinary allowance to a ſpecial jury, and all the expences, except what attends the actual ſtriking, ſhould be taxed and allowed againſt the loſing party. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1080.

Trinity, 12 Geo. 2. Heath v. Walker.

On looking into the record there was no iſſue joined; for it was, and the ſaid, the defendant, inſtead of the plaintiff, ſimiliter; it was therefore objected, that the Chief Juſtice had no commiſſion to try any iſſue. And the doubt was, what to do, for the jury had been ſworn. And on adviſing with the bar, the Chief Juſtice diſmiſſed the jury, for he could not call the plaintiff, or ſuffer the defendant to take a verdict. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1117.

Hilary, 12 Geo. 2. Smith, on the Demiſe of Dormer, v. Parkhurſt and others.

On a motion made for a new trial, three objections were made. 1ſt, That it was after a trial at bar; 2dly, That it was in the caſe of a ſpecial verdict; and, 3dly, That it was in ejectment.

As to the firſt, the court held, that in the caſe of a verdict againſt evidence, it being a trial at bar, was no objection to a new trial, which had been granted in the caſe of Bewdly, and in the caſe of Sir Chriſtopher Muſgrave v. Nevinſon, Eaſter, 10 Geo. 1.

As to the ſecond objection, they gave no opinion, it not being neceſſary to determine it on the rule they intended to pronounce in this caſe.

As to the third objection, they ſtrongly inclined, that the verdict not being final in ejectment, a new trial ought not to be granted, but on particular circumſtances, where juſtice is no otherwiſe to be attained. And they obſerved, that no caſe had been cited of a new trial in ejectment after a trial at bar.

But the point on which the new trial in this caſe was denied was, becauſe they ſaid the evidence was doubtful, and in ſuch a caſe a verdict at bar ought to ſtand. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1105.

Michaelmas, 12 Geo. The King v. Armſtrong.

After a verdict for the King, in an information in nature of a quo warranto, the proſecutor gave the uſual four-days rule in the office, and ſigned an interlocutory judgment. But before the coſts were taxed, or any final judgment ſigned, the defendant came and moved for a new trial. And the court held he was too late; for though theſe motions may be received, even in another term, yet that is on a ſuſpicion that nothing has been done ſince the verdict; and ſo it was held, Trinity, 10 Geo. 1. The King v. Pollard, and Michaelmas, 9 Geo. 1. Gilman v. Smith, where, on the plea ſide, the four-days rule was out, the court held the defendant was not too late, there being no judgment ſigned, and that ſigning judgment was the material act. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1102.

Michaelmas, 14 Geo. 2. Aſhley v. Aſhley.

The judge who tried the cauſe (which was on a promiſſory note for 5000 l. which the defendant inſiſted was forged) certified, that the weight of the evidence was with the plaintiff, and he thought the jury would find for the plaintiff; but they found for the defendant.

Per curiam. As there was evidence on the part of the defendant, the jury are the proper judges which ſcale preponderates, it cannot be ſaid to be a verdict againſt evidence, and therefore we will grant no new trial. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1142.

Michaelmas, 19 Geo. 2. Mattiſon qui tam v. Allanſon.

An action was brought on the late ſtatute againſt horſe-racing for the penalty, and the jury found a verdict for the defendant, contrary to plain evidence; and the court denied a new trial, there being no proof of any miſbehaviour in the plaintiff, or tampering with the jury. And this was within the reaſon of caſes in the Exchequer, where verdicts for defendants are never ſet aſide for penalties in the caſe of duties; and this is excepted out of the ſtatute of jeofails as much as indictments. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1238.

Eaſter, 30 Geo. 2. Peirſe, Eſq. v. Lord Fauconbery.

This was a trial at bar, on the civil ſide of the court, by a ſpecial jury of the county of York.

The queſtion was concerning a right to tract or tow veſſels, on the banks of the river Tees, (which divides Yorkſhire from the county Palatine of Durham) from Yarum bridge up to Low Warſall.

There had been a former iſſue tried, "whether the "river Tees was navigable from Yarum bridge to Low "Warſall:" which iſſue had been found in the affirmative.

The preſent trial was a new trial, directed by the court of Chancery, on an iſſue, "whether the plaintiff "had a right to a track-path on each ſide of the river "alternatively, according to the courſe of its banks, "for the convenience of towing, without let or hin"drance from, or paying any acknowledgement to the "reſpective owners of the ſoil."

The trial laſted till about two o'clock on Sunday morning; at which time the jury (after ſtaying out about a quarter of an hour) brought in a verdict for the plaintiff. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 292.

Eaſter, 30 Geo. 2. Henry Earl of Carliſle v. Armſtrong and others.

This was a trial at bar on the civil ſide of the court.

Three queſtions were to be hereby tried;

1ſt. Whether, on the death or alienation of the tenants of the barony of Gilleſland in the county of Cumberland, a reaſonable arbitrary fine at the will of the lord, be payable to the lord or not?

2dly. Whether the tenants have liberty to let for three years, or mortgage, without licence of the lord, and without paying any fine at all?

3dly. Whether they had liberty to exchange, &c. without licence or fine?

The defendant's council waived the ſecond queſtion, and about ſix o'clock in the afternoon this trial ended in a verdict for the plaintiff, on all trover iſſues. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 333.

Hilary, 31 Geo. 2. The King v. Martha Gray.

The defendant ſtood indicted for a nuiſance in ſtopping up a foot-way leading through Richmond Park.

The preſent queſtion before the court was, whether the trial (for which notice had been regularly given by the proſecutors "to try it at the next Surry aſſizes") ſhould be put off or not?

The cauſe alledged for putting it off by the defendant's council was, that there had been a libel publiſhed relative to the queſtion in iſſue, with intention to influence the public, and the jury who ſhould try the cauſe.

Lord Mansfield, (who delivered the opinion of the court) ſaid, that the trial of theſe informations for publiſhing the libel, was not ſo connected with the merits of the queſtion to be tried on the indictment, (which was a mere queſtion of civil right, though in the form of a criminal proſecution) as that the trial of the civil right ought to be ſtayed till the determination of the information againſt theſe publiſhers of the libel. Therefore the court diſcharged the rule made thereon. Vide Bur vol. 1. p. 510.

Trinity, 32 & 33 Geo. 2. The King v. Cowle.

Adjudged, That where this court has juriſdiction of a matter, if from any cauſe, it cannot be tried in the place, it ſhall be tried as near as may be. All local matters ariſing in Wales, triable in this court, are, by the common law, tried by a jury of the next county in England. So as to the Cinque Ports, the venire facias ſhall be awarded of the neighbourhood of the next vill, either in the county of Kent or the county of Suſſex. So it is alſo as to the Iſle of Ely: ſo likewiſe as to Ireland; a venire was directed to the ſheriff of Salop, as the next Engliſh county. So in parts of England itſelf, where an impartial trial cannot be had in the proper county, it ſhall be tried in the next county. This is the antient and general rule of this court in matters of trial, where they have juriſdiction. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 859.

Trinity, 2 Geo. 3. The King v. Harris and others.

On a motion for a new trial grounded on an affidavit to the purport following a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

Purport of the affidavit, "that they verily believed that "there could not be a fair and impartial trial had by "a jury of the city of Glouceſter;" without giving any particular reaſon or grounds for entertaining ſuch a belief.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on ſhewing cauſe, the court delivered their opinion.

Lord Mansfield. No two things can be more different than changing the venue, and continuing it, as it were, with ſuch a ſuggeſtion on the roll as is now propoſed. Notwithſtanding the locality of ſome ſort of actions or of informations for miſdemeanors, if the matter cannot be tried at all, or cannot be fairly and impartially tried in the proper county, it ſhall be tried in the next adjoining county.

Now, in the preſent caſe, this general ſwearing to apprehenſion and belief only, is not a ſufficient ground for entering ſuch a ſuggeſtion, eſpecially as it is ſworn on "the other ſide, that there is a liſt returned up, con-"ſiſting of above ſix hundred perſons qualified to ſerve:" and therefore there is no reaſon for the court's granting what is now prayed.

Per curiam. Let the rule be diſcharged. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1330.

Trover.

Michaelmas, 2 W. & M. Hook v. Galloway.

In an action of trover for ten weights.

Per curiam. In trover, if the jury can underſtand it, it will be well enough, for damages only are to be recovered therein; but in detinue, where the thing itſelf is to be recovered, it is otherwiſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 3.

Hilary, 3 W. & M. 3. Benbridge v. Day.

In trover for ſeveral things, and amongſt the reſt pro duobus falcris; and on a demurrer to the declaration, for that falcris was an inſenſible word,

Holt, Chief Juſtice, would not abate the declaration: becauſe he ſaid that the plaintiff might take ſeveral damages as to the other things, and might releaſe them as to this word, and ſo take judgment for the reſt. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 366.

Michaelmas, 4 W. & M. Cook v. Boſinger.

In an action of trover the plaintiff declared, that he was poſſeſſed of the goods and chattels following, as of the goods and chattels his property, to wit, one writing obligatory, and one warrant, &c.

The defendant pleaded in abatement that the bond and warrant were not chattels; and upon a demurrer to this plea it was ſaid, that neither the bond or the value thereof can be demanded by ſuch names as goods and chattels, becauſe (as the opinion is in Yelverton) a bond will not paſs by ſuch general names.

In detinue the thing itſelf muſt be ſpecially named, becauſe it is to be recovered in money: the ſame reaſon may govern this caſe.

But it was anſwered, that by a gift of all his goods and chattels a bond would paſs; and this was the opinion of Fitzherbert in the caſe of Dyer, and to this opinion the court now inclined. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 156.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Fuller v. Smith. Error.

On a writ of error in this court on a judgment in C. B. in trover againſt ten, wherein the plaintiff declares of finding by ten, and a converſion by nine, and judgment againſt all ten.

Per curiam. The converſion is the giſt of the action; for if a man find goods, it is lawful for him to take them, wherefore it muſt be certainly error; but if you get it amended in the Common Pleas, we will get it amended here. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 101.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Hartford v. Jones.

In an action of trover and converſion the defendant pleaded, that the goods were caſt away, and they ſaved and detained them till they were paid for their trouble. The plaintiff demurred.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, held, that they might retain for payment, as a carrier for his hire; and ſalvage is allowed by all nations: he that ſerves another, ought in reaſon to be paid for his ſervice; but the plea is naught; for if the detainer be lawful, he does not confeſs a converſion: I never knew but one ſpecial plea good in trover, Yelv. 198. And the rule was in the principal caſe, to waive the plea, and plead not guilty. 2 Cro. 68, 69. 3 Cro. 262. Vide Raym. vol. 1. page 393.

Caſe. A captain contracted with ſeamen to go on a voyage, and after he had got them on board, he would not pay them according to agreement; on which they demanded their goods, which he refuſed to deliver up; and Holt, Chief Juſtice, held this a good evidence of converſion.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. In trover, the plaintiff ought to prove the property of goods in him, and at leaſt a demand and refuſal; and if there be ſeveral parcels, the uſual way to give evidence is, to make an inventory of them, and prove the property of the goods mentioned in it, and a demand and refuſal of them. *Vide Mod. Eaſter, 1 Ann. Lumly v. Quarry, Judge of the Admiralty of Penſilvania.

In an action of trover and converſion for a ſhip, the action was laid in London, and being removed by habeas corpus to this court, the queſtion was, whether there ſhould be bail as this caſe ſtood.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Though this action is brought here by habeas corpus, yet this court may enquire into the cauſe of action; and if they ſee occaſion, order ſpecial bail: for otherwiſe the inferior courts might be made uſe of to oppreſs people, by laying great actions on them there; and in this caſe, if the defendant has acted as judge, and the matter was within his cognizance, his ſentence, whether right or wrong, binds till it be reverſed; and if it were in the Admiralty of France it would be ſo, and the only remedy in ſuch caſe is to appeal. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 2 Ann. The Queen v. Browne.

He was indicted at Hull for forging a cocket for five packs of linen cloth; and this was removed up by certiorari, and after trial a motion was made in arreſt of judgment, for that it was too uncertain; but it was urged, that much ſtronger caſes than this had been adjudged good in 2 Lev. 125.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Detinue lies for a box of writings, and if any of them concern lands, it will be neceſſary to name it, for that ſhall ouſt the defendant of his wager of law; but it ſuffices that the things which it contains be certain enough; and if any new action be brought, the defendant ſhall ſay, That a former action was brought for the ſame, by the name of ſo many bundles, &c. and the Queen had judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 87.

Trinity, 3 Ann. Baldwin v. Cole.

In an action of trover before Holt, Chief Juſtice, on evidence the caſe was this: A carpenter ſent his ſervant to work for hire to the Queen's yard, and having been there ſome time, when he would go no more, the ſurveyor of the works would not let him have his tools, pretending a uſage to detain tools to enforce workmen to continue till the Queen's work was done; and a demand and refuſal being proved at one time, and a tender and refuſal after:

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The very denial of goods to him that has a right to demand them, is an actual converſion, and not only evidence of it, as has been held; for what is a converſion, but an aſſuming on one's ſelf the property and right of diſpoſing another's goods? And he that takes on himſelf to detain another man's goods from him without cauſe, takes on himſelf the right of diſpoſing of them; ſo the taking and carrying away another man's goods, is a converſion: ſo if one comes into my cloſe, and takes my horſe and rides him, there it is converſion. And here, if the plaintiff had received them on the tender, the action would notwithſtanding have lain on the former converſion, and the having of the goods after would go only in mitigation of the damages; and he made no account of the pretended uſe, but compared it to the doctrine among the army, That if a man came into the ſervice, and brought his own horſe, that the property thereof was immediately altered, and veſted in the Queen, which he had already condemned: and here one of the particulars in the declaration being ill laid, the defendant was found not guilty as to that, and guilty as to the reſt. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 4 Ann. Lamine v. Dorrell.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If an action of trover ſhould be brought by the plaintiff for debentures after a judgment in an action on the caſe on an indebitatus aſſumpſit, the defendant may plead the plaintiff's recovery on ſuch action on the caſe in bar of the plaintiff's action of trover, in the ſame manner, as it would have been a good plea in bar for the defendant to have pleaded to the action of trover, that he ſold the debentures, and paid to the plaintiff in ſatisfaction; but it may be a doubt if this recovery can be pleaded before examination. This recovery may be given in evidence on not guilty in the action of trover, becauſe by this action the plaintiff makes and affirms the act of the defendant in the ſale of the debentures to be lawful, and conſequently the ſale of them is no converſion. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1217.

Trinity, 3 Geo. Croſſier v. Ogleby.

On trover brought by an adminiſtrator for rum taken and converted in the inteſtate's life. On evidence it appeared, that the rum was taken in the inteſtate's life, but not uſed till after his death. And the queſtion was, whether this evidence of not uſing it till the adminiſtrator's time would not overthrow the declaration of a converſion in the inteſtate's life.

Per curiam. The time of uſing the rum lay in the breaſt of the defendant, who ought to have diſcloſed the matter by his plea; and taking it in the life of the inteſtate, and keeping it till his death, is trover and converſion ſufficient to maintain this declaration. Wherefore the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 60.

Michaelmas, 5 Geo. Buſhel v. Miller.

On the cuſtom-houſe key there is a hut, where particular porters put in ſmall parcels of goods, if the ſhip is not ready to receive them when they are brought on the key. The porters who have a right in this hut, have particular boxes or cupboards, and as ſuch the defendant had one. The plaintiff being one of the porters, put in goods belonging to A. and lays them ſo that the defendant could not get to his cheſt without removing ſuch goods. He accordingly removes them about a yard from the place where they lay, towards the door, and without returning them into their place goes away, and the goods are loſt. The plaintiff ſatisfies A. of the value of the goods, and brings trover againſt the defendant. And, on the trial, two points were ruled by the Chief Juſtice:

1ſt. That the plaintiff having made ſatisfaction to A. for the goods, had thereby acquired a ſufficient property in them to maintain trover.

2dly. That here was no converſion in the defendant. The plaintiff, by laying his goods where they obſtructed ed the defendant from going to his cheſt, was in that reſpect a wrong-doer. The defendant had a right to remove the goods, ſo that thus far he was in no fault. Then as to the not returning the goods to the place where he found them, if this was an action of treſpaſs, perhaps it might be a doubt; but he was clear it could not amount to a converſion. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 128

Hilary, 5 Geo. Anonymous.

In trover for money, the court gave leave to bring the whole money declared for into court. But ſaid they could do it only in this caſe, and not in trover for goods. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 142.

Hilary, 8 Geo. Mead v. Hamond.

The plaintiff, according to the common courſe of dealing, delivered to the defendant's ſervant an ingot of gold to aſſay; and it not being returned, he brought trover againſt the maſter. And the Chief Juſtice directed the jury, that the delivery to the ſervant was ſufficient to maintain the action againſt the maſter, on proving a ſubſequent demand and refuſal; ſo the plaintiff had a verdict. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 505.

Michaelmas, 10 Geo. Richardſon v. Atkinſon.

It was held by Eyre and Forteſcue, Juſtices, that the drawing out part of a veſſel, and filling it up with water, was a converſion of all the liquor, and the jury gave damages as to the whole. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 576.

Michaelmas, 12 Geo. Stone v. Lingwood.

The plaintiff was captain of a ſhip, and the defendant owner: the plaintiff brought over a ſmall parcel of elephants teeth on his own account, and a large parcel for the defendant, who entered the whole at the cuſtom-houſe, paid the duty, and had the whole delivered out to him; and not re-delivering to the captain his parcel, an action of trover was brought. And it was inſiſted for the defendant, that the plaintiff ſhould ſhew a tender of the duty, otherwiſe the goods were in the nature of a pledge, and he was not bound to deliver them: but the Chief Juſtice ſaid that would not juſtify the defendant in keeping them, for he had his action for the money; and if he would ſhew what the duty came to, it might be deducted in damages: which was done accordingly. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 651.

Hilary, 13 Geo. Radley v. Rudge.

On a motion in arreſt of judgment, it was held well enough in trover to declare for a piece of tepee, without ſaying how many yards it contained. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 738.

Hilary, 2 Geo. 2. White v. Graham. Error.

In error on a judgment in the C. B. in trover for a parcel of diamonds. The plaintiff in error's council would have diſtinguiſhed this from the caſe of Bottomley v. Harriſon, which was trover for a parcel of packclothes, wrappers, and cords, becauſe that was taken as a bundle of ſeveral things not eaſily to be ſeparated, whereas each diamond was diſtinct; and it ought to have been brought for ſo many diamonds. But the court thought there was no difference, and affirmed the judgment. And afterwards on error in parliament, it was likewiſe affirmed ex parte, the plaintiff in error's council declining to anſwer it. Vide Stra. vol. 2. page 829.

The defendant was plaintiff in an action againſt Ryland, and took his goods in execution after an act of bankruptcy committed, but went on and received his money. And now trover being brought by the aſſignees, and a verdict in their favour, it was held on a motion for a new trial, that the action was well brought againſt the defendant, who received the money, without joining the officer. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 996.

Trinity, 10 Geo. 2. Adams v. Broughton.

The plaintiff recovered in trover againſt the captain, for yarn conſigned to him. The captain obtaining an injunction, on ſhewing the goods were delivered to the defendant; the plaintiff brought an action againſt him, and held him to bail. And the court diſcharged him on common bail; for by the former recovery the property veſted in the captain, the plaintiff having damages in lieu thereof, and therefore in this action he could not ſay the goods were his. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1078.

See this caſe fully ſtated in page 199 of this work, under the head Bankrupts.

Adjudged, That, in an action of trover, two things are neceſſary to be proved, to entitle the plaintiff to recover, 1ſt, Property in the plaintiff; and, 2dly, A wrongful converſion by the defendant. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 31.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. 3. Fiſher v. Prince.

Adjudged, That where trover is brought for a ſpecific chattel, of an aſcertained quantity and quality, and unattended with any circumſtances that can enhance the damages above the real value, but that its real and aſcertained value muſt be the ſole meaſure of the damages, there the ſpecific thing demanded may be brought into court; where there is an uncertainty either as to the quantity or quality of the things demanded, or that there is any tort accompanying it that may enhance the damages above the real value of the thing, and there is no rule whereby to eſtimate the additional value, there it ſhall not be brought in. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1364.

Truſts, Uſes, &c.

Michaelmas, 4 W. & M. Davis v. Speed.

On a ſpecial verdict in ejectment for lands in the county of Southampton, the caſe appeared to be thus:

A feme ſole being ſeiſed in fee of the lands now in queſtion, did afterwards marry W. H.

That the ſaid W. H. and A. his wife, did, by deed indented, covenant to levy a fine thereof to J. and S. and their heirs, &c. to the uſes following, viz.

To the uſe of the heirs of the ſaid W. H. lawfully begotten, or to be begotten, on the body of the ſaid A. remainder to the right heirs of the huſband.

The fine was levied; they had iſſue one ſon, who died in the life time of his father and mother, without iſſue; then A. died, and afterwards W. H. died without iſſue.

That F. C. who was leſſor of the plaintiff, was ſiſter and heir of W. H. and that the ſiſters and co-heirs of A. had conveyed their intereſt to the defendant Speed.

So that the queſtion was, whether the heirs of the wife ſhould have this land?

The objection why the right heirs of the huſband ſhould not have it, was becauſe there was no particular eſtate for life limited in this conveyance to ſupport the contingent remainders, which are therefore void, and the old uſe remains to the heirs of the wife.

Per curiam. This is a future uſe, and no particular eſtate to ſupport it; and no ſuch eſtate could ariſe until the wife died without iſſue, and ſo the remainder is void.

And afterwards, in Eaſter term, judgment was given for the defendant Speed, accordingly.

That no eſtate ſhall ariſe by implication to the huſband; ſuch a thing was never thought on in a deed, nor in a will, but of neceſſity.

There was afterwards a writ of error brought on this judgment in parliament, where it was affirmed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 153.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a precedent deed be made, whereby it is agreed, that the recovery which is to be ſuffered ſhall be to ſuch and ſuch uſes, and a recovery is afterwards ſuffered accordingly; one cannot aver the recovery to be to other uſes than thoſe mentioned in the deed, without ſhewing a new agreement; but if the uſes are declared by a ſubſequent deed, there they ariſe by the recovery, and there may be a parol averment that the recovery was to other uſes, but a ſubſequent deed is very ſtrong evidence. In caſe of a precedent deed, he muſt confeſs and avoid, but in caſe of a ſubſequent deed, a man may traverſe the uſes. And therefore here, the defendant ſhould have pleaded, that he inhabited ſo much truly recovered, &c. to ſuch and ſuch uſes. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 155.

Eaſter, 1 Ann. Lamplugh v. Shotterell.

Caſe. A bargain and ſale was made for a year in conſideration of 5*s.* paid, and thereon a releaſe to the bargainee and his heirs, without expreſſing any conſideration, the queſtion was, whether the uſe ſhould reſult to the bargainor: and it was inſiſted, that it ſhould not, becauſe the releaſe does but enlarge the firſt eſtate, and that it is to the uſe of the bargainee, and both are but as one conveyance, and the 5*s.* mentioned in the leaſe, extends to the releaſe, and the quantum of the conſideration is not material, for a penny is ſufficient; but on the other ſide it was argued, that this conveyance is in nature of a feoffment, on which an uſe ſhall reſult to the feoffor where no conſideration is expreſſed.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. Before the ſtatute of uſes there might be a reaſon why an uſe ſhould reſult on a feoffment, for it put the eſtate out of the feoffor, and he had only a truſt left, which could not be forfeited; and to this purpoſe ſuch feoffments were made: but this cannot be ſince the ſtatute; for if an uſe muſt reſult to the feoffor, and the eſtate muſt be executed according to the uſe, the feoffment is in vain, and the party has made a conveyance to no manner of purpoſe, being poſſeſſed of the ſame eſtate as he was before he made the feoffment; and ſo it is of a leaſe and releaſe, but it is otherwiſe on a fine or recovery, for they may have their particular eſtate in other reſpects, as barring on non-claims or remainders.

So it is, if by feoffment, or by leaſe and releaſe, a man conveys any particular eſtate, mediate or immediate, to another perſon, there the reſidue of the eſtate ſhall, by implication of law, remain in the party himſelf; but where no eſtate is limited to another, there the whole conveyance is to no purpoſe, if the party be conſtrued to have the reſulting uſe in him. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 387.

Eaſter, 2 Ann. Adams v. Tertenants of Savage.

In this caſe Holt, Chief Juſtice, delivered the opinion of the court, that no uſe could reſult to Savage during his life, and therefore the remainder to the heirs male was void, and Savage ſeiſed in fee. And their reaſons were, becauſe the limitations to himſelf for ninety-nine years, and to the truſtees for twenty-five years, and the heirs male, were new uſes and new eſtates. As if a man by leaſe and releaſe, or by covenant to ſtand ſeiſed, limits the uſe to himſelf for life, or in tail, theſe are new eſtates, and not parcel of the old eſtate, according to 7 Co. 13. b. Englefield's caſe. And where in ſuch caſe, on a conveyance ſuch uſes are limited as (ſuppoſing the limitations to be good) would paſs the whole eſtate, there no uſe will reſult contrary to the expreſs limitations of the party. But if the limitations are void, the conveyance of neceſſity will fail: if a man ſeiſed in fee, conveys his eſtate by leaſe and releaſe to the uſe of himſelf for life, remainder to truſtees for their lives, remainder to the heirs of his body; he has an eſtate tail in himſelf, but he is but tenant for life in poſſeſſion: otherwiſe, if there had been no intermediate eſtate in the truſtees for their lives. And in the former caſe, if a man makes a feoffment, it is no diſcontinuance, but only diveſts the eſtate. And for the ſame reaſon in this caſe, where the firſt limitation is only for years, the remainder to the heirs of the body of the tenant for years, is a contingent remainder, and void. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 854.

Michaelmas, 6 W. 3. Seaman v. Ling.

Adjudged, That if the defendant be a barriſter, he may have the venue changed to Middleſex. In Trinity, 2 Ann. one Wilcocks, an attorney, was ſued by bill of privilege, and the action was laid in Suffolk; and on motion the venue was changed into Middleſex; and in 2 Vent. 47. if an attorney, being plaintiff, lay his action in Middleſex, the venue ſhall not be changed; otherwiſe if in London. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 668.

Eaſter, 8 W. 3. Anonymous.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The motion to change a venue ought to be within eight days after the declaration is delivered; but this rule is not always ſtrictly adhered to. But, Trinity, 7 W. 3. in this court, it was obſerved, one might move to change the venue at any time before judgment ſigned; which Holt, Chief Juſtice, denied, ſaying, heretofore it was never granted after the rules for pleading were out. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 668.

A motion was made to change the venue in an action of ſcandalum magnatum on the common affidavit, inſiſting on Lord Shafteſbury's caſe, 2 Jo. 192, 198. but it was denied; for in Lord Shafteſbury's caſe, it was on an affidavit of the vaſt intereſt he had in the city, and the unlikelineſs of an impartial trial; but we will not deprive the plaintiff of that benefit the law gives him, of laying his action where he pleaſes, for the convenience of the defendant. 1 Lev. 56. *Vide Mod. The plaintiff brought an indebitatus aſſumpſit againſt the defendant, as executrix of her huſband, for money lent to her in his life-time. The defendant pleaded, that her teſtator was an infant at the time of the money lent. The plaintiff replied, that he lent 40 l. part of the ſum in demand, to the teſtator to buy neceſſaries for himſelf, his wife, and family; and ſo they were expended. The defendant demurred.

It was objected, that there was not any venue where the 40 l. was expended in buying of the neceſſaries: and for want of a venue where the neceſſaries were bought, judgment was given for the defendant. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 344.

An act of compoſition, and a compoſition purſuant thereto, was pleaded in bar to an action of debt on a bond, without reciting the act, or laying a venue for the compoſition; and for theſe faults, judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 249.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Gilbert v. The Inhabitants of Puddleſgate.

In an action on the ſtatute of hue and cry, not guilty was pleaded, and a verdict for the plaintiff. It being moved in arreſt of judgment, that no venue was laid, where the examination before the juſtice of peace was within twenty days, which was traverſable, and not aided by the verdict, it being a penal law.

Per curiam. This is a remedial, and not a penal law; and if penal, yet this is well enough, becauſe it is not that which entitles the party to his action, but only the cauſa ſine qua non; but perhaps it might be fatal on a demurrer. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 242.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Anonymous.

In an action on the caſe againſt the drawer of a bill of exchange who lived at Briſtol, and drew the bill there, a motion was made to change the venue, but it was denied; for the perſon on whom the bill was drawn, lived in London, and there was the refuſal, and that muſt be proved to make the firſt drawer liable; for where evidence, neceſſary to ſupport the action, ariſes in two counties, the plaintiff may chuſe which he will; and this is the ground of the rule, That if the plaintiff will be bound to give ſome material evidence in the county where the action is laid, the court will never change the venue. And in Eaſter, 10 W. 3. in this court, in an action of trover and converſion, the defendant had leave to change the venue, and the plaintiff moved to ſet that aſide, offering to be bound to give evidence in the county where the action was laid: on inquiry, the court found the plaintiff was aſſignee of commiſſioners of bankrupts, and could prove the aſſignment in that county.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The whole is tranſitory.

Per curiam. The converſion is the cauſe of action, and not the aſſignment; and you are in the place of the commiſſioners, and the venue was according to the rule. And in Eaſter, 12 W. 3. in this court, it was held, that where a rule is made to change a venue, and afterwards the plaintiff would bring it back again, the rule muſt be, to give other evidence of the matter in queſtion, in the county where the action was brought. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 669.

Hilary, 2 Ann. Carleton v. Mortagh. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in this court, want of an original was aſſigned for error. The defendant pleaded a releaſe of errors, but laid no venue where the releaſe was made. To which the plaintiff in error demurred. And the plea was adjudged naught for want of the venue; and when the plea amounted to a confeſſion of the error. But the court made a queſtion, whether they could not award a certiorari to inform the conſcience of the court, though the defendant cannot pray it; juſt in the ſame manner as after in no error pleaded, for the court ought to examine the errors; for if in error a releaſe is pleaded, and found for the plaintiff, yet if there is no error, the court cannot reverſe the judgment; and if the releaſe was found for the defendant, a different judgment muſt be given, according as the error aſſigned is ſufficient or not; for if it is a good error, the judgment muſt be, that the plaintiff be barred of his writ of error, and not that the judgment be affirmed; if it is not a good error, the judgment muſt be, that the firſt judgment be affirmed. And a rule was made for hearing council, whether the court ſhould grant a certiorari or not. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 1005.

Trinity, 3 Ann. Way v. Gally.

The leſſor brought an action of debt againſt the leſſee for rent, on a demiſe of lands in Jamaica, and laid his action in London; the defendant pleaded, that the lands were in Jamaica, and that there are courts there, &c. Adjudged, on demurrer, that this plea was ill; but if in any action laid here, a local iſſue ſhould ariſe, (as ſuppoſing in Ireland) it may be tried in the county where the action is laid, according to Dowdale's caſe, or a ſuggeſtion may be entered on the roll, that ſuch a place in ſuch a county lies next to Ireland, and ſo have a jury from thence. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 381.

Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Sir Samuel Gerard's Caſe.

An action of falſe impriſonment againſt the ſheriffs of London was laid in Middleſex, and, on the common affidavit, a rule was made, that the venue ſhould be changed to London; but then it was ſaid, that the officer of the Compter was ſubject to the ſheriffs, and ſo there could be no good trial; for which reaſon it was removed back again to Middleſex. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 670.

Hilary, 4 Ann. Pie v. Cooper.

In an action on the caſe, the defendant pleaded in abatement, that the plaintiff was an alien enemy, and laid no venue: and, on demurrer, adjudged, that it was well pleaded, and the plaintiff might have replied, that he was born in England, generally. But if ſuch a matter is pleaded in bar, it muſt be pleaded with a venue, and the plaintiff ſhould reply, that he was born in ſuch a place in England. And in the principal caſe judgment was given, that the bill be quaſhed. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1243.

Eaſter, 4 Ann. Heathcoat's Caſe.

An action, brought againſt a lighterman for not delivering goods, was laid in London, where they were to be carried. The court was moved to change the venue, becauſe the damage and neglect was in Kent: but not allowed; for the neglect is tranſitory, and not material where it was, and the court will never change the venue for a carrier, which is the ſame caſe; otherwiſe perhaps in deceit, or where there is an actual miſfeaſance. Michaelmas, 10 W. 3.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that in an action of eſcape, it is not the courſe to change the venue. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 670.

Trinity, 4 Ann. Scawen v. Garrett.

Holt, C. J. It is not neceſſary to lay a venue where the defendant was an attorney, becauſe, that being a matter concerning the perſon of the defendant, ſhould be tried where the writ was brought. And therefore where alienee is pleaded in abatement, the plaintiff may reply generally, that he was born in England, without laying a place, becauſe it ſhall be tried where the writ is brought. But if alienee be pleaded in bar, there the plaintiff muſt reply, that he was born in England, viz. at ſuch a place. Vide Raym. vol. 2. page 1173.

Eaſter, 5 Ann. Knight v. Barnaby, or Farnaby, and others.

The plaintiff brought an action of treſpaſs, aſſault and battery, againſt the defendant in Middleſex. The defendant, on the common affidavit, had a rule to change the venue into Kent, niſi, &c. And now the court was moved to ſet aſide that rule, becauſe the plaintiff was clerk of the aſſizes of the Norfolk circuit, and by conſequence an officer of this court. the court was of that opinion, becauſe this court frequently makes rules on clerks to return poſteas, &c. and therefore that rule was diſcharged. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1253. Salk. vol. 2. p. 670.

Hilary, 8 Ann. Foſter v. Burdon. Error.

The caſe was on a judgment in ejectment on a demiſe for three years, the defendant brings a writ of error in this court, and the defendant in error ſues a ſci. fac. quare executionem non; to which the plaintiff in error pleads, that he has paid 200*l.* in ſatisfaction of the term and damages; and on iſſue joined, the court was moved to change the venue out of Yorkſhire into Middleſex. But the court denied the motion, becauſe the ejectment is local; and the ſcire facias being grounded thereon, the venue could not be changed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 263.

Michaelmas, 6 Geo. Aſplin v. Gray.

Per curiam. If the declaration be delivered ſo early in term, that the defendant has eight days in that term, he cannot move to change the venue the next term. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 211.

Trinity, 7 Geo. Anonymous.

In an action of treſpaſs and aſſault: on the evidence it appeared, that the defendant was a conſtable, and lived at Dover; and that being ordered to take the plaintiff and carry him before the mayor, he executed his warrant, and the mayor diſcharged the plaintiff. Soon after which a diſpute happening between the plaintiff and the defendant, the defendant beat the plaintiff, for which this action was brought.

For the defendant they inſiſted, that he being a conſtable, they ſhould have brought the action in the proper county, according to ſtat. 21 Jac. 1.

Pratt, Chief Juſtice. That is only where it is for a matter relating to the execution of his office; but if after his authority is expired, he abuſes the party, or if he meets a man, and knocks him down, he may be ſued for it, as all other people may. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 446.

Anonymous.

Ruled, that the want of a venue is only curable by ſuch a plea which admits the fact for the trial whereof it was neceſſary to lay a venue: the plaintiff declared on a bond, and laid no venue, the defendant pleads a releaſe, now by this plea the want of a venue is cured; otherwiſe if he had demurred. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 381.

Hilary, 10 Geo. Long v. Nixon.

This was an action brought in London, and the defendant moved the court to change the venue; and a rule was made that it ſhould be changed.

And now the plaintiff moved to diſcharge that rule; and it was inſiſted on, on his behalf, that this was a tranſitory action, which the plaintiff might bring where he pleaſed; and that it was by the indulgence of the court, and for the eaſe of the parties, that venues are at any time changed; and that it would be very inconvenient for the plaintiff, if this venue ſhould be changed, becauſe the action being brought by ſpecial original, there would be a variance on changing the venue: therefore it is convenient for the plaintiff that the action ſhould be tried in London.

The court would not diſcharge the rule for the changing the venue; for if they ſhould, then, where an action is laid in London, the venue would never be changed; and as to the variance, the defendant ſhall take no advantage of it, though the action was brought by ſpecial original. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 229.

An action of trover was laid in Worceſterſhire, and the court was moved to change the venue to Middleſex, becauſe the action againſt ſome of the defendants was there, as they were commiſſioners of bankruptcy, and they had privilege, as being barriſters, or attornies. But the court refuſed it, ſaying, the privilege could not take place where they are joined in an action with unprivileged perſons. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 610.

Trinity, 12 Geo. Godfrey v. Philpot.

Trinity, 13 Geo. Blacke v. Dodemead and Wife. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment given in the C. B. on a ſcire facias brought by the huſband and wife on a judgment recovered by her while ſole, the ſcire facias alledges, that after the rendering of the judgment aforeſaid, the aforeſaid Sarah took in right of the aforeſaid John Dodemead. To which there was a demurrer, and for cauſe, no venue where the plaintiffs were married. And it was inſiſted on error, that there muſt be a venue as to every fact neceſſarily alledged to intitle the plaintiff to recover, and here the marriage is the only foundation for the man's joining in this ſcire facias. Theſ. Br. 251. 256. Ow. 23. 2 Lev. 227. Mo. 527.

Trinity, 13 Geo. Paterſon v. Scott.

In debt for rent, on indenture laid to be made at London, for the demiſe of lands in Surry. The action was laid in London; and on demurrer it was held, that the plaintiff had his election to bring it in either, againſt the leſſee; otherwiſe had it been againſt an aſſignee, who is chargeable only on the privity of eſtate. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 776.

Michaelmas, 13 Geo. Greagſon v. Heather.

In debt on a bail-bond, the plaintiff declared, that he took out a writ directed to the ſheriff of Surry, &c. who took a bail-bond, which he afterwards aſſigned to the plaintiff at London, where the action was brought. On demurrer it was objected, that the action was grounded on the bond entered into by the bail, and that being laid to be done in Surrey, the action ſhould have been there.

On the other ſide it was inſiſted, that the action is founded on the aſſignment, which is the only thing that impowers the plaintiff to ſue, and that is laid to be where the action is brought. 2 Roll. Abr. 602. pl. 9. Action for eſcape laid in Nottinghamſhire, of one arreſted by the ſheriff of York. Cro. Eliz. 625. 1 Sid. 218. The plaintiff had his election to bring his action for a falſe return, either in Middleſex, where the writ is returned, or in the county where the party was arreſted. And if it ſhould be thought that the executing the bond is part of the cauſe, yet 7 Co. Rulwer's caſe, is expreſs, that where matter in one county is dependent on matter in another county, the plaintiff may lay his action in either.

Trinity, 8 Geo. 2. Briſtow v. Tito.

This court was moved to change the venue from Wilts to Dorſet, on an affidavit that the cauſe of action, if any, aroſe in the town of Poole, which is a town and county of itſelf.

Per curiam. We never change a venue but into the county where the cauſe of action is ſworn to ariſe, nor even then neither, if it is a place where the judges do not go; ſo you can take nothing by the motion. But however, if you can find an inſtance of its having been done, you may move it again. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. p. 135.

Hilary, 9 Geo. 2. Dale v. Stevenſon.

The court was moved to change the venue from Middleſex to Weſtmorland, on the common affidavit, that the cauſe of action, if any, aroſe in Weſtmorland, and not in Middleſex.

Lord Hardwicke. We cannot do that; for it will delay the plaintiff till the ſummer aſſizes.

Then it was prayed that it might be changed to Yorkſhire, which is the neareſt county into which the judges go in the Lent aſſizes.

Lord Hardwicke. We cannot do that neither without conſent; therefore give notice, and move it again. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. p. 210.

Hilary, 15 Geo. 2. Stroud v. Tilly.

Per curiam. Though a plaintiff cannot regularly move to change the venue, yet he may in effect do it by moving to amend. And it was accordingly done in this caſe by ſtriking out Dorſetſhire, and inſerting Middleſex. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1162.

Hilary, 16 Geo. 2. Howarth v. Willett.

A declaration on a policy was laid in Lancaſhire, and delivered here on the 8th of February. It was moved on an affidavit, that it was ſigned at Briſtol, and that the common affidavit to change the venue was ſent for, that the parties might have time. And the court inclined to have granted the motion, if it had not appeared to have ariſen in Briſtol, where there is no Lent-aſſizes; and they could not order it to an adjacent county, without conſent of both ſides, though the defendant offered his conſent to avoid delay. Vide Stra. vol. 2, p. 1180.

Trinity, 19 Geo. 2. Moore v. Fernybouth.

The venue was laid in London, and it was moved to change it into Salop, on an affidavit that the cauſe of action aroſe in Denbighſhire, and Salop was the next adjacent Engliſh county. Trinity, 4 Geo. 3. Mylock v. Saladine.

On ſhewing cauſe why the venue ſhould not be changed from the city of Cheſter to the county at large.

Per curiam. We are all of opinion, that in tranſitory actions, the court ought to change the venue, when it appears on circumſtances laid before them, that there is a probable ground to apprehend that a fair, impartial, or at leaſt a ſatisfactory trial, cannot be had.

In the preſent caſe, there having been a trial in the city, and a new trial ordered, becauſe the verdict was againſt the weight of the evidence, and the damages exceſſive (if it had been warranted by the evidence;) and there being a ſtrong proof given by affidavits of a general prejudice in the city, the court made the rule abſolute. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1564.

Hilary, 5 W. & M. Cattle and others v. Andrews. Error.

A writ of error was brought on a judgment given in the C. B. in an action of treſpaſs, wherein the plaintiff declared againſt the defendant for ſeveral treſpaſſes, viz. for breaking and entering his cloſe, treading down his graſs, and taking and carrying away water; the defendant juſtified as to all, on which they were at iſſue, and the jury found him not guilty as to the treading down, &c. but gave no verdict as to the other matters; this was adjudged naught: and for this cauſe the judgment was reverſed. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 372.

Eaſter, 7 W. 3. Milwood v. Leech.

In an action of treſpaſs, the words againſt the peace were omitted in the declaration, and therefore, after the execution of a writ of inquiry, judgment was arreſted on motion.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Blackhall v. Eccles.

In an action of treſpaſs for an aſſault and battery, the plaintiff declares on a battery on the 1ſt February, in the 8th of the preſent King, which is not yet come; and this was moved in arreſt of judgment. The council for the plaintiff acknowleged, that if the time in the declaration had been after the bill filed, and before the trial, the judgment muſt be arreſted; becauſe then it would have appeared that the jury gave damages for an action ariſing ſince the ſuit commenced; but in this caſe, the time being after the trial, it is as if there were no time at all, it being impoſſible, and therefore helped by the verdict. Sorrell v. Lewin's caſe, Michaelmas, 26 Car. 2. was the ſame with this; where an aſſumpſit was laid at a time not come.

Per curiam. The day alledged is no day at all; the time is but a circumſtance, and therefore judgment muſt be given for the plaintiff: as in Wall v. Dukes, in this term. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 102.

Michaelmas, 8 W. 3. Wall v. Dukes.

In an action of treſpaſs, on a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, becauſe the treſpaſs was only laid to be at divers days and times, without laying any particular time.

Per curiam. It is well enough after a verdict, on the ſame reaſon with Blackhall v. Eccles's caſe, this term. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 105.

Hilary, 9 W. 3. Anonymous.

In an aſſumpſit againſt two, there was judgment by default againſt one of them; the other pleaded payment in ſatisfaction of the whole debt, but at the trial proved only payment of his ſhare.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If the jury find a diſcharge only as to this defendant, they muſt find for the plaintiff, and ſo they muſt, though they find the payment was for the whole debt, becauſe the other defendant has confeſſed the action, and the finding of the jury cannot diſcharge him; which was done accordingly, and ſmall damages given. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 373.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Anonymous.

In an action of debt on a bond, payable in 1668, payment made in 1689 was pleaded, and iſſue being joined on it, a verdict was given for the plaintiff. And the defendant moved for a repleader, becauſe the iſſue was immaterial.

Per curiam. The verdict being for the plaintiff, it is well enough. For if it had been paid in 1668, it had not been paid in 1689; and it is like Nichols's caſe, 5 Co. 43. But there the judges ſeemed to be of opinion, that if the verdict had been for the defendant, it had been ill. And Powell, Juſtice, obſerved, that if payment be pleaded to a ſingle bill, it is good after verdict. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 408.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Harpen v. Davy.

The plea was entered of Eaſter term. The memorandum was, that the bill was exhibited in Hilary term, and an imparlance to Eaſter term, and then a plea of Eaſter term, and iſſue joined, and a verdict for the plaintiff. A new trial being granted, the record of niſi prius was of an appearance and plea of this preſent Michaelmas term, and a verdict for the plaintiff. On a motion to ſet aſide the verdict, becauſe it was another iſſue than that which was tried, being of a different term, and on a plea of another term; and the caſe of Doberteen v. Chancellor, was relied on.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The verdict here is on a plea and iſſue of Michaelmas term, which is entirely different from the record on which the firſt verdict was obtained, and ſo not the ſame iſſue that was directed to be tried again, and therefore ought to be ſet aſide. For though a new trial was granted, yet it ought to be on the old plea. And the verdict was accordingly ſet aſide. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 510.

In an action on the caſe brought by the aſſignee of commiſſioners of a bankrupt, ſetting forth, that the bankrupt had recovered ſuch a ſum againſt the defendant's teſtator, and that execution remained to be done, and the debt was aſſigned to the plaintiff; and that goods to ſuch a value of the teſtator came to the defendant's hands, which he converted to his own uſe. After verdict it was moved in arreſt of judgment, firſt, That it was not laid where the goods came to his hands, or where the converſion was; but not allowed, becauſe, though the execution would have been good on demurrer, yet now it was not material after verdict. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 306.

On a quantum meruit on a ſpecial promiſe, for that whereas the plaintiff, at the requeſt of the defendant, did find the defendant with meat, drink, and lodging, for ſeveral months, he promiſed to pay him what it was worth. After verdict, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the declaration was too uncertain for the time; but being after verdict, it was held well, as would any indebitatus aſſumpſit for divers goods, eſpecially being executed. Therefore judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 434.

Eaſter, 13 W. 3. Palmer v. Stavely.

On an indebitatus aſſumpſit for money had and received by the defendant for the plaintiff, to the uſe of the defendant, on non aſſumpſit pleaded, a verdict was found for the plaintiff. And now the court was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the plaintiff had no cauſe of action, the money being received for the uſe of the defendant. This was compared to the caſe of Noſworthy v. Wildman, 1 Mod. 42. 2 Heb. 615. and ſaid, that being for money received, it ſhall be intended that the defendant ought to uſe it, but that nevertheleſs he ſhould be anſwerable to the plaintiff for it. 1 Sid. 306. where the plaintiff aſſumed to pay inſtead of the defendant, and held good. That the words, to the uſe of the defendant, ſhould be rejected after verdict, being inconſiſtent with the finding of the jury.

Holt, C. J. We muſt reject the words that are inſenſible, and retain thoſe that are ſenſible. Money received by the defendant for the plaintiff, is good; and then the words, to the uſe of the defendant, muſt be rejected. And judgment was given for the plaintiff, niſi, &c. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 669.

In an action of debt brought by an executor for an eſcape of one in execution on a judgment of the teſtator, where the plaintiff declared in the debet and detinet; after verdict it was moved in arreſt of judgment. And it being doubted whether it was helped by the general words, of matters of like nature, in ſtat. 16 & 17 Car. 2. to maintain it at another day, were quoted 1 Sid. 379. 341. 2 Keb. 407. that is, that it was helped after verdict; but Holt, C. Michaelmas, 3 Ann. Anonymous.

In an action on the caſe, wherein the plaintiff declared, that in conſideration the plaintiff had promiſed the defendant to buy up for him all the plums he could, and deliver them to him, the defendant promiſed to pay the plaintiff ſo much per hundred for the black and blue plums, and ſo much for the white; and avers that he bought and tendered the defendant ſo many black and blue plums, and he refuſed to accept them, to his damage, &c. After verdict for the plaintiff, the court was moved in arreſt of judgment. Firſt, That it did not appear how many blue plums, and how many black plums there were; that is, how many of each ſort. But to that it was anſwered, and reſolved, that the black and blue ones being to be both of the ſame price, it was not material; otherwiſe, if the white and black had been put together without difference. Secondly, That the plaintiff did not aver, that the plums he tendered were all he had bought, or could buy; and unleſs he had done ſo, he had not performed his part, and was not entitled to his action. But to that it was anſwered, and reſolved, that it was now cured by the verdict; for unleſs the plaintiff had proved, that thoſe were all he had bought, or could buy, it would have been againſt him, for want of proving the performance of the conſideration. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1060.

Trinity, 4 Ann. Smartle v. Penhallow.

On an ejectment on the demiſe of Jonathan, biſhop of Exeter, the jury found, that the lands in queſtion were cuſtomary tenements, parcel of the manor of Tregoar in the county of Cornwall, and by the cuſtom of the manor are demiſeable by copy of court-roll to two or three perſons for the term of their lives, and of the longeſt liver of them, To hold ſucceſſively as named in the charter, &c. and that by the cuſtom of the manor, the perſon firſt named in the grant enjoys the tenements, to him alone during his life; and ſo the ſecond and third: that by the cuſtom of the manor, the Lord is to have an heriot of every ſuch perſon ſucceſſively dying ſeiſed; that one E. N. being Lord of the manor, by virtue of a demiſe made thereof to him by Thomas late Biſhop of Exeter, immediate predeceſſor to the leſſor of the plaintiff, did, by copy of court-roll, grant the tenements in queſtion to one T. N. and his aſſigns, to hold to him, and his aſſigns, for the lives of J. P. W. W. and of the ſaid T. N. and of the longeſt liver of them ſucceſſively, &c.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, that this matter might have been better found; but though it be not found, that T. N. is living, yet when the jury find a grant to him for his life, we muſt intend, in a ſpecial verdict, that he ſtill continues alive, eſpecially when the plaintiff is to make out a title to avoid the grant; but it would be otherwiſe on a plea. Which was agreed to by Powell, Juſtice, who ſaid, We cannot preſume that he is dead; for he being once found alive, we muſt take him ſo to continue, unleſs it were expreſsly found, that he is ſince dead. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 999.

The court were of opinion that the entry of a ſpecial verdict, though on a criminal proſecution, may be amended, if it was not entered acccording to the notes taken; and the roll may be amended.

Gould, Juſtice, cited Raymond 460. and ſaid the court frequently amended informations.

Per curiam. If a jury find for the Queen, and the verdict is entered for the defendant, yet at common law it is amendable; and ſo it was agreed in Dr. Drake's caſe. If in a ſpecial verdict the clerk takes the minutes right, and the verdict is entered up wrong, the court will amend the roll according to the minutes, tho' in a criminal proſecution. *Vide Mod. Trinity, 9 Geo. The King v. Alexander John.

On a motion, a rule was made for the defendant to ſhew cauſe why an information in nature of a quo warranto ſhould not be granted againſt him, to ſhew by what authority he claimed to be Mayor of L. in the county of Cornwall.

Afterwards a trial was had on this information, and a verdict was found for the plaintiff. And now the court was moved to ſet it aſide, for an attachment againſt one J. J. for not producing the corporation-books at the trial, according to a rule of court made for that purpoſe, with which he was ſerved.

Per curiam. There is no room for an attachment, becauſe this perſon has not diſobeyed the rule; and a new trial ſhall not be granted, becauſe that would be againſt the report of the Judge before whom this trial was had, who was ſatisfied that this verdict was not againſt evidence; ſo that nothing is offered for a new trial, but only that the long continuance of this mayoralty ſuppoſes, that the defendant had a right to be Mayor, and the inconveniency, if he was not Mayor, would be, to avoid all the corporate acts done by him as Mayor for many years paſt.

The queſtion only was, whether he was duly elected into that office? That is a queſtion concerning the right, and in ſuch caſe the long poſſeſſion of the mayoralty, or the many inconveniences that would follow, if he was not duly elected, ought not to be regarded.

So that this verdict being given on good evidence, and ſo certified by the Judge who tried the cauſe, ſhall not be ſet aſide for any of the reaſons before-mentioned, and therefore the rule was diſcharged. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 132.

On an information in nature of a quo warranto againſt the defendant and one Powell, for pretending to be burgeſſes of Brecknock in Wales, there being evidence given, that the uſage had been againſt the charter, the jury gave a general verdict on the uſage, viz. that the defendants were not guilty.

The court was moved to ſet aſide this verdict, for two reaſons; firſt, becauſe it was againſt evidence; and, ſecondly, becauſe the jury refuſed to find a ſpecial verdict, which they ought to have done when it was required.

The queſtion was, whether a verdict of acquittal, on an information in nature of a quo warranto, may be ſet aſide?

This queſtion being found difficult, was referred to all the judges of England, who were equally divided in their opinions.

But afterwards, on the laſt day of Hilary term following, the Chief Juſtice declared, that it was the opinion of the whole court to grant a new trial, if it could be granted by law; but it being a point wherein the Judges had ſo much differed, it ought to be well conſidered, becauſe it affected all the corporations in England; and that it was never yet known that a verdict was ſet aſide, by which the defendant was acquitted, in any caſe whatever on a criminal proſecution. *Vide Mod. In an action on a policy of inſurance in the Mayor's court of Briſtol, where the plaintiff had a verdict, on which the defendant brought a writ of error in this court.

Adjudged by Raymond, Chief Juſtice, that if the loſs on the policy had been before the adventure was to have begun, the plaintiff could not have had a verdict, and the rule is general, that a verdict will ſupply the omiſſion of a thing that was neceſſary to be proved at the trial; and therefore, in the caſe of Hudſon v. Jones the want of an attornment in the declaration was helped by the verdict. Vide Fitz-Gibbons, p. 274.

To which the plaintiff replies, that it was the eſtate of inheritance, and the proper lands of the plaintiff, and not the proper lands of the defendant; on which iſſue is joined, and a verdict for the plaintiff.

The court was moved in arreſt of judgment, that this was an immaterial iſſue, for this is a poſſeſſory action, and the plaintiff may have the inheritance in him, and yet not be in poſſeſſion.

Per curiam. It being found to be the plaintiff's eſtate of inheritance, we muſt take it he had the fee, which is the whole intereſt, and that the defendant had no intereſt at all. We are not to preſume a poſſeſſion diſtinct from the fee; and here is enough for us to ſee where the right of the caſe is, and to warrant our judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 973.

Hilary, 11 Geo. 2. Hooper v. Shepherd. Error.

In error on a judgment in C. B. in an action of debt on a charter-party, whereby the defendant was to pay fifty guineas per month; the plaintiff ſtates, that 652 l. 10 s. was due for the whole, 152 l. 10 s. which he had received, and the remainder was 500 l. for which the action was brought. The defendant pleaded, that he had paid at the rate of fifty guineas per mouth for all the time the ſhip was in his ſervice: and iſſue being taken, that he did not, the jury find, that 357 l. 11 s. remained unpaid, but ſay nothing as to the reſt of the 500 l.

It was firſt objected, that covenant, and not debt, was the proper action: but this was got over, it being founded on a deed, in which caſe debt will lie, according to 1 Roll. Abr. 591. Cro. Eliz. 561. 758. 1 Roll. Abr. 597. Sti. 31. 3 Lev. 429.

But then it was objected, that this was an imperfect verdict, the jury not having anſwered to all they were charged with, according to Co. Litt. 227. a. 1 Roll. Abr. 802. pl. 5. Cro. Jac. 31. 113. 3 Lev. 55.

But the court held this caſe was not thereby diſtinguiſhed from the general rule, and therefore reverſed the judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1089.

Michaelmas, 14 Geo. 2. Marton v. Jenkin.

On a mandamus to ſwear the plaintiff into the office of Mayor of Wincheſter, it appeared by a ſpecial verdict that the Mayor muſt be choſen out of the jurats, and that the plaintiff on the 1ſt day of May 1739 was choſen a jurat, and ſworn in, and continued ſo till the 7th day of April 1740, when he was choſen Mayor: that he had received the ſacrament within a year before his election to be Mayor, but not within a year before he was choſen a jurat. And the queſtion was, whether ſtat. 5 Geo. c. 6. ſect. 3. could operate ſo as to give him the benefit of the non-proſecution in ſix months, with regard to the previous qualification. And the court held it did, or elſe he would be under ſome degree of diſability or incapacity, when the act ſays none ſhall be incurred.

But then a doubt was made, whether, as the verdict was ſilent as to any proſecution, it was ſufficient for the court to give judgment on; and whether it ſhould not have been found negatively, there was none. But the court held it well enough, for the plaintiff had nothing more to do than to find his election; what is to avoid it, ſhould come from the other ſide; and that as it is not found, there was a proſecution, which it lay on the defendant to ſhew; they could not be warranted in ſaying the plaintiff's election was void: and therefore they gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Stra. vol. 2. 1445.

On a ſpecial verdict in ejectment, the defendant claimed under a common recovery, whereby it was inſiſted that the leſſor of the plaintiff was barred. But an exception being taken, that no writ of ſeiſin or execution is found, the court was of opinion that the defendant could not take any advantage of the recovery. It was then moved, that a venire facias de novo might go, this being an old recovery an hundred years ago, on which execution would be preſumed; and in fact there was a writ of ſeiſin, and a return; and ſo this recovery is compleatly found in a cauſe now depending on the demiſe of the Duke of Athol; it was likewiſe inſiſted, that the minutes find this recovery as, &c. and therefore warrant the inſerting this.

Per curiam. A venire facias de novo can only be granted on what appears to the court on this record; and unleſs the record warrants it, it will be error to grant it. 8 Co. Loveday's caſe. It is not the verdict, but the defendant's title that is imperfect: how can we ſuggeſt, that the jury have miſbehaved themſelves? And yet that muſt be an introduction of a venire facias de novo.

It was then prayed, that an entry might be made of its being aſked and denied; but as to that, the court ſaid, that as it was to iſſue on the record, it would be grantable by the court where error was brought: as was done in the Houſe of Lords lately in the caſe of the Wine-licence office.

This judgment was afterwards affirmed in the Houſe of Lords on the queſtions put to the Judges in both reſpects. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1185.

The court was now moved to alter the indorſement, by making it agreeable to the judge's notes. Lord Mansfield. I am not diſſatisfied with the verdict, for Sir Thomas has manifeſtly acted arbitrarily, unjuſtifiably, and unreaſonably, and therefore, though the damages are beyond the proportion of what the man has ſuffered, I do not think a new trial ought to be granted.

Hilary, 30 Geo. 2.

After ſtat. 4 & 5 Ann. cap. 16. ſect. 8. views were granted on motion of courſe. On that ſtat. and 3 Geo. 2. cap. 25. ſect. 14. a notion prevailed, "that ſix of the first twelve on the panel muſt view and appear at the trial: if they did not, there could be no trial, and the cauſe muſt go off."

By ſtat. 4 & 5 Ann. cap. 16. ſect. 8. there could be no view till after the cauſe had been brought on to trial. If the court ſaw the queſtion involved in obſcurity, which might be cleared up by a view, the cauſe was put off, that the jurors might have a view before it came on to be tried again. The rule for a view proceeded on the previous opinion of the court or judge at the trial, "that the nature of the queſtion made a view not only proper, but neceſſary:" for the judges at the aſſizes were not to give way to delay and expence of a view, unleſs they ſaw that the cauſe could not be underſtood without one.

The court being unanimouſly of opinion, that the act of parliament meant a view ſhould not be granted, unleſs the court was ſatisfied that it was proper and neceſſary.

The rule that was made in the firſt inſtance that happened after the expedient, was propoſed by the court, and was received with general approbation. It was drawn up in the following words:

Saturday next after fifteen days of St. Hilary, in the 30th year of King George the Second.

Pierce Eſq; v. Earl Falconberg and others.

By conſent of council on both ſides, "It is ordered, that there iſſue a writ of diſtringas juratores, to be directed to the ſheriff of the county of York, in which ſhall be contained a clauſe, commanding the ſheriff to have ſix or more of the firſt twelve of the jurors to be impanelled and returned to try the iſſue between the parties at the place in queſtion, before the time of the trial of the ſaid iſſue, to wit, on &c, and that B. R. on the part of the plaintiff, and T. W. on the part of the defendants, ſhall attend on the ſame day, and ſhew the matters in queſtion to the ſaid ſix or more of the ſaid twelve of the ſaid jurors; and that the expences of taking the ſaid view ſhall be equally borne by both parties: and no evidence ſhall be given on either ſide at the time of taking thereof."

And by the like conſent, "It is further ordered, that in caſe no view ſhall be had; or if a view ſhall be had by any of the ſaid jurors, (whether they ſhall happen to be any of the twelve jurors, who ſhall be firſt named in the ſaid writ or not) yet the ſaid trial ſhall proceed; and no objection ſhall be made on either ſide, either for want of a view, or that a view was not had by any of the twelve jurors firſt named, or for that it was not had by any particular number of the jurors named in the ſaid writ, or for want of a proper return to the ſaid writ."

Now, if the trial is to be by a ſpecial jury, the rule runs thus:

It is ordered, that there iſſue a writ of diſtringas juratores, &c. "taking thereof," in the words of the firſt clauſe of the above recited rule between Pierce and Lord Falconberg and others) the additional clauſe is expreſſed in theſe terms. The plaintiff (or the defendant, viz. the party who prays the view) conſenting, that in caſe no view ſhall be had; or if a view ſhall be had by any of the jurors, whether they ſhall happen to be any of the twelve jurors who ſhall be firſt named in the ſaid writ or not; yet the ſaid trial ſhall proceed; and no objection ſhall be made on either ſide on account thereof, or for want of a proper return to the ſaid writ.

The rule for a view, when the cauſe is to be tried by a common jury, could not continue the ſame ſince the ballotting act, (viz. ſtat. 3 Geo. 2. cap. 25.) as it was before, nor could it be exactly like to that for views by ſpecial juries, (by reaſon of the particular directions given by ſect. 14. of the ballotting act.) The preſent form (ſince that ſtatute) is this:

"It is ordered, that there iſſue a writ of diſtringas juratores to be directed to the ſheriff of the county of York, in which ſhall be contained a clauſe, commanding the ſaid ſheriff to have ſix, or ſome greater number of the jurors, to be impanelled and returned to try the iſſue between the parties, who ſhall be mutually conſented to by the ſaid parties or their agents, at the place in queſtion, before the time of the trial of the ſaid iſſue, to wit, on, &c. and that B. R. on the part of the plaintiff, and T. W. on the part of the defendant, ſhall attend on the ſame day, and ſhew the matters in queſtion to the ſaid ſix, or "ſome greater number of the ſaid jurors, who ſhall be "mutually conſented to as aforeſaid; and that the expences of taking the ſaid view ſhall be equally borne "by both parties: and no evidence ſhall be given on "either ſide at the time of taking thereof."

The additional clauſe, now added to this rule, is in theſe words, "the plaintiff or the defendant," (the party at whoſe inſtance the rule is prayed) "conſenting that in caſe no view ſhall be had; or if a view "ſhall be had by any of the jurors, whether they ſhall "happen to be ſix, or any particular number of the jurors, who ſhall be ſo mutually conſented to as aforeſaid, "yet the ſaid trial ſhall proceed, and no objection "ſhall be made on either ſide on account thereof, or "for want of a proper return to the ſaid writ." Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 252.

And the court held they might lawfully tax themſelves by conſent, to carry on a ſuit for the public good of the pariſh; but in that caſe the majority could not bind the reſt without their conſent, as in the caſe of other rates. Holt, C. J. They ought to have a ſight of the books. In the caſe of a copyhold, every copyholder has an intereſt in the rolls; ſo here, every pariſhioner has a right to the pariſh books. And the court ordered copies of the books to be given, which Powell, Juſtice, ſaid would be good evidence, i. e. againſt the plaintiff, but not for him, becauſe in this caſe he has the cuſtody of the books themſelves, and may produce them in evidence, if he pleaſes. *Vide Mod. Hilary, 8 Geo. 2. The Pariſh of Denham v. The Pariſh Dalham in Suffolk.

On a ſpecial order it was ſtated, that one Walker hired a farm in Denham above 10*l.* per annum, and lived on it from 1725 to 1730, and paid pariſh rates; that then he went and lived for ſeveral years on an eſtate 150*l.* per ann. in Southwold, which is an extra-parochial place, conſiſting of two houſes, and three hundred acres of land belonging to, and in the occupation of different perſons. But it not appearing that there had been any overſeers of thep oor, the ſeſſions confirmed the order of the two juſtices for ſending him to Denham.

It was moved to quaſh both the orders, it having been determined, Salk. 486. and in the caſe of Rufford, that a ſettlement may be gained in an extra-parochial place, containing more houſes than one, ſo as to come under the denomination of a vill or townſhip; the power in ſtat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. in pariſhes, being by the ſtatute 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. extended to all townſhips and villages.

Per curiam. To a ſcire facias on a judgment by confeſſion, the defendant pleaded, that the warrant of attorney was given on an uſurious contract. And on demurrer it was held, that this was not within ſtat. 12 Ann. ſect. 2. c. 16. or to be got at this way ; for this is no contract of aſſurance.

The court however inclined, that it might be got at on a motion to vacate the judgment, as was done in the C. B. Trinity, 3 Geo. in the caſe of Jackſon v. Moſley, where a warrant was obtained from an infant. Trinity, 9 Geo. 2. Cock v. Ratcliffe.

In an action on the caſe brought againſt the defendant on a promiſſory note made to the plaintiff's teſtator, the defendant pleads in bar, that it was corruptly agreed between them, that the teſtator ſhould be paid in hand ten ſhillings on giving the note, which exceeds the rate of five pound per cent. and therefore inſiſts that the note is void : the plaintiff replied, that the note was given for a juſt debt ; without this, that it was agreed in manner and form, as the defendant pleads : to which replication the defendant demurs, and ſhews for cauſe, that the replication does not traverſe the corrupt agreement.

Lord Hardwicke. This is a good replication, and is a fairer way of pleading than to ſay it was corruptly agreed, becauſe that is but the conſequence of law on the facts as they ſhall appear, though I agree it is more uſual to plead in that manner : the old way was to traverſe all the circumſtances of the agreement; and if that were good, this muſt be ſo.

It was objected at the trial, that no evidence is given of the corruptneſs, but the facts themſelves. But judgment was given for the plaintiff. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardwicke, p. 287.

On uſury pleaded to an action againſt the defendant as indorſer of a note for 200 l. The caſe was, that the plaintiff took the note on advancing 197 l. when the note had three months to run ; and at the three months end took another note for 200 l. on advancing 3 l. for other three months. It was inſiſted, that this was not uſury, being a purchaſe out and out of the notes : and both parties becoming bankrupt, and the commiſſioners refuſing to let the notes be proved, a petition was preferred to the Lord Chancellor, who directed an iſſue on them.

Lee, Chief Juſtice, held, that this was uſury within the meaning of ſtat. 12 Ann. c. 16. which prohibits taking more than 5 l. per cent. on any contract directly or indirectly : however, he left it to the jury on the queſtion, whether this was to be deemed a purchaſe or a loan ; who found it to be the latter, and the defendant had a verdict. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1243.

Hilary, 32 Geo. 2. Lamego v. Gould.

On an action on the caſe brought on a ſpecial promiſe, “ to pay the plaintiff twenty guineas on the death “ of the wife ;” in conſideration of two guineas in hand paid by the plaintiff to the defendant. The note was in the following words :

“ Memorandum. In conſideration of two guineas re“ceived of Aaron Lamego, Eſq; &c. I promiſe to pay “ him twenty guineas on the deceaſe of my preſent “ wife, Anne Gould.”

The queſtion before the court was, “ whether this “ contract was uſurious ?” (the woman, at the time of making it, being then ſeventy years of age.)

The plaintiff's council argued, that ſtat. 12 Ann, cap. 16. only ſays, “ no perſon ſhall take above the “ value of 5 l. for the forbearance of 100 l. for a year; “ and ſo, after that rate, for a greater or leſſer ſum, “ or for a ſhorter or longer time ;” on pain that all bonds and contracts ſhall be void.

Now here is no forbearance, nor any certainty of receiving either principal or intereſt : it is a mere contingency ; and is like the caſe put in Cro. Eliz. 643. in the caſe of Button v. Downham, of a “ wager between “ two, to have 40 l. for 20 l. if one be alive at ſuch a “ day :” which, as there held, is not uſury.

Lord Mansfield ſtopped the plaintiff's council, being under a doubt how it is poſſible to come at this queſtion about uſury. For here is nothing at all ſtated about the loan of money: it might, for aught that appears to the contrary, be a voluntary gift, to be made to him upon this event. The matter of uſury was never thought of at the trial.

Deniſon, Foſter, and Wilmot, Juſtices, concurred with the Chief Juſtice; and Wilmot, Juſtice, obſerved, that the true diſtinction was laid down in Cro. Eliz. 643. between a real bona fide wager, not intended as a loan, and a tranſaction which is really an uſurious loan, but diſguiſed as a wager, with intent to have a ſhift.

Michaelmas, 33 Geo. 2. Moriſſot v. King.

In an action of debt on bond, in the penalty of 200*l.* conditioned for the performance of certain articles; which articles recited, that M. Moriſſot had lent D. King the ſum of 100*l.* to be repaid to her at the end of four years, without intereſt, but in conſideration that the ſaid D. K. his executors and adminiſtrators, ſhould find and provide for M. Dubois, daughter of the ſaid M. Moriſſet, (the obligee) meat and drink in the houſe where he dwelt, or ſhould dwell, for fourteen years, if the ſaid M. D. ſhould ſo long live; and that ſhe ſhould, during the ſaid term, board with him, and that ſhe ſhould be copartner with M. K. wife of the ſaid D. K. in the buſineſs of a milliner; and ſhould, all that time, bear one moiety of the loſſes, charges, (except houſe-keeping) ſhop-rent, and materials neceſſary for carrying on the trade, (which the ſaid D. K. did agree to provide;) and they ſhould be partners, and each do their utmoſt to carry on the trade; and ſhould divide the profits; and alſo, that the ſaid D. K. ſhould lodge the ſaid M. D. ſhe paying him 10*l.* a year; and at the end of the four years, D. K. was to repay the 100*l.* and in caſe of the death of the ſaid M. D. to pay the price, together with lawful intereſt for the 100*l.* to the ſaid M. M.

The defendant, after having obtained oyer of the bond, and of the articles therein recited, pleads, "that "this was a corrupt agreement," with an averment, "that the board of M. M. (the mother) was worth "20*l.* a year, and the board of M. D. (the daughter) "was worth 10*l.* a year."

To this plea the plaintiff demurs. And the only queſtion for the opinion of the court was, whether this was an uſurious contract, within ſtat. 12 Ann, ſtat. 2. cap. 16. which makes void all bonds, contracts, and aſſurances, where more than 5*l.* per cent. per annum is directly or indirectly taken for any loan.

The court were extremely clear that this caſe could not be within the ſtatute of uſury, and therefore gave judgment for the plaintiff. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 831.

The defendant being under an arreſt for a juſt debt, to get his liberty, conſented to give a warrant of attorney to confeſs judgment to the plaintiff; and there being no attorney by, the plaintiff did really diſcharge (as he pretended) the bailiffs before the warrant was executed. On examination of the matter, Holt, Chief Juſtice, declared, he would be very well ſatisfied by affidavits, that the bailiffs were ſo diſcharged: ſo as if the defendant had refuſed to execute the warrant, they would not come again and ſeize on him, and that he would have reaſon ſo to believe before he would let the judgment ſtand; and though this was debt for money due on a mortgage, yet he ſaid there ought to be bail. Vide Mod. H. in tail, &c. with power therein reſerved to R. H. made a leaſe to the defendant by indenture, rendering a rent of 15*l.* per annum; that R. H. was dead, and ſo the rent belonged to the plaintiffs; and for the arrears of one year this action was brought. On nil debet pleaded, and iſſue being joined, the plaintiffs, at the trial, gave in evidence this deed of ſettlement and fine. And on reading the deed, the power appeared to be to make leaſes for twenty-one years in poſſeſſion, not in reverſion, rendering the ancient rent, and not diſpuniſhable of waſte.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſeemed to be clear of opinion, that this was a material variance. For it was neceſſary to ſhew the power to entitle the plaintiffs to this rent; otherwiſe the rent reſerved by the tenant for life could not come to them in remainder; and this power ſhewn in evidence is not that on which they have declared; becauſe this is a ſpecial power, the other general. But he ſaid he would ſee the nature of the defence.

And for the variance, viz. the declaration was of a leaſe rendering 15 l. per annum, and the leaſe produced in evidence was rendering 15 l. per annum, and three fowls; the plaintiffs were nonſuited. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 792.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. 3dly. If one under an arreſt, by the proceſs of an inferior court, gives a warrant for the purpoſe of confeſſing a judgment in that court, this court will not ſet it aſide, though an attorney be not preſent.

4thly. If one under an arreſt by ſuch proceſs gives a warrant to confeſs a judgment in this court, if an attorney be not by, it will be ill.

In ejectment, it appeared, that on a marriage ſettlement a power was given to every tenant for life, when in poſſeſſion, to limit the premiſes to any woman he ſhould marry for her life by way of jointure, and in bar of dower. The tenant for life made a leaſe for ninety-nine years, determinable on the death of his wife.

The court held, that however ſhe might be entitled to relief in a court of equity, yet at law it could never be ſaid to be an execution of the power; for the eſtates are very different, one being a freehold, and the other a chattel; the freehold in her being a qualification to any after-taken huſband to be a member of parliament, kill game, &c. And 8 Co. 69. Lay 74. Co. Litt. 45. were cited, where the power in biſhops or tenants in tail to make leaſes have been held to be ſtrictly purſued. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 992.

The caſe was. A. deviſed to his ſon for life; after his death, then the ſame and ſuch parts thereof to the uſe of ſuch woman as ſhall be his wife, for her natural life, as he ſhall, by deed or writing under hand and ſeal, in the preſence of three witneſſes, direct, limit, or appoint for that purpoſe, and then to the uſe of the heirs of his body; the ſon, by deed, in the preſence of three witneſſes, grants and aſſigns to truſtees, To hold to them and their executors, in truſt, to permit himſelf for life to receive the profits, and after his deceaſe for the uſe of his wife Dinah for her natural life, and immediately after her deceaſe for the uſe of the heirs of her body lawfully begotten.

It was objected: Here is an eſtate limited to the wife in tail, and the power is for life.

To which it was anſwered, and reſolved by the court, that it was a good appointment; though nothing paſſes by the deed, which is void to raiſe any uſe, but ſhall enure as an appointment.

The Chief Juſtice held, that the eſtate was appointed by the will, and the ſon is only to name and appoint the lands, and not the eſtate, which was appointed before. Vide Forteſcue, p. 339.

Eaſter, 16 Geo. 2. The King v. The Inhabitants of Upmerden.

On a motion to quaſh an order of ſeſſions confirming an order of two juſtices for the removal of A. B. and three children from Illsfield to Upmerden, both in the county of Suſſex, on which a rule to ſhew cauſe was obtained.

Caſe. The children were laſt legally ſettled at Upmerden; but that they were found wandering and begging, and were apprehended in St. Andrew's, Chicheſter; and were carried before the Mayor, who, in purſuance of ſtat. 13 Geo. 2. cap. 24. made a paſs under his hand and ſeal.

After hearing the arguments of the council on both ſides on ſhewing cauſe, the court confirmed the two orders.

Lee, Chief Juſtice. The whole caſe appears on the order of ſeſſions which, ſtates the paſs in the very words and figures of it. The main queſtion will require conſideration. The manner of removal to the laſt legal ſettlement, by a paſs, is new. And it is material, as to coſts, "whether this may be done." It is not material, "whether the coſts were given by ſtat. 13 & 14 Car. 2 or by a ſubſequent act." Be that as it may, coſts are given on orders of removal, but not on theſe paſſes.

Theſe paſſes were not conſidered as orders, before this act; nor were perhaps removable by certiorari: but now they are orders, and are removable. The right way would be, to have a certiorari to remove the paſs, for we cannot quaſh it, if it be not here. It is, at preſent, a ſubſiſting paſs.

Chapple, Wright, and Deniſon, Juſtices, agreed that the paſs was bad; but that it could not be quaſhed, unleſs brought hither by certiorari.

The council, in ſupport of the two orders, moved for the opinion of the court.

Lee, Chief Juſtice. We can take no notice of the paſs, unleſs it appears to the court; if it did, yet it would not ſtand in the way of our affirming the orders: becauſe the paſs is only intended to prevent the vagrancy; and the place of the laſt legal ſettlement remains to be determined afterwards; conſequently the orders muſt be affirmed.

Per curiam. Let both orders be affirmed. Vide Bur. S. C. vol. 2. p. 214.

1 W. & M. Lea v. Libb.

The teſtator made his will in writing, ſubſcribed by two witneſſes, and deviſed all his lands to W. R. afterwards he made a codicil, in which his will was recited; and this alſo was atteſted by two witneſſes, one of which witneſſes was a witneſs to the will, but the other was a new witneſs; the queſtion was, whether the new witneſs ſhould make a third to the will, the ſtatute requiring that there ſhould be three.

Adjudged, That he ſhould not; it is true, here are three witneſſes to the intent and will of the teſtator, but there is but two to his will in writing; it is true likewiſe, that there are two witneſſes to the codicil, but thoſe are not witneſſes to the written will, ſo that there wants one witneſs to the will in writing. Vide Salk. vol 3. p. 395.

Trinity, 4 W. & M. Smith v. Milford, or Milford v. Smith.

On a ſpecial verdict in ejectment the caſe was:

J. D. being ſeized in fee of the lands in queſtion, did by indenture, bearing date the 5th of June, 17 Car. 1. and made between him of the one part, and J. P. and J. C. of the other part, in conſideration of a marriage then intended to be had between G. his ſecond ſon with M. P. and in conſideration of a portion of 200*l.* &c. and for the ſettling of his lands on the truſts therein declared, did covenant with the ſaid truſtees to levy a fine of the ſaid eſtate before Michaelmas term next following, to the uſe of himſelf and E. his wife, and to the ſurvivor of them for life; then to G. his ſon for life; then to M. his intended wife for life; and afterwards to the heirs of the body of the ſaid G. to be begotten on the body of the ſaid M. remainder to his own right heirs.

There was no fine levied; but three years after the ſealing of this deed J. D. made his will, in which (among other things) there was this clauſe, viz.

"Item, I ratify and make good all thoſe my eſtates made or granted in marriage to G. my ſon, according to the writing made by me in truſt."

The jury found that there was no writing made by him in truſt to any other perſon or perſons whatſoever, other than the deed of the 5th of June, which they found to be the very deed of J. D.

They found, that J. D. had iſſue J. his eldeſt ſon and heir, who entered, and died, leaving iſſue M. his only daughter and heir.

They found, that G. his ſecond ſon, and M. died, leaving iſſue a ſon, who was leſſor of the plaintiff, &c.

The queſtion was, whether the will did ſupply the defect in the deed, which, without a fine, would not operate to create an eſtate-tail in G. the ſecond ſon.

Per curiam. The intention of the teſtator is very certain, from the nature of the thing deviſed, viz. "I "do ratify all thoſe my eſtates granted to G. in marri-"age:" by which words he takes notice that G. was married; that he granted an eſtate to him, which is a complete deſcription of the deed, eſpecially ſince it is found that there is no other writing. So without further argument, the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 131. Salk. vol. 1. p. 225.

On a trial at bar, the queſtion was, whether the witneſſes to a will had purſued the directions of the ſtatute of frauds, &c. in ſubſcribing their names; and it was reſolved, that where the teſtator lay in a bed in one room, and the witneſſes went through a ſmall paſſage into another room, and there ſet their names at a table in the middle of the room, and oppoſite to the door, and both that and the door of the room where the teſtator lay were open, ſo that he might ſee them tranſcribe their names, if he would; and though there was no poſitive proof that he did ſee them ſubſcribe, yet that was a ſufficient ſubſcribing within the meaning of the ſtatute, becauſe it was poſſible that the teſtator might ſee them ſubſcribe.

Per curiam. If the witneſſes ſubſcribe their names in the ſame room where the teſtator lies, though the curtains of the bed are drawn cloſe, it is a good ſubſcribing within this ſtatute; becauſe, if it is in his power to ſee them, and if that is done, it ſhall be conſtrued to be in his preſence. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 395.

Trinity, 5 W. & M. Hitchins v. Baſſet. Error.

In a ſuit in ejectment the jury found a ſpecial verdict: that Sir H. K. being ſeiſed in fee, made his will, and deviſed his lands to B. for life, remainder to C. in fee; they find likewiſe that Sir H. K. made another will in writing; but what were the contents of that will, they do not know: the queſtion was, if the firſt will was revoked? It was argued, that every later will is not a revocation; for a man by one will may diſpoſe of one acre, and by another will of another acre: ſo if a man purchaſe lands after he has made his will, he need not make his will over again, but make another will as to theſe. Cro. Car. 293. Therefore this other will might be of other lands, and no revocation; and the words other will might be no revocation, but might be conſiſtent. Cro. Eliz. 721. Cro. Car. 24.

The court were of opinion, that it was no revocation, and the words other will might concern other lands, or no lands at all, or be a confirmation of the former: and the judgment was afterwards, on error brought, affirmed in the Houſe of Lords. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 592.

5 W. & M. Lamb v. Archer.

In ejectment a ſpecial verdict was found, and the caſe was as follows; one H. being poſſeſſed of a term for years, deviſes his lands to A. and to the heirs of his body, and if A. die without iſſue, if B. is living, then to B. The council argued, that the court would allow a limitation in remainder not only to a perſon in eſſe, but to the firſt ſon of the perſon in eſſe. 1 Sid. 451. 1 Cro. 230. 1 Ro. 612. And the court held this was a good limitation to B. the contingency ariſing within the compaſs of a life; and they denied the caſe of Child v. Bayly, 2 Cro. 460. The council on the other ſide ſaid, if one makes a feoffment to the right heirs of B. that this was a good ſpringing uſe: but not allowed; becauſe it is by way of preſent limitation; otherwiſe where it is in future, as to the right heirs of B. after his death. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 225.

Hilary, 6 W. & M. Goodright v. Corniſh.

In a ſuit in ejectment, a ſpecial verdict was found that J. K. being ſeiſed of the lands in which, &c. had iſſue J. and R. his ſons, and deviſed the lands to J. for fifty years, if he ſhould ſo long live, remainder to the heirs-male of the body of J. and for default of ſuch iſſue, remainder to R. in tail-male, remainder to the right heirs of the deviſor: the deviſor died. J. the ſon ſuffered a common recovery to the uſe of himſelf for life, and after to the defendant in fee: the plaintiff under R. viz. leſſee of the eldeſt ſon of R. And it was adjudged, 1ſt, That this limitation to the heirs-male of J. was not any executory deviſe, but a plain contingent remainder.

2dly, That it was ill, becauſe there was no freehold to ſupport it, and therefore that the remainder over to R. well took effect. Eaſter, 6 W. & M. Reeve v. Long. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment in the C. B. in ejectment, wherein a ſpecial verdict was found; the caſe was; one J. L. being ſeiſed in fee, deviſed the lands to his nephew H. L. for life, remainder to the firſt ſon in tail male, and ſo on to the ſecond, third, &c. And for default of ſuch iſſue, remainder to his nephew R. L. leſſor of the plaintiff, for life, remainder to the firſt ſon in tail, and ſo on to the ſecond, third, &c. with divers remainders over. The deviſor died, H. married, and died without iſſue, leaving his wife enſient with a ſon; R. entered as on his remainder, and afterwards the poſthumous ſon (the defendant) was born, and his guardian entered on the leſſor; whereon he brought this ejectment; and judgment was given for the plaintiff in the C. B. by the whole court: and now that judgment was affirmed by this court; and reſolved, 1ſt. That the remainder to the firſt ſon of A. is a contingent remainder, and muſt take effect during the particular eſtate of A. or to him the inſtant that it determines; that by conſequence this remainder to the ſon became void by the death of the tenant for life before A. had a firſt ſon. 2dly. That this was ſuch a default of iſſue, or a dying without iſſue, that inſtantly the remainder limited over to B. veſted in him, and he became ſeiſed in poſſeſſion; and this cannot be defeated, nor the eſtate fetched back again, though A. has a ſon born afterwards.

Note. This judgment was afterwards reverſed in the Houſe of Lords againſt the opinion of all the Judges, who were much diſſatisfied with the reverſal, and blamed the Judge who tried the cauſe, for ſuffering a ſpecial verdict to be found. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 228. Mod. Rep. vol. 4. 282.

Trinity, 7 W. 3. South or Buſh, v. Alleine or Allen.

B.* during her natural life, to be paid by his executors into her own hands, without the intermeddling of her huſband; and after her deceaſe, he deviſed them unto and amongſt J. B. and R. B. &c. The queſtion before the court was, whether by this deviſe S. B. had the lands? And the council argued ſhe had; for by theſe words, rents and profits, the land itſelf would paſs, which the court granted; then the queſtion was, whether theſe laſt words, to be paid by his executors, &c. did not alter and reſtrain the firſt words? And the council ſaid, they did not; for which he cited Yel. 73. Carpenter v. Collins. 3 Cro. 674. 724. Pigott v. Garniſh. 1 Cro. 368. Spirt v. Bence. 2 Leon. 221. pl. 208. and 3 Leon 78.

It was ruled by Holt, Chief Juſtice, at Cambridge, in a diſpute between the lord of the manor and the deviſee of a copyhold of the ſame manor, that the recital of the will in the copy of the admittance was good evidence of the deviſe againſt the lord, or any other ſtranger. But if the ſuit had been between the heir of the copyholder and the deviſee; the will itſelf ought to have been produced. Hilary, 11 W. 3. Hilliard v. Gennings.

This was an iſſue directed out of Chancery to be tried in a feigned action, whether T. G. the younger, by any late will in writing, deviſed to W. H. the plaintiff; and on a ſpecial verdict it was found, that T. G. huſband of the defendant, was ſeiſed in fee of the lands in queſtion, and had iſſue by the defendant T. G. junior, his only ſon, and two daughters, M. and E. who are now living; that T. the father made a will on the 27th day of December 1679, in theſe words: "I deviſe "to my ſon T. G. and his heirs for ever, all that my "manor of E. which I lately purchaſed of H. W. but "if it ſhall happen that my ſaid ſon ſhall die before he "attains the age of twenty-one years, or without iſſue "of his body lawfully begotten, then my ſaid land "ſhall be divided between my ſaid daughters, M. and "E. and their heirs for ever:" that the father died ſeiſed as aforeſaid, and that T. G. the ſon, entered, and became ſeiſed as the law directs, and being above the age of twenty-one years, made his laſt will on the 7th day of April 1695, in the preſence of A. B. and W. H. the plaintiff, and they ſubſcribed their hands as witneſſes, in the preſence of the teſtator, whereby he deviſed the ſaid lands to the plaintiff W. H. and his heirs; that T. G. junior was alſo heir to his father; that on the 18th day of May 1695, he died ſeiſed, without iſſue of his body.

The queſtion before the court was, whether this was a good will within the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries, 29 Car. 2. the deviſee being one of the three witneſſes; and the court were of opinion, that for this reaſon the deviſe was void; for every day's experience ſhews that the deviſee cannot be a witneſs to prove the will, and the intent of the act was to prevent people from ſetting up forged wills, which would be fruſtrated if deviſees ſhould be allowed as witneſſes of their own will. Therefore judgment was given for the defendant niſi, &c. and in Hilary term following the rule was made abſolute. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12, p. 276.

Hilary, 12 W. 3. Fiſher v. Nicholls.

In this caſe it was ſaid by Holt, Chief Juſtice, That in wills the conſtruction is more favourable to fulfil the intent of the teſtator, than it is in deeds, or other conveyances, executed by him in his life-time; therefore, where there is a gift by the will to W R. and his aſſigns for ever, this is an eſtate in fee; but if by deed, it is no more than eſtate for life; ſo if a gift be made to W. R. and his heirs male, by will, it is an eſtate-tail, but by a deed, it is a fee-ſimple; ſo a deviſe to his eldeſt ſon and his heirs, after the death of the wife of the teſtator, is an eſtate for life to the wife by implication, but it is not ſo in a deed: the reaſon of this difference is, not becauſe the teſtator is wanting of council, but becauſe a will is not a common law conveyance; though, it is true, there were wills before ſtat. Hen. 7. but thoſe were not by common law, but by cuſtom, as in the caſe of burgage-lands: now as cuſtom enabled men to diſpoſe of their lands in this manner by their wills, and not according to the rules and forms in common law conveyances, ſo it exempted this kind of conveyance from the regularity and propriety requiſite in thoſe conveyances; and by this means it came to paſs, that wills by the ſtatute, in imitation of thoſe by cuſtom, gained ſuch favourable conſtructions.

By ſtat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. there is a conſiderable alteration made in the law relating to wills in writing; for by that ſtatute it is enacted, "That the will muſt "be written in the life-time of the teſtator, and ſigned "by him, or ſome other perſon in his preſence, "and by his direction; and that the witneſſes ſhall "ſubſcribe their names in his preſence. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 394. Ibid. vol. 1. p. 234. Raym. vol. 2. p. 831.

Trinity, 12 W. 3. Nottingham v. Jennings.

In ejectment the following caſe was made on trial, viz. one H. had three ſons, A. B. and C. and deviſed his lands to B. his ſecond ſon, after the death of his wife, to hold to him and his heirs for ever; and for want of ſuch heirs, then to his own right heirs. H. died, and B. entered, and died without iſſue, living the eldeſt ſon.

Per curiam. The ſecond ſon had only an eſtate-tail, and the eldeſt ſhall take by deſcent, and not by the will; and ſo the deviſe over is void in point of limitation; for his intent was, that the land ſhould deſcend from himſelf, and not from his ſon B. If the deviſe over had been to a ſtranger, it had been void, and B. had taken a fee; but here is only an eſtate-tail, and the word heirs can import nothing more than iſſue, for B could not die without heirs, living heirs of the father: and therefore the court made a rule, that the poſtea ſhould be delivered to the plaintiff, and judgment ſhould be entered for him. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 234. Raym. vol. 1. p. 508.

Hilary, 1 Ann. Cole v. Rawlinſon.

In ejectment a ſpecial verdict was found, as follows, viz. That one B. being ſeiſed in fee of the Bell-Tavern, made a ſettlement to the uſe of himſelf for life, remainder to his wife for life, remainder to his ſon in tail, remainder to his wife in fee; or to the like effect. The huſband died, and the wife being ſo ſeiſed of the ſaid Bell-Tavern, and poſſeſſed of other leaſehold eſtates, made her will, and thereby deviſed the ſame in manner following: “ I give, ratify and confirm all “ my eſtate, right, title and intereſt, which I now “ have, and all the term or terms of years which I “ now have, or may have in my power to diſpoſe of “ after my death, in whatever I hold by leaſe from “ Sir J. F. and alſo the houſe called the Bell-Tavern, “ to J. B.” This J. B. was the ſon and heir of him that made the ſettlement, and alſo had the remainder in tail in the Bell-Tavern, but was not the heir of the wife: the queſtion was, what eſtate the ſaid J. B. took in the Bell-Tavern, by this deviſe?.

1ſt, Becauſe it is but one ſentence coupled by the words And alſo, and governed by one verb, whereby the prepoſition in is carried unto the Bell-Tavern, ſo that it is, a deviſe of all her eſtate and intereſt in her leaſehold eſtate, and alſo in the Bell-Tavern. Dy. 19. 2 Saund. 165. And the words ought to have this conſtruction, ſince they are capable of it; becauſe this was certainly the intent of the teſtator, who could not deſign ſo vain and uſeleſs an eſtate to the deviſee, as an eſtate for life after an eſtate-tail; and for this purpoſe was urged the caſe in Moor 873. Hob. 3. Mo. 52. 1 Ro. 844.

2dly, Becauſe the words of the will are rather a deſcription of the teſtator's eſtate than of his lands; and the prepoſition in ſubintelligitur, and put it into Latin, is, And alſo the houſe, called, &c. And ſuppoſe a tranſpoſition of the words, which is allowable to ſerve the intent of a will, and then the matter is plain; for then it is, “ I give my term of years, and all the “ eſtate, right and title I have in my term, And alſo “ in the Bell-Tavern;” and Powys ſaid it was an honeſt conſtruction, and brought back the fee of the reverſion to the right heir of the huſband, who created the reverſion.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, obſerved, that the intent of a teſtator will not do, unleſs there be ſufficient words in the will to manifeſt that intent; neither is his intent to be collected from the circumſtances of his eſtate and other matters collateral and foreign to the will, but from the words and tenor of the will itſelf: and if we once go into the affairs of the teſtator, and leave the will, we ſhall not know the mind of the teſtator by his words, but by his circumſtances; ſo that if you go to a lawyer, he ſhall not know how to expound it. On the will it is ſo, but with the matter found in a ſpecial verdict it is otherwiſe; and what if more accidental circumſtances be diſcovered, and be made the matter of another verdict? Men's rights will be very precarious on ſuch conſtruction. And as for the honeſty of the conſtruction, What if the woman paid a good portion, and was a purchaſer of this reverſion, is it not as honeſt then to conſtrue it in favour of her heir, as to expound it in favour of the right heir of the huſband? But we muſt not depart from the will to find the meaning of it in things out of it. It is then a certain rule, that to deviſe lands to H. without farther words, will paſs but an eſtate for life, unleſs there be other words to ſhew his intent, as for ever; or unleſs he deviſe for ſome ſpecial purpoſe which cannot be accompliſhed without a larger eſtate: and as this is a ſure rule, ſo it holds good, as well where the deviſe is of a reverſion, as where it is of lands in poſſeſſion, unleſs he deviſe it as a reverſion, or take notice of a particular eſtate; for then his intent may appear upon the face of the will itſelf: but if the words be general, and without regard to the nature of the thing, it is otherwiſe; for it ſhall not be conſtrued from the nature of the thing, which is extrinſical, but from the words of the will. Aſk a lawyer what paſſes, he ſays an eſtate for live, for he knew not that it was a reverſion; and though it be a fruitleſs eſtate, and will ſignify nothing, yet that does not appear till it be found, and therefore when found it is not to be regarded. The caſe in Moor and Hob. differs, for there the teſtator takes notice of a precedent term, and the words are, “ his lands of inheritance,” ſo that the ſpecial intent of the teſtator is apparent from the words of the will. If I give Black-Acre to A. and his heirs, And alſo White-Acre, the fee-ſimple of White-Acre ſhall paſs, as well as the fee of Black-Acre; becauſe it follows the limitation, and compriſes it by the words, And alſo: but if I give all my right, title, and intereſt in my term, And alſo my houſe called the Bell, in the grammatical conſtruction it is no more than, “ And alſo I give my houſe called the Bell;” for the ſubject-matter of his right, title, and intereſt, is the term, and the prepoſition in terminates and reſts there. So is the caſe at bar; but ſay they, turn it into Latin, and then it is, I give my right and title, and intereſt in the term, And alſo in the houſe called the Bell-Tavern. I anſwer, the prepoſition in may be neceſſarily underſtood in Latin, but not in Engliſh; and the conjunction is not ſo far a copulative as to take in the prepoſition in, tho' it takes in the verb. My brother Powell would tranſpoſe the words, ſo it ſhall be, “ all the right, title, “ and intereſt in the Bell-Tavern; And alſo all the “ term I have and hold of Sir J. F.” But I do not know how we can tranſpoſe words that are good ſenſe. If the will was nonſenſe, then we might tranſpoſe to make it bear a meaning; but to diſplace the words of the will when they are intelligible, is to alter the will and the ſenſe of it. For theſe reaſons, and alſo becauſe the heir at law was to be favoured, he concluded for the plaintiff. He cited 3 Cro. 330. Hob. 2. 1 Cro. Wilkinſon v. Merrilan; but notwithſtanding, judgment was given for the defendant. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 234. Raym. vol. 2. p. 83.

A ſpecial verdict was found on a feigned iſſue, directed out of Chancery to try whether the late Duke of B did, by his will, deviſe certain fee-farm rents to J. Earl of B. in fee. The deviſe was in theſe words, viz. “ I give certain lands to A. and I give to J. Earl “ of B. my ſon-in-law, 5000 l. and all my mines; “ all which I give to my ſaid ſon-in-law, his executors and aſſigns, together with all my plate and “ jewels, and all other my eſtate real and perſonal, not “ otherwiſe diſpoſed of by this my will, for to be " given by him to his children as he ſhall think convenient. I ſolely truſting to his honour and diſcretion, that he will give them ſuch proviſion as will " be neceſſary." And another clauſe was, " Whereas I have contracted for the ſale of my fee-farm " rents, my will is, that if my debts ſhall not be ſatisfied out of my other eſtate, my executors (whereof the Earl was one) ſhall or may ſell ſome part or " all of them for payment of them, notwithſtanding " the rents are not deviſed by this my laſt will." And the queſtion was, whether his fee-farm rents ſhould paſs to the Earl of B. and for what eſtate?

Holt, C. J. (who delivered the reſolution of the court) obſerved, that the rents paſs by theſe words, " all " my real and perſonal eſtate;" for the word eſtate is genus generaliſſimum, and includes all things real and perſonal, and the fee of the rents paſſes at leaſt the whole eſtate of the deviſor; for all his eſtate is a deſcription of his fee: in a will the teſtator is not tied up to form; it is enough that he expreſſes and ſignifies his meaning by any words. Before the ſtatute Hen. 8. if one had deviſed his land by virtue of a cuſtom, the common law accepted his intent without requiring particular words of limitation, as in caſes of conveyances at common law; and as it was ſo in deviſes before the ſtatute, there is the ſame reaſon why it ſhould be ſo in deviſes ſince the ſtatute: and he held, that deviſing all his eſtate, and all his eſtate in ſuch a houſe, was the ſame, and that all his eſtate in the thing paſſed in either caſe. Hob. 177. Moor 480. 880. 2 Vent. 285. Allen 28. Trinity, 2 Ann. Lord Bridgewater v. The Duke of Bolton.

The council for the plaintiff in this caſe obſerved, that it had been adjudged in Chancery, and is now become a ſettled rule, that if a man is ſeiſed in fee of lands, and makes his will thereof, and deviſes the ſame to another in fee, and after that makes a mortgage of the ſame lands in fee to a third perſon, and afterwards dies without having paid the money due on the mortgage; that this mortgage does not amount to a total revocation, but only as to, &c. and the equity of redemption ſhall go to the deviſee. To which the council on the other ſide agreed. Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 968.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. If a deviſe be to the heir at law, paying ſuch and ſuch legacies, &c. and for default thereof, remainder over, the heir, till default, is in by deſcent, and the other's intereſt is by way of executory deviſe. And ſo it was held in Pell v. Brown's caſe, in 1 Cro. where the fee was deviſed to one who was not heir, the remainder to him who was heir, there the heir was in by deſcent; and it is hard to maintain either by uſe, or deviſe, a remainder to a ſtranger, after a preſent fee to one who is not heir at law. *Vide Mod. Michaelmas, 6 Ann. Bunter v. Coke.

One H. deviſed to his wife all ſuch ſums of money, lands, tenements and eſtate whatſoever, whereof at the time of his deceaſe he ſhould be poſſeſſed. After the making of the will H. purchaſed lands of the cuſtom Gavelkind. And the queſtion was, whether theſe lands paſſed by the deviſe? It was urged, that if a diſſeiſee deviſes, and afterwards re-enters, the deviſee is good: and this was allowed, becauſe by the entry he was ſeiſed from the beginning, ſo as he might bring treſpaſs: ſo if one have a remainder in fee expectant on an eſtate for life, and deviſe it, and the tenant for life dies, the eſtate in poſſeſſion paſſes; and this was granted, becauſe the deviſor was ſeiſed at the time of the will; and his intent was to paſs all.

Per curiam 1ſt, A deviſe of things perſonal is good, though the teſtator has them not at the time of his will, becauſe they go to the executors; and the legacy paſſes not by the will, but by the aſſent of executors to whom the will is only directory; ſo that the legatee is in by the executors: but the court doubted as to a chattel real, as a leaſe for years. Gouldſb. 93. That it does not paſs.

2dly, A deviſe of lands is not good if the teſtator had nothing in them at the time of the making his will; for a man cannot give that which he has not, and the ſtatute only impowers men having lands to deviſe them; ſo that if the deviſor has not the lends, he is out of the ſtatute; Co. Lit. 392. and that which was void in its original can never become good. If an infant makes a will, it is void, though he comes of full age before he dies; but a republication after full age paſſes the land; ſo of a feme covert: and in theſe caſes there was only a perſonal diſability, viz. infancy and coverture; ſo here there is a real diſability by wanting the thing; and the conſtant form of pleading is, that the teſtator was ſeized, and being ſo ſeized, made his will. Co. Ent. 364. Raſ. 274. And there is no difference between a deviſe of lands, in ſocage and gavelkind by cuſtom. 34 H. 6. F. N. Br. 199.

3dly, Had there been a republication, it was admitted theſe lands would have paſſed; for a republication is as making a new will, and the intent is manifeſt.

4thly, It was admitted, that if one deviſe to two and and their heirs, and one dies in the life of the teſtator, the ſurvivor has all; and that if one has a manor and deviſes it, and after tenancy eſcheat, that ſhall paſs by the deviſe as being part of the manor. Vide Salk. vol. 1. p. 237.

Hilary, 7 Ann. Grumble v. Jones.

A ſpecial verdict was found in this caſe, viz. that grandfather was ſeiſed in fee, and by will deviſed as follows: I give to my daughter A. for life, remainder to A. L. and his heirs; and for default of ſuch heirs, remainders over. And the queſtion was, whether this was an eſtate in fee, or in tail?

Holt, Chief Juſtice. You will find it a hard point to make this an eſtate-tail. And the court gave judgment that this was a fee; but made the rule niſi, &c. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 11. p. 207.

Michaelmas, 11 Ann. Ongly v. Peed. Error.

This was a writ of error brought on a judgment in the C. B. The caſe was: A man deviſed his land to A. and his brothers ſucceſſively; but not to be entered on or enjoyed by any of them, till after marriage. A. was found by the verdiſt to be the eldeſt brother; and whether this will was void, by reaſon of the uncertainty who ſhould take, was the queſtion.

The court were of opinion, that the will was a good will, and certain enough; for being in the caſe of brothers, the common law was a guide to the expoſition of the word ſucceſſively, viz. that the eldeſt ſhould, after his marriage, enjoy it firſt for his life; then the ſecond, and then the third; eſpecially when he who was named in the will, is by the verdict found to be the eldeſt brother. Had the deviſe been to A. B. and C. to take ſucceſſively, it would have been void for the uncertainty. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 103.

Michaelmas, 11 Ann. The Caſe of Lord Lanſdown.

This was an ejectment brought by three coheirs againſt Lord Lanſdown. The caſe was, the Earl of Bath, the common anceſtor, made his will, dated the 24th day of October 1684, under which Lord Lanſdown claimed: this will afterwards in 1696 ſtood revoked, by an act in law, as to all the real eſtate deviſed by it, but not the perſonal.

Some years afterwards he told one Mr. N. then in the ſame coach with him, that he deſigned to republiſh his will: the next day, in the preſence of ſeveral people, he brought with him his will in one hand, and two codicils of the ſame import in the other, and ſaid, This is my will, by which I have ſettled my eſtate, and this I deſign as a codicil to my will, to be taken as part and parcel thereof. Then the codicils were duly executed, according to the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries; and the will and one codicil were ſealed up in one paper, with the Earl of Bath's ſeal, and the other codicil in another paper, with the ſame ſeal; and theſe papers were, after his death, produced by thoſe with whom they were depoſited.

Neither will nor codicils were read at the time of republication.

On the codicil he took notice of his will in the following manner: Whereas I made my will in 1684, which I do not intend wholly to revoke; but in reſpect of many alterations ſince happening, &c.

The queſtion was, whether this amounted to a republication of his will, the will not being ſealed and ſubſcribed, as the ſtatute for preventing frauds, &c. directs.

The ſecond point was, that ſuppoſing the will republiſhed, yet it could convey no title to the defendant, becauſe he claims as iſſue male to the deviſee in tail, Bernard Granville, who died, leaving the teſtator, and therefore it was a lapſed legacy.

And of this opinion was the court. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 96.

Michaelmas, 12 Ann. Backhouſe v. Wells

This caſe was brought on an ejectment; and the queſtion aroſe on the conſtruction of a will, whether the words of it made the deviſee only tenant for life, or tenant in tail.

The deviſor being ſeiſed in fee of the lands in queſtion, makes his will as follows:

“ To the intent that all my lands ſhould remain in “ my name and blood, I deviſe to J. S. my near “ kinſman, ſuch and ſuch lands, &c. To have and to “ hold for the term of his natural life only, without im- “ peachment of waſte; then to the iſſue male of his body
“ lawfully to be begotten, if God ſhall bleſs him with ſuch “ iſſue; remainder to the heirs male of the body of that “ iſſue.”

The next term Parker, Chief Juſtice, delivered the opinion of the court, that by the deviſe the deviſee was made tenant for life, remainder to the iſſue in tail. The words of the will, he ſaid, were ſo expreſs to this purpoſe, that neither any words that could have been uſed, or any arguments could make it plainer. This, he ſaid, was both the obvious and legal import of the words, and what they would have imported in a conveyance. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 10. p. 181.

Hilary, 3 Geo. Woodright or Goodright v. Wright.

See this caſe fully ſtated in page 513 of this work, under the head Heir.

Michaelmas, 4 Geo. Young v. Holmes.

On a trial in ejectment, the defendant pleaded not guilty; the caſe was, the leſſee for years deviſed the term to the executor for life, paying 50 l. to J. S. remainder to the leſſors of the plaintiff. The executor died, and his executrix entered on the reſidue of the term, and poſſeſſed herſelf of the leaſe.

1ſt. It being proved, the defendant had the leaſe in her cuſtody, and refuſing to produce it, an attorney, who had read it, was allowed to give evidence of the contents. And the Chief Juſtice ſaid, he would intend it made againſt the defendant, it being in her power, if it was otherwiſe, to ſhew the contrary.

2dly. For the defendant it was inſiſted and agreed to by the Chief Juſtice, that J. H. took the term as executor, and not as legatee, and then the remainder over was not executed, and that it was incumbent on the remainder-men to prove a ſpecial aſſent thereto as to a legacy. On this they called a witneſs to prove payment of the 50 l. charged on the term in the hands of the legatee; and this was held a ſufficient aſſent, and the plaintiff obtained a verdict. Plow. 544. a. 8 Co. 95. a. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 70.

In a ſuit in ejectment, a caſe was made at the Kent aſſizes, that T. C. being tenant for life of the lands in queſtion, remainder to his wife for life, remainder to his own right heirs, 29th October 1673, made his will in theſe words:

“ Item, My lands, by Woolwich, my wife is to en“ joy for her life, after her deceaſe of right it goes
“ to my daughter E. for ever, provided ſhe has heirs;
“ if my ſaid daughter E. ſhould die before her mother,
“ or without heirs, and my ſaid wife M. ſhould mar-
“ ry again, and have an heir-male, I bequeath him
“ all my right to that eſtate, not thinking I can ſuf“ ficiently reward her love; if my ſaid wife marries “ again, and fails of an heir-male, after her deceaſe
“ and my daughter, ſhe failing of heirs, I bequeath
“ 50 l. per annum of that eſtate to my brother J. C. and
“ to his heirs for ever.” And then diſtributed the reſt to other perſons.

The deviſor died, and the wife married again, and had iſſue J. H. the defendant, and died. Then E. the daughter died without iſſue; and on her death the leſſors of the plaintiff claimed the eſtate as right heirs of the deviſor, and the defendant claims under the deviſe to the heir male of the deviſor's wife by a ſecond huſband.

It was objected, that the deviſe to the defendant was void, being of a fee on a fee.

Then it was objected, that the words, ſhe failing of heirs, ſhews what heirs were meant; and there is a limitation to the uncle, who may be heir to the daughter.

The matter was adjourned, and afterwards Pratt, Chief Juſtice, delivered the reſolution of the court.

We are of opinion, that the firſt part of the will is no deviſe, the teſtator only taking notice how the eſtate was ſettled before, that if he made no will his wife would have it for her life, and after her deceaſe, of right it would go to his daughter E. for ever. The deviſe therefore to the defendant can be only conſidered as a contingent remainder, or an executory deviſe: as an executory deviſe it cannot be good, for the contingency is too remote; and it is not like the caſe of Lloyd v. Cary, where the contingency was ſo very near the compaſs of a life; whereas here it is limited on the wife's having no iſſue-male by a ſecond huſband, and the daughter failing of heirs.

As a contingent remainder, it will not do, for want of a particular eſtate, taking the firſt part of the will to be only a declaration how his eſtate was ſettled, and not as a deviſe to the daughter.

Beſides, it appears the contingency never happened, for the daughter did not die before the mother, conſequently the leſſors of the plaintiff, who are both heirs to the daughter and heirs to the deviſor, muſt enter, and therefore the plaintiff muſt have judgment. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 429.

Trinity, 7 Geo. Buſby v. Greenſlate.

In a ſuit in ejectment, the Chief Juſtice held, that if A. ſurrendered a copyhold eſtate to the uſe of his will, and then demiſed the ſame to B. for life, and after his deceaſe to the heirs of his body; if B. died after making the will, that his heir could take nothing, for it is a deviſe in tail to B. and his heirs are words in limitation; and then B. dying in the life of the deviſor, it is the ſame caſe with Fuller v. Fuller, in Cro. Eliz. and Goodright v. Right. And the Chief Juſtice ſaid, it made no difference that theſe caſes were of freehold lands, and this of copyhold, where the deviſee was living at the time of the ſurrender. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 445.

Michaelmas, 9 Geo. Burr v. Davall.

In a ſuit in ejectment the caſe was: Sir Thomas Davall had two ſons, and being taken ill he made his will, and deviſed his eſtate in Eſſex, being almoſt 1600 l. per annum, to his eldeſt ſon, and the heirs of his body, and his Middleſex eſtate, being about 1700 l. per annum, to his youngeſt ſon, and to the heirs of his body; and if either of his ſons died without iſſue, then the eſtate of him ſo dying ſhould remain and go to the ſurvivor; and if both of his ſaid ſons ſhould die without iſſue, then he deviſed the whole to D. Burr, the leſſor of the plaintiff, and his heirs.

Both the ſons died without iſſue, and Lady Davall, the widow of the teſtator, and who was his heir at law, endeavoured to ſet aſide this will.

The queſtion that came before the court was, if the teſtator was compos mentis at the time he made this will? And to ſhew that he was not, it was argued, that a father in his ſenſes would not have left a younger ſon a larger eſtate than he had left his eldeſt, who had only his Eſſex eſtate; and by articles on the marriage he was bound to leave his younger children 10,000 l. out of that very eſtate, and his lady 600 l. jointure out of the ſame eſtate.

Beſides, if the teſtator had been in his ſenſes, the words in the will would not have carried an eſtate to the leſſor of the plaintiff; for the deviſe was to his ſons, &c. and that if both die with iſſue, inſtead of without iſſue, then to D. Burr; ſo that this being a condition precedent, the plaintiff can have no eſtate by this will.

It was urged on the other ſide, that whether the words in the will were dying with iſſue, or without iſſue, it ought to be taken in that ſenſe which makes the will conſiſtent with reaſon and common ſenſe: and accordingly the jury found for the plaintiff. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 60.

Michaelmas, 10 Geo. Turner v. Turner.

This was a trial at bar on a feigned iſſue out of Chancery, wherein the only queſtion was, whether D. T. the grandfather both of the plaintiff and defendant, had cancelled a will made by him in the year 1716, or not?

The caſe was: D. T. being ſeiſed of gavel-kind lands in Kent, to the value of 400 l. had iſſue G. T. his eldeſt ſon, by one venter; and D. T. his youngeſt ſon, by another venter, both of which ſons died in the life-time of their father D. T. the teſtator.

G. the eldeſt ſon by the firſt venter, left iſſue the now plaintiff; and D. the youngeſt ſon by the ſecond venter, left iſſue the defendant; and D. T. the grandfather, anno 1716, made a will in favour of G. his eldeſt ſon by the firſt venter, which, as was inſiſted on by the plaintiff, was not cancelled by the teſtator in his life-time, but by the now defendant after the death of the ſaid teſtator, that the eſtate might equally deſcend between them.

But on full proof, that the teſtator cancelled his will in his life-time, and ſaid, that he intended his eſtate ſhould equally deſcend and come to both his grand-children, the defendant had a verdict. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 208.

Hilary, 11 Geo. Parſons v. Peacock.

In replevin, the defendant avowed for a rent-charge deviſed by his grandfather to his uncle, and his heirs, which was now deſcended to him this avowant; the plaintiff, in his replication, confeſſed the deviſe, but ſet forth a clauſe in the ſame will by which the rent-charge was to ceaſe.

The caſe was: A being ſeiſed in fee, and having three ſons, deviſed Black-acre to G. his eldeſt ſon, and his heirs; White-acre to E. his ſecond ſon, and his heirs; and a rent-charge of fifty pounds per annum, iſſuing out of White-acre, to R. his youngeſt ſon, and his heirs; proviſoe, that if either of his ſons ſhould die without iſſue, living the other two, ſo as his eſtate in lands ſhould come to the other two ſons, then the rent ſhould ceaſe.

G. died leaving iſſue J. P. the defendant; and R. without iſſue: ſo that this contingency could never happen, becauſe G. had iſſue, and he being dead, and R. likewiſe without iſſue, their eſtate in lands could never come to two, where E. alone was ſurviving; therefore the rent-charge muſt deſcend to the defendant as heir at law, being the ſon of G. the eldeſt ſon of the teſtator; for this is an executory deviſe to two on the contingency of one dying in the life-time of the other two, which contingency muſt ariſe within the compaſs of one life, otherwiſe it is void; for it is plain that the teſtator intended this benefit of ſurvivorſhip during his ſons lives only.

And the court being of that opinion, judgment was given for the defendant. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. page 346.

Trinity, 12 Geo. The King v. Rhodes.

The defendant exhibited a will in Doctors Commons as executor, and demanded a probate: after a long conteſt there, it was determined in favour of the will; and on appeal to the Delegates, the ſentence was confirmed.

Afterwards the parties, who had been concerned in cooking up the will, fell out among themſelves about the diviſion of the eſtate, and thereon it came out that the will was forged; and on full affidavits of the forgery, a commiſſion of review (which it was agreed was the only method to bring the matter over again) was granted by the Lords Juſtices; and an indictment was alſo found for the forgery, and ſtood ready for trial in this court.

On a motion for an habeas corpus ad teſtificandum, the Chief Juſtice declared he would not try the cauſe. For there being yet a ſentence ſubſiſting in favour of the will, and the validity of that being now put under a proper examination; he did not think it fitting to determine the property by an indictment which would come on more properly after the ſentence was reviewed. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 703.

Eaſter, 13 Geo. Warneford v. Warneford.

On an iſſue directed out of Chancery, the queſtion was, deviſed or not? The Chief Juſtice ruled, that ſealing a will is a ſigning within the ſtatute of frauds and perjuries. 3 Lev. 1. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 764.

On a ſpecial verdict in ejectment on a deviſe by Nicholas Liſle, which was in this manner: "I N. L. "give and bequeath unto my wife all that my meſ-"ſuage or tenement, called Hattersfield, To hold for "the term of her natural life; and after her deceaſe, "then to my kinſman N. L. for and during the term "of his natural life; and after his deceaſe, unto the "heirs male of the body of the ſaid N. lawfully to be "begotten, and his heirs for ever: but in caſe the ſaid "N. ſhall die without ſuch heir male, then I give and "bequeath the ſaid premiſes unto my kinſman E. L. "for and during his natural life; and after his deceaſe "to the heirs males of his body, lawfully begotten, "and his heirs for ever; and for default of ſuch heir "male, remainder over." The jury find, that on the teſtator's death, the widow entered and died ſeiſed, and that N. L. (the deviſee) and the widow, in her life-time, ſuffered a common recovery to the ſaid N. in fee, and that the ſaid N. entered on the death of the widow, and died ſeiſed, leaving no iſſue.

E. L. the leſſor of the plaintiff, claims as heir male to E. L. (the remainder-man in the will) ſuppoſing this to be only an eſtate for life to N. and therefore that the recovery ſuffered by him and M. (the widow) could not bar the remainders. The defendant claims as heir in fee to N. The ſingle queſtion therefore is, whether N. the deviſee took on eſtate-tail, or only an eſtate for life, by this will?

Raymond, Chief Juſtice. It will be a difficult thing to make this an eſtate for life; and the caſe of King v. Melling anſwers all the objections, as to the limitations to N. for life.

The word iſſue is a proper word of purchaſe, but the heirs is always a word of limitation; and the word heirs being uſed in this caſe, the words after his deceaſe are of no force.

The words heirs and heir-male are collective names, and include all the heirs of the deviſee; and in Archer's caſe it was the word next which confined it to one particular perſon; for without that word, it would have been a limitation, and not a purchaſe.

The word his, is the word which makes the difficulty in this caſe; but I think it may very properly be referred to N. himſelf. Suppoſe N. had ſeveral ſons; if the eldeſt had been made a purchaſer by this will, the other ſons could not have taken, and there muſt be ſtronger words than theſe to controul the words heir male, and make them words of purchaſe. I therefore think this clearly to be an eſtate-tail in N. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 729.

Trinity, 2 Geo. 2. Andrews v. Fulham.

In ejectment on the demiſe of E. J. Eſq; a caſe was made for the opinion of the court as follows:

That R. W. being poſſeſſed of leaſehold meſſuages in London, by his will in 1686, deviſed the ſame to his wife for life, and after her deceaſe to ſuch child as ſhe is now ſuppoſed to be enſient of, and to the heirs of ſuch child for ever; provided that if ſuch child as ſhall happen to be born ſhall die before twenty-one, having no iſſue, the reverſion of one third part ſhall go to my wife and her heirs, one third to my ſiſter E. and her heirs, and the remaining third to my ſiſter A. and her heirs. And of this will he made his wife executrix, and ſoon afterwards died, his wife not being enſient. That ſhe aſſented to the will, and married the father of the leſſor, who adminiſtered to her. And the defendants claim one third part under A. the ſiſter of the deviſor.

After two arguments, the Chief Juſtice delivered the opinion of the court. That though formerly it was doubted, whether a deviſe to an infant ex ventre ſa mere was good; yet it is now clear, that where it is by words of the future, it will take effect. Salk. 229. Godolph. 326. The words therefore would have been ſufficient, had any perſon come in being capable of taking. But the objection is, that no ſuch perſon ever exiſted, and conſequently thoſe who claim no remainder on the dying of ſuch perſon under twenty-one, and without iſſue, can never enjoy the eſtate.

Now, in anſwer to this, it is obſervable, that it is no unuſual thing for words of condition to be taken as words of limitation. 1 Ven. 202. Salk. 570. where there is a remainder over. Taking it therefore as a limitation, it muſt either happen or become impoſſible. It never did happen; and therefore the queſtion is, whether the limitation over of the term be ſo remote as not to be allowed? And we are all of opinion it is not too remote.

For this purpoſe the caſe of Maſſenburgh v. Aſh is ſtrongly in point, and ſo is Martin v. Long, 2 Vern. 131. Abr. E. 192. And this is agreeable to the caſe of Scatterwood v. Edge, where the remainder over on refuſing to take the name of Edge, was held a limitation, and not a condition. The deviſe to the expected ſon of C. is void, as if no ſuch clauſe in the will, according to Mo. 487. And we are the more confirmed in this opinion by Lord Harcourt's direction in the caſe of Weſtcombe v. Jones, where on the very clauſe now in queſtion he determined that the deviſe over in thirds was good.

The defendant therefore muſt have the poſtea, and the plaintiff pay the coſts of a nonſuit. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1092.

Michaelmas, 3 Geo. 2. Law v. Davis.

On a ſpecial verdict in ejectment, the queſtion was on the following words, whether the ſon of the deviſor took an eſtate for life, or an eſtate-tail? "Item, I give "and deviſe my lands in A. to my wife A. for her life, "and after her deceaſe to my ſon B. and his heirs "lawfully begotten, viz. the firſt, ſecond, third, fourth, "and every other ſon and ſons ſucceſſively, lawfully "to be begotten of the body of my ſaid ſon B. and the "heirs of the body of ſuch firſt, ſecond, third, fourth, "and every other ſon and ſons according to ſeniority; "and in default of ſuch iſſue, to my right heirs for "ever." And it was held by all the court, that tho' the firſt words, if you ſtop at the viz. muſt be taken in to explain the former words, and by the laſt it appears he intended his ſon ſhould not have it in his power to prevent the eſtate's being enjoyed by his children; or if he had none, from reverting to the right heirs of the deviſor; and they ſaid it was no new thing in conſtruction of wills to let ſubſequent words intirely deſtroy the force of the preceding ones, as in the common caſe of a deviſe to A. and his heirs, and if he dies without iſſue, remainder over: the firſt, if alone, would certainly carry a fee, but the latter qualify the former, and make it an eſtate-tail. So if a deviſe be to A. and his heirs, and for want of heirs then to B. the brother of A. theſe laſt words reſtrain the word heirs then to mean only heirs of the body, becauſe it is impoſſible that A. can want an heir-general whilſt he has a brother. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 849.

Hilary, 7 Geo. 2. Forſter v. Graham. Error.

On a writ of error brought on a judgment given in the K. B. in Ireland in an ejectment there brought on the demiſe of Arthur Earl of Angleſey for lands in the county of Meath, and on not guilty pleaded, a trial at bar was had, and the jury found this ſpecial verdict.

That on the 13th of May 1701, James late Earl of Angleſey was ſeiſed in fee of the premiſſes in queſtion, and being ſo ſeiſed, he, on the 4th of May 1701, made his will in writing, whereby he deviſed all his lands in Ireland to John Lord Haverſham, Arthur Anneſley his brother, and Mr. J. Coote, and their heirs, in truſt for payment of his debts, and after payment thereof, then in truſt for Arthur Anneſley for life; and after his deceaſe, in truſt for and to the uſe of his firſt and every other ſons in tail male; and for want of ſuch iſſue, then in truſt for Richard Lord Altham his uncle for life, remainder to his firſt and every other ſons in tail male; and for want of ſuch iſſue, then in truſt for and to the uſe of Charles Anneſley his uncle for life, remainder to his firſt and other ſons in tail male; remainder to his own right heirs. Then he appoints the truſtees towards raiſing money to pay debts, to let the premiſes for thirty-one years in poſſeſſion and reverſion, reſerving the laſt yearly rent; and that after payment of his debts, whoever ſhould become ſeiſed of the premiſes by virtue of his will, might make a thirty-one years leaſe, reſerving the beſt yearly rent. Then they find, that Richard Lord Altham died in the life-time of the deviſor, who, on the 23d of November 1701, made a codicil, wherein he recites his will, and a deſign to alter ſome parts thereof, and that the codicil ſhall be taken as part of his will; and declares he does not intend to alter his will, except in the particulars expreſſed, but that the ſame ſhould remain in all other reſpects. Then he deviſes his lands in England and Wales to the former truſtees, for payment of debts, and afterwards to the uſe of Arthur Anneſley for life, remainder to his firſt and other ſons in tail-male, the remainder to go to ſuch perſons, and with ſuch powers, as by the will are deviſed, &c.

Per curiam. We muſt take the will and codicil together; and on both, it is plain, he only intended to alter the order of taking, and to exonerate this eſtate from the debts to which it was ſubjected by the will. There is no neceſſity to confine this power to the laſt remainder-men, eſpecially as the word under is uſed with regard to theſe lands, and no other.

On the final hearing, nobody appearing on the part of the plaintiff in error to argue it, the judgment was affirmed without further debate. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 960.

Eaſter, 7 Geo. 2. Comber v. Hill.

On a ſpecial verdict in ejectment for the opinion of the court, the ſtate of the caſe was as follows:

R. H. died ſeized in fee of the lands in queſtion, having one ſon, and three daughters; and after the death of his ſon without iſſue, he deviſed his lands in the following manner, viz. to his grand-daughters, C. and E. to be equally divided between them, and the heirs of their bodies reſpectively; and for default of ſuch iſſue, to his other grand-daughter A. E. died without iſſue.

The queſtion was, whether E.'s moiety veſted in R. the ſon of C. the other tenant in common.

Lord Hardwicke declared it to be the opinion of the whole court, that on the conſtruction of theſe words, there were no croſs remainders, but that on the death of E. her moiety went over to A. And accordingly judgment was given for the defendant. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. p. 22. Stra. vol. 2. p. 969.

Michaelmas, 7 Geo. 2. Gore v. Gore.

A caſe was ſent from the court of Chancery to this court, wherein it was ſtated, that W. G. being ſeiſed in fee, deviſed to truſtees and their heirs, to the uſe of the truſtees for five hundred years, to raiſe younger children's fortunes, and pay debts, and after the determination of that eſtate, then to the firſt and every other ſon of T. G. the deviſor's eldeſt ſon in tail male, remainder to T. G. his ſecond ſon (in being) in tail male, with remainders over. That at the death of the deviſor, T. G. had no ſon, but ſince his deceaſe the defendant was born. And on this the queſtion was, whether the firſt ſon of T. G. could take this eſtate by way of executory deviſe; for it was agreed it could not enure to him by way of contingent remainder, there being no eſtate of freehold to ſupport it.

This caſe was argued in Chief Juſtice Pratt's time, at his chamber, before him, and three Judges. And they certified their opinions to Lord Macclesfield, that it was not a good executory deviſe, becauſe it might ſubſiſt forty weeks after the death of T. G. and they were not for going a day further than a life in being.

The Chancellor not being ſatisfied with this opinion, refuſed to decree accordingly. And he being ſucceeded by Lord King, the caſe was ſent back to this court. And now they were unanimouſly of opinion, that it was a good executory deviſe, and that a convenient time after the life was to be allowed, according to the caſe of Lloyd v. Cary in Show. Parl. Caſes: and this neceſſarily being to ariſe within nine months after the death of T. there was no danger of a perpetuity. And this being certified, the cauſe was ſet down before Lord Talbot after Trinity term 1734, who declared his agreeing in opinion with the laſt certificate, and made his decree accordingly. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 958.

Trinity, 8 Geo. 2. Maundy v. Maundy.

On a ſpecial verdict in ejectment for houſes in Red-lion-Square, it was found, that Ventris Maundy being ſeiſed of the reverſion in fee of the houſes, which were of the value of 260 l. per annum, but then let out on leaſe for ſixty years at 22 l. per annum, called a ground rent, and having ſeveral ſons and daughters, made his will in April 1696, in this manner: "In reſpect to my "wordly eſtate, wherewith it has pleaſed God to "bleſs me, I diſpoſe of it as follows: to my ſon D. I "give 5 l. per annum of my ground rent: and in like manner he parcelled out the whole 22 l. to his children (except the eldeſt), "his, her, and their heirs "and aſſigns for ever; but as to Ventris, my eldeſt "and undutiful ſon, I give him, in hopes he may re-"form, 5 l. per annum due in blank tickets in the million "lottery. And if any of my children die, their legacy "to go to the ſurvivor, my ſaid undutiful ſon except-"ed, who is to have no ſhare or part thereof, nor no "more ſhare or portion than I have before left him."

The building leaſes being expired, the heir of Ventris the eldeſt ſon brought an ejectment, inſiſting the reverſion was undiſpoſed of; and that however ſtrong the intention to diſinherit the eldeſt ſon appeared, yet if it is undiſpoſed of, he muſt have it. But on argument in the C. B. judgment was given in favour of the deviſee, and now that judgment was affirmed in this court.

1ſt. Becauſe the intention to paſs all his eſtate was plain from the introductory part, where he declares his will was in reſpect of all his worldly eſtate, and that part where he ſays that his eldeſt ſon ſhall have ſo much, and no more.

2dly. The limitation is to the younger children and their heirs, which cannot take effect, if their intereſt is only during the continuance of the rent. And nothing is more common than for people to ſpeak of their ground rents, when they mean the houſes and lands out of which they iſſue.

3dly. The caſe of Kerry v. Dethick in Mo. 640. is expreſs in point; and though in that caſe it is ſaid, the defendant was adviſed to bring a writ of error, yet that does not impeach its authority. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1020.

Michaelmas, 8 Geo. 2. William v. Browne.

The queſtion in this caſe was, whether croſs remainders were created by implication from the words of a will. And the arguments of the council, and the reſolution of the court, being the ſame as in the caſe of Comber v. Hill, which was held not to differ materially from this; it will be only neceſſary to ſet down the words of this will, which for the reaſons given in that caſe were held not to create any croſs remainder.

The demiſe was to M. for life, remainder to the uſe of all and every the child and children both male and female, born and to be born of the body of the ſaid M. equally to be divided between them, and of the heirs of their reſpective bodies lawfully to be begotten, and for want of ſuch heirs, the remainder over to another daughter and her iſſue, in the ſame words. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 996.

Eaſter, 12 Geo. 2. Croft v. Pawlet.

On a trial at bar in ejectment, the defendant made out his title under a will, the atteſtation of which was in theſe words, “ ſigned, ſealed, publiſhed and declared as and for his laſt will, in the preſence of us A. B. and C.” The will was made in 1723, and the witneſſes all dead, and their hands proved in the common form: but then it was objected, that this was not an execution according to the ſtatute of frauds; and the hands of the witneſſes could only ſtand as to the facts they had ſubſcribed to, and ſigning in the preſence of the teſtator was not one. But the court, on the authority of a caſe in the C. B. ſaid, it was evidence to be left to a jury of a compliance with all circumſtances. And a verdict was given for the will. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1109.

Hilary, 13 Geo. 2. Coulſon v. Coulſon.

A caſe was ſent from the rolls, wherein the queſtion was, whether an eſtate-tail, or only an eſtate for life, paſſed by a will; and it was this.

R. B. deviſes to his grandſon R. C. and his aſſigns for his natural life, the reverſion of lands expectant on the death of the deviſor's ſiſter, and from and after the determination of the eſtate for life of his ſaid grandſon, then to truſtees during the life of his grandſon, to preſerve contingent remainders, and from and after the death of his grandſon, unto the heirs of his body lawfully begotten, and to be begotten, with divers remainders over.

On the firſt argument the court were clear in opinion, that this was an eſtate-tail in the grandſon; the caſes cited to prove it an eſtate-tail were, 1 Co. Shelly's caſe. Co. Litt. 22. b. 319. b. 6 Cro. Eliz. 525. 1 Vent. 214. Trinity 11 Ann, roll. 220. Backhouſe v. Wells. Abr. Ca. Eq. 184. Michaelmas 13 *Geo. Michaelmas, 16 Geo. 2. Barker v. Suretees. Error.

On a ſpecial verdict in ejectment, the queſtion turned on theſe words in a will, viz. “ I give the ſaid premiſes to my grandſon, his heirs and aſſigns, but in caſe he dies before he obtains the age of twenty-one years or marriage, and without iſſue, then and in ſuch caſe he deviſes the ſame to the defendant.” The fact was, that the grandſon attained the age of twenty-one years, and died, having never been married. And it was inſiſted, that the obtaining the age of twenty-one years was a performance of the condition, and veſted the eſtate abſolutely in the grandſon, under whom the leſſor of the plaintiff claimed. And judgment was accordingly given in the county palatine of Durham, whereon error was brought in this court.

After ſeveral arguments, the court affirmed the judgment, on the authority of Price v. Hunt, in Pollexf. 645. where the word or was conſtrued conjunctively. And they ſaid they would read this without the word or, as if it run, “ and if he dies before twenty-one, unmarried and without iſſue;” which he did not do, for one of the circumſtances failed. And all put together are but in the nature of one contingency: and it was conſiderable, that this was not a condition precedent, but to deſtroy an eſtate deviſed by the former word in fee. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1175.

On a caſe made at the aſſizes, it was ſtated, that R. C. being ſeiſed in fee of an eſtate called Woolf's Park, deviſed the ſame in theſe words, “ As to Woolf's Park, I give it to my wife A. for her life, and after her death to my daughter J. A. and her children, on her body begotten, or to be begotten by W. A. her huſband, and their heirs for ever.” That the wife is dead, and J. at the time of making the will had one daughter, E. and afterwards two ſons and one daughter, who are all dead without iſſue: that E. had iſſue the leſſor of the plaintiff: that J. ſurvived W. A. and married J. by whom he had a ſon, the preſent defendant, who entered on her death.

The queſtion was, what eſtate paſſed to J. and her children by W. A. the plaintiff inſiſting, that J. was only tenant for life, and the children of that marriage had the reverſion in fee: the defendant inſiſting that J. was jointly ſeiſed in fee with the children, and having ſurvived them all, and left him her ſon and heir, he is entitled.

After ſeveral arguments, the Chief Juſtice delivered the opinion of the court, that J. took as joint-tenant. It being ſtated, that at the time of making the will ſhe had a child, which has been conſtrued to be equal to children. 2 Vern. 106. Co. Lit. 9. is expreſs, that to A. and his children and their heirs, is a joint fee to all. And it is no objection that by this means the ſeveral eſtates may commence at different times. Co. Lit. 188. Pollexf. 373. Mo. 220.

As A. therefore ſurvived all the children ſhe had by W. A. the whole fee veſted in her, and deſcended to her ſon the defendant. Who had judgment accordingly. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1172.

In a ſuit in ejectment brought for lands in Cambridgeſhire, on the demiſe of D. D. and M. his wife. And on a trial at bar the jury found this ſpecial verdict:

That J. T. Eſq; being ſeiſed in fee of the premiſes in queſtion, and of ſound mind, ſigned, ſealed, and publiſhed a paper-writing, purporting to be his laſt will, dated the 10th of February 1742, and which is found in theſe words: That he deviſes to the defendant the lands in queſtion for life, remainder to his firſt and every other ſon and ſons in tail-male, remainder to his daughters as tenants in common, with the reverſion in fee to the right heirs of the deviſors; then he charges all his real and perſonal eſtates with particular annuities and legaties, and particularly an annuity of 20 l. per annum to E. the wife of T. H. for her life, and to her ſeparate uſe; and he alſo gives a legacy of 10 l. each to J. H. and his wife, for mourning. That to this will there are three perſons who ſubſcribe their names as witneſſes, whereof J. H. is one; and that in their preſence, and of no body elſe, he ſigned, ſealed, and publiſhed the paper-writing, as and for his laſt will; and they three atteſted the ſame in his preſence, and are all three living. They find the identity of J. H. the legatee, and witneſs, and that E. his wife is ſtill living. That the deviſor died the 28th of May 1743 without iſſue, and ſeiſed as aforeſaid; and that Mrs. A. (one of the leſſors) is his aunt, and heir at law. They find that before, and at the time of the trial, the defendant made a tender to J. H. of 20 l. for his and his wife's legacies, which he refuſed to accept; and that thoſe legacies are not diſcharged. Then they find the entry and demiſe by the leſſors, &c.

The queſtion on this ſpecial verdict was, whether, in the light H. now ſtood, he was to be conſidered as a credible witneſs within the intent of the ſtatute of frauds? And we are all of opinion he is not.

The right to deviſe in this caſe is not a common law right, it being inconſiſtent with the notion of a feudal tenure (Wright's Tenure, 174;) but it depends on powers given by ſtatutes, which muſt all be conſidered together, as creating one general parliamentary rule; the particulars of which are, that it muſt be in writing, ſigned, and on atteſtation of three credible witneſſes, in the preſence of the deviſor. Theſe were checks introduced to prevent men from being impoſed on; and certainly meant, that the witneſſes (who are required to be credible) ſhould not be ſuch as claim a benefit by the will. Though a will may be read, on proof of all the circumſtances, by one witneſs, yet that is on a ſuppoſition there are two others, who could be allowed to give the ſame teſtimony.

It was objected, that nothing veſts till the death of the deviſor; and therefore, at the time of the atteſtation, he had no intereſt. But the anſwer was, that he was then under a temptation to commit a fraud, and that is what the parliament intended to guard againſt.

It was agreed, that this man could not be examined, how then is he ſuch a credible witneſs as the ſtatute requires?

The true time for his credibility is, the time of atteſtation; otherwiſe a ſubſequent infamy, which the teſtator knows nothing of, would avoid his will.

And as to what is ſaid in Swinb. 296. it relates only to wills of perſonal eſtate, and cannot affect the conſtruction of the ſtatute. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1253.

Michaelmas, 20 Geo. 2. Lowfield v. Stoneham, Executrix.

On plene adminiſtravit pleaded, the queſtion was, whether 1000 l. received by the defendant was due to her in her own right, or as executrix of her huſband, and conſequently aſſets. And it aroſe on the following deviſe, "I give to my loving brother J. S. 1000 l. and in caſe of his death, to his wiſe Suſanna," (who was the defendant.) It appeared that J. S. ſurvived the teſtator; and therefore the plaintiff inſiſted this legacy (which the defendant admitted to have received) veſted abſolutely in him, and was aſſets in her hands.

On the part of the defendant it was offered to be given in evidence, that the teſtator in his laſt illneſs declared he meant only to give his brother the intereſt of the 1000 l. and that the defendant ſhould have the principal in caſe ſhe ſurvived him.

This parol evidence was oppoſed by the plaintiff's council, as being contradictory to the plain words of the will. And the Chief Juſtice ſaid, it could not be allowed; and that in the caſe of Selwin v. Brown, the Houſe of Lords had refuſed it, even where it was to ſupport the legal interpretation of the will; and Lord Hardwicke about two years ago held it in the ſame manner in the caſe of the Earl of Inchquin v. Obrian. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1261.

This was a caſe from Lancaſter aſſizes on an ejectment. R. P. being ſeiſed, &c. deviſed all his meſſuages lands, tenements and hereditaments, whatſoever and whereſoever ſituate, to the Rev. Mr. T. H. and J. B. and the ſurvivor of them, and the heirs of ſuch ſurvivor: "In truſt, that they and the ſurvivor of them, his "heirs and aſſigns, ſhould lay out, employ and be"ſtow, the rents and profits of the deviſed premiſes, "for the maintenance, education, bringing up, and "putting forth into the world, of T. and J. H. ſons "of the teſtator's ſiſter E. H. during their minorities; "and when, and as they ſhould reſpectively attain "their ages of twenty-one, then to the uſe and behoof "of the ſaid ſons of his ſiſter H. the ſaid T. and J. "H. and their heirs equally."

The teſtator made the ſaid two truſtees, the Reverend T. H. and J. B. his executors.

The queſtion before the court was, "whether the "remainder veſted in T. and J. H. or whether it re"mained in contingency, till their reſpective coming "of age?

Per curiam. The teſtator, by his will, made an immediate gift to his two nephews, T. and J. H. with a truſt to be executed for their benefit, during their minority. Therefore the poſtea muſt be delivered to the plaintiff. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 228.

Eaſter, 30 Geo. 2. Hope, on the Demiſe of Brown and Wife, v. Taylor.

On a caſe ſtated to the court on a trial in ejectment as follows: R. J. being ſeiſed in fee (inter al') of a copyhold of inheritance, and having firſt ſurrendered the ſame to the uſe of his will, deviſed to J. W. his ſiſter's eldeſt ſon, his houſe in the Brook, with the out-buildings, and 30 l. to be paid within twelve months after his deceaſe; to his nephew R. T. 50 l. to be paid within twelve months after his deceaſe; to his nephews C. T. R. T. and W. T. his ſiſter's three ſons, twenty-nine acres of arable and meadow land, bought of B. not to be parted, but to part the rent equally between them; then to W. T. his ſiſter's ſon, the houſe in queſtion, by the deſcription of "his houſe on the Green, with the ground and "out-houſes thereto belonging;" and gives him alſo 10 l. and to his brother-in-law G. T. 5 l. and he directs the ſaid legacies to be paid within twelve months after his deceaſe; and declares his will and meaning to be, "that if either of the perſons before named die "without iſſue, lawfully begotten, then the ſaid le"gacy ſhall be divided equally between them that are "left alive."

On this ſtate of the caſe, two queſtions were made, but the court only gave their opinion on one, viz.

What eſtate W. T. the deviſee took by the will, viz. whether an eſtate-tail, or for life only?

Lord Mansfield. The word legacies does extend to lands, as well as to monies. Common perſons would not think of uſing the word deviſe. Therefore on the firſt queſtion, I think it is an eſtate-tail.

Deniſon, Juſtice. The word legacies extends to real eſtates, conſequently it is an eſtate-tail.

Foſter, Juſtice, ſaid, the teſtator intended the land to go over, and then it was an eſtate-tail.

Per curiam. Let the plaintiff be nonſuited, and judgment go for the defendant. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 268.

Michaelmas, 30 Geo. 2. Robinſon v. Robinſon.

On a caſe from the court of Chancery on a will, the caſe ſtated was as follows: On the 27th of July, 1727, G. R. of Bochym, in the county of Cornwall, Eſq; duly made his will, and after giving his wife one guinea, and his father-in-law a groat, he deviſed as follows: "I bequeath all my real eſtate (excepting my eſtate "in the pariſh of Endellyon, late Mr. Newman's, and "all my preſentations in the ſaid county) to L. H. "of P. in the county of Devon, Gent. for and dur"ing the term of his natural life, and no longer: pro"vided that he alter his name, and take that of Ro"binſon, and lives at my houſe of Bochym. And after "his deceaſe, to ſuch ſon as he ſhall have, lawfully "begotten, taking the name of Robinſon. And for "default of ſuch iſſue, then I bequeath the ſame to "my couſin W. R. Rector of Landewedneck, and his "heirs for ever."

"Item. My will is, that the ſaid W. R. have li"berty to preſent whom he pleaſes to any vacancy that "ſhall happen in any of my preſentations, during his "life; and in caſe any of his children ſhall take or "be deſigned for holy orders, then it is my deſire, that "in caſe of any vacancy in either of my preſenta"tions, that bonds of reſignation be taken, to ſuch "child or children, if the vacancy happen before "he or they attain ſuch orders: and after the "ſame ſhall be diſpoſed of as aforeſaid, then I give "the perpetuity of the ſaid preſentations to the ſaid "Mr. L. H. in the ſame manner, and to the ſame "uſes, as I have given my eſtate."

The teſtator, after bequeathing ſome legacies, gave the reſt of his chattels, with his eſtate at Endellyon, to his kinſman W. R. and made him ſole executor.

Per curiam. "We are of opinion, that, on the true "conſtruction of the ſaid will of the teſtator, G. R. "the ſaid L. H. muſt, by neceſſary implication, to "effectuate the manifeſt general intent of the teſ"tator, be conſtrued to take an eſtate in tail-male, "he, and the heirs of his body, taking the name of "Robinſon, notwithſtanding the expreſs eſtate deviſed "to the ſaid L. H. for his life, and no longer."

The certificate was confirmed in Chancery by a decree, from which there was an appeal to the Houſe of Lords, where the decree was affirmed. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 38.

On a ſpecial caſe in ejectment, the ſame was ſtated as follows: J. G. the teſtator, being ſeiſed, &c. and being, &c. on the 2d day of May 1752, wrote on a ſheet of paper with his own hand as follows, viz. "Know all men by theſe preſents, that I, J. G. &c. make the after-mentioned, my laſt will and teſtament: and when it pleaſe God to call me, I pray God direct my relict. I make my preſent wife, my whole and ſole executrix of what it has pleaſed God to bleſs me with. I order my ſon J. G. my ſon by my firſt wife, 600 l. I have 600 l. in the three per cent. annuities, which I order not to be ſold, but I order my wife to leave the intereſt thereof to help to bring up my daughter Laviner: I likewiſe have two freehold houſes, &c. (the premiſes in queſtion) which are to be for the ſame uſe, to help to bring up my daughter Laviner, and her heirs for ever. My daughter to take poſſeſſion of the annuities at her age of twenty-five. And if it pleaſe God, my daughter die before her mother, and unmarried, and without a lawful heir, then the ſaid two houſes to go to my ſon J. and his heirs for ever."

The teſtator ſubſcribed his will at the ſame time when he wrote it; but there was no ſeal, nor witneſs to it.

The teſtator ſubſcribed this paper in the preſence of three witneſſes, and then he took it in his hand, and declared it to be his laſt will and teſtament, in the preſence of the ſaid three witneſſes; and then delivered it to them, and deſired they would atteſt and ſubſcribe it in his preſence, and in the preſence of each other, which they did.

N. B. The teſtator afterwards made a codicil on the ſame ſheet of paper.

On this ſpecial caſe, two queſtions were reſerved for the opinion of the court, viz.

1ſt. Whether the republication of the ſaid firſt will (made as above) be a publication or republication of his firſt will within the ſtatute of frauds.

2dly. Whether any eſtate paſſed by the firſt will either to the daughter or mother.

Lord Mansfield. The teſtator did not mean a part, but the whole of his will ſhould paſs by the manner of his publiſhing the ſame. There is no doubt of the deviſe to the daughter, whatever may be the doubt of the intereſt bequeathed to the mother till the daughter comes of age for her maintenance. It is ſufficient to bar the plaintiff, that an intereſt is given to one of them.

Per curiam. Let the poſtea be delivered to the defendant. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 549.

Michaelmas, 31 Geo. 2. Windham, Eſq; v. Chetwynd, Eſq.

On a ſpecial verdict on a will of lands, dated the 14th of May 1750, and a codicil of the ſame date, made by Walter Chetwynd of Grendon, Eſq;

The principal objection inſiſted on by the defendant's council on arguing this matter was, "that the ſubſcribing witneſſes to the will were not, at the time of their atteſtation, credible witneſſes:" and conſequently this was not a will of lands, within ſtat. 29 Car. 2. c. 3. for prevention of frauds and perjuries, as not being atteſted by three credible witneſſes.

Lord Mansfield. The preſumption of fraud in this caſe would be againſt juſtice and truth; and the public inconvenience ſo great, that hardly a will would ſtand; therefore on the whole, we are all of opinion that this will is duly atteſted by three witneſſes, and the plaintiff muſt have judgment. Vide Bur. vol. 1. p. 414.

Eaſter, 32 Geo. 2. Strong on the Demiſe of Cummin v. Cummin, and another.

On a ſpecial caſe reſerved for the opinion of the court in an ejectment cauſe on the following will.

The words of the will are as follows: Whereas by the power and authority in me veſted, according to the cuſtom of the manor of Eaſt-Woodhay aforeſaid, by ſeveral ſurrenders by me made of my copyhold lands in the ſaid manor, I can diſpoſe of them to the uſe of my laſt will; I do hereby give and bequeath ſingular my copyhold lands and tenements in Eaſt-Woodhay aforeſaid, held by ſeven copies of court, be the ſame more or leſs, to my eldeſt ſon Robert and his heirs, according to the cuſtom, after his mother's deceaſe. Item. I give to my ſon John, all that belong to Smart and Picked lands, and to his heirs, after his mother's deceaſe; and alſo that my ſon Robert ſhall pay to my eldeſt daughter Mary, the ſum of 100 l. of lawful money, when ſhe ſhall attain the age of twenty-one years; as alſo the like ſum of 100 l. to my daughter Eſter, as ſoon as ſhe ſhall attain the age of twenty-one years; and the like ſum of 100 l. to my daughter Ann when ſhe ſhall attain the age of twenty-one years; and alſo to my ſon Willem the ſum of 100 l. to be paid unto hem when he attain the age of twenty one years. Provided alway, that if my ſaid daughter Mary, or any of my other children, dy before he, ſhe, or they are one and twenty years old, that in that caſe he ſhall divide amongſt the ſurviving younger children the ſum of 100 l. and in caſe that your ſon Robert or John dy, then your ſon William is to have all that belong to Smart and Picked lands, and to his heirs: and in caſe that your ſon Willem engoye Smart and Picked land, then to pay to his ſiſter the ſum of 100 l. Item. As to my worldly goods, I give and ſtock, I give to the uſe of my wife during her natural life, and liberty to diſpoſe of them at her death, as ſhe ſhall think fit, Provided it be amongſt my children and their iſſus. And his wife to have the freehold during her life. Item. I do hereby make and appoint my dear wife Mary, and my ſon Robert, to be exators of this my laſt will and teſtament.

The general queſtion was, whether on the event of John the ſecond ſon's dying without iſſue, in the lifetime of his mother, the teſtator's third ſon, William, became entitled to the premiſes in queſton by force of the words in the will, "in caſe that your ſon Robert or John dy, then your ſon Willem is to have all that belong to Smart and Picked lands?" Or whether the eldeſt ſon Robert is, on John's death, to take the ſame, as heir at law to the teſtator?

Lord Mansfield. It is very plain, from the ſpelling and phraſeology of this will, that it was the teſtator's own making or dictating, without aſſiſtance.

The teſtator's meaning muſt be collected from the will itſelf, by attending to the ſeveral parts of it, and comparing and conſidering them together.

In the preſent caſe, it is not difficult to diſcover what the teſtator intended. He certainly did not mean mere eſtates for lives to his eldeſt ſons; and if he did not mean to give them mere eſtates for their lives, it neceſſarily follows, "that he muſt mean a deviſing on ſome contingency." The only queſtion is, what contingency? for he has not expreſſed it. He only expreſſes himſelf, "that in caſe Robert or John dy, then William is to have all that belong to Smart and Picked lands, and to his heirs." One part of the contingency plainly is, "that if they die without iſſue." As the teſtator provides for his other children, he certainly meant that in either event, Smart and Picked lands ſhould go to William his third ſon, who, in caſe of the death of the eldeſt ſon, would become the ſecond.

We are all clear for the defendant, and therefore the poſtea muſt be declared to him. Vide Bur. vol. 2. page 767.

Trinity, 33 & 34 Geo. Lancaſter v. Thornton.

On a caſe out of Chancery for the opinion of this court on the will of one G. L.

The queſtion ſtated by the court of Chancery to this court was, whether by virtue of theſe words, viz. “ In caſe the money ariſing from the ſale of the leaſehold eſtate ſhall not be ſufficient to pay and diſcharge all the teſtator's debts, legacies, and funeral “ expences, that then he deviſes that his two ſons, “ and his daughter, ſhall and may abſolutely ſell, “ mortgage, or otherwiſe diſpoſe of his freehold eſtate, “ for the payment of ſuch of his debts, legacies, and “ funeral expences, as his ſaid leaſehold eſtate ſhould “ not be ſufficient to pay and diſcharge;” any eſtate “ paſſed to E. G. and D. the children, or only a power to ſell?

Per curiam. We are of opinion, that no eſtate paſſed to the ſaid E. G. and D. but only a power to ſell, demiſe, mortgage, or otherwiſe diſpoſe of the premiſes. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 1027.

Michaelmas, 33 Geo. 2. Goodman and others v. Goodwright, Leſſee of Richard Williams and Annabella his Wife. Error.

On a writ of error on judgment in ejectment from the Grand Seſſions in Wales for the recovery of lands in Denbighſhire, the plaintiff claimed title under the following will.

“ Now I do hereby give and deviſe the meſſuages, “ lands, tenements and hereditaments, and the abſolute inheritance thereof, to the uſe and behoof of “ the heirs of the body of my niece Ann Lloyd, by “ any other huſband lawfully to be begotten; and for “ want of ſuch iſſue, to the uſe and behoof of my “ nephew Charles Lloyd of Drenewith, in the county “ of Salop, Eſq; and of the heirs of his body lawfully “ iſſuing; and for want of ſuch iſſue, to the uſe and “ behoof of my niece Catherine Longford widow, and “ the heirs of her body lawfully iſſuing; and for want “ of ſuch iſſue, to the uſe and behoof of Elizabeth, “ now wife of G. B. and the heirs of her body lawfully iſſuing; and for want of ſuch iſſue, to the uſe “ and behoof of Catherine Longford ſpinſter, youngeſt “ daughter of the ſaid C. L. widow, and the heirs of “ her body lawfully iſſuing; and for want of ſuch “ iſſue, to the uſe and behoof of the right heirs of me “ Suſannah Moſtyn for ever.”

Richard Williams, and Annabella his wife, after the ſeveral deceaſes of the ſaid E. W. and Anne his wife, made an entry, &c. and demiſed, &c. to Goodright, who entered, &c. And the defendants below (claiming under the heir at law of Anne Wynn) entered on Goodright, and ejected him.

Lord Mansfield. The whole of the caſe comes ſingly to this queſtion, “ Whether Mrs. Moſtyn, the “ teſtatrix, intended to give her nephew C. L. and “ the heirs of his body, the remainder, or reverſion, “ after the death of herſelf and of Dr. E. W. and “ Ann his wife, and of the heirs of their two bodies, “ and alſo of the heirs of Ann's body by any ſecond “ huſband; or whether ſhe meant to give him an “ eſtate in poſſeſſion?”

It can never be imagined to be the intention of the teſtatrix to exclude all the iſſue of her favourite niece Ann Wynn, in order to prefer Charles Lloyd and his iſſue: indeed, the direct contrary plainly appears. Therefore the judgment muſt be reverſed. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 874.

Michaelmas, 33 Geo. 2. Hurſt, and another, v. The Earl of Winchelſea, and others.

On a ſpecial caſe out of the court of Chancery:

Thomas Herbert, Eſq; being ſeiſed in fee of the premiſes in queſtion, made his will in theſe words: “ I “ give and bequeath to my dear and beloved wife “ Elizabeth Herbert (after payment of my juſt debts) “ All my money, plate, jewels, houſehold goods and “ furniture whatſoever, and all my goods, chattels, “ and perſonal eſtate, real or perſonal, whatſoever and “ whereſoever, that ſhall be in my poſſeſſion, or I ſhall “ be any ways entitled to at the time of my deceaſe. “ And I further give, deviſe and bequeath to my ſaid “ dear wife, and her heirs, ſuch part of all my real “ eſtate that I have any power to diſpoſe of by this “ my will. And I further give, deviſe and bequeath “ to my ſaid wife, out of the remaining part of my “ ſaid real eſtate, for her better ſupport and maintenance, till my ſon Thomas attain the age of twenty-one years, the ſum of 400 l. a year; and my will is, “ that the ſeveral bequeſts and deviſes to my ſaid wife “ as aforeſaid, ſhall not, nor are intended to prejudice my ſaid wife in her thirds or dower out of my “ ſaid real eſtate.”

Note, He appointed his wife ſole executrix.

The following queſtions were ſtated for the opinion of the court, viz.

1ſt, Whether by the will of T. H. the father (huſband of E. H. afterwards Powell) the eſtate in queſtion (the real eſtate of the ſaid T. H.) paſſed to the ſaid Elizabeth in fee?

2dly, Whether it deſcended, on the death of T. H. the ſon, to his heirs on the part of the father, or to his heirs on the part of the mother?

On the 27th of November 1759, the judges certified their opinion as follows:

We are of opinion, that the eſtate in queſtion in this cauſe paſſed by the will of T. H. the father, to the ſaid Elizabeth in fee. We are alſo of opinion, that T. H. the ſon, did not take the ſaid eſtate from his mother by purchaſe, but by deſcent; conſequently, on his death, it deſcended to his heir on the part of the mother.

The court of Chancery decreed according to the above opinion. The defendants appealed to the Lords, but the matter was accommodated without any hearing. Vide Bur. vol. 2. p. 880.

On a caſe from the court of Chancery for the opinion of this court.

On the 8th of June 1751, John Selwyn the younger made his will in the words, or to the effect following, viz. “ this is the laſt will and teſtament of me J. S. “ the younger, which I now make and publiſh, in order to ſettle my real eſtate in ſuch prudent manner “ as to continue the ſame in my own family. And “ for that purpoſe, I do hereby give and deviſe unto “ my honoured father, John Selwyn, Eſq; All that my “ manor or lordſhip of Luggerſhall in the county of “ Wilts, and all my manor of Matſon in the county of “ Glouceſter, with the rights, members, and appurtenances thereunto belonging, and all other my manors, meſſuages, farms, lands, tenements, rectories, advowſons, rents, and hereditaments whatſoever, and all the freehold and other eſtate of inheritance whereof the ſaid J. S. the younger, or any “ perſon or perſons whatſoever, in truſt for, or to my “ uſe, are or is ſeiſed or poſſeſſed, either in poſſeſſion, “ reverſion, remainder, or expectancy; and all my “ eſtate, right title and intereſt therein, To hold the “ ſame unto and to the uſe of my ſaid father, his “ heirs and aſſigns for ever.”

The queſtion ſtated to the court was, whether the ſeveral lands, tenements, and hereditaments, compriſed in the bargain and ſale of the 20th of April 1757, (for the ſuffering of a common recovery) paſſed by the will of John Selwyn the ſon. And this turned on two points.

1ſt. Whether John Selwyn the younger, at the date of his will, had any uſe, eſtate, or intereſt in the premiſes, to deviſe?

2dly. If he had, whether the ſubſequent recovery was a revocation?

The certificate returned to the court of Chancery was dated on the 2d of March 1761, and was in the following words, viz.

“ Having heard council, and conſidering this caſe, “ (which the parties, by agreement between themſelves, delayed arguing) we are of opinion that the “ ſeveral lands, tenements, and hereditaments compriſed in the deed of the 20th of April 1751, paſſed “ by the will of J. S. the ſon.”

Trinity, 3 Geo. 3. Lade, Baronet, v. Holford, Eſq; and Wife, and others.

On a caſe from the court of Chancery for the opinion of this court, Sir John Lade, Baronet, by will of the 17th of Auguſt 1739, deviſed his manors, &c. to four truſtees, and their heirs; and likewiſe all his houſeholds and copyholds, and perſonal eſtate, to be laid out in the purchaſe of lands, on truſt, and to the uſe of his couſin John Inſkip in ſtrict ſettlement, with divers remainders over in ſtrict ſettlement.

In the ſaid will there was a proviſoe, "that ſo often as, and during ſuch time as the perſon who for the time being (in caſe the teſtator had not otherwiſe directed) would have been entitled in poſſeſſion as tenant for life, or tenant in tail, ſhould be under the age of twenty-ſix years. Then the truſtees were to enter and receive all the rents and profits of the real, and all the intereſt and produce of the perſonal eſtate, out of which they were to allow, for the maintenance of ſuch tenant for life, or tenant in tail, ſums particularly ſpecified, and all the reſt was to accumulate and be laid out in the purchaſe of lands, and ſettled to and on the ſame truſts and uſes."

The queſtion for the opinion of the court was, "whether the defendant R. F. the heir at law of the ſurvivor of Ann Lade, J. F. the elder, H. O. and J. F the younger, the truſtees named in the will of of Sir John Lade the teſtator, did, on the birth of the preſent plaintiff, Sir John Lade, (the infant) take any, and what eſtate in the premiſes deviſed by virtue of the proviſoe in the ſaid teſtator's will."

Per curiam. We are of opinion that R. F. the heir at law of the ſurviving truſtee in the will of Sir John Lade, did not take any eſtate in the premiſes deviſed by virtue of the proviſoe in the will of the ſaid teſtator. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1416.

Hilary, 5 Geo. 3. Frogmorton, on the Demiſe of Bramſtone, v. Holyday and others.

M. H. by will, among other things, deviſed as follows: "As for my worldly affairs and eſtate, &c. I do diſpoſe thereof in manner following: Imprimis, I give, deviſe and bequeath, unto my ſaid ſon D. H. and his heirs for ever, my malt-kiln, ſtanding and being in Black Friar-gate. Item. I give, deviſe and bequeath, unto my ſon J. H. All that houſe and garden, now in the tenure and occupation of E. G. mariner, charged and chargeable nevertheleſs with the payment of the ſum of 50 l. of lawful Britiſh money; which ſaid ſum of 50 l. I give, deviſe and bequeath, unto my daughter, M. H. payable and to be paid to her out of the yearly rents, iſſues and profits of the ſaid houſe, to paid unto and received by my ſaid daughter M. H. yearly, and every year, until the ſaid ſum of 50 l. be fully paid and ſatisfied. And if the ſaid J. H. ſhall happen to die in his minority, or before he comes to age, then I give, deviſe and bequeath, the ſaid houſe and garden, unto my three daughters E. L. M. H. and H. H. equally ſhare and ſhare alike." Then ſhe gives ſmall ſpecific perſonal legacies of money, ſilver-ſalvers, &c. and concludes thus: "All the reſt and reſidue of my goods, chattels, rights and credits (not mentioning her real eſtate) I give, deviſe and bequeath unto Mr. G. H. and E. L.

On the trial of this cauſe, a verdict was found for the plaintiff, ſubject to the opinion of this court on the following queſtion;

"Whether an eſtate for life, or in fee, in the premiſes paſſed to the above-named J. H. by the ſaid will of Margaret his mother?"

Lord Mansfield. It ſufficiently appears on the face of the will to ſhew, that the intention of the maker of it was, "that John ſhould have the eſtate, unleſs he ſhould die in his minority."

Per curiam. Let the plaintiff be nonſuited, and the poſtea be delivered to the defendant. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1618.

Eaſter, 6 Geo. 3. Roſe, on the Demiſe of Vere and others, v. Hill.

Thomas Hill, the defendant's father, by will, dated the 9th July 1754, deviſed as follows, viz. "I will that my juſt debts, and funeral charges and expences, which I ſhall juſtly owe at the time of my deceaſe, be in the firſt place paid by my executors herein after named; and as to my eſtate, both real and perſonal, I diſpoſe thereof as follows: Firſt, I give and deviſe All that my meſſuage, &c. (the premiſes in queſtion, being his whole eſtate;) alſo all other my meſſuages, lands, tenements and hereditaments, in the city of Coventry or elſewhere, unto which I am in any wiſe entitled, unto my dear wife Mary, for and during the term of her natural life; and from and after her deceaſe, I give and deviſe the ſame premiſes, every or any part thereof, to and to the uſe of A. T. M. W. and N. my ſons and daughters, and the ſurvivors and ſurvivor of them, and the executors and adminiſtrators of ſuch ſurvivor, ſhare and ſhare alike, as tenants in common, and not as joint-tenants, chargeable with the mortgage or incumbrance already made by me of the ſame premiſes, or ſome part thereof, to Mrs. Y. for the ſum of 100 l. and intereſt. And as to, for and concerning all the reſt and reſidue of my goods, chattels, &c. I give and bequeath the ſame, and every part thereof, unto A. T. M. W. and N. my ſons and daughters, and the ſurvivors and ſurvivor of them, and the executors and adminiſtrators of ſuch ſurvivor, ſhare and ſhare alike, as tenants in common, and not as joint-tenants. And I conſtitute my ſaid dear wiſe, my daughter A. my ſon T. and my daughter M. executors of this my laſt will and teſtament."

"What eſtate paſſed from the ſaid T. H. the eldeſt ſon and heir of the ſaid teſtator, T. H. to the ſaid G. L. by the indentures of the 8th and 9th of February 1765, in any, and what part of the premiſes in queſtion, and whether the plaintiff is entitled to recover any, and what part thereof, in this ejectment."

Lord Mansfield. As againſt the defendant it is enough to ſay, "that it cannot come to him by ſurvivorſhip."

Wilmot and Yates, Juſtices, gave their opinions at large, and concurred with the Chief Juſtice.

The court were unanimous, that it was a tenancy in common in fee; and that the words "ſurvivors and ſurvivor," relate to the death of the teſtator.

Per curiam. Let the poſtea be delivered to the plaintiff. Vide Bur. vol. 3. p. 1881.

Writs, &c.

Eaſter, 5 W. & M. De la Baſtide v. Reynell and Wife.

On a writ of homine replegiando, the ſheriff returned an elongavit; thereon a capias in withernam iſſued; then the defendants entered an appearance with the philazer, and a motion was made for a ſuperſedeas to the writ of withernam, and that they would plead they did not take, for they are not to be concluded by the return of the ſheriff, which was traverſable.

This was oppoſed, unleſs they would give bail to deliver the perſon, if the iſſue ſhould be found againſt them.

Per curiam. There is no difference between a common replevin and an homine replegiando as to this matter; neither is there any other return to this writ than elongavit, which is, that the party cannot be found.

If the defendants had claimed any property, then they are to gage deliverance to this writ, but that is not done, for they ſay they have not the perſon, therefore let them plead That they did not take, and put in bail to appear from day to day. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 4. p. 183.

Michaelmas, 6 W. & M. Wilſon v. Law.

Wilſon brought an appeal of murder againſt John Law for killing his brother Robert Wilſon, and declared againſt him: the defendant prayed oyer of the writ and return; and having oyer, demurred to the writ and return, and to the felony, pleaded over, not guilty: exception was taken, 1ſt. That the writ commanded the ſheriff, that he attach John Law, &c. And the ſheriff had returned attachiari feci: this they pretended was no anſwer to the writ, the injunction whereof is perſonal; but the court held it well enough, for the ſheriff was not bound to execute it in perſon, but might do it by his bailiffs. Dyer 241. 2 Ro. 457. And what the bailiffs do by the ſheriff's warrant, is done by the ſheriff. If he had returned attachiatus eſt, it had been good: captus eſt is a good return to a capias. Kitch. 258. For if there is the ſubſtance, it is no matter for form, as 1 H. 6. 6. a ſcire facias was returned, ſcire feci A. B. without adding infra nominat. Yet becauſe it was ſaid to be virtute brevis prædict. prout mihi præcipitur, it was adjudged good.

2dly. The ſheriff returned, ita quod corpus ejus paratum habeo ubicunque; and it was objected that this was nonſenſe, and alſo impoſſible.

Per curiam. The return is good without it; it is therefore but ſurpluſage, which will not vitiate a writ or an indictment, much leſs a return, which requires not ſuch preciſeneſs in form. 3 Cro. 893. 2 Ro. 460. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 589. Raym. vol. 1. p. 20.

Michaelmas, 7 W. 3. Palmet v. Price.

An action was laid in Staffordſhire, and judgment for the plaintiff; whereon he ſued out a fieri facias with a teſtatum into Worceſterſhire; and now it was moved that this was irregular, and ought to be ſet aſide, becauſe no fieri facias had ever gone into Staffordſhire; and the ſheriff of Staffordſhire made affidavit that he never returned any fieri facias in the cauſe: but not allowed; for the fieri facias on which the teſtatum is founded, is returned of courſe by the attornies themſelves, as originals; if you ſearch the file you may find one, and that is ſufficient. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 590.

Michaelmas, 10 W. 3. Witty v. Polehampton.

One W. R. gave a warrant of attorney to confeſs a judgment to W. W. as of Trinity term, and afterwards to hang up that judgment, he brought a writ of error, teſted the 27th day of June, and returnable on the 12th day of July following; W. W. the judgment-creditor having notice of this matter, entered up the judgment as of the laſt day of that Trinity term, ſo that the writ of error was returnable before the judgment was ſigned; and on a complaint to the court of this matter, they would do nothing in it, for if it was a trick, it was an honeſt one, and to obtain a juſt debt.

Per curiam. This judgment is not ſuſpended by this writ of error; otherwiſe if the return had been afterwards. Vide Salk. vol. 3. p. 398.

Trinity, 11 W. 3. Pullen v. Palmer.

In an action on the caſe for a falſe return to a mandamus, the return was ſet out to be made in manner and form following, &c. And after a verdict for the plaintiff, the court was moved in arreſt of judgment, that this was not certainly enough ſhewn to be the very return that the defendant had made; and therefore the declaration was ill. But not allowed.

Per curiam. It is well enough. And the plaintiff had judgment. Vide Raym. vol. 1. p. 496.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. Philips v. The Biſhop of Sarum.

Two joint-tenants of an advowſon, by deed, made a partition to preſent by turns; and afterwards, one of them granted over his ſhare; the grantee preſented in his turn, and the biſhop refuſed to admit his clerk; whereon the grantee alone brought a writ of quare impedit.

It was objected, that the inheritance of an advowſon was in its nature undiviſible, and as intire as that of a villien; and that if two joint-tenants agreed to preſent, by deed, in their turns, ſuch agreement would work no ſeverance in their jointure. It was further urged, that one joint-tenant, or tenant in common of an advowſon might make a voluntary partition of the right; after which they ſhall have ſeveral writs of right for their ſeveral moieties. F. N. B. 62. If there be two or more coparceners of a manor, they may make a partition to have one part of the demeſnes and ſervice to one, and another part to the other; and the advowſon by the ſame agreement to be by turns, it will be appendant to their reſpective ſhares. 6 Co. 12. 2 Roll. Abr. 255. Fitz. tit. quare impedit, pl. 170. Co. Ent. 496. And accordingly, at another day, it was adjudged for the plaintiff by the whole court. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 12. p. 321.

Michaelmas, 11 W. 3. The King v. The Mayor of Hertford.

On an information in nature of a quo warranto; a venire iſſued, returnable in Eaſter term, and a diſtringas in Trinity, and an alias diſtringas fifteen days from the teſte the ſame Trinity term; it was objected, that this was irregular, for that all proceſſes on the crown ſide are returnable de termino in terminum, and not in fifteen days, and the precedents are ſo: it was anſwered, that a proceſs of outlawry was the only proceſs returnable de termino in terminum. 2 Inſt. 550. 1 Inſt. 134. 9 Co. 119. b.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, there was no queſtion but the proceſs might be ſued out returnable in fifteen days; and Sir Samuel Aſtry reported the practice according to this diſtinction. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 699.

The court was moved to quaſh the return of a reſcue, which was, "by virtue of a writ to me directed, I iſſued "my warrant to J. S. and J. N. my bailiffs, who by "virtue thereof took and arreſted the defendant, and "him in my cuſtody had until A. and B. reſcued the "defendant out of the cuſtody of J. S. and *J. Holt, Chief Juſtice. The ſheriff ſhould either have returned, that the defendant was in his cuſtody, and reſcued out of his cuſtody, or that he was in the cuſtody of the bailiffs, and reſcued out of their cuſtody, either of which returns had been good. But this return is repugnant, viz. "that the defendant was in the "cuſtody of the ſheriff, and reſcued out of the cuſtody of the bailiffs." In an action of debt for an eſcape of one taken on a ca. ſa. which appeared to be returnable the term next but one after the teſte, ſo that a term intervened: after a verdict for the plaintiff, it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that the writ was merely void, and conſequently there could be no eſcape, and the ſheriff did well to let him go; and 3 Cro. 468. was cited as a caſe in point. Holt, Chief Juſtice. Eſcape lies againſt the ſheriff; and there is a difference between a capias in meſne proceſs, and a capias in execution: in meſne proceſs, if a term be omitted the writ is void in all perſonal actions, and the ſheriff ſhall not be charged; for the cauſe is diſcontinued, and out of court by the intermiſſion; and by not having a day in court by the return of the writ, as he ought, the party may be greatly prejudiced by reaſon of the impriſonment in the mean time.

But in executions a ca. ſa. omitting a term is not void; for the party is not to have a day in court; his cauſe is at an end, and he muſt be in priſon, whether the writ be returned or not; nor is it neceſſary it ſhould be returned.

Per curiam. The plaintiff had judgment, niſi, &c.

And in the ſame caſe, Holt, Chief Juſtice, ſaid, if a writ of execution bear teſte out of term, the ſheriff is juſtifiable, and yet ſhall not be liable to an action of eſcape, for it is a void writ. Vide Salk. vol. 2. p. 700.

Michaelmas, 1 Ann. Lucy v. The Biſhop of St. David's.

The defendant was taken up on a writ of excommunicato capiendo, and ſent to Newgate; and the writ not being returned, he removed himſelf up by habeas corpus.

Per curiam. He has no day in court till the writ of excommunicato capiendo be actually returned, for the command of the writ was to take and keep him; and to return the writ how he had executed it. But on ſuch return the party has no day in court, but muſt bring himſelf in by habeas corpus; and before he can plead to the writ, it muſt be returned here on record, for the writ is to be adjudged good, or quaſhed; as it is good or bad on their plea, and the enrolling the writ on the record, at its iſſuing out, is not enough to give a day in court, or to appear to and plead.

The council on the other ſide inſiſted on it, and obtained leave to examine the habeas corpus which recited the writ of excommunicato capiendo. And it was complained of that a double writ of excommunicato capiendo was taken out, with a double return, to the end, that if he was taken by one and diſcharged, he might be taken up again by the other, and ſo vexed; which practice the court very much diſapproved of, though it was agreed there might be two, if there were two excommunications for the ſame cauſe. So he was remanded; but the writs were afterwards quaſhed for uncertainty, and the defendant diſcharged. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 7. 56.

Holt, Chief Juſtice. The return is made on the 28th day of November, which is the laſt day in full term.

It was then urged, that the court could not take notice of the day of the month.

Eaſter, 3 Ann. Williams v. Jackſon.

On a point what notice there ſhould be given to defendants of trials, and executing of writs of inquiry, theſe points were agreed to by the court.

1ſt, That convenient notice was as much neceſſary and fit to be given of the executing of a writ of inquiry, as of a trial.

2dly, That by a late rule of court, if a writ of inquiry, or iſſue, be to be tried in London, or Middleſex, and the defendant lives not above forty miles off, eight days notice will ſuffice; but if it be above forty miles off, there ought to be fourteen days notice in either caſe.

3dly, That the reaſon is the ſame in all other caſes, where the parties are above forty miles diſtant from the place where the trial is to be, though they be country cauſes; yet becauſe it is an ancient rule, that eight days notice ſhould be ſufficient in all country cauſes, and that had been in the caſe now in queſtion, it being a country cauſe, the execution of the writ of inquiry ſtood; and the court ſaid, they would conſider of altering the rule.

Per curiam. The reaſon why, by common law, there are fifteen days between the teſte and return of a proceſs is, becauſe that was thought a ſufficient time to come from any part of the kingdom to another; for at twenty miles a day, a man in fifteen days will go all over the land. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 146.

Trinity, 3 Ann. Herring v. Crocker.

A judgment was obtained by confeſſion three terms before, and before any entry was made on the roll of the judgment, a fieri facias was taken out, and the ſheriff taking ſecurity for his indemnification from the plaintiff in that judgment, levied goods to the value. And now another fieri facias, on another judgment, being brought to him, he returned no goods, the goods being ſold on the firſt writ; and the money paid by the ſheriff, and ſatisfaction entered on the judgment, but the roll was not filed. The plaintiff, in the ſecond fieri facias, brought an action for a falſe return againſt the ſheriff, and now it was moved for the plaintiff in the firſt fieri facias, to have leave to file his roll.

Per curiam. How can an action on falſe return be maintained againſt the ſheriff if there be no fraud in him? And if there be, you have your remedy, notwithſtanding the filing of this roll, as well as if it was not filed. The ſheriff would not be liable to the defendant in the firſt judgment in treſpaſs, for the writ is enough to juſtify him, and he is not bound to examine any farther.

By the ancient rules of the court, the judgment of one term ought to be entered on the roll before the Eſſoign-day of the next term, and the late ſtatute for docqueting of judgments was only in imitation of the ancient courſe, and in aid of it.

Holt. Chief Juſtice. The common law is, that all things done in the vacation ſhall refer to the precedent term; and though no inconvenience appears to us if this judgment be now filed as of the due term, yet we cannot foreſee how far ſuch retroſpect may affect others. And if this firſt debt be a juſt debt, and the party, without any compulſion, had paid it before your writ came to the ſheriff, it had been good againſt you; ſo here, if the debt was juſt, and a writ had come to the ſheriff, and he had levied the money, and had paid it before the ſecond writ had come to him; it had been good againſt the ſecond plaintiff, though the firſt had no judgment.

Therefore he adviſed the ſecond plaintiff's council to conſider of it again before he proceeded with the action againſt the ſheriff. And the court refuſed to grant the motion. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 6. p. 184.

B.* on an indeb. aſſump. and a writ of inquiry awarded, and ſeveral damages, and a remiſſion of damages entered on all the counts but one. And two exceptions were taken; 1ſt, That the inquiſition was taken on a ſecond writ of inquiry, and that was awarded without returning the firſt, but on pleading that the ſheriff had not ſent the writ only to the firſt; and that, as was urged, was held ill in the caſe of Atwood v. Burr. 2dly, That the remiſſion of damages was not entered in his proper perſon.

Holt, Chief Juſtice, admitted the caſe of Atwood v. Burr, but ſaid this was only a ſicut prius. And as to the ſecond, he ſaid, it was not neceſſary it ſhould be ſo. Wherefore the judgment was affirmed Vide Raym. vol. 2. p. 1142.

The court was moved to quaſh a writ of excommunicato capiendo; for that it did appear in the writ, that the crime alledged was of eccleſiaſtical conuſance. On the other ſide it was urged. Though that matter does not appear in the writ, yet it appears throughout the proceedings, that this was a cauſe before the delegates, and therefore it ſhall be intended of eccleſiaſtical conuſance: but the court held it ought to have ſo appeared in the writ; and therefore held the writ naught, and quaſhed it. Stat. 5 Eliz. c. *Vide Mod. After the writ had been opened, and entered on record, it was delivered out in order to take up the defendant; and before the return, the defendant moved, and had it ſuperſeded: for the court ſaid, they could judge of it from the entry; and ſince it appeared that the defendant could not be legally detained on it if he was taken, it was proper to ſuperſede it to prevent the man's being reſtrained of his liberty contrary to law: that the intent of ſtat. 5 Eliz. c. 53. which directs the writ to be delivered in open court, was to apprize the court of the nature of the cauſe; that this is now to be conſidered as a writ that irregularly iſſued, and they were not to wait till the return, till all the inconveniences, which they ſhould have prevented by not iſſuing the writ had happened. Vide Stra. vol. 1. p. 43.

Trinity, 10 Geo. Stamper v. Hodſon.

The plaintiff having obtained a judgment in debt againſt the defendant, ſued out a fieri facias, and likewiſe a capias ad ſatisfaciendum at the ſame time, and thereon the defendant was taken in execution; it was now moved to quaſh the fieri facias.

The court were of opinion, that the plaintiff might, for his own ſecurity, take out two writs, but he could execute but one; therefore the writ of fieri facias was quaſhed. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 302.

Trinity, 10 Geo. Paterſon v. Dyer.

A declaration was delivered of Michaelmas term, and rules given for pleading according to the courſe of the court; but the defendant making default, the plaintiff's attorney ſigned the judgment, and gave due notice of executing a writ of inquiry; the defendant appeared at the time and place, and made a defence, and ſome time afterwards he would have impeached the judgment, but it was not allowed, becauſe he had made a defence at the executing the writ of inquiry. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 289.

Trinity, 10 Geo. Goddard v. Gilman.

The plaintiff brought an action of debt in London, and had judgment, and ſued out a fieri facias directed to the ſheriff, without a teſtatum fieri facias into London, by virtue whereof the defendant's goods were taken in execution in Middleſex; and becauſe this was done by an original fieri facias, without a teſtatum, the execution was ſet aſide as irregular.

And now the plaintiff moved, that he having a judgment, with a releaſe of errors, that the goods might remain in the ſheriff's hands, and not be delivered to the defendant, who was a poor man, for by that means the plaintiff would loſe his debt.

Per curiam. When the execution is ſet aſide, as it was in this caſe, the goods taken muſt be returned, becauſe there can be no colour for the ſheriff to detain them.

The like rule was made in Michaelmas term following, in the caſe of White v. Cornwall, where an action was laid in one county, and the plaintiff had judgment, and took out a fieri facias directed to the ſheriff of another county, without a teſtatum, &c. afterwards the plaintiff's attorney, perceiving his miſtake, ſued out a teſtatum fieri facias into that county, but before it came to the ſheriff he had executed the firſt writ, and afterwards he executed the other writ; but the execution was ſet aſide, becauſe the firſt writ having been executed, the ſheriff could not regularly execute the other. *Vide Mod. Hilary, 11 Geo. Perry v. Kirk.

In an action brought againſt the defendant for goods ſold and delivered, the plaintiff declared on an aſſumpſit, and in his declaration laid ſeveral counts, and alſo declared on a promiſſory note.

On non aſſumpſit pleaded the parties were at iſſue, and at the trial of the cauſe the defendant's council inſiſted on a ſpecial agreement, and that the defendant did not owe the plaintiff any thing at the time of the arreſt; and for that purpoſe he inſiſted, that the plaintiff might produce this note, for he only proved the ſale and delivery of the goods, whereas he ought to proceed on that count, and no other.

Thereon the note was produced, dated the 18th of April 1724, which was for the payment of 60*l.* and then the defendant's council produced a receipt, under the plaintiff's hand, by which it appeared, that he, the defendant, was to have ſix weeks time, from the date of the note, to pay this money; therefore the plaintiff cannot maintain this action, becauſe the proceſs againſt the defendant bears teſte the 18th of May, ſo the ſix weeks were not yet expired.

To this it was anſwered, that the declaration was of Trinity term, which was above ſix weeks after the date of the note, and that is the only thing of which the court ought to take notice; for the original proceſs was only to bring the defendant into the cuſtody of Marſhal, which may well be before the cauſe of action

The court held that to be the conſtant diſtinction; for the plaintiff may ſue out a latitat before the cauſe of action, but he cannot declare before the cauſe of action does ariſe. Vide Mod. Rep. vol. 8. p. 344.

Per curiam. If it lay four days in the office, that is all which is required: the ſummons may be made any time before the court is up, on the day of the return.

Note, In Trinity term, 4 Geo. 2. in the caſe of Bland v. Perry, it was ſo ruled again; and in Michaelmas term, 4 Geo. 2. in the caſe of Williams v. Maſon, it was ruled, that it muſt lie four days in the office, as well where a ſcire feci is returned, as a nihil. Vide Stra. vol. 1. page 644.

Trinity, 13 Geo. Hicks v. Jones.

A ſcire facias was teſted the 15th day of May, returnable on the 29th, which is making both the teſte and return incluſive of the fifteen days. And on conſideration it was held well, and that there was no difference whether the proceeding was by bill or original. Sir T. Jones, 228. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 765.

Eaſter, 2 Geo. 2. Eaſtwick v. Coke.

In an action of debt brought on a bail-bond an exception was taken that the proceſs, on which the principal was taken, was ſued out in the vacation, when there was no court, which being therefore a mere nullity, and the preſent action having no other foundation, all the proceedings therefore muſt fall.

The council on the other ſide cited Sir Thomas Jones 149, 150. where it was found ſpecially, that the action was taken out in the vacation, and teſted in term, as in the preſent caſe, on which there the plaintiff had judgment.

The court wondered at this, and ſaid they would look into the caſe cited: and afterwards it being moved at another day, the court held clearly that the caſe in Jones was not law; for the jury did not only get over an eſtoppel, but what they found was manifeſtly an impoſſibility; for the effect of their finding was, that a proceſs was taken out of court at a time when there was no court; and therefore that verdict could be no foundation for the judgment: but then admitting it, ſtill in the preſent caſe there is no fact appearing to be a foundation for the court to judge according to the operation of law. And on this the plaintiff diſcontinued. Vide Fitz-Gibbons, p. 66. Raym. vol. 2. p. 1557.

The diſtringas was returnable on Monday next after fifteen days of the Holy Trinity. And it was moved in arreſt of judgment, that it ſhould have been in fifteen days, and the Monday next after is a week after the trial. But on conſideration and inquiry into the practice, both on the crown and plea-ſide, it was held to be right; and that the return-day is of the Sunday, though the buſineſs is done on the next day: and ſo is Salk. 626. 6 Mod. 250. 1 Show. 60. So there was judgment for the King. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 811. Raym. vol. 2. p. 1528.

Per curiam. If that be a falſe return, the defendant will have his action againſt the ſheriff. But we will not try the truth of the return on a motion to ſet aſide the proceedings. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 813.

Michaelmas, 4 Geo. 2. Worley v. Glover.

Per curiam. On the late ſtatute, viz. 12 Geo. c. 29. which requires the proceſs to be ſerved, it is not neceſſary to ſhew the party the original writ, as is done on the ſervice of rules. The act only requires him to be ſerved with a copy, which is the ſame as if it had ſaid, deliver a copy. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 877.

Michaelmas, 4 Geo. 2. Andrews v. Dingley.

The court was moved to quaſh a ſpecial copias that was teſted the 17th of June laſt, the cauſe of action appearing on the face of it to ariſe on the 21ſt of September after. But the court ſaid, quaſhing was not a matter of juſtice, and therefore they would give the plaintiff an opportunity to ſet it right if he could, by filing a bill as of this term. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 877.

Eaſter, 5 Geo. 2. Selleck v. The Biſhop of Exon.

The court was moved that the defendant might have a writ to the Archbiſhop in the firſt inſtance, though no default in the plaintiff; and the practice in the court of C.B. is, that in writs of quare impedit, both are actors, ſo that the defendant may carry it down by proviſoe the firſt aſſizes, and here the plea was inſufficient in words, and iſſue taken thereon. Vide Forteſcue, p. 352.

Michaelmas, 5 Geo. 2. Loving v. Avery.

On motion it was held, that there is no certain number of days neceſſary to be between the teſte and return of a ſpecial latitat, and that even one day is ſufficient, if it can be ſerved. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 917.

Hilary, 6 Geo. 2. The King v. Smith.

An excommunicato capiendo was quaſhed for uncertainty, being for defamation or reproach, which laſt is too looſe a word. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 946.

Eaſter, 8 Geo. 2. Moore v. Anderſon. Error.

Lord Hardwicke. I am ſatisfied that it is impoſſible to bring a ſcire facias, which was the proceſs executed in this caſe, within the meaning of the word extent; and this being a private ſtatute, we can take no other notice of it than as it is here pleaded. An extent is a known term, it may iſſue at the ſuit of the crown, or of a ſubject on a ſtatute merchant, but it has a different effect from a fieri facias; for on the fieri facias the ſheriff cannot deliver the goods, but muſt ſell them. And the word levy, which is in this ſtatute, muſt mean to levy in the uſual manner; ſo that here is an action brought for a fee, when the ſtatute pleaded gives no ſuch fee, and we can take no other notice of it than as it appears on this record. Therefore the judgment muſt be reverſed. Vide Caſes Temp. Lord Hardw. p. 103.

Eaſter, 10 Geo. 2. Caſwall v. Martin.

In the latitat was left out the words of a plea of treſpaſs. Common bail was filed by the plaintiff; a declaration was left in the office, which the defendant took out, and then moved to ſtay proceedings. And on ſhewing cauſe, the plaintiff's council inſiſted, that the error in the proceſs was cured by the appearance; and cited Salk. 59. and the caſe of Widdrington v. Charlton, where in an appeal for murder it was ſo held. So in Eaſter 9 Geo. 2. Morgan v. Lockup, there was no Engliſh notice under the proceſs, and yet taking the declaration out of the office was held to cure it. Whereon the rule to ſtay proceedings was diſcharged. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1072.

Trinity, 16 Geo. 2. The King v. Eyre, Clerk.

A writ de excommunicato capiendo, iſſued out of Chancery, which was opened and inrolled in this court, but on exceptions taken to it, the court made a rule on the proſecutor to ſhew cauſe why the delivery out of the writ to the ſheriff ſhould not be ſtaid. Before an opportunity of ſhewing cauſe came, the return of the writ was out; and the proſecutor ſued out a ſecond writ out of Chancery; and to prevent the loſs of that, deſired the defendant might at once take his exceptions by motion to quaſh it.

The firſt exception was, that the former writ being inrolled in this court, the court of Chancery could not iſſue a ſecond writ, but by ſtat. 5 Eliz. cap. 23. ſuch ſecond writ was to iſſue from this court.

To this it was anſwered, that the act related only to the caſe where the firſt writ had actually iſſued, and the ſheriff had returned he was not to be found; where the court can fine him if they ſee occaſion, and iſſue a capias, alias and pluries.

Per curiam. The anſwer is right; if the firſt writ had been actually quaſhed, they muſt have gone to the Chancery for another.

The ſecond exception was, that it is ſaid to be on an appeal and complaint of nullity: now from a nullity, there lies no appeal.

To this it was anſwered, that this was their form, which in Trinity 3 Geo. in the caſe of The King v. Elderton, it was held we muſt have regard to; they lay the words with, or words to the like effect, which is allowed.

The third exception was, that the judge is made a party, and is condemned in coſts. Mo. 540. 1 Vent. 86.

To this it was anſwered, that in this caſe there could be no other, he officially excommunicates a man; that man appeals, and muſt make ſomebody a party; there is no promoter, and therefore he cites the judge; the ſuperior juriſdiction is of opinion he has done the man an injury, and why then ſhould he not pay the coſts? Lord Talbot in his time, and Lord Hardwicke ſince, on exceptions to the ſignificavit, held it was proper to make him a party, and that he was liable to coſts.

The court (after time taken to conſider) diſcharged the rule for quaſhing, and ordered it to be inrolled, and delivered out to the ſheriff. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1189.

The condition of their recognizance was, to appear in this court the laſt day of Michaelmas term: on which day articles of the peace were exhibited, and the defendant White forbore to have his appearance recorded, (though he was there) and went to get bail. The proſecutor on this, took out a ſcire facias, teſted the 28th of November.

And partly for the ſharpneſs of the proceeding, and becauſe the ſcire facias ſhould have been teſted in term time, and he had to the laſt moment of it to appear in, the court ſet aſide the proceedings. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1220.

Trinity, 18 Geo. 2. The Weavers Company, qui tam, v. Forreſt.

A bill of Middleſex was, to anſwer the weaver's company; and the declaration was in the name of the company, qui tam for themſelves, and the poor of the pariſh where the offence was committed: it was moved therefore to ſtay proceedings, becauſe the declaration differed from the proceſs: but the court held it right, it not being uſual to inſert in the bill of Middleſex on what account, or in what right the party ſues, as in the caſe of executors and adminiſtrators, the caſe of an aſſignee of a bail bond, and the like, where the proceſs is only to anſwer to A. B.

Then an exception was taken to the notice at the bottom of the proceſs, which was only to appear at the return thereof, being the 14th of June, without ſaying this inſtant, or expreſſing the year of our Lord, or of the King.

But the court ſaid, it muſt be underſtood to be the next fourteenth of June, and held it right. Vide Stra. vol. 2. p. 1232.

See this caſe fully ſtated in page 260 of this work, under the head Certiorari.
